NEW YEAR'S THOUGHTS.

Lillian Gray.

Let us walk softly, friend;
For strange paths lie before us, all untrod;
The New Year, spotless from the hand of God,
Is thine and mine, O friend.

Let us walk straightly, friend;
Forget the crooked paths behind us now,
Press on with steadier purpose on our brow,
To better deeds, O friend!

Let us walk kindly, friend;
We can not tell how long this life shall last,
How soon these precious years be overpast;
Let Love walk with us, friend.

Let us walk quickly, friend:
Work with our might while lasts our little stay,
And help some halting comrade on the way;
And may God guide us, friend!

THE OLD YEAR AND THE NEW.

The year nineteen-hundred and twelve has been "numbered with yesterday's seven thousand years." What has been written is written forever on the scroll of time. A new chapter has been added to our life's history. It were well if each one would pause for a moment and view his past ere he sets himself with hope to the work of the morrow.

But some utilitarian will arise long enough to say that "to stop the machinery of life for retrospection and contemplation is wasted time and lost energy. Life means ceaseless activity and never-ending change. Let the dead past bury its dead." Utilitarianism is always so reasonable that it is quite difficult to quarrel with it. Sydney Smith has said that "utilitarianism would make soap out of the bones of one's grandmother." If it were so disposed, it could put forward a very fine argument for thus utilizing a waste product.

But this retrospection has its uses. He who takes an account of the past can the better live in the present and more wisely plan for the future. The study of history were indeed a mournful study were it simply to gratify a morbid curiosity concerning dead civilizations. The one lamp that Patrick Henry knew was the lamp of experience. If we are to profit by the past, we must pause long enough to gather up and read the meaning of its lessons.

This retrospect enables us to see the events of the year in their proper perspective. At close range an object assumes unnatural proportions. A small hill near at hand will exclude the view of a great mountain. A man once shot at what he thought was a great hawk and was chagrined to find that it was a mosquito on his eye lash.

Have we not often been surprised at how insignificant an event seems as seen through the perspective of years, and how great and overwhelming it seemed to us at the time?

The merchant is now taking stock. He is finding out what he has upon his shelves and whether his stock is obsolete or salable. Would it not be well to follow his example and find out concerning the worth or worthlessness of our spiritual wares? Have we not accumulated much that is mere rubbish, occupying shelf room, but which is of no value? Have we not on hand bolts of dislikes and barrels of prejudices—a lot of inflammable stuff that increases the fire risk, whilst a detriment to the commerce of the soul? Is it not time that these were carted away into the valley of Gehenna?

But if this review is to be at all helpful it must take into its contemplation the sorrows as well as the joys, the failures as well as the successes of life. Memory is disposed to treasure the sweet experiences and to discard the bitter. Memory is like a storage battery that gathers in during the day the bright sunlight but to release it amid the shadows of the night. A blessed angel is memory! Past happiness comes spontaneously to our minds, but failures, and sins, and mistakes have to be hauled by main force from the dark hiding-places in which they skulk.

But there is always danger lest this introspection and retrospection may become morbid. It is well to remember that they have their uses, but are never ends in themselves. By thought a man cannot add one cubit to his stature. A Scotchman bought a barometer and became outraged because he noted no improvement in the weather. He did not understand the uses of the barometer. A mere study of the past will not purify the soul. St. Paul found it a hindrance and directed his energy toward forgetting what was behind.

Beecher tells us that a great physician once lectured at Yale, telling the students the exact quantity of bread and meat and vegetables that should be eaten. Quite a number of the students bought themselves scales and began to weigh the various proportions of their diet, with the result that soon there were some likely cases of dyspepsia. Too great study of one's self may breed an egotism most distasteful to others and disastrous to the development of character.

There are some good souls who luxuriate in sad and bitter memories. These are like some of New Orleans' children who run their fingers through the garbage dump, seeking for some lost treasure. It is indeed a mournful sight, but not half so mournful as to behold strong men on the rubbish heap of time forever fingering old wrongs, old grudges, old sorrows, that ought to be forever forgotten.

If we pause to look backward let it be only for a moment. Our eyes were so placed that we might look down at our feet or away to the horizon, but not back over our shoulders. If this backward glance is not a help to us in the present task or the future duty, it is time worse than wasted. God beckons us away to the task of the morrow.

IS HURTING THE CHURCH.

A secular paper recently, under glaring headlines, referred to the election of a minister to a college presidency as "GOING UP HIGHER." The world is fully confirmed in the habit of grading preachers according to the prominence of the positions they hold, and, to far too great an extent, the Church has caught the contagion of this spirit. It is our profound conviction that few things are hurting Methodism more to-day than the ambition for easy, remunerative, or conspicuous place. A connectional system, such as ours, opens an inviting field to clergymen who are worldly enough to desire to have a large and shining career. For this reason, we perhaps suffer somewhat more than other denominations from the prevalence amongst us of this evil; but none is free from it. We scarcely think our language would be too severe if we were to pronounce this feature of our present-day church life the scandal of twentieth century Christianity. That would not be putting it anything like as strongly as Paul did, when after commending Timothy to the Philipplians and stating that he had no other likeminded, he added, "For all men seek their own, not the things which are Jesus Christ's."

No man who has not crucified self, who is not dead to the blandishments and honors of the world, is fit to be in the Christian ministry, much less to hold its positions of highest trust. Most significant were the words of our Lord in response to the scribe who affirmed that he would follow him whithersoever he went: "The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests; but the Son of Man hath not where to lay his head." Whenever a preacher has his mind chiefly on the stipend that a charge will pay, or endeavors to conduct himself so as to advance his own selfish interests, he has not the mind of Christ. And of all the heart-rending spectacles beneath the skies, none can compare with that of a man from whom the Spirit of the Lord has departed, posing as an under-shepherd of him who laid down his life for the sheep. It is enough, if they could shed tears, to make the angels weep.

What we need is a new vision of our high calling; a larger faith in Christ and the things which would result from it. In his great sermon at the late session of the Alabama Conference Bishop Kilgo said: "An age of faith is an age of strength, but an age of skepticism is an age of ease-hunting." The highest work in which any man can engage is that of soul-winning, no matter where it is done. The world may scoff at the obscure circuit rider, but there is an Eye that observes him and notes his fidelity. And the day of sweet reward will surely come!

"Go, labor on; 'tis not for naught;
Thine earthly loss is heavenly gain;
Men heed thee, love thee, praise thee not;
The Master praises—what are men?"

RING OUT THE OLD.

The old year has done well for the world. It has left its record of progress and advancement and achievement of the good written everywhere if we have but the eyes to see and to read. It has done well for the great majority of us, and it will be a useful employment for us to count up in how many and how great ways that is true.

But it is gone. The play is over, and the curtain drops. Poor playing enough, some of it, we may think, but after all it is probably true that into the drama of our human life there has this last year been wrought more deeds of kindness and justice and truth than during any other twelve months in the history of the world. And if that be true, it is a great thing to be able to say. The record that we lay away is not as clean and fair and good as we would like it to be, but when we remember that we have helped to do the writing, we may well be glad and thankful that it has been no worse. We should ring out the old, therefore, with very little of vain regret. Perhaps the passing of the old year brings to nearly everyone some feeling of seriousness, if not of sadness, but the feeling should not be cherished unduly. We ring out the old, but we ring in the new. And the new will be better. We will bear our part better in the new play, for we have learned some lessons. We understand the great purpose of the drama of our life better than we did, and we can conform more truly to its purposes and ideals. At least, that ought to be true, and will be unless we have been living ignorantly and foolishly.

What a wonderful and blessed faculty is that faculty of hope, that springs eternal in the human heart! We lay aside the dead ghosts of our fruitless and faithless past, but we take up the new day and the new day's opportunity with expectancy and hopefulness. It will be brighter and better. If we hadn't the faith to say that, life would sink down into blackness and despair. But somehow, because God lives, and is in a mysterious way the end of all our striving and our hoping, we can say it, and life becomes possible, and keeps sane and sweet. As we lay aside our old year with a sigh, let us on our bended knee thank God that we have that vision of a new one, upon which a brighter and a warmer sun doth shine. That is the vision splendid that He gives to all His children everywhere.—The Christian Guardian.

STRIVE TO BECOME BETTER.

As with doubtful hands we push away the shades and take our steps in the opening year, the thought can not fail to come to us all of how little we know what is before us. Living, but living an uncertain life, let the season utter its warnings. One thing is certain, that if you desire improvement in anything it will not come to you accidentally. It must begin in a distinct, resolved purpose to make a change for the better. . . .

Here you stand at the parting of the ways; some road you are to take; and as you stand here, consider and know how it is that you intend to live. Carry no bad habits, no corrupting association, no enmities and strifes, into the new year. Leave these behind, and let the dead past bury its dead; leave them behind, and thank God that you are able to leave them.—Ephriam Peabody.

SOME THINGS THAT SHOULD BE DONE.

Rev. J. R. Mackay, Ph.D.

CHOOSE the best things, and strive earnestly to realize them.

BELIEVE that in the best things God is, and lovingly seek to find Him.

BE more interested in human beings than in things, and let them know it.

THINK more of giving than of getting, and give.

ASSUME there is a pathway of God to every heart, and seek to find it.

SYMPATHIZE with suffering, and seek to relieve it.

PLACE a sentinel beside the tongue, a guard around the heart, and see that they loyally do their duty.

SEEK to give joy and notice how swiftly dull eyes will brighten.

RECALL the hasty word before it passes the lips, and keep it.

DO not notice all you see, nor heed all you hear.

LET the roots of your life be deep in God, and the flowers will be pleasing to men.

HAVE in you richly the spirit of Jesus, and whenever you go take Him with you.—New York Observer.

A GENERAL MISSIONARY CONFERENCE OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

By Rev. C. F. Reid, D.D.

The time now seems ripe for a somewhat detailed statement of the plans and progress made looking to the holding of a General Missionary Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at our Southern Assembly Grounds, June 25-29, 1913.

When, in accordance with action taken at the Laymen's Conference at Dallas, it became time to prepare for another Laymen's Conference, the Secretary of the Laymen's Missionary Movement asked for a meeting of Mission Board Secretaries. At this meeting, which occurred June 19th, it was proposed that the scope of the Conference be enlarged so as to take within its purview all the missionary activities of the Church. This proposition was approved by all present and a more formal meeting was called for July 25th.

At the second meeting for discussing the Conference, plans were much more fully developed. It was decided to call a General Missionary Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, under the auspices of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, to be held at the Southern Assembly Grounds, Waynesville, N. C., June 26-29, 1913.

The Secretary of the Laymen's Missionary Movement was requested to lay the matter before the members of the Executive Committee of the Movement and to enter into correspondence with our Bishops, executive officers of the Conference Mission Boards and other leaders to discover the mind of the Church in regard to the holding of the Conference.

The response of the Executive Committee of the Laymen's Movement was unanimously in favor of the Conference as proposed.

A letter in the form of an invitation to accept membership in a General Promotion Committee was sent to more than two hundred and fifty of our Church leaders, including our Bishops, General Conference officers, Mission Board Secretaries, Laymen's Missionary Movement Executive Committee, Conference Lay Leaders, Conference Mission Board Presidents, Conference Missionary Secretaries, Editors of our Church papers, Presidents of Colleges, and other men well known throughout the Church.

The response to this invitation was so full and cordial as to leave no doubt that in the mind of our chief workers the time and conditions are ready for the kind of meeting contemplated in the call. There was not a word of discouragement from anyone. Less than half a dozen declined to serve on the Committee for reasons purely personal and obvious and two hundred and forty-eight signified their acceptance.

Out of the large Promotion Committee, twenty-nine persons more especially representing the missionary activities of the Church were asked to serve as an Executive Committee. This committee met October 29th, and organized by electing officers and appointing nine sub-committees to look after special interests in the preparation and conduct of the Conference.

Among these smaller committees, a Steering Committee was appointed and authorized to act ad interim for the Executive Committee, with full power to decide all questions that may arise. This committee is constituted as follows: W. W. Pinson, Chairman; Ed. F. Cook, Vice Chairman; C. F. Reid, Secretary; Bishop W. R. Lambuth, Miss Belle H. Bennett, John R. Pepper.

At the mid-year meeting of our College of Bishops, held at Greenwood, S. C., October 30, the matter of the Conference was presented and the following resolution was unanimously adopted.

"Whereas, the Executive Committee of the Laymen's Missionary Movement of our Church with the concurrence of the Secretaries of the Board of Missions is proposing a Missionary Conference, to be held in June, 1913, similar in nature and scope to the great Conference held in New Orleans in 1901;

Therefore, we, the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, desire to express our hearty approval of the Conference proposed by our laymen, and cordially commend the movement to the sympathy and support of the entire Church."

At a called meeting of the Board of Missions held at Nashville, Tenn., November 5, the following action was taken:

"Dr. Cook presented the matter of a General Missionary Conference to be held in Waynesville, N. C., next summer. He announced that a tentative Executive Committee had been assembled by the Secretaries of the Board and the Executive Committee of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, with the purpose of providing for such a Conference at Waynesville, N. C., in June, 1913. After discussion, the following paper was adopted:

"Resolved, first, That the Board of Missions approves the holding of a General Missionary Conference at the place and time indicated.

"Second, That the following Executive Committee, already nominated as above indicated, be and hereby is duly appointed to represent this Board in the preparation for that Conference: John R. Pepper, Chairman; Bishops A. W. Wilson, James Atkins, W. R. Lambuth, Vice Chairmen; J. D. Hamilton, Treasurer; C. F. Reid, Secretary; Rev. W. W. Pinson, Rev. W. F. McMurtry, Rev. Stonewall Anderson, Rev. E. B. Chappell, Rev. F. S. Parker, Rev. John M. Moore, Rev. E. H. Rawlings, Rev. G. B. Winton, Rev. James Cannon, W. B. Stubbs, T. S. Southgate, Julian S. Carr, F. M. Daniel, C. A. Sanford, C. H. Ireland, W. G. H. Thomas, R. B. Eleazer, Mrs. J. B. Cobb, Mrs. R. W. MacDonell, Miss Mahel Head, Miss Belle H. Bennett, Mrs. A. L. Marshall.

"Ed. F. Cook,

"G. B. Winton."

"The list of special committees appointed by the Executive Committee at a meeting already held was submitted to the Board. On motion, it was voted to request that the name of J. M. Moore be added to the Steering Committee."

It now appears that the holding of this Missionary Conference has the unanimous and authoritative approval of our College of Bishops, our Board of Missions, our Laymen's Missionary Movement, and the active endorsement of two hundred and forty-eight men and women to whom we look for leadership and who represent all the various activities of our Church. It may then be said that it belongs to and will be held under the auspices of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. But more important than all else is that it shall have the approval, the constant guidance and blessing of the great Head of the Church. No man has ever achieved a worthy place in the history of the ongoing Kingdom of God, who was not first of all a man of prayer, and God has always most honored His Church when she was on her knees.

Never in all history has God wrought more mightily than in these latter days, overthrowing dynasties, wrecking nations and melting the hearts of men. Look at the stupendous changes taking place in the "Near East" and the "Far East." Look at Africa in the throes of a mighty travail; at South America stretching forth her shackled arms to be freed from an effete Romanism; at India writhing in the agony of a great unrest. Look at three-fourths of all the people in the world passing through a period of change and transition, all plastic and ready to be molded into new forms of life. Look at our teeming cities, in many of which the Church seems to stand arrested; at the in-coming flood of alien immigrants; at our mining and cotton mill problems; at our mountain section destitute of the gospel, and our great Southwest rapidly filling up and needing to be possessed in the name of the Lord.

Then consider our Southern Methodism, with her two million splendid men and women and her five hundred million annual income. Surely this is a time to draw very close to the great heart of God, that we may know his purpose and learn the part he would have us undertake in this day of appalling need and unparalleled opportunity. "Ask and ye shall receive, seek and ye shall find, knock and it shall be opened unto you."

MY POINT OF VIEW.

Dear Dr. Meek: You charge me with attending a suffragette convention. No, sir, I did nothing of the kind: I attended the Mississippi Equal Suffrage Association or Convention. Be fair! There is a wide difference between a suffragette and a suffragist. A learned and careful writer in the Outlook says:

"The public, if it is just, will distinguish clearly between the Suffragists and the Suffragettes. The Suffragists are pursuing perfectly legitimate methods to convince their reluctant sisters that they ought to vote and the less reluctant men that they ought to give the vote to the women. The Suffragettes are committing assault and battery and are attempting arson and murder in crazy attacks upon society because it is not organized to suit them."

Be just, Doctor! Yes, I was present and with me was an honored and worthy preacher of your own Conference. I did not think it at all amiss to sit with this body of fine Mississippi women—some of whom were true and honored Methodists—and open the meeting with prayer, and make them a religious talk. I do not think that your North Mississippi fellow-laborer felt that we were out of place.

You indicate that only a few are asking for "lady rights"—"no considerable part" of our women. Why, then, are you so disturbed about it? An insignificant minority of us ought not to cause such agitation of mind as you and Dr. Steel exhibit. "No considerable part of them"—but the part of them are being vigorously considered. Why consider what is "inconsiderable?" The fact is, the showing made at the last General Conference was truly considerable.

You say that I have "already played the whole gamut," and have committed myself to some of the "most radical proposals that have sprung out of the movement" for lady rights. I shall not deny the soft impeachment—put it that way if you wish. The truth is that, having been reared by a mother, who was one of the finest women of the Southland; having married another; having been blessed with five daughters of the same kind, and having met in my ministry in Mississippi so very many hundreds of the same superior class, I have conceived so high an estimate of the goodness and greatness, true gentility and perfect womanliness of Southern Methodist women, that I am willing to freely grant them anything that they may ask. I have no sort of fear that our splendid women will abuse any privilege granted them by the Church. I do not feel justified in undertaking to dictate to them what is, and what is not, female propriety. As I see it, for a General Conference to say to such women: "You shall not be members of our quarterly or other conferences, because it would be unwomanly in you," has something distinctly Turkish about it. Would it be more out of place for that same masculine body to appoint a commission of its members to pass on the customs of social life for our women, lest they do or say something in their social functions not modest? Now, you and Dr. Steel, if you insist, may play the role of censors of proprieties for our women; but I shall not.

But you say, in effect, that they do not wish to preach. Well, if they do not, why should we be so zealous in telling them that they shall not? You suggest that some one might "try to thrust license (to preach) on them." Now, Doctor, did you ever, ever hear of any one trying to thrust license to preach upon a man who was not a candidate for the ministry? And if some silly fellow should try such a thing, would it mean that the poor, oppressed, thrust-upon sister would have to try to preach? Now, Doctor, any "hop-skip-and-jump style of discussion," that I may or may not have used is not as bad as that.

This is my point of view: I am perfectly willing to trust our women—I believe in them. I just cannot appreciate the viewpoint of those who are afraid that our women, our splendid Southern Methodist women, will by and by discredit our great Church by some act of impropriety. They, the very conservators of right, the acknowledged paragons of propriety, are better judges of such questions than we men are. How dare any man to constitute himself a guardian of propriety for them? I shall not dare to do such a thing.

When God made us men the protectors of our wives, he did not thereby constitute us mentors of their morals. King Ahasuerus tried that role with his queen Vashti, long ago. She refused to recognize his right; and the world for two and a half millenniums has applauded her courage and commended her womanliness. If our men are the mentors of the morals and proprieties of our women, the teachers should learn of their pupils. I just cannot see why my fine friends, Drs. Meek and Steel, are so afraid that our splendid Southern women may by and by do something disreputable, and I cannot see why you feel that it is our business to so guard them that they shall stay splendid as they are. May it not be wiser for us to trust them—aye, and learn goodness and propriety from them? This is my viewpoint.

Yours in the Cause,

H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE ECHOES.

The coming of an Annual Conference to any town or city is an historic event of no small significance. Since the 99th Session of the Mississippi Conference adjourned, sine die, on Monday, December 16, we have been listening to its echoes. Some of them I have caught, to embody in this short article. The universal opinion is that Bishop Morrison excelled himself in his presidency over the Conference. His address to the class admitted into full connection was wise, fatherly, and filled to the brim with his own ripest thought and experiences. Dr. Gross Alexander declared it was one of the best that he had ever heard, and that he would secure it for publication in the Methodist Review. He was charming in the social circle and is a most delightful guest in any home. There is always a place and a warm welcome for Bishop Morrison in the Mississippi Conference. The preachers evidently were on their best behavior, for, if I had noted the number of citizens who said to me, "You have sent me the best men you have," it would include a goodly number of homes that entertained. Then, on the other hand, our people here must have been lavish in their hospitality, for if I had noted all the preachers who enthusiastically grasped me by the hand saying, "Let me thank you for sending me to the best home in your town," I think it would include nearly the entire body.

I am reminded of an incident in the life of the the late W. E. Ballard, of our Conference. While pastor at Yazoo City, P. T. Barnum, the showman, heard him preach on a Sunday night. At the close of the sermon Barnum stepped up to the rostrum and said: "That was the sweetest, breeziest, loveliest, and most apt Gospel message I have listened to for a long time."

From the echoes I have caught I verily believe the preachers and people will agree that our Conference here was one of the most satisfactory, harmonious, lovely and religious we have ever held.

Dr. Stonewall Anderson's sermon Sunday morning on the "Losses and Gains of the Christian Life," was not only a literary gem, but thoroughly evangelical and would grace any publication on the American continent.

And what shall I say of Dr. Gross Alexander? He is a Gospel kaleidoscope. When he finished that wonderful discourse Sunday night, a scholarly preacher sitting near me said, "Harmon, I would give anything in the world if I could preach the Gospel like that,"—to which I said amen, and I am sure the whole Conference would have joined me in saying amen. Doctors Chappell and Stewart were helpful in their addresses and will always be welcomed in our midst.

A great crowd gathered Monday morning to hear the reading of the appointments, and, after it was all over, a lady who had watched intently the preachers, said to the writer: "I shall never forget that scene—the hearty, lusty way they sang 'Am I a Soldier of the Cross?' their fervent amens while the Bishop prayed; then the utmost silence that prevailed as the appointments were read; then, to complete the most wonderful picture of heroism I ever saw, with determination written on their faces, they picked up their grips and sturdily marched out to take their places at the front of the battle for another year." Our slogan for the year 1913 is "Ten Thousand Souls for Jesus!" What a wonderful inspiration that would be for our One Hundredth anniversary.

In the twenty-five churches operated by the Freedmen's Aid Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church there are said to be 1,400 colored students. 250 of whom are taking industrial training courses.

It is known that at present no one will be elected President of the Kentucky-Missouri Woman's College, which office was recently made vacant by the death of Dr. T. H. Smith. Dr. Parke, who is the head of the college, will act as President until Dr. Smith's successor is chosen.

The North Georgia Christian Advocate announces that it has paid $1000 in dividends during the past eleven years. Besides accumulating a surplus of $22,000 which was invested in a building and equipment. The congregation the North Christians on the line showing.

Dr. J. W. Brown, evangelist, and his wife, Mrs. Charles M. Alexander, who are engaged in evangelistic mission work in Australia, have accepted invitations to hold services in Glasgow and Edinburgh, Scotland, next October, and expect to remain there for no less than six months.

The North Georgia Conference raised last year for missions a total of $116,123.11. Of this amount $22,414 were raised by the Women's Missionary Society. The year's missionary offering was in excess of that of last year by more than $11,000. Evidently the Georgia Methodists are an aggressive host.

Rev. Nathaniel Burwash, B. T. D., Chancellor of Victoria University, the leading educational institution of Canadian Methodism, has tendered his resignation, after having been connected with that school for forty-seven years. A year ago he asked for leave of absence because of failing health, and his retirement was not unexpected.

The announcement has been made public that the Presbyterian Church will erect a new, modern, six-story, fire-proof building in connection with the Presbyterian Hospital in New Orleans. The Presbyterian of the South states that $250,000 will be needed to meet the expense of the new addition. This will give the Presbyterians one of the most modern sanitariums in the South.

Rev. George H. Crutcher, D.D., of Jackson, Tenn., who was recently called by the Baptist Church to the office of Corresponding Secretary of the Louisiana Baptist Board of Missions, has arrived and is now in charge of his office. Dr. Crutcher resigned the position of Evangelist of the Home Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention in order to accept the call to Louisiana.

In the death of Dr. William J. Vaughn on December 17, 1912, Vanderbilt University lost the senior member of its faculty, Southern Methodism lost one of its most worthy members, and the South lost one of its greatest educators. For eleven years he served as an educator in Alabama, his native State, and was the President of the Franklin (Tenn.) Female College for five years. The last thirty years of his life were given to Vanderbilt University, during which time he was Professor of Mathematics.

A list of the churches that paid last year more for missions than for local church expenses was recently published in Men and Missions. It is notable that in the list there does not appear a single Methodist church. Of the ten churches so reported, five are Presbyterian, two are Baptist, two are Congregational, and one is Episcopalian. The largest offering made by a single church was made by the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church of New York City, which was $10,000 for missions and $9,000 for home expenses.

Something new in the way of an attempted solution of the church paper problem has been begun by the ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church meeting within the jurisdiction of Bishop Barry whose episcopal residence is in Philadelphia. An organization known as The Methodist Publishing Association of Philadelphia has taken the Philadelphia Methodist and assumed editorial and business management of it on January 1. Bishop Barry recognizes the paper as his official organ and will write for it each week a message to the churches in his district.

While discussing the question "What is a Baptist Church?" before a Baptist Conference held in Glenside, N. Y., recently, Dr. A. T. Fowler of Mount Vernon, N. Y., said that he had received 200 letters from leading Baptist churches of England, and that 90 of them either reported that they practiced "open membership" or the admission of unconverted people. With the majority of the English Baptists recognizing other modes than immersion as baptism, and several ministers of the Northern Baptist Church in America unimpaired, it seems that the question "What is a Baptist Church?" is a pertinent one.

Cambridge University, in England, has always been a radical High Church institution, even going to the extent of refusing to grant degrees to students of theology, except they preach a sermon in Great St. Mary's Church in Cambridge and subscribe to the dogmas of the Church of England. It is of interest, however, even in America to note that at its recent meeting the Senate of Cambridge University, the controlling body of that school, voted to grant degrees to graduates from the theological department without reference to their church affiliations. It is expected that Oxford University, which has always been dominated by sectarian bigotry, will follow the example of Cambridge.

OUR CONFERENCE EVANGELISTS.

Dear Dr. Meek:—The Annual Conference being a record of past events, we look upon that which is past, and try to forecast the future.

One thing that the Conference did which, to my mind, means progress was the retaining of the Conference Evangelist. We have been falling behind our sister churches in this respect, and therefore have been losing ground. The office is essential to the forward movement of our Church. I do not believe in, neither do I use, irresponsible men, who come and go at their own will and pleasure, and who seem to be responsible to no one.

The plan of one pastor helping another is the proper one; but we face a tremendous fact; He cannot remain a sufficient length of time to accomplish the work that needs to be done. Then he has a double responsibility on his mind; in fact, he is divided in his interests. This we know from personal experience. To the true pastor, the home charge has the largest claim, and this he cannot shake off.

Now as to the man—or men. Brother Turner was with me here in Amite, and did most excellent work. In fact, he did the best work I have ever had done by any one I have had to help me. He is safe, sane and sound. He is good help, and will do fine work anywhere.

Brother Hoffpauir I know to be a good, true man, of earnest consecration. As to his work in meetings I have no experience, and cannot say what will be the result of his work. He is to be trusted and sustained.

Now, for a word connected with the finances of these brethren. They have taken this work with no pledge of support from Board or Conference, and all the financial support they will get will be the contributions made in the meetings. Their faith in the liberality of the people is great, and I trust that God will bless them and that their support may be such that they will be able to make the great work fairly on its feet. Brethren of the Synod, if you can use one of these men as your evangelist, take them in as your helpers. Arrange the finances beforehand, if possible. Turn them loose with the gospel of Christ, and stand by all their work.

What is the object of the evangelist? The man working in revival work should not be paid on the per capita basis—so much for every year, or based on the number added to the Church. The truth of the matter is, that the one who faithfully preaches the gospel of Christ twice a day, throwing his whole soul into every message, and often falling in the harvest, works much better than the one who, by superficial top-dressing, carries a few "top swimmers."

It is much easier to bring the "top swimmers" to port with a few scattering crums than to bring the wily bass from the depths. I was once entrusted by a pastor in these words: "Please do a little surface work."

I urge with this authorization. Brethren, let us help our Conference evangelists all we can, preferring them to others, if conditions will warrant. I can heartily endorse Brother Turner from experience. I can recommend Brother Hoffpauir as a true, earnest, consecrated man, worthy of our confidence.

CALLED UP HIGHER.

Dear Doctor Meek: My father, Rev. C. W. Carter, joined the Church Triumphant early on the morning of Dec. 30. He contracted la grippe at Conference. He was found to have passed away in his sleep. He closed his eyes here to open them amidst the glories of his Father's throne. Sunday, two weeks ago, he preached most eloquently and optimistically at Conference on the text "And it doth not yet appear what we shall be." He has found the answer that John and all the writers sought. He knows now what we shall be. There was a happy meeting in Paradise this morning when he and mother met after six years' separation.

That was not death, but translation.

"It is not death to die—

To leave this weary road,

And, mid the brotherhood on high,

To be at home with God.

It is not death to bear

The wrench that sets us free

From dungeon chain, to breathe the air

Of boundless liberty."

Dr. Sun Yat Sen, the creator of the new China, is now on his way to the United States for the purpose of attempting to raise $200,000,000, to be used in railroad construction in China. Dr. Sen hopes to secure a total of $600,000,000 from this and other countries.

The Isthmian Canal Commission has issued an order forbidding any one to go in the vicinity of the fortifications with a camera. The Commission rightly holds that to permit the photographing of the Government's fortifications is to weaken them as a means of defense in time of war.

Marsh Island, on the southern coast of Louisiana, contains 13,000 acres, and has a coast line of fifteen miles. It is owned by Mrs. Russell Sage. She desires to deed it to the State of Louisiana on condition that the State will set aside enough money to maintain it as a game preserve.

This is the season of the Mohammedan annual pilgrimage to Mecca, Arabia; and that city is now in the throes of an epidemic of cholera. Besides the 45,000 inhabitants of Mecca, there are now 10,000 pilgrims in that city. During four days of last week there were 1714 deaths from the terrible plague.

Recently the Nobel prize winners for the year 1912 were announced as follows: Medicine, Alexis Carrel, of New York; physics, Gustaf Dalen, of Stockholm; literature, Gerhart Hauptman, of Berlin, and chemistry, divided between Prof. Grignard, of Nancy University, and Prof. Sabatier, of Toulouse University.

In the last four years the Socialist party more than doubled its strength in the United States. This is not a sign that the principle of government it advocates is gaining in popularity, but that a feeling of political unrest is becoming more widespread. That Socialism will ever become the dominant principle in American politics, we doubt; but that it will force radical reforms upon other parties, we believe.

The Governor of Arkansas recently pardoned more than 300 convicts, giving as his reason that he objected to the Arkansas system of hiring out its convicts as convict laborers. The Governor of South Carolina also eclipsed all former records in his State by pardoning 80 convicts on Christmas day. the wholesale pardoning of criminals by these two chief executives will probably cause legislatures to take action curtailing the pardoning power of the Governor.

Mr. William A. It appears to us that the commercial spirit sways our public schools to too great an extent already.

NOTICE TO PREACHERS

In clubs of five or more, each	1.25 net
Eight months	1.00 net
To preachers	1.00 net

In cases where persons are very poor, the pastor may recommend that the paper be sent at a reduction. Remittances should be made by Money Order, Registered Letter, or in Stamps. Preachers may deduct for any expense incurred in remitting.

PUBLISHER.

ROBERT E. DOWNER

From youth of Robert Downer's devotion to the Christian religion is a record that needs no further explanation. He was a child of the faith, and his mother, Mrs. Jane Downer, was a devoted Christian. He was born in 1833, and his early life was spent in the study of the Bible and the practice of the Christian religion. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and he was a faithful worker in the church. He was a man of great faith and courage, and he was a man who was always ready to sacrifice for the cause of Christ. He was a man who was always ready to stand up for the truth, and he was a man who was always ready to do the will of God. He was a man who was always ready to love his neighbor as himself, and he was a man who was always ready to be a blessing to the world.

Robert E. Downer was born in Knoxville, Tennessee, February 25th, 1833. His father was a simple, but his mother had been reared a Roman Catholic, but through the influence of two or three Methodist preachers, had been converted and joined the Methodist Church.

Like Samuel of old, the child had been dedicated to God by his devout mother, who cherished throughout his childhood and youth the most unshaken conviction that her son would become a Methodist preacher. Through perils of sickness and the almost unparalleled afflictions that came and again threatened his life, the conviction never wavered and her prayers for his triumph were never less. "He will be a Methodist preacher, and I shall hear him preach." Unquestionably the most powerful formative influence in the life of the boy was that exerted by this devout and faithful mother.

About 1842 the family moved to New Orleans, and here, in a home of exemplary piety (for the father in the meantime had been converted), and blessed with all the gracious influences of the Sunday school and the services of God's house, the child grew to youth. He was obedient, tender-hearted, pious, but delicate of body and weakened and crippled by the series of painful accidents that had befallen him. At the age of nine he joined the Church. That he was converted he never doubted, but when, he did not know. The Holy Spirit had gently led the child to his mother's Savior.

In 1855 another move was made, this time to Whitesburg, in Pike County, Miss., where the permanent home was established. Always present was the conviction of a call to preach, but the boy was not unmindful of his limitations, and it seemed to him impossible that such could be the divine will concerning him. But to his surprise (and shall we not say, to God's) he was encouraged by his friends to prepare for the work of the ministry. Men like John C. Keener and Isaac Parker loaned him books and confirmed his convictions of duty. His brethren of the quarterly conference, without a dissenting voice, granted him license to preach and recommended him for admission into the travelling connection. But still he doubted the possibility of this thing. He says: "I experimented on the people of John's Station to see if I could preach, and as no one laughed or ridiculed the effort in my presence, I thought I might be able to edify plain country people on some back-woods circuit."

The Annual Conference was held in 1854 in Woodville. Many miles stretch their length between Whitesburg and Woodville, and the Tangipahoa and Atchafalaya rivers, swollen with the winter rains, were to be crossed. How to reach the seat of the Conference might have appalled a less heroic heart, leaving out of view the greater question of how to reach the circuit to which he was called. But he was not a man who was easily deterred. He was a man who was always ready to do the will of God. He was a man who was always ready to sacrifice for the cause of Christ. He was a man who was always ready to stand up for the truth, and he was a man who was always ready to do the will of God. He was a man who was always ready to love his neighbor as himself, and he was a man who was always ready to be a blessing to the world.

In November, 1854, he was convinced of this and went to Baton Rouge, La. In 1855 he was received into full connection, organized as a pastor in Bienville Parish, and appointed to the Vicksburg Circuit. The year 1856 found him in Madison County as pastor of Livingston and Concord Mission. At the session of the Conference held this year in Jackson, he was ordained an elder by Bishop Pierce, and at his own request was granted the local relation. This relation he sustained for two years, being readmitted into the travelling connection at Crystal Springs, December, 1857. It is due to brother Downer to state that his local relation was caused by the illness of his father.

From this time until December, 1859, when at the Conference session held at Hattiesburg he was granted the supernumerary relation, he continued in the itinerant service, asking no favors and going uncomplainingly to the work assigned to him, except that during one year (1858) he was a supernumerary and resided at Ocean Springs. The assumption of this relation was also caused by the illness of his father. During a part of the year he served the Cadiz St. Church, New Orleans. It is a tribute to the blamelessness of his life and to his favor with the people that for the next four years he was the pastor of the flock, among whom he had just spent the year of retirement.

The years were passed in the faithful and successful service of the Church, and the many widely separated circuits bear testimony to the extent of his labors. Franklinton, Arcola, Holmesville, Wesson and Beauregard, Brownsville, Pearlinton, Pipkins Chapel, Newton, Georgetown, Covington, all appear upon the list of his appointments. He was at Providence two years, at Mount Carmel two years, at Newton two years, at Vossburg three years, at Ellisville three years, at Ocean Springs seven years. One year he was Sunday school agent, but the next year found him back in his loved employ as pastor, this time on the China Grove Circuit. Wherever he went he was loved, trusted, followed, and his record is kept by Him to whom his life was given.

As a preacher Brother Downer was earnest, Scriptural and practical. His style was hortatory and his voice gentle and persuasive. His constant theme was, Jesus the perfect Savior, and his steadfast purpose, the establishment of the believer in the faith of Christ. To him nothing availed but the faith that works by love and purifies the heart.

In his demeanor toward the preachers a quiet dignity finely blended with a sincere and gracious cordiality. He seemed to neither seek nor avoid the society of his brethren; but met every approach with such unaffected friendliness that none could doubt the genuine kindness of his feelings. There was nothing austere about him; he was one of the most approachable of men. But he was of a serious mind, and did not seem to know how to jest. He was strong in his attachments, and his constant desire seemed to be that he might do good to every man. His deafness greatly lessened his social pleasures and caused that seeming aloofness that so often marks those who are thus afflicted. For many years he could hear only by means of a speaking trumpet; thus he was forced to find entertainment in his books and papers, and to his friends he wrote long and helpful letters. His reading, though not along many lines, was fairly extensive and thorough, and especially delightful to him was the study of the Bible and the reading of books of a devotional character. He was a frequent and interesting contributor to the church papers and through the religious press kept in touch with the movement of the times.

On November 20th, 1891, Brother Downer was happily married to Miss Jane Eguet of New Orleans, and in the devout and amiable woman found a congenial and helpful wife and a willing sharer of the joys and burdens of his itinerant life. To them were born seven children, three of whom died in early childhood. The others—Mrs. Kate Louise Barlow, Mrs. Susan Virginia Cooter, Homer Edwin Downer and Charles Eguet Downer—are living and with their mother cherish the memory of one whose heroic life commanded their respect and whose gentle spirit inspired their most devoted love. The younger son, Charles, is a local preacher in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and resides in Jackson.

After his superannuation Brother Downer made his home with his daughter, Mrs. Gus Cooter, living at that time in Mount Olive, here he was the recipient of the affectionate care of the cultured and appreciative people. With his daughter he then moved to Ocean Springs, where much of his active ministry had been spent. Nearly at Long Beach was located the little home that he had built against the coming of the day of enforced inactivity. This home he and Sister Downer afterward deeded to the Mississippi Conference as a home for worn-out itinerant preachers. After some years Mr. Cooter made his home in Jackson, and with him came our venerable brother, feeble with age and disease, but still alert and cheerful and happy in the consciousness of the divine love and favor. His friends advised his friends of his declining health, telling of the wearied heart that sometimes almost ceased its beating, and of the completeness of his peace and joy in Christ. They were not surprised when the message came that the tired body had yielded up the spirit it had clothed so long, and that the chastened soul was at rest with God. Like Paul he could have said: "I have fought a good fight, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, will give me in that day."

It was on Saturday evening, July 6th, 1912, that the end came and the loving friends laid to rest the body of the man of God. Methodism has produced many noble men, but probably none in whom a heroic and trustful spirit triumphed more signally over the many varied hindrances that opposed themselves to the accomplishment of the work to which the Spirit of the Lord had called him.

We shall miss the little bent and crippled form and look no more into the intent and earnest face. But we trust that the memory of his heroic spirit and the influence of his devoted and useful life will abide in the hearts of his brethren. In the earlier day, among the kingdoms of men, this maimed and helpless child would have been thrown out to perish in the fields; in the coming day, in the Kingdom of our Lord, he shall be called a Prince.

GOBBLE, GOBBLE, GOBBLE!

A turkey perching in a tree
Turned round and looked right down at me,
And all the words he said were three—
"Gobble, Gobble, Gobble!"

I got that turkey in a shed;
Some yellow corn before him spread;
The same three words to him I said—
"Gobble, Gobble, Gobble!"

When he had gained about ten pound,
And was fat, juicy, sleek and round,
Again he turned and made the sound—
"Gobble, gobble, gobble!"

"All right," said I; "I'll gobble you,
Invite my friends to help me, too;
What you request, dear sir, we'll do—
"Gobble, gobble, gobble!"

There at the table to each guest,
I read that turkey's last request;
They then proceeded with great zest
To gobble, gobble, gobble.

They made of him a perfect wreck;
They stuffed themselves full to the neck;
They gobble, gobble, gobbled,
Till they wobble, wobble, wobbled.

JOHN'S SISTER.

"I say, there," he asked, as he stood in the streets of Paris for the first time, and watched two Sisters of Mercy pass along, "what kind of women is them I see go along, all in black, with a white thing around their face and neck?"

"Oh," replied the man addressed, "they're the Sisters of St. John the Baptist."

"Get out!" was the sneering answer, "you can't fool me. Why, man, John the Baptist has been dead more'n a hundred years."—Tit-Bits.

A HINT TO BOYS.

I stood in the store of a merchant the other day when a boy came in and applied for a situation.

"Can you write a good hand?" he was asked.

"Yaas."

"Good at figures?"

"Yaas."

"That will do; I do not want you," said the merchant.

"But," said I, when the boy had gone, "I know that lad to be an honest, industrious boy. Why don't you give him a chance?"

Because he hasn't learned to say, 'Yes, sir,' and 'No, sir.' If he answers me as he did when applying for a situation, how will he answer customers when he has been here a month?"—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

WM. MARCONI WHEN A BOY.

It has not been very many years since Marconi was a mere boy, working, experimenting, and dreaming in his work-shop in Italy. He dreamed strange dreams, so thought his father, but since those days of his youth, his dreams have proven not only strange, but wonderful and capable of coming true, for he dreamed of the "wireless" telegraphy as we have it now.

"There would be no danger of shipwrecks, could I make my dreams come true," said the youthful Italian. And then he set to work with renewed energy, and although he was only nineteen, he began his wonderful "wireless" with the aid of a journal treating of electricity and giving an account of a wonderful discovery made by a young German scientist who had died before completing his work. Marconi went on with the young German's idea and worked it out to completion.

To quote from a foreign writer on the subject:

"But there had been a long struggle between the boy and his father before William was allowed to go his way. His father was passionately fond of music, and his heart was centered on the hope of seeing his son become a great composer. His mother, too, was greatly attached to music. The daughter of a rich and well-known Dublin merchant, Mr. Jamieson, had come to Italy to study singing, and had met Mr. Marconi and married him. So both William's parents took great pains with his musical education. But he was quite stupid at learning music. On one occasion his father said to him: 'If you don't pay more attention to your lessons, I will throw all this stuff out of the window.' The 'stuff' was a collection of machinery, wires, battery, and what not, which young William had filled his play-room with. At the age of eight he had begun to play at being an inventor; and when he was only eleven he started to build a new kind of steam-engine. At the age of fourteen he took up the study of electricity in real earnest.

"His father was in despair, and once destroyed some of his gifted son's appliances, saying, 'I won't have the house blown up, William!' But the fact of the matter was, he was vexed because his son cared more for science than he did for music. But happily Mrs. Marconi began to see that her young son had a real talent for invention, and she soothed the disappointed father, and made it her special care to see that William was permitted to go on experimenting. She gave him all the money he wanted for the purpose, and paid clever teachers to come and instruct him in the science and machinery. Later she sent him to Bologna University, where he continued his studies with greater facilities."

So it was that the sweet-dispositioned, warm-hearted Irish mother prevailed over the passionate, fiery, determined, but affectionate father, and young William Marconi had his way, and gave us the greatest discovery of the age. And he is still a young man, and this great discovery his first. We may look for other wonders from him.—Times-Democrat.

THE PAST YEAR.

We have reached the end of another year. In the commercial world it is a time of careful inspection; another year of widely extended trade and exchange has closed, and around this season men are busy casting up accounts, taking stock, and trying to see what the year has brought them, and where they stand at its close. In this they are wise. It is not prudent to conduct a business without regular and thorough investigations to show whither it is leading—whether to prosperity or to bankruptcy. Men want to know whether their trafficking is to profit or loss.

Now along with this inspection of our affairs there ought to go an inspection of ourselves. Life is more than meat; character is more than possessions. If, therefore, it is important to know how we have done commercially, it is vastly more important to know how we have done morally and spiritually. How have we fared in this higher realm of our lives? Where do we stand as the new year begins.

What has been the reaction of our daily work on character? Our business may have yielded us a handsome profit, but if we have succumbed to the temptations which are inseparable from life in a sinful world, if we have achieved our successes at the sacrifice of rectitude, or if we have even allowed ourselves to be subdued to that which we have worked in, then the year has been one of loss to us; we must reckon ourselves to have failed. On the other hand, though we may have met with business reverses and financial defeat, yet if we have maintained our integrity before God and men, if we have beaten down Satan under our feet, preferring the testimony of a good conscience to gains gotten by unrighteousness, we can count that the year has brought us great and enriching returns. No inquisition into the business we have been conducting is complete unless it includes this inquiry into the way our management of our business or work has affected our character.

It becomes us to inquire, also, what gains we have made through our contact with the means of grace and our use of the opportunities God has given us for distinctively spiritual enlargement and improvement. Have we searched the Scriptures? Have we maintained habits of prayer? Have we been regular in our waiting upon God in his house? Have we been careful to translate the truths we have heard into forms of conduct and life? These are questions which search us and try us, and by which we may judge ourselves that we be not judged of God. There is many a child of God who, putting these questions to himself, can answer with humility and with joy: "His grace was not bestowed on me in vain." At the close of another year, he can truly say of Christ his Saviour: "I see him still nearer whom I always see."

Nevertheless, the best of Christians must not only confess non-attainment of ideals, but even failure to attain the best that is within his reach. He must acknowledge failure to improve opportunities, and want of sustained ardor and enthusiasm in running the Christian race. Granted that he has grown in grace during the year, he must nevertheless have a marvelous facility in self-deception who does not feel constrained to say at the year's end:

"When I compare
What I have lost with what I have gained,
What I have missed with what attained,
Little room do I find for pride."

This consciousness of non-attainment, however, should be felt only as a keener spur. Past failure viewed in connection with the sobering thought that another year of life has gone for us should but lend new force and urgency to the apostolic injunction, "Redeem the time."

"In vain
Ye call back the past again;
The past is deaf to your prayer."

DR. C. W. CARTER DEAD.

Louisiana Methodism is mourning. The late Charles W. Carter, who has been with us for many years, has died. Dr. Carter was born in West Feliciana Parish, near Clinton, May 20, 1828. He was educated in the common schools and at Centenary College. He also took a law course at the University of Louisiana (now Tulane University), but turned from bright prospects in his chosen profession to enter the Methodist Ministry. He was admitted on trial into the Louisiana Conference at its sixteenth session at Alexandria, December 14-16, 1861. He was admitted into full connection at Homer, in December, 1863. For more than fifty years he was in the active service, and wrought with an efficiency that contributed largely to the upbuilding of Methodism in the State, and which commanded universal recognition. He died with great acceptability the leading charges in his Conference; was a member of Union sent as a delegate to the General Conference, and from June 10, 1896, to June 22, 1898, was the editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. For several years Dr. Carter had been on the superannuate list, a position which his brethren, because of his unequal gifts, granted him with some reluctance, but which he felt was more in keeping with his advanced years than the exacting duties of a pastorate.

Dr. Carter's wife died several years ago, and the members of the family who are left to mourn his departure are Rev. C. B. Carter, presiding elder of the Ruxton District; Rev. Thomas Carter, a professor in the Theological Department of Vanderbilt University; Rev. J. Van Carter, Secretary of the Louisiana State Sunday School Association; Mrs. A. D. McNoy, Professor of English in the Louisiana State Normal; Mrs. J. E. Guardia, wife of Prof. Guardia, of the State Normal College, and a daughter living in New York, whose maiden name was Miss Mattie Carter. The obsequies of the deceased were announced to take place in Natchitoches yesterday, with Rev. R. H. Harper officiating, and the interment was to be in old American Cemetery at that place.

We have at our disposal during the time not yet given to us in this issue an estimate of the crops of the year 1912. It is a most interesting and valuable document, and we are glad to present it to our readers. It shows that the crops of the year 1912 were not only abundant, but also of a high quality. This is a most encouraging prospect for the future, and we are sure that the people of this State will be well satisfied with the results.

OUR BOUNTIFUL CROPS.

Our material prosperity is not the nation's greatest asset, yet it means much to know that ours is a land of plenty and that the millions of our population are safeguarded from unavoidable want. Indeed, how peculiarly fortunate we are in this respect but few fully realize. With the hope that it may give some a larger appreciation of God's goodness to our people, as shown in his temporal blessings, we quote from the New York Independent, of December 26, the following summary of our chief crops during the year 1912:

The first of the year's crop reports was not an encouraging one. It related (in May) to the winter-sown wheat, 6,469,000 acres of which, or about 20 per cent, had been winter-killed. Estimates of other crops, however, were favorable, but they did not point to the great yields which were afterward to be disclosed. As one month's report followed another, the estimates steadily increased. Even the quantity of winter wheat grew from 358,000,000 bushels (July report) to 383,000,000 in October, but the yield, like the crops of spring wheat, potatoes, corn, oats and barley, was steadily underestimated although additions were made every thirty days. Not until the Government's final report was published, on December 16, was the full size of the crops known. The figures are given below:

The Crops.
	1912.	1911.
Corn	3,124,746,000	2,531,488,000
Spring Wheat	336,348,000	190,682,000
Winter wheat	359,319,000	430,656,000
Total wheat	730,267,000	621,338,000
Oats	1,418,337,000	922,298,000
Barley	223,824,000	160,240,000
Rye	35,664,000	33,119,000
Buckwheat	19,249,000	17,549,000
Flaxseed	28,073,000	19,370,000
Rice	25,054,000	22,934,000

From the crops of the year 1912, we are sure that the people of this State will be well satisfied with the results. The crops of the year 1912 were not only abundant, but also of a high quality. This is a most encouraging prospect for the future, and we are sure that the people of this State will be well satisfied with the results.

THE IMPORTANCE OF A SOUND CREED.

We often hear it said that it does not matter what one believes, just so he lives right. Under the influence of this loose our Church has possibly practiced too liberal a policy of toleration. The view that there will be good people from all Churches in heaven should not be allowed to carry us too far. If a person's belief is radically wrong, his life cannot be right. An evil tree cannot bring forth good fruit. If our faith is wrong, our life is apt to be correspondingly wrong. An evil person may perform good works, or he may perform evil works, and in either case be evil still. A good person must perform good works, and that continually, or lose his goodness.

Human beings are not naturally good, but after the likeness of Adam, are born in sin, and if permitted to follow the natural bent, they will develop into wicked persons. The unrighteous image stamped upon our soul is changed by the will of man surrendering to the will of God and by faith accepting Jesus Christ as a Savior. The new life obtained by faith in Christ is maintained by constant communion with God through Christ, and by works of righteousness. "Faith without works is dead." If we trust in any other name than that of Christ, we cannot be saved. If we are not saved by faith in Jesus Christ, our goodness availeth nothing. If one who is a member of a Church denies the deity of Christ, how can we believe that that person will ever reach heaven? What we believe is a matter of the utmost importance. What is essential in religious truth is discoverable, at least in Christian lands, and the Bible clearly teaches that men are responsible for their belief, whatever it may be.

AN ERROR.

In our editorial last week, entitled "Peace Negotiations," we spoke of the representatives of the six great Powers as meeting in the historic St. James Palace, in London, to effect peace between the Balkan States and Turkey. In that statement, we erred. It is the Commissioners of the warring nations that are having their meetings in that famous building. The representatives of the Powers are important factors in the pending negotiations and they also are gathered in London, but they are holding their sittings elsewhere in the great English metropolis. We make this correction in the interest of strict accuracy. Our mistake was due to the haste with which we wrote the brief editorial in which it occurred.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

From Hernando, Miss., Mrs. S. M. Thames writes: "We reached here safely and were most cordially received. We are anticipating a pleasant year among these kind people."

Rev. H. R. Singleton and wife will entertain the New Orleans pastors and their wives at an informal luncheon to be given in the private dining room of the Monteleone Hotel next Monday.

We are informed that the Rev. and Mrs. W. H. Moulton, of Coldwater, Miss., have been made happy by the birth of a daughter. We extend our most hearty congratulations.

Rev. G. W. McLain, who was assigned at the recent session of the North Mississippi Conference to the Bellfontaine Circuit, has been changed from that appointment to the North Carrollton charge.

Rev. Briscoe Carter, the presiding elder, requests us to state that the District Stewards' meeting in the Ruston District will be held on February 15, instead of January 15, as was at first announced.

Rev. J. J. Brooks is comfortably domiciled in the parsonage at Boyle, Miss., where he has been cordially welcomed. He states that Rev. J. H. Smith, his predecessor, left things in good shape, and that the people hold him in high esteem.

Rev. J. W. Booth, who was assigned to the Jeanerette (La.) charge at the recent session of the Louisiana Conference, was in the Advocate office last week. Brother Booth has been in New Orleans for the past two years, and his frequent visits to this office will be missed.

Rev. E. B. Troy passed through New Orleans last week on his way from West Monroe, La., to Crowley, where he will make his home for the next Conference year. He has been assigned to the pastorate of the Acadia Circuit, which includes the territory formerly known as Prudhomme Circuit.

The New Orleans Preachers' Association met last Monday and elected the following officers for the ensuing year: Dr. J. M. Henry, chairman; Rev. H. R. Singleton, Secretary, and Rev. C. A. Battle, treasurer. The body will meet every second, third, and fourth Monday mornings in the parlor of the First Methodist Church.

The new presiding elder of the Seashore District, Dr. W. H. Huntley, has been given an enthusiastic welcome, and enters hopefully upon the work of the new year. Scholarly, cultured, and brotherly, Dr. Huntley is capacitated to adorn the responsible office which he holds. We wish him a large measure of success in his new field.

Rev. W. V. Shearer, who is stationed at Coffeeville, Miss., instead of at Potts Camp, as was first announced, is at his new post and has made a good beginning. He found an appreciative people at Coffeeville, and writes that everything possible has been done for his comfort, even to the filling of the pantry with an abundance of provisions.

The Iberville (La.) Sentinel, published in Plaquemine, La., after expressing regret because Rev. H. B. Perritt has been moved from that place, continues as follows: "Mr. Perritt is an able and scholarly gentleman, and has a host of friends in this community who regret his departure." Brother Perritt has already taken up his new work at Greensburg, La.

In forwarding his first round of appointments a few days ago, Rev. J. H. Mitchell, the presiding elder of the Corinth District, adds: "The prospects are encouraging. I think that we shall have a good year." Methodism in Northeast Mississippi is fortunate in having Brother Mitchell to lead its forces. He is wise in counsel and unceasing in his labors.

Rev. J. W. Ramsey writes encouragingly of the outlook at Mendenhall, Miss., where he and his family have been delightfully received. A new parsonage has already been purchased and two new rooms will be added to it in the near future. It is also stated that two adjacent lots will probably be donated to the property. We congratulate Brother Ramsey upon the fine start which he has made.

Dr. J. M. Henry spent the holidays with his brother, Rev. W. S. Henry, at Waterproof, La. Dr. Henry reports that his brother is delighted with his new charge, and that he has been cordially received by the people at Waterproof. Brother Henry came to the Louisiana Conference at Monroe by transfer from the South Carolina Conference, and we most heartily welcome him to the Pelican State.

In a personal letter to this office Rev. J. R. Countiss, the President of Grenada College, has the following to say concerning that school: "All is going well with our school. We have twenty-five more pupils than we had at this time last year, and there are a number to enter after the holidays. This is a good time to enter, of course, and we hope to have every room taken before the beginning of the second term."

Rev. L. L. Roberts was in New Orleans last week and paid the Advocate office an appreciated call. He was on his way to Logtown, Miss., to which place he was going in behalf of Whitworth College. Brother Roberts has assumed his new duties as Financial Agent of Whitworth College with becoming grace, and we predict for him a successful year's work in that capacity, and for Whitworth, large returns from his service.

Bishop H. C. Morrison has made the following changes in the appointments of the Mississippi Conference: Rev. C. F. Emery has been changed from the Newton District to the Crawford Street Church, Vicksburg, and Dr. H. W. Featherston has been named as presiding elder of the Newton District. An exchange of places has also been made between Rev. C. H. Ellis and Rev. C. C. Griffin, the former going to Pachuta, and the latter to Shiloh.

Rev. P. O. Lowrey passed through New Orleans last week on his way to Hammond, where he has arranged to do special Sunday school work for a few days. While in New Orleans he arranged to have published a manual of the officers of the Sunday schools of the Louisiana Annual Conference. The volume will be a handy reference book, and will contain much information of value to both our pastors and Sunday school superintendents.

Rev. H. S. Spragins reports that he has been given a most cordial welcome by the Methodists at Greenville and at the other points where his official duties have carried him. And the people report that Brother Spragins has everywhere made a fine impression. The sentiment seems to be unanimous that the Greenville District is in safe and capable hands, and increasing prosperity for our Church in the territory which it embraces is confidently predicted.

Rev. W. W. Jones, our new pastor at Carrollton, Miss., writes as follows: "To say that we are at Carrollton is sufficient—no use to mention kind reception, courtesies, etc. Everybody knows how these good people do things. They all take part. A young man should consider himself fortunate to follow in the path of Brother Thames, who is loved by all the people here." The lines have, indeed, fallen in pleasant places to Brother Jones. He will realize this even more fully as the months pass.

Rev. J. C. Ellis reached South McComb, Miss., his new appointment, on Dec. 19, and is now happily domiciled in the parsonage at that place. In writing of his reception he says: "A splendid, warm dinner awaited us on our arrival, and several of the stanch members of the church were at the parsonage to welcome us. We are delightfully situated." Brother Ellis served in Copia County for eight years and leaves his many friends there with a feeling of considerable regret, though he is much pleased with his new field.

We regret to be informed that Rev. T. J. Durrett, of Buena Vista, Miss., has found it necessary to go to Hot Springs because of the condition of his health. He states that he is quite unwell, but that he hopes that a course of baths will sufficiently restore him physically to enable him to resume his work. Brother Durrett speaks in high terms of the people of his charge, whom he has served for the past two years, and of whose many kindnesses he is most appreciative. He asks the brethren to remember him in their prayers.

Mr. F. L. Matthews, one of the oldest and most highly respected Methodists in the vicinity of New Orleans, died on Friday evening, December 27, at his late home in Gretna, La. He was the father of Sister S. L. Riggs, the wife of Rev. S. L. Riggs, of the Louisiana Conference, and of Sister H. H. Ahrens, wife of Brother H. H. Ahrens, formerly a member of the Louisiana Conference and now a local elder in the Church. Besides these two daughters, he leaves six children and his aged wife to mourn his going. We extend sympathy to the bereaved ones.

The Lincoln County Times, published in Brookhaven, Miss., has the following to say concerning Rev. W. H. Lewis, who was assigned to the Brookhaven church at the recent session of the Mississippi Conference: "Rev. W. H. Lewis, the new pastor of the Methodist Church, arrived Tuesday evening. The ladies of the church had made the parsonage ready for him and his family, and they were taken immediately to their new home. The Brookhaven church is to be congratulated on the accession of a pastor of the character and attainments of the Rev. Mr. Lewis."

We are pleased to hear of the prosperity of our church at Hillhouse, Miss., where, though the population is small, we have some of the choicest people to be found anywhere in the great Mississippi Delta. The Sunday school is in a flourishing condition, and this congregation made an excellent record during the past year. Among those to whom Methodism is greatly indebted at this point are Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Smith, who have paid liberally to keep the work of the Church going, and whose beautiful home is always open to our preachers. Any pastor who has the privilege of serving his flock should count himself fortunate.

Our attention has been called to an error in the report of the proceedings of the North Mississippi Conference, which appeared in a recent issue of the Advocate. Rev. H. M. Ellis was represented as having preached on "The Duty of Caring for the Sick," when his theme was "The Homing Instinct of the Soul." We gladly make this correction. Though he is profoundly interested in the work of caring for the physical man, the versatile Field Agent of our Tri-State Hospital enterprise does not limit himself to this field of service in his pulpit ministration. On the contrary, he recognizes the fact that the deathless spirit is the nobler part of every human being, and that to uplift and save it is the highest duty of the ambassador of Christ.

We publish in this issue of the Advocate the report on the Memphis Tri-State Hospital adopted by the Mississippi Conference in its recent session at Hazlehurst. It deserves a careful reading, and the suggestions made therein as to how this enterprise may be helped, should be carefully noted. In a note to the Editor, received a few days ago, Rev. H. M. Ellis, our capable leader in the movement to construct and equip this urgently needed hospital, says: "There are many Methodists in the hospitals of Memphis at this time, as there are at all times. All the hospitals here are crowded. Mississippi furnishes a large proportion of these patients. The receipts for our Methodist Hospital have not abated during the Christmas season."

Rev. E. H. Cunningham, of Myrtle, Miss., writes: "The briefest will and testament on record was found recently in New York City. It ran as follows: 'After Henry Jones, John Jones.' I think this brevity should be observed somewhat in the various reports made by our preachers, as such reports would be convenient for the Advocate staff, as well as more likely to be read by the people. The loyal Methodists of our charge continue to evidence their kindness and co-operation in all phases of the work. The indications point to a happy and prosperous year." The doctrine of brevity advocated by Brother Cunningham is a most wholesome one. Many a good sermon and valuable article are injured and rendered ineffective by spinning them out to undue length.

Dr. W. T. Johnson, of Greenwood, Miss., has the sympathy of a host of friends in the sore bereavement which has come to him in the loss of his beloved wife, Mrs. Ella Bacon Johnson. She was quite unwell during the late session of the North Mississippi Conference at Greenwood, but at that time none dreamed that her illness was sufficiently grave to imperil her life. However, she grew steadily worse until her condition became alarming, and though all that the most skillful physicians and the best trained nurses could do, was brought into requisition, it was impossible to arrest the process of the disease which had fastened itself upon her. Dr. Johnson is a son of the late Rev. Stephen Johnson, of Carroll County, and is the president of the Board of Stewards of the First Methodist Church of Greenwood. He was married to Miss Ella Bacon, of Madison County, more than twenty years ago, and two children—Mrs. Latham Ray, of Greenwood, and a younger daughter—blessed this union. Both of them are living, and share with their father the great sorrow which has cast its dark shadow over this now desolate and lonely household. May the Heavenly Father comfort and sustain them in this time of heartache and severe trial.

SEND IN YOUR SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Dear Advocate: In the rush of closing up for Conference, attending the session, the moving out of old pastors and moving in of new, the fund for buying the old Methodist Church property in Mansfield for Mansfield College has been almost at a standstill. But one contribution has been received since the last report:

Mrs. M. E. Gilbert, Gilbert, La. $10.00
Amount previously reported 332.00

Balance needed $658.00

Now that other matters are out of the way, I hope the friends of the College and the Methodists generally will take up this matter and push it to a successful termination. This property has been used by the College as a campus for so many years that it is hard to realize what its alienation would mean until it would be too late. It is quite certain that if it ever passes into private hands, three, and possibly four or five times as much as is now required will be necessary to recover it. Send in your subscriptions at once.

On October 31 the death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Barnett, and took from them little MACK, their two-year-old boy, who was so bright and lovely. He made the home bright for a little while, and now he has gone to brighten another world. May the dear Lord cheer and comfort the hearts of the bereaved parents and only brother. Little Mack was born May 14, 1910, near Topeka, Miss. He, together with his mother and little brother, was spending a few days at his Grandpa McCormick's home, two miles east of Johnston Station, when he became ill, and after a few days died on Oct. 31, 1912.

GRANDMA McCORMICK.

Mrs. ANNIE BELL TRIESCHMANN, wife of Brother J. W. Trieschmann and daughter of Brother and Sister James Beard, was born in Lake Providence, La., Dec. 21, 1886, and died Dec. 17, 1912. Sister Trieschmann was married to Brother J. W. Trieschmann, Dec. 26, 1908, and one child, Werner, a bright little boy about eighteen months of age, was God's gift to them. Sister Trieschmann was converted and joined the Methodist Church when fourteen years of age and ever lived a beautiful, Christian life. She abounded in good work, doing cheerfully what she could to advance the cause of Christ. She was blessed with a beautiful voice and in the choir each Sunday contributed greatly to the success of the service. She has joined the "Choir Invisible" where her sweet voice is lifted in ecstatic hosannas to the praise of the Lamb which was slain and is risen again. During her long illness, while suffering intensely, she was heroically patient and meekly accepted this dispensation of her Master, and was made "perfect through suffering." She leaves behind in sorrow and loneliness, a husband, one child, a father and mother, four brothers and one sister, and a host of loving friends. On the afternoon of Dec. 18, surrounded by a multitude of weeping relatives and friends, we laid her body to rest in its long sleep in the beautiful Providence cemetery, comforted only in the blessed assurance that her radiant spirit was amidst scenes of glory and with the sweet hope that we shall meet her again.

VARIOUS KINDS OF MANNA.

It is supposed that the manna of the Israelites was a saccharine exudation of a species of tamarisk, the sap of which was set flowing by an insect. Several trees yield manna, as the flowing ash of Sicily and the eucalyptus of Australia. In India a sweet exudation comes from the bamboo, and a similar substance is obtained from the sugar-pine and common reed of our own country.—The Christian Herald.

WE ARE THE LORD'S.

The Church with a very limited capital is doing a great business. Probably in no other enterprise does a dollar go as far as it does in Church work. Then the results are in no sense to be compared. What is a soul worth in dollars and cents? Our Lord valued a soul at his own life's blood—death in the most cruel way known to mankind. His love was so great that he died to save a soul. What was his monetary value of a soul—what if a man gain the whole world and lose his soul? Combine all the money and corporations and products and lands and ships and commerce and everything, and its value is not the equivalent of one soul. And to our Lord a soul in China or India or Africa is worth this. His message to us is: "Go ye therefore, teach all nations . . . to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you."

The obligation is upon us. We are to go or send, to pray and pay. We are the Lord's. He has bought us with his own blood. All we have is his.—Southern Christian Advocate.

A NOTE OF THANKS.

I sincerely thank all brethren and friends who expressed sympathy and rendered friendly aid in my affliction at the Conferences at Greenwood and Hazlehurst, Miss. I am especially indebted to Revs. O. W. Bradley, H. P. Lewis, Jr., J. O. Ware, and W. T. Griffin for efficient aid rendered in my work.

On account of my continued physical disability and the holiday rush at the Publishing House, there is necessarily some delay in filling orders given me for books, but I trust those interested will be patient while we are doing the best we can. I am yet confined to my room because of the injuries received in the automobile accident on the 3d inst. at Greenwood, but I hope with care and rest to recover after awhile.

The Sunday School.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

Do you ever use the Absentee Cards for the Primary, Intermediate and Senior Departments, as published by Smith & Lamar, to save the busy teacher time and to tie the recurrently absent pupil onto the class by the chord of constant and loving attention?

If the Sunday school has done its work right during the Junior period, there will be plenty of young people ready for service—enough fresh young and enthusiastic people ready to carry on the teacher-training work, and to do it on high and fine levels.

There should be a director of religious work in every Sunday school—one who will stand behind the work of religious education.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

A Cradle Roll Christmas Tree.

The Carrollton Avenue Cradle Roll members and their mothers enjoyed a Christmas tree party on Thursday, Dec. 19, at 3 o'clock, at Carrollton Avenue Church, New Orleans. The tree was beautifully decorated by one of our mothers, Mrs. W. N. Vaught, and was highly appreciated by all. A number of our Beginners sang as the opening song, "A Merry Christmas to You." Mrs. Snelling followed a short Scripture lesson with a beautiful prayer for our mothers and babies. Recitations were given by little Misses Marjory Pierce and Harriet Jordan, and a solo was very sweetly rendered by little Miss Leah Nuss. After a few words by the Superintendent, who attempted to set before the mothers a resolution for a mother's union later on, Santa Claus came, blowing his horn, and distributed the dolls and horns together with a package of stick candy for every baby.

It is needless to say that the little ones were soon enjoying themselves immensely and that the mothers were also pleased with watching them.

Each mother also received from Santa a match-scratcher and favors of home-made candy. The Beginners then sang "A happy New Year to you," and the party broke up with the little girls hugging their dollies and the boys blowing their horns.

We have sixty babies and forty-three mothers enrolled, and out of that number forty-eight babies were present and about forty mothers or their representatives.

Annual Report of the Louisiana Conference Field Secretary.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

Allowing that figures cannot adequately express the scope of influence of any religious or educational effort, nevertheless it might be interesting to our Louisiana Sunday school workers to read the following extract from the Field Secretary's annual report:

"I traveled 16,190 miles by rail, 281 miles by buggy and 100 miles by boat, totaling 16,571 miles. I delivered 168 sermons and addresses; held 56 councils with pastors and Sunday school workers; placed 18 Teachers' Libraries; organized or planned 9 Teacher-training Classes and 53 Wesley Adult Bible Classes; organized or planned the organization of 32 Home Departments and 18 Cradle Rolls; organized 13 Missionary Departments with superintendents and literature; have had elected 14 Elementary and 5 Adult superintendents; established 8 Workers' Councils; introduced systems of grading and rewards into 8 schools, and assisted in organizing 5 new schools.

"Besides this, I have attended six District Conferences, at each of which I had an exhibit of Sunday school literature and represented the Sunday school interests among the pastors and delegates. I attended one Missionary Institute and five Parish and State Sunday School Conventions; I helped in three revivals; organized 5 Sunday School Conferences; made a great many pastoral visits in enlisting scholars and workers; have exhibited, distributed and introduced a great deal of Sunday school literature; have regularly furnished notes for the Sunday school column of the New Orleans Christian Advocate; have held two Sunday School Institutes, and graded and introduced graded literature into schools wherever it seemed possible."

THE "WORLD IN CHICAGO."

The "World in Chicago" will occupy both the Auditorium Theatre and the Coliseum for over five weeks next spring, beginning with May 3. It will make use of 33,000 volunteer workers who are now getting ready to take part, some in "The Pageant of Darkness and Light" at the Auditorium, and the others in the exposition at the Coliseum.

The exposition will be a reproduction of life as it is lived in our own and every other land where Christian missions are at work. The pageant will be a dramatic presentation of four historic missionary episodes, in which five hundred performers and a chorus of five hundred will be used.

In the Churches within 150 miles of Chicago, and in Chicago itself, where five hundred churches are co-operating in the "World in Chicago," there will be from now on a steadily growing interest in the event. Scores of special trains will be run during the five weeks of its presentation. Our readers will want to know about it purely as a matter of news.

This is not a commercial venture. It is frankly an educational enterprise. The one great purpose of the "World in Chicago" is to put the entire missionary enterprise of the Churches in all countries before the people in the most striking and interesting fashion. —Northwestern Christian Advocate.

CATARRH TRUTH

You Can Plainly See the Truth This Picture Tells.

This picture shows the mucous membrane tract of the nose, throat, and air passages. This is where catarrh germs live and where the disease spreads. The small black spot No. 1, shows where belms, creams, pastes, ointments and such treatments reach by direct application. You can see that it doesn't reach more than 2 per cent of the disease.
No. 2 shows where douches, sprays, atomizers and similar treatments reach. So their cures, like 1 and 2, only reach a tiny part of the disease. You cannot cure catarrh by stopping the disease only in a very small part.

No. 3 shows that medicated smoke can, will and does reach ALL the corners, nooks and creases, touching every part. Dr. Blosser's Catarrh Remedy which I will send you free, is made of herbs, roots, flowers and leaves; no tobacco or habit-forming drugs. When this mixture is burned in a tube or new clean pipe, which I send you free, it sends forth a powerful, germ-killing, volatile smoke, relieving the distress and killing the germs. You can instantly feel the beneficial effects. I have shown you in the picture the truth about various treatments. You can see it is reasonable and fair. Now I want you to write for a free treatment to let you prove for yourself what a grand remedy I have. The regular treatment costs only $1.00, postpaid. Just say in a letter or on a postal to me, "Please send me Dr. Blosser's Catarrh Remedy Free." When I get your request I will send the treatment by mail free and also facts about catarrh you will be glad to know. Address Dr. J. W. Blosser, 204 Walton St., Atlanta, Ga.

MIGHT NOT BE ALIVE.

McMinnville, Tenn.—Mrs. Ocie Jett, of this place, writes: "I don't believe I would be living to-day, if it hadn't been for Cardui. I lay in bed for 27 days, and the doctor came every day, but he did me no good. Finally, he advised an operation, but I would not consent, and instead took Cardui. Now I am going about the house, doing my work, and even do my washing. Cardui worked wonders in my case. I am in better health than for five years." Cardui is a strengthening tonic for women. It relieves pain, tones up the nerves, builds strength. Try it. At your druggist's.

Years of Suffering

Catarrh and Blood Disease—
Doctors Failed to Cure.

Miss Mabel F. Dawkins, 1214 Lafayette St., Fort Wayne, Ind., writes: "For three years I was troubled with catarrh and blood disease. I tried several doctors and a dozen different remedies, but none of them did me any good. A friend told me of Hood's Sarsaparilla. I took two bottles of this medicine and was as well and strong as ever. I feel like a different person and recommend Hood's to any one suffering from catarrh."

Get it today in usual liquid form or chocolate tablets called Sarsatabs.

Do Your Hauling With It

From plowing in Texas, to pulling stumps in Alabama, the Hart-Parr Oil Tractor has, time and again, demonstrated its supremacy over every other kind of power.

Its success as a general purpose tractor on the farm has been so remarkable, many overlook the great utility of this MODERN FARM HORSE for haulage work.

But you can use the tractor for hauling your crops to market and for transporting all kinds of material—lumber, fertilizer, etc.—from the town to your farm. In fact, you can do a general transfer business with it.

Depending on size, a Hart-Parr Oil Tractor will easily haul 5 to 10 loaded wagons on the road and pull them along at a speed of 2 1/4 to 4 miles per hour. Handle this load on the cheapest grade of KEROSENE for fuel. And you, alone, can operate and guide the tractor. Figure out for yourself the great saving over 10 to 20 horses or mules and 5 to 10 men required for the same work.

And right on the farm, this same tractor will pull your compost spreader, haul your hay, and do countless other jobs. At every turn, the tractor saves you time, money and labor. It's a big paying investment.

Let us send you illustrated catalog and convincing cost figures.

Woman's Missionary Work

Edited by Mrs. R. F. Harrell, 1329 Josephine St., New Orleans
Conference Press Superintendents:

Louisiana Mrs. A. C. McKinney, Ruston, La.
Mississippi Mrs. H. L. McCleskey, Hazlehurst, Miss.
North Mississippi Mrs. A. C. Yeager, Water Valley, Miss.

All communications for this department should be sent to the Editor at the address given above.

The new year opens for our missionary workers in the Southland with greater opportunities than ever before in the history of the world. The question this year will not be opportunities, but how and with what shall we meet them. The walls which have held the Christian workers out of China for centuries have at last crumbled before the army of the Lord; Africa which has been so long in darkness and obscurity now seeks the Son of Righteousness; India, worn out with pestilence and torn with struggles, is pleading for the Great Physician; Japan, with her bright star shining in the East, already awakened by gospel bells, calls for greater wisdom and light. Sisters, shall we give heed this year to these great calls? Shall we raise the banner of our Lord high and march forth with courage and determination to conquer? We can if we will. It will take hard work and much self-denial, but the results here and hereafter will overbalance the difficulties of the task.

Let the question be with us this new year not how much we are going to give for this great cause, but how much of that which belongs to God are we going to take for ourselves. May these first days of the new year be a heart searching time for all of us. If we are honest with ourselves, not one woman will consent to rob God of his tithes.

May this year find our women so earnestly engaged in the Master's service, and his treasury increased to such an extent, that at its close "The earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea."

Notice.

The Corresponding Secretaries are earnestly urged to be prompt in sending in their reports for the last quarter of the year. The District Secretaries cannot make reports unless they receive them from the auxiliaries. Dec. 31 is the limit of the time for sending them in to Conference officers, so they can send their reports in on time.

At the same time, please send in a complete list of officers for 1913. Send name of Press Superintendent to the Conference Press Superintendent.

MISS A. I. DUNSTAN,
Cor. Sec. Home Department, North Mississippi Conference.

Notes from the Auxiliaries.

Many auxiliaries of the Mississippi Conference observed the Week of Prayer, and very interesting reports of these meetings have reached the desk of the Press Superintendent, but a detailed account of each would require more space than that allotted to us in this column. Notable among those reported was the observance by the Collins society under the able direction of Mrs. D. A. McIntosh, Mrs. Ralph Napier and others.

An interesting public meeting of the Lucedale auxiliary was held Sunday, Dec. 8, at which time such live subjects as these were discussed: "History of the Lucedale Society," "Institutional Work of the Home Department," and "Why Mrs. A. became a member of the Lucedale Auxiliary." Special music added interest to the exercises. Seven dollars and seventy cents was contributed during the Week of Prayer.

The Home and Foreign Missionary Societies of Tupelo observed the Week of Prayer in a union service. Two days were given to the Foreign fields and two days to the Home work. Well chosen leaders, conducted interesting and instructive services. Liberal offerings were made: $35 for the Foreign and $30 for the Home needs. It is in this small city that Miss Lucy Barcroft is spending her year of rest and exerting a most helpful influence.

The missionary societies of the Florence church gave a most interesting and helpful program on Nov. 22, during Home Mission Week. The offering amounted to $2.45, which was quite good for a small membership.

The missionary society of Bunkie, La., sends in quite an interesting report. We were present at the organization of this society eight or nine years ago, and naturally have very kindly feelings for it. "We have had a good year's work and much interest is manifested. We have two meetings a month: a business meeting at the church and a social meeting at the different homes where we have our mission study class. Our women, in just a little over a year, have raised $1084.82 for our church building fund; have raised the amount pledged for Home Missions, and very nearly collected the amount pledged for Foreign work. The meetings are helpful in every way, giving greater strength, renewed zeal, and a spiritual uplift that we may go out with more courage to press toward the mark of the high calling in Christ Jesus our Lord. We hope to make 1913 the greatest year yet." The Week of Prayer was observed by this society. A Bazaar was given by the women and $250 was added to the fund for the new church building.

The Ruston, La., society observed the Week of Prayer for the Home Department. It was a union meeting, "fairly well" attended. The temperance program aroused much enthusiasm.

The recent session of the Mississippi Conference at Hazlehurst occasioned several changes in the addresses of the officers of the Missionary society. After Christmas the addresses of the following will be: Mrs. T. B. Clifford, McComb City, Miss.; Mrs. B. F. Lewis, Crystal Springs, Miss.; Mrs. W. H. La Prade, Hazlehurst, Miss.

MANY HOMES GLADDENED BY THE ADVOCATE PIANO CLUB.

The popularity of the Advocate Piano Club surpassed all previous records and our fondest expectations during the holiday season just ended. From all parts of the South new members were enrolled in large numbers, and the Managers are now receiving numerous letters from new Club members expressing their delight with the superb pianos and Self-player Pianos which brought added joys to their homes for Christmas.

The Club has proven such a grand success during 1912 that it will be continued and even enlarged during 1913. Catalogues can be obtained by addressing the Managers, Ludden & Bates, Advocate Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga.

OUR FRIENDS, THE BOOKS.

Not long ago a well-meaning woman was discussing the subject of furnished parsonages, and evolved an idea which, it seemed to her, would solve all the difficulties of moving-day for the minister and his family. "Why not furnish the parsonage completely with linen, china, silverware, books and pictures, as well as with the heavier articles of furniture?" A minister's daughter who heard the remark cried out in dismay: "Our books and pictures—our little accustomed belongings, like the little bronze dog that always stands on the library table—those are the things that make our home. I would as soon have some one select my friends as my library—for my books are my friends!"

Most lovers of books will agree with this minister's daughter that books are friends, and should be treated as such. A big library is a care, but the joy of possession and the comradeship of the books more than pay for any trouble they may cause. There are some directions for the proper care of books which seem too obvious to mention, but observation shows that not all who own books know how to treat them. A dust-proof bookcase is almost a necessity and allows a longer interval between the dreaded times when the volumes must be dusted.

It was found years ago that the composition of the crop is not a sure guide to the most profitable fertilizer, but it does not take a very smart man to figure out that a well-balanced fertilizer should contain at least as much Potash as Phosphoric Acid. Insist on having it so.

If you do not find the brand you want, make

Editorial

"A crowd of troubles passed him by,
And he with courage waited.
He said: 'Where do you troubles fly
When you are thus belated?'
'We go,' they said, 'to those who mope,
Who look on life dejected;
Who weakly say good-by to hope—
We go where we're expected.'"

It is quite the fashion nowadays to standardize things. How does the following strike you as a standard for our Methodist homes: A Bible, a Hymn Book, a Discipline, a Church Paper, and a Family Altar? These, rightly used, would enrich the lives of the occupants of any household, whether it be a stately palace or a lowly cottage.

Bishop Galloway used to say that the "worst tragedies of history resulted from having little men in big places." It is, indeed, pathetic to see a pygmy holding sway where once a giant wrought. But one of the most striking characteristics of small men is their eagerness to undertake large tasks. They are in the grip of the fallacy that mere position makes men great.

True manhood never fawns nor truckles; nor does it appreciate such conduct in another. There is something wanting in a person who is obsequious, or who can fully respect an individual that is unduly subservient. The most royal thing beneath the stars is high character. Paul had that, and he stood unabashed before governors and kings. It was they and not he who trembled. Respect those who are in authority over you, and show a proper regard for them, but do not sacrifice your convictions to win their favor. Be a MAN—there is nothing nobler and grander within the scope of human possibilities. It is sometimes asserted that the Methodist form of church government tends to strip the average preacher of his courage and independence of thought when in the presence of high-ranking ecclesiastical officials. We perhaps need to be somewhat on our guard at this point.

Memory plays a most important part in the salvation or wrecking of the soul. The crowing of the cock is emphasized in the story of Peter's reclamation. What did it have to do with it? It brought in a flood of wholesome recollections that overwhelmed him and made him see again the divinity of his Lord. And as a result, penitence and restoration quickly followed. So does memory strengthen every good man by keeping before him the blessed experiences of the past. On the other hand, there is no curse that so persistently hounds one who has indulged in them as the memory of sinful pleasures. It gives Satan a ready avenue of approach to the soul in its weak moments, and is a source of peril to it as long as life lasts. Happy is the individual who has no such medium through which the evil world can make its powerful appeals! Herein lies one of the tremendous advantages of never having strayed into wrong paths.

WHAT WILL YOU DO WITH IT?

Already the new year is fast speeding away. Whether we shall be here to listen to the same bells that chimed in its coming, toll its departure, we know not. But, though we have no guarantee of living through it, we do right to face its approaching days with worthy plans and high resolves. An aimless life is not conducive to progress and enduring achievements. Definiteness of purpose is of incalculable value to him who would make the most of his earthly existence. Men must have clearly outstanding objectives if they are to amount to much. The drifters rarely get anywhere; the Micawbers, waiting for something to turn up, seldom do anything else but wait.

1. It should be the aim of every one to do better work during the coming year than he has ever done before. The ambition for increasing efficiency in our life tasks is proper and laudable. It is the duty of every human being to set his hand to something worth while, and then strive to perform that service, whatever it may be, faithfully and well. A division of labor is necessary to the establishment and maintenance of a high order of society. The so-called lowly occupations are in reality of the utmost importance; the Nation could not prosper and go forward without them. Every good farmer, carpenter, miner, and factory hand contributes to the upbuilding and glory of the Republic. What the country owes to the obscure mothers of the land, who quietly prosecute their monotonous work from day to day, is beyond the computation of the finite mind. And such toilers are doing the will of God as much as the minister who speaks from the pulpit. The Lord's faithful ones are not confined to church activities; they are in all the worthy walks of life. The Apostle Paul gave recognition to this truth when he wrote, "And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus." Shoddy work is a crime against human society. Its consequences may be far-reaching. "For the want of a nail the shoe was lost; for the want of a shoe the horse was lost; for the want of a horse the rider was lost." What a dignity it gives to labor when we realize that we are toiling under the eye of the Omniscient One, and that to him we are accountable for how we acquit ourselves! To do less than our best is to grieve him and incur his displeasure. Let us stir up our energies and endeavor to discharge all our duties more satisfactorily as the weeks and months of the new year pass. Surely, we should gain in proficiency as a result of experience.

2. It should also be our fixed purpose to make the twelve months' cycle now beginning contribute to our personal growth and enlargement. If we use its opportunities aright, we should at its close find ourselves wiser, better, and richer in the possessions that endure. But whether it shall be so, will depend upon the use that we make of our time as the revolving planet measures it off to us. If we would have more knowledge, we must read and think. If we would be better, we must study the precious Word, wait upon the Lord in his house, search the heart, pray, discipline self, and follow the leadings of the Holy Spirit. If we would lay up treasure in heaven, where nothing can take it from us, we must look beyond ourselves to the needs of our fellow men and keep busy in the Master's glorious service. To be sure, Satan will try to prevent us from doing with the new year what we ought. He will seek to make us forgetful of duty, careless, and inactive. We must have a resolute will, if our good resolutions are not again to be broken and forgotten. The man of inflexible purpose is the man of power—the man who moves forward to higher and better things. Full of inspiring possibilities, which it is already unfolding, the year nineteen hundred and thirteen lies out before us! Shall we pass or enter its open doors to larger usefulness? Shall we waste or wisely employ its precious hours? Almost ere we are aware we shall have answered irrevocably these momentous questions.

In a recent volume, entitled "The Call of the Brotherhood and Other Poems," of which Miss Corinne Roosevelt Robinson is the author and Scribner's Sons are the publishers, we note the following striking lines under the caption, "The Great Question":

My heart is weary with the world's distress,
The cry of those who struggle in the night.
Oh, Lord, who sent thy Son for our redress,
We pray thee as of old, "Let there be Light!"
I would not ask thee "Why," nor pierce the veil;
All that I long for is to know, behind
The torture, and the terror, and the wail
Of human woe, there is no cruel, blind
Unreasoning Chance, that hurls us here and there,
Victims of an insensate Tyranny;
I would not ask the Cause, but this my prayer—
To know there is a Cause for Misery.
Could I but see the working of thy Hand,
I should be willing not to understand!

What man that observes and thinks, as he looks upon the strife, confusion and suffering going on about him, has not had a feeling akin to that expressed in this brief poem? Paul's tremendous figure is not overdrawn, "The whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain." The rational onlooker rightly concludes that there must be a great outcome to justify the sorrow, heartache, and fierce struggles on earth which embrace the whole human race; and the question as to whether this will be true arises in his mind. To this interrogatory, philosophy gives no adequate and satisfactory answer. But revelation does. It tells us that behind this conflict and seeming chaos there stands a loving Father, all-wise and all-powerful, and that he has in it a great purpose. "For I reckon," said Paul, "that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory that shall be revealed in us." And we see the outcome in St. John's inspiring picture of that great multitude which no man could number, clad in white robes and standing with palm branches before the heavenly throne, praising God and the Lamb. The only cure for such doubts and fears as find voice in this poetic outburst is a stronger faith in the declarations of the Holy Scriptures. We have long wondered how a skeptic confronted by the perplexing problems of life could be otherwise than miserable.

I PLEAD FOR A MORE SPIRITUAL MINISTRY.

By Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon.

Not that I am an accuser of my brethren. Far from that! These three years of going in and out among the churches, and this more intimate association with and knowledge of the preachers of our Church, have not led me to think less of my brethren, but rather to esteem them the more highly in love for their work's sake. Nevertheless, I am pleading for greater spirituality in the pulpit, both as to ends sought and as to methods used. "The weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds."

This plea is needed, and always will be needed, because of the subtle temptations which forever assail ministers of the gospel of Jesus Christ. When the temptation of Jesus at the opening of his ministry is read, not as something personal and private, but rather as typical and representative, as a temptation—or rather a series of temptations—which befell him as the Founder of the Kingdom of God, then it becomes wonderfully suggestive and illuminating. (1) "Turn stones into bread"—establish the kingdom of plenty; be the poor man's benefactor. (2) "Cast thyself down from the pinnacle of the temple"—do something spectacular and sensational. (3) "Bow down and worship me"—use political means to accomplish spiritual ends. Here fell Mahommed. And here Rome is forever fallen. How subtle all this is! There is so much that can be said in favor of it. Otherwise these things would never have tempted Jesus, and otherwise they would not tempt so many of our best men to-day. But Jesus rejected them all, and took, instead, the Way of Teaching, the Way of Living, and the Way of Dying. And he has given us an example that we should follow in his steps.

A letter recently received from a prominent layman of our Church contains the following thought-provoking sentences: "I am profoundly convinced that the extent to which our ministers have participated in unwise political discussion largely accounts for the dearth of spirituality among us at this time. I am an ardent prohibitionist, and stand for it on all proper occasions; but our ministry is to all classes, and I think we should be careful to erect no bar to the hearts of any." Concerning the attitude of every Methodist preacher on the abolition of the liquor traffic, there is, and can be, no doubt. The Methodist Church, as a Church, stands against it; and every Methodist preacher is the sworn enemy of that awful evil. Whenever the question becomes acute (and it is always acute), the Methodist preacher, of necessity, must cry aloud and spare not. But there are several things which must be kept in mind. Because they have not always been kept in mind, the cause has suffered and the Church has suffered.

The Preachers' first duty is to his own church and congregation. First, he should deliver himself upon his people; and then they will deliver themselves upon the world. This may be a slow process, but it is the only sure way. He is to hide the leaven in the lump and let it work; he is to let the light shine, and shine on, until it dispels all the darkness. And let him remember that if he is the friend and brother of men, the pastor and teacher of the people whom he has been sent to serve, he will make the deepest impression and have the most lasting influence.

The Methodist preacher's mission is also to the churchless thousands. Amor omnia vincit (love conquers all things). We never gain anything by harsh measures and hard words. The alienation of the Jewish people from the Christian religion is one of the tragedies of Christian history. And to a large degree, the Christian Church, in its ignorance and sin, is responsible for this alienation. In many centuries and in many lands the Jew has been hated and persecuted, until this estrangement would seem permanent, if it were not for the Divine promise. What a protest is that which Shakespeare puts on the lips of Shylock:

"I am a Jew! Hath not a Jew eyes? hath not a Jew hands, organs, dimensions, senses, affections, passions? fed with the same food, hurt with the same weapons, subject to the same diseases, healed by the same means, warmed and cooled by the same winter and summer, as a Christian is? If you prick us, do we not bleed? If you tickle us, do we not laugh? If you poison us, do we not die? And if you wrong us, shall we not revenge? If we are like you in the rest, we will be like you in that." There are thousands of strangers from other lands who dwell among us. How shall we ever win them to Christ and his Church, if we do not love them? A man gets what he gives. If he gives contempt, he gets contempt; if he gives love, he gets love. Love is the magic word before which barriers fall down. Love is the mystic power under the influence of which the hardest hearts yield. Mercy is God's way. God's supreme word, spoken by his Son, is just this great word, Love. And whether the men be Jews or Gentiles, or our own neighbors, who for reasons which to us seem altogether insufficient, differ from us on certain great moral questions of the day, we shall never be able to bring them to our way of thinking, not to speak of bringing them to Christ and his Church, if we have first alienated them by treating them with contempt. I fear that we have all sometimes overlooked or forgotten how careful Jesus is to teach us a proper regard for man as man. Said he: "Whosoever is angry with his brother shall be in danger of the judgment: and whosoever shall say to his brother, Raca, shall be in danger of the council: but whosoever shall say, Thou fool, shall be in danger of hell fire." As St. Paul wrote to Timothy, so do I write to my brethren: "The servant of the Lord must not strive; but be gentle unto all men, apt to teach, patient, in meekness instructing those that oppose themselves; if God peradventure will give them repentance to the acknowledging of the truth, and that they may recover themselves out of the snare of the devil, having been taken captive by the Lord's servant unto the will of God." It goes without saying that the Lord's servant must sometimes rebuke men. But if he does rebuke, let him "reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long-suffering and doctrine." And if he cannot "re-buke with long-suffering," then let him not rebuke at all.

And there is a third thing to be remembered: to save men, individual men, from sin, this is the preacher's chief business; and without this we shall never bring in the kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Some men have misread the words of Jesus. It is not written, "Except the kingdom of God come, ye cannot be born again;" but rather, "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." Certainly, forevermore will the Church of Jesus Christ be fighting every evil in the world, but the slow method of saving men one by one, here a man won at his place of business and here a sinner converted at the altar—this is the only way by which the kingdom of God will ever come. I recall hearing Bishop Candler on this subject some time since. Said he: "James Martineau once said, 'There are some people who are very much inclined to offer Jesus Christ as a chief of police.' We do not offer him as a police officer, but as the Savior of the world. When you have gotten men to accept Christ, you will have solved every other question. On one occasion Senator Colquitt and myself undertook to carry prohibition in a certain county in Georgia. We didn't carry it. We spoke unanswerably, but they did not vote with us. Later I got a telegram one morning that the county had gone dry. I called at the Governor's mansion to talk with him about it. He asked why it went dry when he and I could not carry it. I said: 'Nothing has happened, except that they have had a great Methodist revival which has made them all sober.'" And this bit of history from Georgia has been duplicated here in Texas over and over again.

I am pleading, I say, for a more spiritual ministry—for a ministry which draws men to Christ, even as Christ drew men to himself. How wonderfully he drew men to himself! No one ever hated sin as Christ did; but the poor woman from the street came and wept her tears of penitence at his feet. No one ever hated sin as Christ did; but the publican climbed up into the tree to see him as he passed by, and welcomed him to his house and to his heart. Christ did, indeed, denounce sin. The twenty-third chapter of Matthew, with its seven-fold thunders of woe, is the most awful chapter in the Four Gospels. But even here the "Woe" is not the woe of denunciation, but the woe of grief; not the woe of condemnation but the woe of lamentation. And this chapter, with its seven-times repeated, "Woe unto you scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites!" comes to a conclusion with a sob: "Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them that are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not!" How perfect is that picture of the Christian minister which John Bunyan has drawn! In the House of the Interpreter, Christian saw the picture of a very grave person hung up against the wall; and this was the fashion of it: "It had eyes lifted up to heaven, the best of books in its hand, the law of truth was written upon its lips, the world was behind its back; it stood as if it pleaded with men, and a crown of gold did hang above its head." "It stood as if it pleaded with men." So does the true minister of the gospel stand. "We beseech you, be ye reconciled to God."

And if we are to be spiritual men, we must love one another. "Beloved, let us love one another: for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God. He that loveth not knoweth not God; for God is love." Love is far more than a mere sentiment; Christian love is ethical through and through. The verb, to love, does have an imperative. Love can be commanded. "Love God;" "Love the Brotherhood;" "Love your enemies." A Christian man can will to love. Hence that great command: "Love your enemies." I give the entire passage, according to the Revised Version: "But love your enemies, and do them good, and lend, never despairing." (Luke 6:35.) "Never despairing," or as the margin has it, "Despairing of no man." How wonderful is Christian love, "never despairing," even of an enemy. And if thy brother—thy brother in Christ, and one whom you would have supposed in advance to be your friend—"and if thy brother trespass against thee," love him still. And then, if, after you have done your best to win him, you see that you have failed, and become aware that you cannot any longer trust him as a brother, "let him be unto thee as a heathen and a publican." "A heathen and a publican?" Yes, but remember that we send missionaries to the "heathen," and that Jesus was called "the friend of publicans." Let us strive to be like him.

THE RISE OF METHODISM IN AMERICA.

Dear Dr. Meek: In the Advocate of Dec. 19, my old-time friend and good brother, Dr. J. M. Weems, writes interestingly of "The Rise of Methodism in America." The date, "1778," to which "the third Discipline of the Church" is referred, is plainly a slip of the pen or a typographical error. It should be 1793. The first Discipline was printed in 1785. It was in this (the first) Discipline that the note quoted by Dr. Weems was originally inserted.

For a good while I have been firmly settled in the opinion that the preaching of Robert Strawbridge, and the founding by him of a Society at Sam's Creek, in Frederick County, Maryland, antedated by some years the work of Philip Embury, in New York City. The conclusions which Dr. Weems draws from the note in the early Discipline are not sufficient, in my judgment, to induce a contrary view.

Bishop Asbury, who knew more of the facts connected with these two beginnings of Methodism than any of the preachers, except Strawbridge and Embury themselves, stated in his journal, and that as late as 1810, that the Sam's Creek planting was "the first beginning of Methodism in America." This, in the absence of testimony from the two principals, should be accepted as a finality. But additional evidence points, or seems to point, to a date as early as 1760 as the beginning of Strawbridge's preaching. It is definitely settled that the work of Embury was begun late in 1766. The note carried in the Discipline from 1784 to 1798, to which Dr. Weems refers, probably—certainly, it may be asserted—was written by Dr. Coke while passing the sheets of the Discipline through the press in New York, in January, 1785. Dr. Coke had known little of Methodist affairs in America previous to 1784.

That this note was "meant to give priority to Philip Embury" is not conclusive on the face of it. Embury's work was considered more important, in itself, than was that of Strawbridge, and, for that reason, most likely, was mentioned first, and more particularly as the two fell out "about the same time."

It is true that "most of the preachers" in the Conference of 1784, the date of the Discipline bearing the historical note, "were living at the time of the planting of Methodism in America," but they were then nearly all in tender years, and far away from the two scenes. The preachers of the Christmas Conference (1784) were, with few exceptions, men under, or but little past, 30 years of age. Not one of them, except Asbury, had been a member of the first American Conference, held in 1773. Embury died about 1776, and Strawbridge died before 1781. Asbury was the only man in the Conference of 1784 who could have had anything like personal knowledge of these matters, and his statement is unequivocal that the Strawbridge "beginning was the first."

This point of history is soon to be passed upon by a joint commission of the two Methodisms, as a preparation for the appropriate celebration of the important event, the planting of American Methodism. Having received notice of my appointment to membership on this Commission, I shall give additional and patient inquiry into all accessible records. I am, however, skeptical as to the possibility of finding anything of sufficient weight to offset the direct personal statement of the first Bishop of the Church.

SOME GEORGIA NOTES.

Christmas came on apace. Scarce had we settled down in our new parsonage home amid strangers, and ourselves strangers to them, till the fertile imagination of our little lad began to make pictures in his dreams, and the tension grew so tense that his "day dreams" strove for expression in the astonishing and unanswerable interrogatories of a child. I surrendered; the "Santa Claus" fiction was punctured, and the prosaic reality was actually apprehended, and there was no chance for an alibi. My, but how one does age when he passes 35! Here I am now in the midst of the years—and not so long ago I used to take my father's stature by that calendaric measure of the years, and as he told me he was "forty-four," I well recall what a period that did seem. Now, that I myself can see almost to the gate of forty-one, I confess that a generally accepted geologic period now seems little longer to me than father's "forty-four" used to.

And my boy, he of my blood and heart and love—life of my own, whose advent into this world was of my choice, and not his own—my image and my shadow, my one supreme responsibility! Yesterday he was but a scrap, an insignificant, squirming, wiggling, toddling, falling, crooning baby, with never a word of articulate English, but as truly a sovereign as ever wore ermine or crown.

Now, he is in full regalia of the American boy, and doing stunts that never yet have seemed possible to his father. He even has manifested the dawning of that consciousness which is the unmistakable sign of his common humanity—he sees beauty in a girl's face. Who does not know his fate? He talks about Christmas, Santa Claus, our Heavenly Father, the Church, and God's poor, as if he had already license to preach, or had close fellowship with some sociologist whose pet employment is the study of men in the mass.

Our Barnesville people have received us with open arms. Hospitality is here in good old-fashioned form. The town is small, but with five thousand people in a small radius, we have a field of splendid privilege. Here is located the famous Gordon Military Institute, which has a name ranking high in the world of schools and colleges. For over forty years it has given its splendid training to an average of probably 250 boys each year, and the fame of it is not diminished.

We have also one of the new ventures in Georgia State Educational work, an agricultural college. It has splendid buildings, a good man at its head, but a small patronage, and a meager support from the treasury of the State. No one doubts that such institutions are here to stay, but it is a shame that the State does not adequately take care of them, both as to physical equipment and as to finances for the inside work and the salaries of the faculty.

Barnesville is in the peach belt of Georgia, and great is the peach! Also, there are now starting in this section several pecan groves, which promise great returns for the investment. Our climate is mild and equable. And the lands are fine for cotton and other crops usual. The labor is far more largely of the colored class than I expected to find it.

One year in Georgia enables me to say that there are some as fine country and people here as ever graced any land. Atlanta reigns, the royal queen regent of Southern cities! That is, if you let Atlantans tell it. And you will be well-nigh convinced, if you spend a time there. It is a great city. It holds a remarkable people. It has great wealth and is a civic center of mighty concern to all the South. It may not be so large as New Orleans, but it is far more American; perhaps not quite so purely Southern, for Atlanta is an Eastern city in the South for business purposes and conveniences. It is the Southern distributing center for nearly every Eastern manufacturing concern. Vast sums of Eastern money are invested here, and vastly larger sums of such money pass through Atlanta offices in return for Southern supplies that have been sold from Atlanta warehouses.

Methodism is a mighty sleeping giant in this great city. I say this advisedly. Considering the rapid material development, our Methodism in Atlanta is not apace with the times. Lack of connectional loyalty is evident. Rivalry for pre-eminence between large congregations is patent. I am convinced that mutual and genuine interest in the general advancement of our common Methodism is not even comparable to the loyal connectional spirit that exists among the Atlanta Baptists.

It is true that last year there was an apparent great stride in Methodist church building in Atlanta. But it must not be thought that all of it was done last year. One of the churches has been completed for ten or more years, and has just made a heroic effort to secure subscriptions to cover its indebtedness, and, doing this, had its dedication.

Another one was a similar case; and a third had been standing practically finished, only lacking the interior of the main room, for some years. Money was borrowed, the work done, and the new house opened. A worthy and good work indeed; but the debt is yet to be paid. And I believe there is a plan for paying it off in installments.

Still another large church was built and entered, but it has a large debt. True, there is a good subscription behind the move. But they also had a fine lot and something from the old church which went far toward a start in the new enterprise. That congregation is large and amply able to build, and the truth is, they have suffered already by dilatory dealing with this same matter.

Again, the largest of all the enterprises accented this year was the great Trinity affair. And it is a great church, one of the best in all our Methodism. But they built at no cost whatever. They simply sold an old and valuable sight for money enough to rebuild in another place. It was not a sacrifice or exhibition of liberality—not necessarily even a matter of progress, for they might have sold the old in order to avert the demand for money with which to repair, which could not have been secured without some giving on the part of the membership. The new Trinity cost nobody anything. But it is a fine house and promises a great future.

Lastly, the Druid Hills enterprise, over the destinies of which I presided, was no great achievement in finance at all. The congregation has not yet subscribed $10,000. One man gave $2500; three others gave an amount to bring the four up to $4000, and all the balance of the congregation have not given even in promises over this same amount.

The lot cost upwards of $7000, the house cost above $20,000, and the furnishings cost approximately $3000. So it is easy to see that there is an obligation outstanding which amounts to above $20,000. One man has practically financed that church, and there is no well defined plan, and not any too great disposition to help him bear the burden.

But there is a great future ahead of all Atlanta Methodism. And it is awakening. There will come a day when Methodism will stand entrenched in Atlanta as nowhere else in all the South.

The great Wesley Memorial Enterprises insure that. True, they are not yet successfully operated. The Hospital is doing a wonderful work now, but it needs a large and modern plant. This it will have some day, and then it will be one of the leading institutions of its kind in the South.

The Wesley Church is struggling with the problem of institutionalism as the case presents it. And with the magnificent plant which they have, and the personal support which the enterprise has, the end is assured. Methodism will not bankrupt on this particular effort. It will go forward. It may be years before there are all the accessories and departmental phases of this great institutional idea, but they will come.

The Library, principally a "Wesleyana," is such as to attract every lover of the originals of Methodist life and history to this splendid center. The Wesleyan Advocate, the several studios and schools that are now in embryo, and the dormitories for homeless girls and also for boys will come round in the years. Thus entrenched, the future will find Atlanta the center of Southern Methodist life and character. Much of the enduring qualities of this Methodism will be the result of the strong and determined purpose of Bishop Candler and his noble brother, whose generosity has made much of it possible.

Georgia is "sui generis." It has its birth-marks. These folk are a law unto themselves in many things. But they are a royal and goodly people. The stigma of being a "transfer" sticks on the fellow down here like the brand on a Mexican pony. But I am here yet. And I hope now that I may be able to stay. The market for such stock is not good, however, and there are some symptoms of an un-Democratic "Tariff" schedule rumored as suggested by the Cabinet.

With every wish for a gracious year to the Editor of the Advocate, I am Respectfully,
S. E. WASSON.

Church News

It is stated that one in every sixty members of the Moravian Church is a missionary, while in the other Protestant communions the average is one in every 5,000.

Bishop Candler is quoted as saying: "Give me the money which your churches in Georgia annually pay to hired singers and I will meet all the expenses of maintaining the missionaries in Cuba."

The Western Christian Advocate (Cincinnati) says that the pastors in its territory are sending in subscriptions at the rate of more than a thousand a week. O that this good work might become contagious! It is one of the crying needs of Southern Methodism.

Judge P. L. Persons decided last week in Waukegan, Ill., that parents have no right to deny the services of a physician to sick children who desire medical attention. The parents in this case were Dowietes, and the party making the appeal to the court for the lad who was ill was an older brother.

Rev. F. W. Thompson, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Hot Springs, Ark., has accepted a call to be assistant pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of New Orleans, the church that was made famous by the ministry of the great Dr. B. M. Palmer. Dr. George H. Cornelson is the chief pastor of this flock.

Dr. Charles Aked, formerly pastor of the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church of New York City, of which Mr. John D. Rockefeller is a member, has decided to take out naturalization papers and become an American citizen. Dr. Aked is an Englishman. He is now pastor of the First Congregational Church of San Francisco.

Bishop W. P. Thirkield, of New Orleans, delivered the Founder's Day address at the Gammon Theological Seminary at Atlanta, Ga., on December 17. He was a close friend of Mr. F. H. Gammon, whose munificence made possible this institution, and was also connected with it as an instructor for several years. The Bishop's address on this interesting occasion was highly commended.

The Western Christian Advocate has abolished its Obituary Department but it may carry death notices after the manner of the secular dailies. The disposition of some people to write at great length of deceased persons is quite enough to incline a live editor to want to dispense with memoirs altogether. We shall continue to maintain our obituary page as heretofore, but we shall enforce strictly the rules published at the head of this department in every issue of the Advocate.

Preparatory to a proper commemoration of the fourth centenary of the birth of Martin Luther in 1917, the Lutheran Council of the United States has already begun a campaign to secure $2,000,000 for missionary extension. The figure of "the monk who shook the world" looms larger with the passing years. Indeed, it is generally true that those who have rendered humanity a real service are more and more honored by the millions of mankind as the decades come and go. This is one of the indications that the human race is growing better.

Father Dalton, a priest in Kansas City, is maintaining a Matrimonial Bureau as a part of his parish work. It is said that during the past year 17,000 letters were received, coming from nearly every State in the Union, and from Jerusalem, Constantinople, Africa, and South America. It kept two stenographers busy to handle the correspondence. The outcome was 400 marriages. Eighty-five per cent of the communications were received from women, a majority of whom set forth wealth as a necessary qualification for an acceptable husband. Not one man asked for a wife possessed of riches.

March 19, 1913, will make the one-hundredth anniversary of the birth of David Livingstone, the great African explorer and missionary. An effort will be made to secure a fitting celebration of the event by the Protestant Evangelical Churches of England and America. Some of the denominations are already arranging in honor of the occasion a series of exercises which will extend through the months of January and February and end with Easter Sunday, March 23. The aim of those leading in this movement is to deepen the interest in the evangelization of the world. No more appropriate way of exalting the memory of Livingstone could be devised.

The Central Christian Advocate, of Kansas City, estimates the gain in membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church during the year 1912 as 64,190, an increase of slightly more than two for each church in the connection. As small as this percentage of gain is, if we are not mistaken, it is somewhat better than the average showing made by this denomination within recent years. The total membership of this communion is now set down as 3,607,889. This easily gives it the first place numerically among the Protestant denominations of the United States. The Southern Methodist Church, however, seems to be growing more rapidly than her big Northern sister. Perhaps it is due to the fact that she is freer from fads and hurtful innovations.

In a recent address before the Jewish Chautauqua Society of Memphis, Tenn., Rabbi Israel Abrahams, reader of Rabbinics at the University of Cambridge, England, strongly insisted that the Hebrew people should study the New Testament, which he claims is largely Jewish in its make-up. He contended that it abounds in striking proverbs and that it is too valuable a piece of literature to be neglected. We should be much pleased to see our Hebrew population follow the suggestion of this eminent scholar, but not merely because of the cultural value of the books comprising the New Testament. In our judgment, it would be impossible for them to focus their attention earnestly upon these writings without becoming profoundly impressed with the character and teachings of Christ. The Jew has a hungry heart, as well as others of the race.

DR. FEATHERSTUN'S REPLY.

We published last week an article from the pen of Dr. H. W. Featherstun, entitled "My Point of View," which purported to be a reply to a former editorial of ours in which we noticed some of his strictures upon one of our preceding utterances. In reality, however, the Doctor largely abandons the issues which he raised in the beginning and writes about other phases of the woman question. He at first took us to task for an observation we had made on the action of the last General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church which declared against licensing women to preach—an observation in which we called attention to what the woman's laity rights movement in that denomination has led. To this he replied, "We are not in the habit of taking our cues from across the Ohio." In our rejoinder we showed that this whole movement was hatched on the northern side of that stream, and that the Doctor has embraced it all. Not a word does he say about this feature of the discussion in his article of last week. On the contrary, he retreats completely away from it.

His other chief point was that the contention for woman's rights in the Church "has nothing to do with civil suffrage, nor with the licensing of women to preach." We countered by showing that the Doctor has committed himself to the entire program; that, in addition to advocating the seating of women in the General Conference, he is a woman suffragist, and a defender of the view that women preached in apostolic times and that there is now no valid Scriptural objection to their doing so. In spite of his former assurance that there is no connection between these movements, he now admits that he is a believer in all of them and that he is an active supporter of two of them. And in this respect he is not unlike the great majority of those who are clamoring for woman's rights in the Church. If we are not misinformed, nearly all the leaders who started this agitation are woman suffragists, and so are most of those who are supporting it. The truth is, the movement to confer civil suffrage on woman, and that to vest her with laity rights in the Church are only different manifestations of the same spirit.

The Doctor tries to make a nice point in distinguishing between a "woman suffragist" and a "suffragette," and gives a quotation from a writer in The Outlook to sustain his position. There may have been a time when this distinction was a valid one, but usage alters our grammars and changes our lexicons. Webster's International Dictionary of 1912 contains the following definition: "Suffragette—A woman who advocates woman suffrage." Dr. Featherstun and his authority in The Outlook should keep step to the music of the age which is pealing the note of progress all around the world.

We trust, however, that our readers will note that there were no fighting female suffragists at the State Convention that the Doctor attended. There was no hair-pulling, no bricks flying in the air. It was a peaceable body. We infer from the tone of the Doctor's letter that if its members had been of the pugnacious variety, he would not have gone. He wants them to have the ballot, but does not want to be about if they are going to war to obtain it.

The Doctor declares that he did not think it was amiss to attend. Who said it was? We did not affirm that it was wrong to go; we merely called attention to the fact that he was there in order to disclose to the public his true sentiments. It would seem from his statement that he went to serve as a sort of chaplain: to "open the meeting with prayer and make a religious talk." If there be those who think there was any impropriety in the Doctor's presence, the mission on which he went ought, it seems to us, certainly to plead in his behalf. The only thing that perplexes us about it is that the Doctor should have thought that the sisters needed any religious advice from him or any other gentleman. Do they not, according to his affirmation, know more about what they ought to do with reference to everything than any man can tell them? Why should he chastise Dr. Steel and the Editor for discussing a question which concerns the sisters (though by no means them alone—it in reality has to do with the very constitution of the Church), and yet himself play the role of a lecturer to them?

The Doctor tells us that he was not the only gentleman to be seen at the convention; that there was also in attendance a North Mississippi preacher. Why did not the Doctor give us his name? We are under the impression that he was the pastor in the town where the convention was held, and that he couldn't escape being there. If we are not mistaken, the Doctor was the only male visitor from a distance on hand.

He asks us why, if there are "no considerable number" of women asking for laity rights, we should show such "agitation of mind" concerning the matter? Here again our good friend is mistaken. We are in no sense disturbed; we are as serene as a May morning. The judgments of men differ as to what is considerable and inconsiderable. Will Dr. Featherstun tell us how many of the women of our Church, by petition or otherwise, have indicated that they desire the right to sit in the General Conference? Shortly before our law-making body, assembled in Asheville in 1910, the Home Mission Society of the Mississippi Conference refused to pass such a memorial. We take it that there is no doubt where the women in the Foreign Missionary Society of that Conference stood on this question. Yet, forgetful of his constituents, Dr. Featherstun pursued a course contrary to their wishes in the General Conference. If he believes so fully in the superior judgment and good sense of our splendid Southern women, why did he so ruthlessly trample the views of those whom he was supposed to represent under foot? We most heartily endorse all that he has to say in praise of the noble womanhood of our Church, and we claim to be more in accord with the sentiments of the hundreds of thousands of our female membership than he is.

One thing more, and we are through. The Doctor accuses us of admitting, in effect, that the women among us who want laity rights do not desire to preach. We did no such thing. Here is the statement: "Our women are not asking to be licensed to preach." Of course they are not, just at present—the few making this clamor are too shrewd for that. To ask for all at once would arouse such opposition that the whole movement would be defeated. But one step is almost certain to be followed by another. They did not ask to be licensed to preach in the Northern Methodist Church either in the beginning, but, from the action taken by the last General Conference of that denomination, this question seems now to be looming up among its members.

How any one could torture this statement into a concession that none of the laity rights women of our Church "want to preach," is quite beyond us. The fact is, some of them are already speaking from our pulpits on the Sabbath, while the licensed and ordained pastor occupies a back seat—a spectacle which we never like to witness.

A half million dollars will be spent at once in improving the Hotel Dieu, one of New Orleans' most popular hospitals.

A bill is pending before Congress which provides that no one shall be admitted into the United States who can not read some language. It ought to become a law.

The Kansas State Agricultural College has announced a course of study teaching the art of being a wife. The course involves practical experience in cooking and purchasing provisions for four persons, using but an average of one dollar a day.

Under the leadership of the undergraduates of the University of Halle, in Germany, the medical students of twenty-three German universities are organizing a strike. The grievance of the students is a claim that favoritism is shown foreign students.

The joint reunion of the United Confederate Veterans and the Grand Army of the Republic will be held in Chattanooga, Tenn., on May 27, 28 and 29. On account of it being a joint reunion, it is predicted that it will be one of the most largely attended gatherings of that kind ever held in America.

The second World's Christian Citizenship Conference will be held in Portland, Oregon, from June 29 to July 6, 1913. Mass meetings preliminary to the Conference are planned for a number of the larger cities of the country, at which efforts will be made to arouse interest in the approaching gathering.

Hon. Raymond Poincaré and Hon. Paul Deschanel are the two leading candidates for the presidency of France. The election will be held in February. It is practically conceded that Mr. Poincaré will be the national choice. He is a man of very little social standing and is reported to be lacking in personal force.

A fund of $200,000 has been collected by a number of prominent physicians and psychologists of New York City, to be used to meet the expenses of an investigation as to the cause and cure of the so-called "brainstorm." The disease is said to be on the increase, and any light that may be thrown upon its cause or cure will be welcomed as an aid to public safety.

In order to relieve women of the embarrassment of making their ages known, the California Legislature has enacted a law making it unnecessary for a voter to give his or her age when registering. This may be an act of gallantry on the part of the legislators, but it seems to us that it is quite important for a State to know the ages of its men, in order to estimate its military strength.

Senator Joseph Bailey, of Texas, whose resignation from the United States Senate has already taken effect, delivered what he chose to call his "swan song" on January 2, it being his last speech in the halls of Congress. He placed himself on record as being opposed to the innovations of the present-day progressive politicians. He has served in the two Houses of Congress for 21 years.

"The Wren's Nest," the Atlanta home of the late Joel Chandler Harris, the author, recently passed into the possession of the Uncle Remus Association, which plans to convert it into a memorial museum. The property was purchased recently by the Association, with a fund to which John D. Rockefeller, Andrew Carnegie, Theodore Roosevelt, and many other friends and admirers of the creator of "Uncle Remus" contributed.

Thirty-three of the thirty-nine labor leaders, whose trial in Indianapolis on the charge of conspiring to wreck buildings and industries by the use of dynamite has occupied the public attention for many months, were convicted last week and given sentences ranging from one to seven years. While there is reason to believe that they deserved such punishment, we are not in sympathy with those who hold their crime as a charge against organized labor.

According to the press dispatches, Judge N. B. Mcelen, of Milwaukee, Wis., recently assessed a fine of $25 and costs against a man by the name of Premak, because he spat on a copy of the Bible. The judge expressed a wish that the law were such as to allow him to send such a wilful desecrator of things divine to jail for not less than ninety days. We commend the actions and words of the Judge, and only wish we had more such men on the bench.

On January 4, the centenary of the birth of Sir Isaac Pitman was celebrated by many of the schools of the whole world. Sir Isaac Pitman was the inventor of the first successful system of writing phonetically by the use of signs. The Pitman system of shorthand is perhaps more generally in use to-day than any other, and it is the basis upon which all other systems are constructed. Mr. Pitman was the son of a mill owner, and was not a well-educated man.

A plantation located in Bolivar County, Miss., and owned by British capitalists, is said to be the model farm of all the world. The farm has every modern convenience, including electric lights, water power, sewerage, and machine shops. The work of developing it into its present condition has been under the supervision of Prof. J. W. Rox, who was formerly connected with the Mississippi Delta Agricultural Experiment Station. He is employed at a salary of $7,500 per annum.

WHENCE THEY CAME.

(Bishop A. W. Wilson recently characterized most severely the frightful corruption of modern society. Below, the Editor of the Memphis Commercial Appeal points out the origin of some of its fads, which some people are silly enough to chase after. The approval of the fashionable and wealthy can not make indecent things harmless and respectable. They are as bad in the parlors of the rich as in the vile places where they were started.)

Four years ago from the dance halls of the red light district of San Francisco the musicians sent an offering to lovers of melody. It was "The Grizzly Bear." Quickly following came a dance to the tune.

Synechronously in the negro dives of Mobile and New Orleans the "Turkey Trot" was evolved. It danced on its journey up the Atlantic Coast until it found refuge and welcome on New York's Great White Way, where wealth and fashion, poverty and drabness, good and evil, Becker and Rosenthal, Morgau and Gary, Colonel Harvey and Norman Hapgood, Bat Masterson and James Corbett have been wont to gather for a pleasant hour.

The "Turkey Trot" went West and the "Grizzly Bear" came East. They met in Chicago, swung hands all around, and continued their journey.

At the same time some one evolved the "Mendelssohn Rag."

These frothings from the sewers of society were caught in the winds and tossed higher and higher, until the music of the "trot" and the "bear" share equal popularity among the great ones of the earth, with Dvorak's "Humoresque" and the barcarole from "Hoffman's Tales."

And now the "Grizzly Bear" and the "Turkey Trot" are in the picture shows and phonographs, and the man who is not familiar with them is told that his musical education has been neglected. And any young social devotee not able to tread the measures of the two dances is in many circles held to be lacking in those refining graces that now seem to be necessary in polite society.

NOTICE TO PREACHERS

Beginning January 1, 1913, the rates of subscription to the New Orleans Christian Advocate will be as follows:

Single subscriptions, one year.....	$1.50 net
In clubs of five or more, each.....	1.25 net
Eight months.....	1.00 net
To preachers.....	1.00 net
To widows of preachers.....	1.00 net

The commission heretofore allowed has been discontinued, because only a very few of the preachers accept commission, and the great majority we have talked with expressed it as their opinion that a commission has proven a hindrance to them in working up the subscription list on their charges.

In cases where persons are very poor, the pastor may recommend that the paper be sent at a reduction. Remittances should be made by Money Order, Registered Letter, or in Stamps. Preachers may deduct for any expense incurred in remitting.

PUBLISHER.

As near as we can trace it you have the origin and history of these two classic offerings for the musical and dancing programs.

From somewhere last year a new custom was in order. Once Sunday evening for some was a time for reflection, and for a little religious reading. To others it was the occasion for the interchange of visits with old friends. For many years young men, sometimes in groups, called at the homes of young ladies, remained a few moments, and then called upon other ladies. This was a pleasant and beautiful custom. There was something of the sincere and neighborly about it.

But of late the Sunday night caller has become the Sunday night dancer and the Sunday night dance is now an accepted thing. The music that goes with the Sunday night dance is most appreciated if it is "rag." Sometimes indulgent parents furnish liquors to make the occasion more enjoyable. A dancing party on Sunday night with the musicians strumming away at the "Grizzly Bear" and the "Turkey Trot" for fast flying feet made more nimble under the inspiration of music reinforced by wine, is not an edifying spectacle.—Memphis Commercial Appeal.

ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE MEETING.

Mr. Editor: Please publish the following announcement:

The Louisiana Anti-Saloon League will hold its State Convention in the early spring. The place of meeting will be Alexandria. The time will be announced later. It is hoped that every part of the State and every moral and social welfare organization will be represented. The League has a stiff, practical program to submit to the temperance people. We need to adopt a clear-cut, definite plan of action and then act—execute the plan. Matters of most vital importance will be discussed. The League is the finest fighting machine ever turned loose on the liquor traffic, and whether we mean to use it in a big way ought to be decided at this convention. Watch for the date.

A CARD FROM BISHOP HOSS.

(The following open letter, which we take from the Nashville Christian Advocate, was sent by Bishop Hoss to the Tennessean and American a few days ago.)

Though most of the newspaper reports of the Vanderbilt trial now in progress before the Chancery Court of Davidson County have been inadequate, and many of them have been erroneous and misleading, I have paid but little attention to them. The Tennessean and American of to-day, however, contains some statements that are so wide of the fact that I desire to say a word in regard to them.

1. I am put before the public as having opposed Dr. Tolman's election to the faculty on the sole ground of his being an Episcopalian. Now the naked fact is that I was not then a trustee, and I did not oppose Dr. Tolman at all. While the election was pending, one of the most prominent trustees came to my house, opposite the University, and asked me to send a telegram in his name to a gentleman in Virginia on my return to my office. As a personal courtesy I did as I was requested, and that was the exact extent to which I put my hand into the affair. I did not even speak to any trustee on the subject.

2. I am also represented as having opposed the election of Dr. Moore, because he was a Baptist. This is also utterly untrue. I was not present either when Dr. Moore was elected to a professorship, or later when he was elected Dean, and I had absolutely no connection with these elections one way or the other. I do remember, however, expressing on more occasions than one my deep regret that Prof. W. C. Branham was allowed to leave the university.

3. I am also charged with having insisted that "the faculty should be made up alone of members of the Methodist Church." I never did such a thing at any time or in any way. On the contrary, I always held to the propriety of going outside the Church when it might be necessary to secure a man of eminent ability. I have held all along, however, that, other things being equal, a Methodist should have the preference; that no man should be chosen hostile or unfriendly to the Church; and that the dominant influences of the institution should be Methodist. The assertion or intimation that I ever expressed a preference for an ignorant or incapable Methodist over a man of intelligence and teaching power from some other denomination, is too stupid a thing to be believed for a moment by any one that knows my lifelong attitude to education.

While I am writing, I may as well add that the effort to cloud the essential issues in this case by charging me with sinister and selfish motives is somewhat childish. If all the allegations that have been set afloat could be proved, they would have no more to do with this lawsuit than with the rings of Saturn. The most of them are utterly false. In due time and proper place, I shall give them whatever attention they may deserve. Up to this time in my life I have been reasonably successful in taking care of my good name; and I am rather too far advanced in years to ask for a guardian now.

The real and overshadowing question in this litigation has not been stated by any of the newspapers that have been reporting it. It may be put in very brief space:

The Bishops maintain that the Church has had from the beginning certain rights in the university which are enforceable by law.

The majority of the trustees flatly deny this contention, and allege that the Church has not, and never has had, and under the laws of Tennessee, cannot have, any legal rights whatever, but possesses only certain privileges, granted by the Board at its pleasure and revocable at its will. They even go so far as to declare, in so many words, that the Church never has had any standing in the University, except by the mere "sufferance" of the trustees.

There are many other matters of law and fact, but they are all subordinate in character.

Whatever the result of the suit may be, I think I can safely promise the public that the Methodist Church is just a little too self-respecting and too influential to hang on here or anywhere, else by the mere "sufferance" of a board of trustees, let it be as potent as it may. E. E. HOSS.

WAS AN ORIGINAL MEMBER.

Dear Brother Meek: A short time before the meeting of the North Mississippi Conference, Brother J. R. Countiss published in the Advocate a short historical sketch of the Conference. Among other things he said: "Of the preachers comprising the original body (in 1870) who received appointments, the names of only twelve are on the roll to-day." I quote from memory. As my name is not among the twelve, I take it for granted that Brother Countiss overlooked it. Please allow me to say:

1. I was one of the original members, and helped to organize the body for work. I took great pleasure in my part of the work. Parts of three Conferences were brought together, and there was much excitement over the election of a secretary. Three or four men were nominated, among them my classmate and life-long friend, John Barcroft. I was young and enthusiastic, and of course thought a great victory was won when Brother Barcroft was elected. Brother Barcroft was as generous as he could be in selecting his closest rival, Rev. Ransom J. Jones, as his assistant.

2. At that Conference I was appointed for the second year to Grenada station, stayed there and did the best I could, and was sent back for the "third time." During my third year the church was blessed with a thorough and general revival. Many souls were converted and added to our membership. I had the help of our presiding elder, Rev. Amos Kendall, a part of the time. When he left he sent Paine Mitchell to my assistance. Paine was a fine singer, and had just been licensed to preach. He was a great help in prayer and song, and in all kinds of altar service, but he could not be induced to preach.

3. In 1872 Bishop Wightman transferred me to the White River Conference, but in 1890 Bishop Galloway sent me back to the North Mississippi Conference. Since then (including the appointment of that year), I have been appointed to work twenty-three times by the Bishops presiding over the North Mississippi Conference. I guess my name is still on the roll. Fraternally,

JNO. W. BOSWELL.

THE PROPOSED PEACE CELEBRATION.

On Christmas eve in 1914 a hundred years will have elapsed since there was war between the United States and Great Britain, the Treaty of Ghent having been signed on December 24, 1814. Plans are already under way to celebrate the passing of a century in which there has been no clash in arms between these two foremost nations of the world. England has had for twelve months a committee to arrange a suitable program for the approaching occasion, and the movement has been endorsed across the water by the Lord Mayor of London and many other eminent sons of the British Empire. A committee also exists in the United States and the proposal has struck a popular chord in our country. A few days before his death, Mr. Whitelaw Reid is quoted as having said that it would be almost a crime not to celebrate worthily this centenary of peace.

Various suggestions have been made as to how the occasion may be fittingly commemorated. One is to make it educative in its influence: to have international lectureships, prize essays on the relations between the two nations, and a course of study bearing on the achievements of the century of peace introduced into the public schools of both countries. There is also talk of bringing commemorative monuments into requisition. It has been proposed in England that a statue of George Washington shall be erected in Westminster Abbey and that the ancestral home of the Washingtons, Sulgrave Manor in Northamptonshire, shall be purchased and maintained as "a place of pilgrimage for Americans and all interested in the history of English-speaking peoples." It is said that this ancient building has over its doorway the Washington coat of arms, which is reported to have given origin to our "Stars and Stripes." Not to be outdone in generosity, the Americans have likewise proposed to erect a statue of Queen Victoria in Washington City, to place statues of the Earl of Chatham and Edmund Burke in suitable localities, and that an international bridge shall be constructed at Niagara Falls.

The three Committees—that of England, the United States, and Canada—will meet in New York City next spring when more definite plans will be formulated. We trust that this centenary celebration will result in knitting about the two great English-speaking nations the bonds of a closer and more trustful friendship. Acting together, they could largely shape the future affairs of the whole world.

AN INTERESTING SERIES.

The Outlook has announced that during the year 1913 Mr. Roosevelt will contribute to its columns a series of articles under the title, "Some Chapters from a Possible Autobiography." Whatever one may think of Mr. Roosevelt as a statesman and publicist, it must be admitted that he has played a conspicuous part in the affairs of our time, and these papers from his pen are likely to prove highly interesting. That they will also prove to be informing as to some of the leading events of the last two decades is quite likely. For instance, it has already been announced in the secular papers that the chapter dealing with the peace negotiations between Russia and Japan, which were brought about through Mr. Roosevelt's intervention, will show that it was not Russia, staggering under successive defeats, but Japan, on the verge of bankruptcy, that requested the President of the United States to undertake the role of a pacificator. In this connection, the story that Mr. Roosevelt has in his possession a letter from the Mikado indicating his earnest desire for the cessation of the war, the return of which was eagerly sought by two Japanese Ambassadors, has been revived. Whether such a communication exists and will be published is, we think, largely a matter of conjecture, so far as the secular newspapers are concerned. But with his inside knowledge as to what influences shaped many of the great happenings of the past twenty years, there is no doubt that the ex-President can tell a wonderfully fascinating and illuminating story if he chooses to do so. At any rate, what he writes is surely to have a wide reading by both his friends and enemies, neither of which are a small company.

MOTHER'S FACE.

Three little boys talked together,
One sunny summer day,
And I leaned out of the window
To hear what they had to say.

"The prettiest thing I ever saw,"
One of the little boys said,
"Was a bird in grandpa's garden,
All black and white and red."

"The prettiest thing I ever saw,"
Said the second little lad,
"Was a pony at the show—
I wanted him awful bad."

"I think," said the third little fellow,
With a grave and gentle grace,
"That the prettiest thing in all the world
Is just my mother's face."

OUR WILLIE.

Rev. Charles Garrett, in Zion's Watchman.

We often speak of "the invincible logic of facts," and certainly, if facts prove anything, they prove that wherever there is drink there is danger. They prove that education, wealth, Christian influences, a father's prayers, a mother's beautiful life, are all powerless against the destructive influence of drink. In the halls of the wealthy, as well as in the cottages of the poor, if the drink is used, it will sooner or later "bite like a serpent, and sting like an adder." Instances in proof of this crowd upon my mind as I write, and in the hope that a revelation of the sorrows of one home may avert similar sorrows from many others, I give it.

Some time since, on a specially festive occasion, I was invited to dine at a beautiful home, which I had often visited before. There was a large gathering of friends, for the family had long been famous for its hospitality. I knew that total abstinence had not been smiled upon there, and I was, therefore, surprised on sitting down to dinner to notice the absence of wine glasses. I wondered for a moment whether this was done out of compliment to myself, and I therefore asked the lady of the house if they had become abstainers since I had last visited them. I saw by the change in her face that my question had given her pain, and bending toward me, she said in a whisper: "I will explain it after dinner."

Afterwards she took me into an ante-room, and with a quivering voice said: "I want to tell you why we left off the wine glasses. It is a sad story for me to tell and for you to hear. You remember our Willie?"

"Oh, yes," I answered, "I remember him well." "Wasn't he a bonnie lad?" she asked, with tears in her eyes.

"Yes," I said; "Willie was one of the finest lads I have ever seen."

"Yes," she continued, "he was my pride, and perhaps I loved him too well. You know that we always used wine freely, and never imagined that any harm could come from it. You are aware also that our house is known as the 'ministers' home,' and that they are nowhere more welcome than here. On Sundays I have always let the children stay up to supper, so that they might hear what was said, and as my husband and the ministers took wine, I gave the children half a glass—on Sunday night only. By and by Willie went into business, and I was as happy as a mother could be. I thought I had everything to make me happy. After a time, however, I began to feel uncomfortable. I noticed when I gave Willie his good-night kiss his breath smelled of drink, and I spoke to him about it. He laughed at my fears, saying he had only had a glass with his friends; and I thought that perhaps my strong love for him had made me foolishly suspicious. I tried to dismiss my fears, but it was in vain, for I saw things were getting worse. There was a look in his eyes, and a huskiness in his voice, which told me he was at least in terrible danger. I did not know what to do. I feared to speak to his father about it. If it should turn out that I was mistaken, I knew he would be vexed with me for suspecting such a thing, and if I was correct in these suspicions, I dreaded lest he might take some strong measures with Willie which would end badly.

"So I waited, and prayed, and hoped. My hopes, however, were vain. He began to come home late at night, his father became alarmed, and, as I feared, spoke sharply to him, and threatened severe punishment. Willie, who had a high spirit, answered his father as he should not have done, and they often came to high words. One night Willie came home quite drunk. I tried to get him to bed without his father's knowing of it, but I failed. They met in the passage, and many bitter words passed between them. At last his father ordered him to leave the house. He went, and for months we heard nothing of him. His father ordered us never to mention his name, and his sisters and I could do nothing but pray that in some way God would restore him to us. One night after our daughters and the servants had gone to bed, and while father and I were reading, suddenly I heard a faint voice that sounded like Willie's. I dared not speak, but father looked earnestly at me and said: "Did you hear anything?" I said I thought I did. He said, "Go to the door and see." I went and opened the side door, and there, looking more like a corpse than a living body, was Willie. I said, 'Willie!' 'Mother,' he asked, 'will you let me in?' 'Oh, my boy, I replied, as I folded him to my heart, 'you should never, never have gone away. Come in and welcome.'

"He tried to do it, but was so feeble that I had to help him. He said: 'Don't take me into the drawing-room—take me into the kitchen. I'm cold and dying.' 'No, my boy,' I replied, 'I'll soon nurse you up, and you'll be yourself again.' 'Mother,' he said, 'I wish you would make me a basin of bread and milk, as you used to do when I was a little boy.' I said, 'I'll make you anything you want, but don't look so sad; come upstairs and go to bed, and I'll soon get you right.' He tried to walk, but fell back in the chair. I called his father, and he came. Not an angry word was spoken. They only said 'Willie!'—'Father!' Seeing his condition, his father took him in his arms as he would a little child, and carried him to his own bed. After a moment he said: 'Father, I'm dying, and drink has killed me.' His father said, 'No, no, my boy, cheer up.' You'll be better soon; your mother will bring you around.' 'No, never, father. God be merciful on me, a sinner.' His head fell back and our bonnie boy was gone.

"His father stood gazing at him with a look of agony for some minutes and then turned to me, saying: 'Mother, I see it all now. The drink has killed poor Willie, but it shall do no more harm in our house. There shall never be another drop of drink in this house while I live.'

"All there was in the house was destroyed, and we parted with the wine glasses, and that's the reason of what you noticed today."

Would that all mothers who tamper with drink could have heard this story as I heard it! They would not wait for their boy to perish, but would say now, as I said then amidst my tears of sympathy, "God being my helper, my home shall be free from this accursed thing. I cannot give my children grace, but I can take heed not to lead them into temptation."

Reader, if you would be safe yourself, if you desire that your example should not be injurious, but helpful to others, wisdom lies in total abstinence. Is there one reading this who has, like Willie, become the slave and victim of drink? If so, quit it!

A VISION OF THE NEW YEAR.

By Ben Rook.

I lay awake at midnight hour
When all the world was still;
A clock was striking in the tower
Of the church behind the hill.

Twelve times the chimes rang loud and clear,
I counted them one by one;
They sang out joy of the bright New Year:
And joy of the Virgin's Son.

There came a vision to my eyes
Of a stable in a distant land.
I saw the angels in the skies:
A radiant, heavenly band.

I listened, and a harmonious sound
Came softly to my ear;
The angels, circling round and round,
Sang low, but sweet and clear.

At first I could not catch the notes
That in the air did ring,
Then louder from their silver throats
Came: "Glory to the New-Born King!"

Praises they sang of a tiny babe
That in a manger lay,
Who, sent from God the world to save,
Was born in that most humble way.

Then sweet and low the Seraphs sang
A melody of the skies;
The last stroke of the church clock rang,
And the vision faded from my eyes.

A FITTING SLOGAN.

The Mississippi Conference has adopted as its slogan for the year now commencing, "TEN THOUSAND SOULS FOR CHRIST." This is an inspiring rallying cry, and the realization of this aim would be a fitting achievement with which to round out the century of its splendid history. Nor is this a large undertaking for more than fifty-five thousand Methodists. If one out of every five would lead an unsaved person into the Kingdom, the task would be more than accomplished. Certainly the opportunity to secure such an ingathering is not wanting. According to the Census of 1900, the population of Mississippi was 1,552,270, and in 1910 it was 1,794,114. The Government Religious Census taken in 1906 showed in that State only 657,381 people in all the Churches—considerably less than fifty per cent. If the same proportion between those in and out of any Christian church still holds good, and if it be assumed that the boundary line between the two Conferences in the commonwealth divides the population into two equal parts, there must be within the territory of the Mississippi Conference not less than 400,000 people outside of the pale of any denomination. And besides this, there are thousands enrolled as members of the Churches who do not know Christ in the forgiveness of their sins. Surely, after making due allowance for children under the age of accountability, this mighty host furnishes enough working material for the gathering of ten thousand converts for the Master. True, many of those included in this calculation belong to the colored race, but our Lord died for the black man as well as for the white man, and our glorious gospel is for the people of every color and clime. Indeed, perhaps our greatest reproach to-day is our comparative indifference to the moral and religious condition of the throngs of Negroes who live about our very doors.

We like the idea of the brethren to make their centennial year a revival one. Winning souls is a nobler work than rearing brick structures or raising sums of money. Man is great beyond our conception. The loss of a single human spirit is a greater tragedy than the wreck of a whole material world. The infinite worth of the human soul was one of the great lessons that Jesus taught, and one which we have yet but poorly learned. It cannot be too strongly emphasized that the supreme mission of the Church is to seek and save the lost. And if Satan can divert us from this work to another that is good, but of vastly less importance, he has struck the cause of Christianity a telling blow. The most subtle temptation is not to do the thing which is base, but that which is less than the highest. This was the character of our Lord's temptation when he stood on the threshold of his public ministry.

But souls are not to be saved by mere Conference resolutions. If the Methodists of South Mississippi want to lead ten thousand persons into the way of Life within the next twelve months, they MUST PAY THE PRICE. Those who are the Lord's must lay themselves wholly upon his altar. Their own hearts must first be cleansed and filled with the Holy Spirit. All forms of worldliness must be discarded and the voice of prayer again be heard in the home. The pulpit must ring with evangelistic fervor and the members of the Church must do personal work. God can bring it to pass if his people will place themselves as willing instruments in his hands. Let the Mississippi Conference lead the way, and let the North Mississippi and the Louisiana follow. How the angels would sing if these three bodies during the year 1913 should make it possible for them to write 30,000 new names in the Lamb's Book of Life on high! We believe that we could do it if we would.

BISHOP MOUZON'S CHRISTMAS MESSAGE.

Bishop Mouzon's plea for a more spiritual ministry, which appears in this issue of the Advocate, is a strong and timely utterance. As we see it, his position is an impregnable one. The Christian minister's spirit and methods are matters of the utmost importance. No less an authority than St. Paul, in writing to Timothy, said: "Take heed to thyself." Even the Gospel may be proclaimed in such a way as to do more harm than good. Bishop Mouzon has rendered the Church a valuable service in setting forth so clearly Christ's way of combating evil and his plan for the reformation of the world. We wish that some one in authority would also see fit to sound a ringing blast against the secularization of the pulpit by setting the Gospel aside on the Sabbath to discuss civic and social needs. We are beginning to have entirely too much of this.

NO MONOPOLY OF IT.

In last week's issue of the Baptist Record (Jackson, Miss.) appeared the following suggestive editorial paragraph:

"The Senior Deacon of the First Church, Jackson, has a way of identifying a Baptist church. He says that on a summer vacation he and his wife found a church of good appearance just across from the hotel and concluded to attend service there. They looked about for some mark that would indicate the denomination, but none appeared. They listened to the sermon and took part in the singing, all the while observing to see if they could determine what sort of church it was, but without success. Just as the pastor was about to pronounce the benediction a brother stood up and wished to make an announcement. Permission being given, he explained to the congregation that there was a deficit in the expense account of the church and said he hoped an effort would be made to make it up. The visiting deacon touched his wife with his elbow and said: 'We are in the right church!'"

We fear that the Deacon is not on to the ways of the other Churches. This incident may be generally characteristic of Baptist congregations, but it is likewise all too common among the Methodists. Indeed, an empty treasury and a struggle for necessary funds is apparently a part of the history of pretty nearly every religious flock. And the regrettable thing about it is that in most cases there is no necessity for it. The members of the average congregation could easily and promptly provide the means necessary to keep all the activities of their organization going, if they only would. If they would even measure up to the old Jewish standard of giving a tenth (below which we certainly ought not to fall amid the rich splendors of this Christian dispensation), this vexing problem would find a quick and happy solution. And the Deacon's infallible sign would become merely a disagreeable memory.

A COLUMN FOR LADS AND LASSES.

The Editors of the Sunday School Visitor are devoting a column on the editorial page to the Wesley Intermediate and Wesley Senior Bible Classes. The column will be conducted by Rev. Charles D. Bulla, Superintendent of the Wesley Bible Class Department. The introductory article in this column for lads and lasses contains the following paragraph:

"Over the entrance gate to a certain playground in London are the words: 'No adult allowed to enter unless accompanied by children.' Now, the passport to this cozy corner of the Visitor, if you are not a boy or girl, is a youthful spirit and a genuine sympathy with the young."

TO OUR FRIENDS.

Quite a number of our friends and readers of the Advocate have sent us Christmas and New Year greetings, in one form or another, during the past few days. Not being able to write each of them a personal note, we take this method of assuring them of our appreciation of their interest and kindly words. We heartily reciprocate their good wishes, and pray that they may find the new year the most profitable one that has yet come to them. We shall keep their names in loving remembrance.

REMEMBER THE ADVOCATE.

In taking up the work of the new year, do not forget the Advocate. This is a favorable time to present its claims and extend its circulation. If a pastor now introduces it into a home, it will re-enforce his efforts through practically the whole Conference year. And who can tell what influence it may exert? January has usually been one of our best months, and we hope the brethren will make it so again. Let every pastor in Mississippi and Louisiana see how many subscriptions he can send in within the next thirty days. If all the officials (stewards) of your charge take their Conference organ, drop us a card to that effect. We desire to publish a list of all the charges in our territory in which this is the case.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Dr. E. G. B. Mann is conducting a meeting for Rev. J. L. Kilgore at Bradentown, Fla.

Mrs. J. D. Barbee, of Greenville, Miss., is spending a few days with relatives in Memphis.

Bishop Hoss recently spent a Sunday in St. Louis and worshiped in Cabanne Street Church, where he took part in the service.

Rev. W. J. Wood has reached his new home at Sweetman, Miss., and finds everything in good shape. He writes kindly of his flock, and is expecting a good year.

The Florida Christian Advocate says that Dr. W. L. Clifton, the President of Southern College, made a fine impression at the recent session of the Florida Annual Conference.

The address of Rev. H. W. May, the new presiding elder of the Alexandria District, is Alexandria, La. All correspondents should take notice, and thus direct their communications.

Dr. Gross Alexander, our scholarly Book Editor, has been engaged to preach a series of sermons for Rev. B. C. Horton at Mt. Sterling, Ky. As an exegete, Dr. Alexander ranks with the foremost.

Dr. S. H. Werlein, of Alexandria, La., was in New Orleans last Tuesday and paid the Advocate office an appreciated call. He has a host of friends in the Crescent City, who are always glad to see him.

Dr. T. N. Ivey, the accomplished Editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate, who some weeks ago underwent an operation for appendicitis at Statesville, N. C., is reported to be steadily improving.

Rev. R. O. McClure, of Litcher, La., has been appointed pastor of the St. Charles Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, of New Orleans, succeeding Rev. G. B. Hines, who has gone to Lake Charles, La.

Dr. J. P. Lowry, of Little Rock, Ark., the well known evangelist, has been ill for several months and is now forced to use a crutch in walking. We are pleased to note that there is thought to be hope of his complete recovery.

Dr. C. B. Baker, of Amory, Miss., in a business communication to our office, takes time to add: "All the people of our town are glad to have Brother Young back for another year." The citizens of this enterprising little city evidently know when they are well off.

We note the following Florida appointments, made by Bishop Morrison: Tampa, First Church, Dr. W. E. Thompson; Hyde Park, J. B. Mitchell; Orlando, Dr. J. E. Wray; Miami, Dr. H. G. Davis; Seffner and Bloomingdale, W. A. Betts; Madison, Circuit, R. I. Allen; Sanford, H. T. Gaines.

Rev. A. R. Hoffpauir, who, because of his health, asked for an honorable location at the recent session of the Louisiana Conference, has been appointed Organizer for the Columbia Woodmen in Louisiana.

Mr. R. P. Howell, formerly a member of the Louisiana Conference, but at present a local preacher in our church at Lake Arthur, has recently been appointed a member of the Louisiana State Legislature from Jefferson Davis parish.

Rev. J. L. Sutton, who is the Superintendent of the New Orleans Orphan Boys' Home, is also supplying the Louisiana Avenue Church of this city, which was left without a pastor at the recent session of the Louisiana Conference.

Trinity College has decided to have a sermon once a month in Craven Memorial Hall. The first one was delivered by Bishop Kilgo on December 15, his theme being, "Christ, the Supreme Revelation of God and the Eternal Opponent of Sin."

The corner stone of the new Methodist Church at Natchitoches, La., was laid last week, Rev. Henry Harper, the pastor, conducting the service. The church building is almost complete, and the day of its opening will be a red letter day for the Methodists of Natchitoches.

Rev. A. L. McQueen, of Baily, Miss., who served last year as junior preacher on the Chunkey Circuit, under Rev. C. C. Griffin, now of Pelehatchie, Miss., desires an appointment as a supply, and wishes to correspond with any presiding elder who may need a preacher.

Dr. I. W. Cooper, the President of Whitworth College, entertained the stewards of the First Methodist Church of Brookhaven, Miss., the new pastor, Rev. W. H. Lewis, and the new presiding elder of the Brookhaven District, Rev. R. Selby, at an elegant 6 o'clock dinner on New Year's Eve.

Rev. J. H. Belew, of 2434 Marshall street, Vicksburg, desires to correspond with any presiding elder who may need a supply. Brother Belew has a high school education, and has been preaching as opportunity offered and leading in song services and Epworth League work for the past three years.

A layman writes us from Columbus, Miss., that Rev. W. W. Woollard, the new pastor of our First Church in that city, has made a most favorable impression. Brother Woollard is one of the truest and most capable men in the North Mississippi Conference, and he has a great opportunity in his new field.

In a business note to the Advocate office, Rev. T. D. Lipscomb writes: "We are now in Donaldsonville, La., and ready to take up the work in our new charge. We are hopeful of a happy and successful year." We congratulate the churches constituting this appointment upon having secured the services of Brother and Sister Lipscomb.

Rev. J. R. Jones in a note to the Editor states that he has been delightfully received by the congregation of our Central Church at Meridian, Miss., and that he is pleased with the prospect. Brother Jones is loved and honored by all who know him. He did a monumental work during his quadrennium on the Jackson District, which recently closed.

Rev. A. W. Turner, one of the Louisiana Conference evangelists, writes: "Any brother desiring my services in a revival meeting may write me at 535 Wyandot Street, Shreveport, La. If he wishes to know of my methods and work, I refer him to any presiding elder in Louisiana, or to Dr. G. E. Cameron, Shreveport, La., chairman of our Conference Evangelistic Committee."

The Central Methodist Advocate (Lexington, Ky.) of January 2 says: "Rev. H. G. Henderson has been appointed to Lexington, Miss., for the coming year. We understand that the people of Lexington are a people of much culture, and we congratulate them on receiving a preacher of the character of Dr. Henderson. He will preach them a strong, clear Gospel in a pleasing way."

The Fourth Quarterly Conference of the Court Street Church of Hattiesburg, adopted and spread upon its journal resolutions highly commendatory of the four years' service of both Rev. George H. Thompson and Rev. M. B. Sharbrough, the former in the capacity of pastor, and the latter in the capacity of presiding elder. Each of these brethren well merited all the good things said about him.

Rev. R. A. Maddox, the Sunday School Field Agent of the Mississippi Conference, sends us the following statement: "I have lost my receipt book for subscriptions to the Sunday School Times. I ask all the preachers who gave me their subscriptions for that paper at Conference, to whom it is not now coming, please to drop me a card to that effect." Brother Maddox's address is Mendenhall, Miss.

The Advocate office was honored last week by a brief visit from Bishop W. P. Thirkield, of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He is a man of most agreeable social qualities, and his long service as an educator in the South has given him opportunity to make the acquaintance of most of the leading men of our Church. His call was a pleasant one, and we hope that he will come again.

We acknowledge the reception from Dr. W. F. Tillet of a beautiful folder specially prepared to convey his New Year greeting to the Wesley Hall boys along the far-flung battle lines. Like everything else that comes from Dean Tillet's pen, this message is in admirable taste and most impressive. In gifts and attainments, the honored head of the Vanderbilt Theological Seminary is without a superior in the Church.

The Jackson Correspondent of the New Orleans Picayune, in an issue of last week, stated that the corner stone of the First Methodist Church of Jackson, Miss., would be removed on Thursday, January 2, in the presence of the members of the congregation, preparatory to the beginning of the erection of a new $80,000 house of worship on the old site. This magnificent new structure will bear the honored name of the peerless Bishop Charles B. Galloway.

The luncheon at the Monteleone Hotel, which we announced last week would be given on Monday, Jan. 6, by the Rev. and Mrs. H. R. Singleton, of the Parker Memorial Church of this city, was enjoyed by nearly all the New Orleans Methodist preachers and their wives. The reports that have reached this office are to the effect that Brother and Sister Singleton proved themselves delightful entertainers, and that the occasion was in every respect a happy one.

The many Mississippi friends of Rev. W. C. Harris, who has been living at Uvalde, Texas, for nearly a year, will be pleased to know that his health has considerably improved since he went West. The state of Sister Harris' health, however, is, we regret to say, little, if any, better. We are grateful to Brother Harris for kind words concerning the Advocate. In company with a host of others in the State of his nativity, we feel a deep interest in his welfare.

Rev. H. W. Jamieson has been appointed junior pastor of the First Methodist Church of New Orleans, and is already serving in that capacity. Bro. Jamieson is a native of New Orleans, and knows every nook and corner of the city. Dr. J. W. Moore, the pastor of First Church, says that Brother Jamieson is more persistent when put on the trail of a lost Methodist than a Pinkerton detective is on the trail of a crook, and that he never quits until he finds the party wanted.

The press dispatches state that the District Stewards of the Newton District (Mississippi Conference) met at Newton on Friday, January 3, and fixed the presiding elder's salary at $1900. Besides this, an apportionment of $250 for the purpose of furnishing and effecting some improvements upon the district parsonage was made. The Methodist people of this District are fortunate in having so scholarly and able a man as Dr. H. W. Featherston for their presiding elder.

Sister M. H. Moore, of Greensboro, Ala., says in a note written to renew her subscription to our paper: "My husband preached in the Mississippi Conference nearly thirty years, and we enjoyed the Advocate as a prized visitor to our family. I now live in another State, but I feel that I must still have the paper to keep up with the Conferences, and enjoy the good articles which it contains." We are pleased to have Sister Moore continue among our readers, and we pray God's richest blessings upon her and hers in their new home.

Having had the valuable services of Rev. M. L. White, as pastor, and Rev. M. B. Sharbrough, as presiding elder, as long as was permissible under the law of the Church, the fourth quarterly conference of the Prentiss Circuit, in session at Carson, Miss., took formal action expressing appreciation of the work of these brethren and commending them to any flock that they might be called upon to serve. It is always a gratification to ministers to have the love and esteem of those among whom they have wrought and who know them best.

Rev. R. Bradley, who at the late session of the Mississippi Conference took a superannuate relation, writes us to change the address of his paper to Jackson, Miss. From this we infer that he will make his home in that city. Any community should count itself fortunate to gain such a citizen. He has given to the Church for many years an unselfish and useful ministry, and in the persons of his two worthy sons, Rev. T. M. and Rev. O. W. Bradley, his influence will doubtless continue to be felt in the itinerancy for a long time to come.

It was an unfeigned pleasure to indulge a brief season of intercourse with our former yoke-fellow in the Greenville District, Rev. J. H. Ingram, during the recent session of the North Mississippi Conference. Having spent four years on the Glen Allan charge, where his popularity widened to the end, Brother Ingram is now serving, with similar acceptability, Schlater, another important Delta charge in the Winona District. Brother Ingram's success does not in the least surprise us, for he is a faithful minister and a royal, whole-souled fellow.

Dr. J. A. Rice, the pastor of the First M. E. Church, South, of Fort Worth, Texas, has prepared a series of six sermons upon the general theme of "Jesus Christ and Human Hungers," which he is now delivering to his congregation on Sundays at 11 o'clock. The first was preached on December 22, and the last will be delivered on January 26. A neat folder has been issued setting forth somewhat in detail each successive topic. Dr. Rice possesses a brilliant intellect and is a diligent student; and we have no doubt that these messages will be uncommonly strong and suggestive.

Rev. Eugene Johnson, of Ripley, Miss., than whom no more worthy man can be found in the Methodist itinerancy anywhere, sends us the following interesting item from his good charge: "The people on this work gave us a cordial welcome upon our return from Conference; and on Christmas eve night Santa Claus visited us, using as his representatives twenty-five or more of my parishioners, and as a result we have been feasting during the holidays. I hope to do better work this year than in either of the two past years. I will send you a list of subscribers soon. We enjoy reading your excellent paper!"

The interesting and informing series of articles from the pen of Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, B.D., which appeared in the New Orleans Christian Advocate last year, under the caption, "What Methodists Believe," have been put in pamphlet form by Messrs. Smith & Lamar, our Publishing Agents at Nashville, for general circulation throughout the Church. This is quite a nice compliment to our gifted young friend, though his papers fully merited the recognition which has been given them. The pamphlet or tractate referred to may be had at a small cost by writing to the Methodist Publishing House. Our pastors would do well to see that it gets into the hands of their people.

We are pleased to hear of the prosperity of our church at Hillhouse, Miss., where, though the population is small, we have some of the choicest people to be found anywhere in the great Mississippi Delta. The Sunday school is in a flourishing condition, and this congregation made an excellent record during the past year. Among those to whom Methodism is greatly indebted at this point are Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Smith, who have paid liberally to keep the work of the Church going, and whose beautiful home is always open to our preachers. Any pastor who has the privilege of serving this flock should count himself fortunate.

In a note written from Nashville on December 31, Dr. John W. Boswell stated that he was just out of bed, after an illness lasting ten days. He was afflicted with a severe cold, which later was complicated with neuralgia, and his suffering at times was intense. We trust that ere this our esteemed friend has fully recovered, and that he will soon be able to prosecute his important work in the Sunday School Department of the Church with his accustomed vigor. His service in every field in which he has wrought since he entered the itinerancy has been characterized by an unsurpassed fidelity. No man is more loved and honored than he is by the Methodist preachers and people of North Mississippi.

MRS. SARAH A. FIKES was born in Alabama on Feb. 19, 1836, and died Dec. 28, 1912, at 12:30 a. m., in her home near Enterprise, Miss., aged 76 years, 10 months and nine days. She joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at the age of about 16 years. Sister Fikes was married to George Fikes on Dec. 11, 1867, and to them were born one daughter and three sons, all of whom survive the mother. She had twenty-five grandchildren, four of whom preceded her to the other world. She was a member of Concord Church, on the Enterprise and Stonewall charge. We laid her remains to rest in the cemetery near her home, on Sunday, Dec. 29, in the presence of many friends and relatives. To the family and friends we would say, be faithful to Christ and you will meet Sister Fikes where parting shall be no more.

A. C. FLOWERS.

Mr. RAY E. SMITH, son of Mr. and Mrs. Z. T. Smith, was born Aug. 16, 1890; became ill on Nov. 27, 1912, at the home of his sister, Mrs. Effie Gammill, at Bude, Miss., and died Dec. 12, 1912. He never made a public confession of Christ, but gave his heart to God three months before his death. He was a good, moral boy, and was always ready to render assistance to those in trouble. Though weakened by the fever that laid him low, he found strength to talk to the unsaved of his father's family. He asked all of his friends to meet him in heaven. He had a sweet voice, and sang much while he was sick. We will miss his bright face and beautiful voice at church, yet we know that heaven is much brighter and that Ray is there to welcome us home. May his father and mother, five brothers and four sisters meet him in heaven. His body was brought home and laid by that of his grandmother. Weep not, friends, but say, "God's will be done," and let us meet Ray in heaven, where we will part no more.

His cousin, EMMA STEELE.

Brother HENRY C. HAVENS was born Oct. 15, 1831, and died Feb. 7, 1912. He was made a Master Mason by the Pascagoula Lodge No. 202, in 1857, and was buried by the Masons of the same lodge at Vancleave, on Feb. 8, 1912. He united with the Methodist Church about 1882, when Brother Calhoun was pastor of the Vancleave charge, and proved to be a faithful member during the remaining days of his life. He had a very remarkable memory and could recall incidents which happened 50 and 60 years ago, and in relating them, would bring out every detail of the story with perfect ease. The preachers would often call on him, in order to get a correct history of Methodism in this section of the country, and in this way he was a great help to his pastor. He was married three times. His first wife was Miss Josephine Borven, and eleven children were born unto them. His second wife was Miss Rebecca Davis, who bore him five children. His last wife was Miss Mary F. Cain, and four children were born unto them. While his days were full of trouble, his end was peace. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth; yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors." JAS. M. LEWIS, Pastor.

Mrs. ELIZABETH ARMSTRONG was the daughter of Temperance and Markem Holland, the wife of J. B. Armstrong, and the mother of Temperance Armstrong, who, together with her father, died seventeen years ago. Mrs. Armstrong was born Aug. 16, 1841, and died Nov. 27, 1912. She suffered much, but bore it well. Some days before her death she expressed herself as ready to go. Weep not, dear ones, she has gone to make the way more bright. "Aunt Lizzie," as she was known, leaves a host of relatives and friends to mourn her death. May the Lord sustain the broken hearted, for he hath the power, and doeth all things well.

BRUCE HART.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Whereas, it has pleased Almighty God, in his wisdom and love, to remove from earth our beloved companion and friend, Miss Francis Rayner;

Resolved, that we tender our heartfelt sympathy to the bereft home circle, praying that the stricken father and mother may accept this grief, and find comfort in our Father's abiding love, knowing that heaven is freighted with the perfume of another radiant life; that the great end of her being has been fulfilled, and that the broken links of their home will be knit together again in even closer and more sacred bonds.

May the life that this precious sister lived be a spiritualizing influence as the years come and go, until her loved ones here shall awake in His likeness.

As a Sunday school, "we lift up our eyes unto the hills from whence cometh our help." Her virtues shall shed a halo of brightness through memory's chambers, leading us to loftier ideals and greater usefulness in the Master's vineyard.—Mrs. Sam Gwin, Misses Ethel Jackson, Belle Hoskins, and Martha Wilburn, Committee.

MARRIED.

At the home of the bride's parents, five miles east of Yazoo City, Miss., on Dec. 25, 1912, by Rev. R. T. Nolen, Mr. J. D. CHISOLM, of Memphis, Tenn., and Miss LIZZIE INGRAM.

In the Methodist Church in Ripley, Miss., on Dec. 17, 1912, by Rev. Eugene Johnson, Mr. H. D. GOFF, of Memphis, Tenn., and Miss JENNIE D. THURMOND.

On Dec. 15, 1912, by Rev. Eugene Johnson, Mr. J. T. BOOKER and Miss SALLIE MATLOCK, both of Tippah County.

At the District parsonage in Jackson, Miss., on Dec. 30, 1912, by Rev. Paul D. Hardin, Mr. J. B. PATTON, of Chattanooga, Tenn., and Miss GERTRUDE M. PATRICK, of Hazlehurst.

Tidings From the Field

Sherman Charge, North Miss. Conf.

At about 7 o'clock, on the Thursday evening after the Annual Conference closed at Greenwood, we arrived at Sherman, and lodged that night with that splendid layman, David T. Yates. There being no parsonage, we went to work next morning to secure a house in which to live. This we succeeded in doing and by Saturday morning most of our household goods were moved in; and by the Thursday evening following we had things ready to spend our first night in our new home. The parsonage for this charge, located at Belden, was sold and a part of the proceeds used in purchasing a lot adjoining our church in Sherman. Some time during the year we hope to build a parsonage on it. Our membership now is small, but an earnest and heroic band. This is shown by the neat new church they have erected during the past 2 or 3 years at a cost of between $1000 and $2000. Brother G. W. B. Smith is our Sunday school superintendent and is a good one. The Sunday school superintendent and teachers gave a Christmas tree (without the tree) on the evening of the 24th, for the pleasure and amusement of the children and young people. Presents of different kinds were handed out by Brother J. E. Holmes, who acted as Santa Claus. The pastor and his wife were not forgotten. They have our sincere and hearty thanks. The Corinth District Conference will meet here in 1913. We look forward to it with much pleasure and feel that it will be a great uplift to us. Mr. Editor, you are cordially invited to come.—G. W. Gordon.

RECUPERATING AT HOT SPRINGS.

Dear Dr. Meek: Will you allow me a little space in the dear old Advocate? I am in Hot Springs, Ark., doing my best to get well, and if the Lord wills it so, I will recover. I should have come here last July, and at one time that was my plan, but my revival meetings were on hand and I hated to turn loose. Brothers W. C. Carlisle, J. H. Holder, W. O. Wagoner, W. H. Saunders, and J. N. Flynn agreed to hold my meetings for me and I appreciated their kind offers, but did not profit by them. The result was that after Conference I was in such a state of health that it was necessary for me to either find relief somewhere or quit. I can not tell what the result of my coming here will be yet. I try to think I am better, but I have very little reason for such a conclusion, having been here but one week.

Brother Meek, will you and all the brethren remember me in your prayers? I hate so much to be away from the Buena Vista charge, because those good people certainly deserve all of a preacher's time. They are warm-hearted and are so concerned about their pastor that they are willing to show him every kindness. Some of the brethren said that if I would rest until after January 1, 1913, they would pound the parsonage, but I did not remain to enjoy the pounding, because I long to enjoy health. My one wish is that I may be well enough to carry on my work. If I am unable to resume my labors, the man who takes my place will find the people of the Buena Vista charge loyal and true.

They know how to treat their pastor. God bless all the people of the Buena Vista charge. Success to you and the Advocate.
T. J. DURRETT.

OUR NEW YEAR'S PRAYER MEETING.

It was a great occasion. The Lord was there in power; and how our hearts warmed within us as we felt that Jesus was near.

Brother Irvin Roberts, an old Confederate soldier, was the originator and master of ceremonies. I want to say right here, that he is the best local preacher I have on the charge, and that is saying a great deal; for all ten of them are good men.

When the hour arrived for the prayer service I was a little disappointed and so was Brother Roberts; but we went inside the church and held services. There were six of us in all, as follows: Brother Ed. Taylor and wife and son; Brother Vaughn, a young Baptist preacher; Brother Irvin Roberts, and the writer.

Brother Roberts, after stating the object of the meeting, requested one of us to read the 107th Psalm, and another to read the 116th Psalm, after which he gave a few inspiring words of exhortation. Then he gave us the outline of the prayer which he was going to offer. It was such a good prayer and had so much faith and power in it, that I am going to give the outline for the benefit of the readers of the Advocate on my charge.

He prayed, first, for the success of all the churches: that God may grant unto them a glorious revival everywhere, and that the preachers may be paid their full salaries and get all their assessments in full.

He prayed, secondly, for the success of the farmers: that God may govern the seasons for their best interests; that there may be no more boll weevils to destroy the cotton; no more worms to eat up the corn and sugar cane, and no more bugs to eat up the potatoes.

He prayed, thirdly, for the success of the merchant: that he may be able to sell more goods than ever before and collect all that is due him.

He prayed, fourthly, for the success of the Dantzler tram road: that no accidents may befall the men who are working for the Dantzlars, and that they may realize great profits from the road. He said, "We do this because we appreciate the financial help they give us in our October Camp Meetings."

He prayed, finally, that Brother Louis Dantzler (who he had heard was in New Orleans for an operation) might recover his health and be spared to us for many years to come. There were several other prayers offered, and while we were praying the Holy Spirit came in power upon us and we felt that it was good to be there.

I hope and pray that much and lasting good will result from that prayer meeting. JAS. M. LEWIS, P. C. Vancleave, Miss.

J. R. COUNTISS.

The Sunday School.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

The Sunday school of the First Methodist Church of Monroe has an organization of young ladies, known as "The Methodist Workers," which has raised already $700 on the proposed Sunday school annex to the church. Their goal is to raise $1000.

Some seem to confuse the Organized Bible Class Magazine with The Adult Student; so that if they use the latter in their lesson work, they decide that they have the first also, which does not follow. The Adult Student is the organ of our Southern Methodist Adult Bible Class movement, and is adapted to our class work as nothing else is. Our classes should be organized according to the standard of regular officers and three committees, with regular business and committee meetings. Teachers should not allow themselves to monopolize the whole work of the class, when the legitimate and wise way is to distribute it among the members.

A general observation is that both children and adults like to have their say in anything with which they are connected, and especially in a recitation when they know their lesson. And no greater hardship could be imposed upon them than to be deprived of this privilege. The social bore is always a nuisance, monopolizing the time and allowing no one else a respectable place in the conversation. And also in teaching a Sunday school class, or in conducting a teachers' meeting, or in superintending a Sunday school, the monopolizer of all the time, as though wisdom would die with him, is a nuisance, and is hard to handle. People are not going to become interested in anything where their only part is to see another air his wisdom—the much learning(?) that "makes him mad." The good teacher does the least possible work himself, and lays the most possible on the pupils.

Recently we were in a mission Sunday school when a young lady teacher of one of the classes came on the ground, and before she entered the house a group of the scholars vied with each other as to which one could reach her first and throw their arms about her neck and implant the kiss of love upon her cheek. And when she was seated, what a scramble for the place by her side! The mother of Zebedee's children never had a more consuming ambition for her Apostolic sons to sit on the right and left side of their Master in His triumphant kingdom, than did these children of poverty to be nearest the hand touch and heart touch of this one whom they called "my teacher." And it was noticed that her face was not beautiful, but bore the marks of suffering. Her magnetism was of the heart. It was the same love that the Master himself had: the love that hopeth all things, endureth all things, and is kind. Who would covet greater riches than to love and be loved like that?

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick

"Too many people have the idea that their supreme business is to make a living, whereas their chief business should be to make a life."

The increase in Sunday school efficiency and numbers has transformed many places where heretofore only oases of Christian charity were found.

Rev. W. D. Wendel writes from Pontotoc that his Sunday school of 197 pupils is graded all the way through, that fine work is being done, and that greater things are expected from that finely organized body.

The "Sons of Wesley" Class of the Methodist Sunday school at Hickory have sent out New Year greetings containing their motto, "Christ, the Church, and Young Men." Their fine enthusiasm should mean much for Christian manhood in their town.

One of the most attractive and helpful Christmas greetings was issued by that up-to-date superintendent, Mr. J. R. Bingham, of Carrollton. It contained not only Christmas greetings, but a full register of teachers and pupils, lovely and uplifting poems, and thoughts on the spiritual significance of this the greatest of all festivals.

Mrs. Robin's Mission Chapel, located in the factory district of Tupelo, was burned not long since and the First Church Sunday school gave her a $25 Christmas gift to help her rebuild. She also received many private checks which have swelled the fund, and she is correspondingly happy. The greatest Christmas gift each of us could receive would be sufficient inspiration to enable us to live a life like Mrs. Robin's; one constantly exhaling the perfume of an active Christian service.

Rev. J. H. Holder is planning well for his next year. He has organized a Christian Workers' Band. That its members may do more efficient work for the Lord and improve in Bible study and prayer life, every individual will be asked to enter a simple but binding covenant to be pasted into each member's Bible. Mr. Holder is also emphasizing and explaining the work of the Home Department in the Sunday school in order to further accent the note of personal Bible study and private prayer life.

PISO'S REMEDY

Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by Druggists.

FOR COUGHS AND COLDS

This Will Stop Your Cough in a Hurry

Save $2 by Making This Cough Syrup at Home.

This recipe makes a pint of better cough syrup than you could buy ready made for $2.50. A few doses usually conquer the most obstinate cough—stops even whooping cough quickly. Simple as it is, no better remedy can be had at any price.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with 1½ pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle; then add the Sugar Syrup. It has a pleasant taste and lasts a family a long time. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

You can feel this take hold of a cough in a way that means business. Has a good tonic effect, braces up the appetite, and is slightly laxative, too, which is helpful. A handy remedy for hoarseness, croup, bronchitis, asthma and all throat and lung troubles.

The effect of pine on the membranes is well known. Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norwegian white pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and all the natural healing pine elements. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

This Pinex and Sugar Syrup recipe has attained great popularity throughout the United States and Canada. It has often been imitated, though never successfully.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

SOME NEW YEAR REFLECTIONS.

As we stand upon the threshold of the new year, let us not mar its beauty with vain regrets for opportunities we have let slip by, nor for our failures to respond to the calls of duty; but let us press forward more eagerly and earnestly than ever before, and when this year shall draw to its close may each one of us hear the voice of the Master saying, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

The following lines, found in the December Voice, keep repeating themselves to us: so we are going to pass them on and ask that you take them as our New Year message to you:

"Give of your best to the Master,
Naught else is worthy his love;
He gave himself for your ransom,
Gave up his glory above;
Laid down his life without murmur,
You from sin's ruin to save;
Give him your heart's adoration,
Give him the best that you have."

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI

The Press Superintendent gives an account of a social meeting of the Missionary Society at Verona with the President, Mrs. Clarke. Each member invited a member of the church, so that all might meet socially. Miss Linnie Barcroft entertained them by a description of conditions in Mexico City. After the conclusion of the program, refreshments were served and a social hour followed.

The election for officers of the Carrollton Auxiliary resulted in the re-election of all the officers except the Third Vice President and Corresponding Secretary. The Week of Prayer was observed. The collection was divided equally between the two departments. All dues and pledges will be met in full, with a balance of $28 on hand in the treasury of the Home Department. They sent a box to the Orphanage, valued at $90, and sent a special box valued at $16 to the girl they are clothing at the Orphanage. We regret to hear of the illness of their faithful President, Mrs. Bingham, and hope she may soon be restored to health.

The Society at Coldwater sends a good report—all members ready and willing to work. They intend to organize a Study Circle for the New Year. Always use the Bulletins. Are trying to adjust themselves to the new order, though they have not yet united. Observed Week of Prayer; had one open meeting and two missionary sermons by the pastor, Rev. D. W. Babb. Invited other church societies of the town to meet with them. They will start the New Year with a clean sheet, having met all obligations. Also do good local work, and always have money in the treasury for emergencies. They promise to do better work for the Master in the future. A good report.

All auxiliaries are requested to send a list of the names of newly-elected officers to the secretaries of the Home and Foreign Departments, so that they can be put in the Directory in the Annual Minutes. Then be sure to elect a Press Superintendent and send her name to this Conference Press Superintendent, so that the Bulletins can be sent to proper addresses.

The members of the Woman's Missionary Society of which Mrs. S. M.

Thames was President, regret very much that the action of the Conference resulted in taking her from Carrollton. She had been such a help and inspiration to the workers, and she and Brother Thames and their family will be very much missed. The good wishes of all go with them.

The Conference Secretary of the Home Department urges all District Secretaries to send in their reports as soon as they can after the close of each quarter. Much depends on prompt reports. The Secretary feels sure that there has been great increase in the amount of work done which will be gratifying, if the auxiliaries and secretaries can be induced to report it. The secretaries cannot get reports if the societies do not send them, so it all depends on the auxiliaries.

The mid-year meeting of the Executive Committee of the Council will be held January 22, 1913—A. C. Y.

GOOD NEWS.

The Quinta Tosca, a piece of property in Matanzas, Cuba, valued at $7000, has recently been left to the Foreign Department of the Woman's Missionary Council by Senor Tosca, who died in September. The papers necessary for the transfer of the estate are being prepared in proper legal form.

NEWS FROM FOREIGN FIELDS.

We learn with regret that Miss Daisy Pyles, of Brazil, tendered her resignation at a meeting of the Executive Committee on account of continued ill-health.

Miss Norville offered a proposition to open work in New Laredo. It could not be accepted, as it did not come within the jurisdiction of the Council.

Miss Stradley has asked for an additional fund of $5000 for the completion of the Martha Watts Annex. Miss Ross and the Secretary of the Foreign Department were authorized to send this amount, which will have to come from the Contingent Fund, as no appropriation for any purpose can be made except at Council meetings.

A Talk to Mothers

Every good mother is something of a doctor.

She is called upon almost daily to practice medicine in the lesser ailments of the children.

Frequently she is forced to use her skill on more important diseases until a doctor can be secured.

Hence every mother should be as well informed as to advanced methods of sanitation and medical practice as possible.

Here are some valuable medical facts which every mother ought to know.

1.—In treatment of coughs, colds, catarrh, croup, and especially pneumonia, plenty of fresh air is all important. It is life to the organs of respiration.

2.—In the treatment of these and of other diseases it is very important not to disturb digestion.

The stomach is the laboratory in which fresh life blood is made from food and drink.

In the interest of health the process should never be interfered with, if it can be avoided.

3.—Given plenty of fresh air, and good digestion, it only remains to eliminate the cause of disease and nature quickly responds to complete recovery.

4.—The modern treatment of croup, colds, catarrh and pneumonia with Vick's Croup and Pneumonia Salve permits plenty of fresh air to enter the lungs, avoids interference with digestion by stomach medication and instead attacks the disease at the real seat of infection, the air passages of the head, throat and lungs.

5.—The process involves the application of antiseptic and healing vapors direct to the internal linings of the air passages, by inhalation, with plenty of good fresh air.

6.—This loosens the phlegm, cleanses the mucous membrane and allays the inflammation.

The process also stimulates the organs, by absorption into the skin of throat and chest, overlying the seat of the trouble.

The fever is reduced by stimulation of the congestion, which is its cause.

In cases of croup, breathing becomes easier immediately and in fifteen minutes the case is relieved.

Similar excellent results are secured by using Vick's Salve in all various forms of diseases due to inflammation or congestion.

The price of Vick's Croup and Pneumonia Salve is 25c, 50c and $1.00 at druggists, or by mail.

A full sized jar will be sent free of charge to any practicing physician desiring to test the Vick treatment.

Sample sent to anyone on request.

TRACTORS BENEFIT FARMERS.

The experience of their owners is proving, over and over again, the great value of Oil Tractors as sources of farm power. Farming with tractors is becoming very common in the South. This is because tractor power is cheap, efficient and reliable; and because Oil Tractors are so simple that the farmer or his boy can easily learn to operate one successfully.

The prospective buyer no longer is compelled to rely entirely on the word of the dealer or the salesman regarding the efficiency and economy of these tractors. His neighbor who farms with them can furnish him abundant and reliable evidence on these points. The experience of Hamlyn Morgan, Hebron, Texas, is a striking endorsement of tractor farming. In a letter written on February 14th, 1912, to a well known manufacturer of Oil Tractors, he says:

"The engine I bought of you last spring has been a great help to me in this year's farm work. I would be at a loss to know how to farm without it. It takes all the heavy work off the teams and leaves them free to do the lighter work."

"It took us only a short time to learn the engine. It is everything you say. The gears show very little wear after going over some 900 acres of ground."

Mr. Morgan's experience is not an exception, but strongly indicates the beneficial results of tractor farming. A request directed to the Hart-Parr Co., 330R Lawler Street, Charles City, Iowa, will bring you a sheet of convincing testimonials on the subject of tractor benefits.

A WONDERFUL TRAVELER.

Dr. W. B. Palmore, whose contributions of world travel and observations have so delighted our readers for several months, is back home after an absence of about one year. He is the most wonderfully traveled man in our Southland. He has not only visited all sections of the accessible world a time or two, but he has made the tour of the world times without number. He is as familiar with the haunts of the old world and the paths of all seas as the country boy is with the by-paths of his neighborhood. Since this is true, there is no other expedition on this mundane sphere open to Dr. Palmore, and he is a very lonesome man. He has been on the go so constantly for the years now gone that he does not know what to do with himself. To go round to the Conferences adjacent to him is monotony itself, and time is hanging heavily upon his head and heart.

We are not surprised, therefore, to learn that he is only waiting for the perfection of airship travel to start again. It is then his purpose to make the circuit of the celestial regions; first take in the moon and study its stages of development, then make a trip to fixed stars and find if they are inhabited, and if so, to tell us what sort of people they are and what they are doing. And as he flits from one to the other he will take in the Milky way, the dogstars, the satellites of Saturn, and the wandering comets. We are already arranging our finances so as to have his reports published in the Advocate and give our readers the benefit of his stellar observations. When he has finished up his journeyings to these far-off worlds, and put his investigations into permanent newspaper contributions, it is then his purpose to go to heaven and enjoy the blissfulness of that estate. We can only follow his pen in his world-wide and planetary researches, but when he gets to the good world, we hope to join him some sweet day, and travel over those wide-extended plains with him. He has a monopoly of travel below, but we will divide pleasures with him "up yonder."—Texas Christian Advocate.

"KING GEORGE AND HIS BIBLE."

An editorial in one of the leading secular journals thus deals with the widely advertised statement that King George of England reads a chapter every day in the Bible:

"It is not unimportant news, in this era of the world's history, that the reigning king of England reads a chapter in the Bible every day, as he promised his mother he would do thirty-two years ago. Reading a chapter in the Bible every day for thirty-two years should make a man fairly conversant with the best of all books, appreciative of its great literary worth, and aware of the soundness of its precepts. * * *

"His daily reading in the good Book should enable him to keep a calm mind and a courageous heart amid the clamors of his time. There is not a complaint of the present hour, not a human condition of all those proclaimed as new and strange, for which some sufficient equivalent may not be found in this wonderful collection of the histories, chronicles and poems of Israel and Judah. That a reigning monarch of this twentieth century has the good taste and the inclination to read in his Bible, a practice which was not too common in the simpler era of his grandmother, must be gratifying to all who have feared that religion is losing its hold on the people. King George sets a good example for his subjects. One can not do better than to read the Bible, and it is beyond question that one who reads it earnestly and with appreciation every day in the year, can do no intentional harm to his fellow men."

NOT TAKEN FOR A BISHOP.

We give space to the following pleasing incident which happened on Bishop J. H. McCoy's way to the seat of the North Georgia Conference, recently held at Carrollton and given by a correspondent to the Nashville Christian Advocate, to wit:

Bishop McCoy came in with the Nashville contingent, joining them at a junction a few miles north of Carrollton. A little story is told of the Bishop's experience with one of the most popular members of his cabinet. The Bishop is a very modest man, dresses like a layman, and is more frequently taken for a business man than an ecclesiastical dignitary. He was in the station waiting for his train when the aforesaid presiding elder strolled in. He did not know the Bishop, but, like all Georgians, was socially inclined, so proceeded to get acquainted.

"My name is Jones," he remarked, "and I am a Presiding Elder in the Methodist Church. I am on my way to the Annual Conference. Georgia Methodism is the best in the world. Georgia women are the sweetest and fairest ever made; Georgia men are A No. 1. We have a climate unsurpassed even by Italy or California. Our crops are always bumper, and samples of prosperity may be had for the asking. What, may I ask, is your name, sir?"

While he paused to take breath, the Bishop replied: "My name is McCoy, and I am from Alabama."

"Well, sir, I am more than delighted to meet and extend to you a royal welcome to our great State. By the way, we have a Bishop of your name! Are you related to him?"

"Yes," was the reply; "we have the same father and mother."

"Indeed," said the Presiding Elder. "Your distinguished brother is one of the most beloved men of the episcopacy and an honor to all Methodism. I shall be delighted to make his acquaintance in Carrollton."

"You will have an opportunity," replied Bishop McCoy, "for I presume you received the notice I mailed you calling the cabinet session this afternoon."—Pacific Methodist Advocate.

BROTHER MCKEOWN COM-MENDED.

At a meeting held on Dec. 17, 1912, the stewards of the Edwards M. E. Church, South, adopted the following preamble and resolutions:

Whereas, our recent Annual Conference has assigned our pastor, Brother George P. McKeown, to another work, therefore be it resolved:

1. That under his ministry here the church has grown in numerical and spiritual strength, and has been imbued with a spirit of greater harmony and zeal than it has for years experienced.

2. Realizing the excellence of the work he has done for us, it is with profound regret that we part with him as our pastor; and we feel assured that this regret is shared not only by the entire membership of the

Edwards church, but also by all our people, regardless of church affiliation.

3. We commend him to the brethren in his new field of labor as an able, earnest, faithful and consecrated pastor, in every way worthy of their confidence and affection.

4. Upon him and upon the members of his household, all of whom are dear to all our people, we pray that God will bestow blessings abundant and lasting; that we may meet with them often in this life, and yet again meet and greet each other in that "house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."

5. That the Secretary is directed to hand a copy of these resolutions to Brother McKeown and spread them upon the minutes of this meeting.

(Signed) C. N. Harris, J. W. Ratliff, W. A. Dromgoole, Wilson Price, E. F. Crisler, T. W. Hackler, Stewards.

GIVE HIM UP WITH REGRET.

Whereas, with the close of the present Conference year our esteemed and beloved presiding elder, Rev. R. W. Tucker, closes his quadrennium on this district, and in accordance with Methodist polity, can remain with us no longer, but must go to another field of labor;

And, whereas, during the four years that he has been with us, we have been drawn very close to him by his warm-hearted and liberal traits of character, his brotherly fairness, his upright, righteous life, and the ability and fairness with which he has discharged the duties of his office;

Therefore, be it resolved by the Quarterly Conference of Trinity M. E. Church, South, Ruston, Louisiana:

(1) That it is with a feeling of sincere regret that we part with Brother Tucker and see him go hence to another field of labor.

(2) That we recognize in him the qualities that stand for constructive Methodism, virility of thought and action in the forward movements of the Church, and sincere consecration to the great work of the evangelization of the world.

(3) That into whatever field of labor he may be sent in the work of the Master, we wish him Godspeed and the largest measure of success.

(Signed) S. D. Pearce, W. A. J. Lewis, J. M. Sims, Committee.

DR. AND MRS. HAMILL TO TOUR LOUISIANA.

It is a matter of no little concern to our Sunday school workers that Dr. and Mrs. Hamill are to give us three weeks in the early part of 1913 in a series of Sunday School Institutes.

Dr. Hamill's specialty being Teacher Training, and Mrs. Hamill's, the Elementary Department. Since some of our Districts already have planned early Institutes in order to get our newly elected District officers into counsel, or to begin the District Sunday School Conference outright, it is fortunate that we can get our general Institute conductors just at this time.

Of the worth of our program and the possibilities of such an occasion we have no doubt—if only we can have our pastors, superintendents and teachers present. And we begin now to make our announcements, that all may plan to meet us on these occasions of instruction, counsel, and planning for a more aggressive Sunday school work. The Institutes will likely be held the latter part of February, but we are awaiting Dr. Hamill's instructions as to that. Watch for the announcement of a definite program in the near future. If you are a booster, begin now to boost these Institutes

ADVOCATE PIANO CLUB

ADDS ANOTHER ATTRACTIVE FEATURE

At a recent conference between the Advertising Manager of the New Orleans Christian Advocate and the President of Ludden & Bates, Southern Music House, it was decided to add another attractive feature to the Club's many privileges. This new feature provides that Club members may have their choice of the pianos and self-player pianos sent to their homes for a thorough approval test, before finally deciding as to whether they wish to join the Club or not. This plan will give prospective members the opportunity to thoroughly familiarize themselves with the superior Quality in Style, Finish, Tone and Action of the splendid Ludden & Bates Pianos and note the vast difference between these instruments and others in their community.

To see and to hear the superb Ludden & Bates Pianos and Self-Players is to be convinced that the Club is rendering its members a service the like of which has never before been possible. Realizing that the strongest words of descriptive praise are weak as compared with the real merit of the Pianos themselves, the Club has arranged to "put the piano itself in your home," so that you may see it, hear it, examine its splendid, durable construction and know beyond the possibility of a doubt that the Club really saves you a hundred dollars or more and gives you an instrument the quality of which is rarely approached even at much higher cost.

You are cordially invited to write for your copy of the Club's Catalogue, then make your selection and let the Club ship the piano to your home for a thorough trial. Kindly fill out the following coupon and we will send you the beautifully illustrated Catalogue by return mail:

MRS. TUBBS, of Florida, writes:

"The tone is the sweetest and construction perfect. I would advise anyone desiring a piano to join the Club and get the best. I can not say enough in regard to the Club plan and the Piano."

MRS. BRAMLETT, of Mississippi, writes:

"We purchased one of the Club Pianos and would not take anything for it. All who have heard it think it to be one of the grandest they have ever heard. While we were paying for it my husband died. You gave us a life insurance clause. We were still owing $125, which was nicely settled and our note was returned to us marked 'paid.' We thank you very much for your kindness and prompt attention which you have shown us. Any one who wants the best piano made should buy one of these. They will be pleased with it and will be treated nicely, for we were. We appreciate your kindness very much."

MR. DEMPSTER, of Georgia, writes:

"The Ludden & Bates Piano that I purchased of you continues to give entire satisfaction. Its tones are exceedingly sweet and do not lose any power in changes of season and climate, but preserve the same roundness and fullness of tone."

MR. RICE, of California, writes:

"The beauty, both in design and finish of an exterior can only be surpassed by its pure, rich tone. It is a pleasure for the best and most discriminating musicians."

MRS. MORRIS, of Florida, writes:

Editorial

If you can, trust yourself when all men doubt you,
But make allowance for their doubting, too.
—Kipling.

A not unfitting exhortation to many in this age is the following modification of St. James' memorable words: "Be ye doers of the Word, not speculators only, deceiving yourselves."

The secular papers a short time since announced the death of a man who was said to have read ten thousand dime novels. He should be catalogued with the forty sons and thirty nephews of Judge Abdon, upon whose careers the author of the Book of Judges makes no comment except that they rode on three score and ten donkey colts (Judges 12-14). Indeed, we think that the occupation of the donkey riders was the preferable one. It did at least have the merit of furnishing exercise.

Keep the screws of your moral machinery tightened up. If you allow them to become loose, it will not be long before you will develop into a veritable moral rattletrap. Too much introspection may tend to make one morbid, but enough of it to keep one informed as to his true condition is essential to high living and religious progress. It is perilous for any Christian to dispense with his seasons of quiet meditation and heart-searching. Even the Master went apart at times that he might be alone with God.

We are inclined to think that the denunciation of the "stand-patter" has been rather too sweeping and severe. There are some things that are forever settled that should be let alone, and the man who stands for their preservation performs for society a needed service. We hope that the time will never come when the voice of the conservative is not heard in the councils of Church and State along with that of the progressive. We should seek to go forward, but not at a runaway pace. The sound philosophy in the story of the hare and the tortoise is applicable to governments, civil and ecclesiastical, as well as to private individuals.

The mistake that some ministers make is that they want to reap without sowing. We must scatter the seeds, or there will be no harvest. The fruit gathered in the time of revival is generally a result of the quiet planting and cultivating that has been done during the year. It is our everyday work that counts for most. It is because of the steady influences that it brings to bear upon its pupils that the Sunday school contributes so largely to the membership of the Church. The pastor who neglects people within his reach for several months and evinces little or no interest in them until his protracted meeting starts, usually finds his efforts to get hold of them unavailing.

PROVIDING FOR THE PASTOR'S SALARY.

This is the time of the year when the Boards of Stewards in the various pastoral charges are fixing the salaries of their pastors and are making assessments upon the members of the Church to provide for their payment. It is to be hoped that in every instance they will be as liberal as is possible in their provision for ministerial support. The necessity of this is obvious, if one will only take a sufficiency of time to give the matter a little serious thought. The cost of living is higher now than it has been in several decades. A salary of $1200 at the present time is scarcely equivalent to an $800 one a few years ago. It should also be remembered that the preacher needs more money to meet his necessities than the average man. If he gives his time wholly to his work, as he ought to do, he has practically everything to buy; and if he has more than one church or has many members in the country, he must have a horse or must pay livery hire if he cultivates his field as he should. Moreover, he must have books and current periodicals if he is to keep informed and improve himself, and good literature is not cheap. Commentaries, encyclopedias, lexicons, histories, and high-class religious and theological publications are quite expensive. It takes a very small library to foot up hundreds of dollars in value. And, besides this, many ministers have children to educate, an outlay which draws heavily upon their meager stipends. Public sentiment also demands that they shall be neat in their dress and that their families shall make a good appearance.

The truth is, it has always been a wonder to us how the average preacher manages to get along so well, and to keep out of debt on an income that is so painfully inadequate. Bishop Galloway used to say that as masters of small finance, the Methodist itinerants have no equals in the world. But our churches should not allow them to stint and struggle and sacrifice where there is no necessity for it. And in most of our charges there is none. We dare say that if an inventory of the property owned by each member of the average Methodist congregation were carefully made and placed in one column, and his contributions for religious purposes placed over against it in another column, the exhibit would present a startling disclosure. Too many in our churches who might contribute small amounts are entirely ignored (we might learn a valuable lesson from the Roman Catholics on this point), and too many who are laying by their hundreds and thousands are giving for the maintenance of the Church a mere pittance, compared to what they ought to pay. Almost anywhere men can be pointed out who are worth $75,000 or $100,000 who pay the pastor $50 or $75 a year and felicitate themselves on their fancied liberality. Why, when we were pastor at Greenville, Miss., which was the most liberal church that we ever served (and also one of the most spiritual), we had young lady stenographers working for $60 or $75 a month who gave annually that much or more to promote the Master's cause. They felt that at least a tenth of what they earned belonged to the Lord, and were not content without placing it in his treasury.

We urge the stewards in every charge to confer freely with the members of the Church and to seek to make them realize more fully the weight of the obligation that is upon them to provide an adequate support for the minister who has been sent to serve them. And let the officials be sure to loosen their own purse-strings and set the others a good example. Such action upon their part will carry much more weight than mere words. And when the assessment is made, it should be arranged to pay at least enough of it monthly or quarterly to enable the pastor to meet his current expenses. It is a grave injustice to leave him to flounder along through most of the year without means to purchase the things that he actually needs. He cannot do the best work of which he is capable in the face of such conditions, and it is unreasonable to expect it of him.

MR. WILSON'S SENSE OF HUMOR.

We have been interested to note the exhibition now and then of a fine sense of humor by our President-elect, Governor Woodrow Wilson. We consider this an exceedingly valuable asset for a public man, and it may prove a great service to Mr. Wilson in the trying days ahead, as it did to Abraham Lincoln during the stormy period of his public career. An illustration of how happily the Princeton statesman can give a humorous turn to a conversation when he so desires, is seen in the following brief account of an interviewer's experience with him, which we take from The Outlook:

An amusing sidelight was thrown the other day on another Cabinet officer, when, according to the New York Sun, the President-elect was asked whether he had received any letters favoring the appointment of a woman to the Cabinet. Governor Wilson replied, as reported, "I think I have received only two such letters. They urged the naming of a woman in a general way—and, come to think of it, one of them recommended a particular woman."

"For what office?"

"For Secretary of War—but I ought to add that she was recommended in the interest of peace."

A MAN.

By Edwin Markham.

The color of the ground was in him, the red earth,
The tang and odor of the primal things,
The rectitude and patience of the rocks;
The gladness of the wind that shakes the corn;
The courage of the bird that dares the sea;
The justice of the rain that loves all leaves;
The pity of the snow that hides all scars;
The loving-kindness of the wayside well;
The tolerance and equity of light
That gives as freely to the shrinking weed
As to the great oak flaring to the wind,
To the grave's low hill as to the Matterhorn
That shoulders out the sky.

THE THINKER.

By John Jerome Rooney.

(Upon seeing in the Metropolitan Museum of Art the heroic cast "Le Penseur," by Auguste Rodin.)

Alone he sits upon a barren rock,
His bowed back bare to every scourging wind,
Silent and gnarled, like some old naked oak,
Riven, but still defiant of the storm.
His head hangs low, heavy with too much thought—

His steady gaze, that seems to search the ground,
Ranges the trackless heavens of the mind,
Pierces the stars and weighs the wheeling suns.

What martyrdoms of spirit scarred that brow!
What demons of the soul beleaguered it!
What ecstasies of hope! What hells of doubt!
He met the ancient shapes of monstrous might.
He met them and o'erthrew them with a thought.

He saw unnumbered hosts of Persia come,
Swarm over Greece and whiten all the seas—
A world in arms against a single man.

And, lo! he shot the arrows of his mind—
Power brandished high his myriad of spears,
And crumbled into dust at Marathon!

The petty tyrant of a hundred towns,
Reeking with spoils of many a pillaged cot,
Reaches red hands to seize a people's life:
When, sudden, he feels a clutch upon his throat,
The grip of one bold word for Freedom's sake
Uttered by this lone watcher on the rock.

Nature rose up and crowned himself the king,
Bade puny man obey his iron rule
And be the voiceless servant of his might.
A flash of light across the heavens ran,
The solitary watcher raised his hand,
Plucked the white bolt from out the blazing cloud,
Harnessed and worked it to his will and whim—
Lo, earth and air bore tribute to his feat.

Yet there he sits upon a barren rock
Seeing his ancient conquests with dim eyes:
Heedless of glory, so his task be done,
His spirit-gaze is on the forward track.
He seeks the path of justice for the weak;
Green fields of plenty for the huddled poor;
Play for the haggard children of the loom;
Light for the mind eclipsed by brooding want;
Peace as a blossom from the thorn of strife.

The outcast and the felon are his care:
Godlike he shares the sorrow of their sins
And in their wounds he pours the balm of love.
The bound Prometheus agonized for man.

—Western Christian Advocate.

A STUDY IN THE FIFTEENTH CHAPTER OF LUKE'S GOSPEL.

By Rev. John F. Foster.

The Christ man and his living was unrestricted by the social usages of his day; he did not hold to the prejudices of that day nor was he swayed by them. He viewed man as man, and in his daily living in the age in which he lived he was as he has become to all the world—the Universal Man.

The cant of social life was not his shibboleth, and the lordly turned from him because he would not bow in worship before their hard and fast rules, but cut loose from them. This reacted so that when the social outcast and the poor saw him turned against by those who looked down on them, it naturally gave them a bias in his favor. He did not discourage it, but invited it and received them, mingling with them, his view point and his ministry being different from those of his age.

To do thus was, to the lordly, unpardonable and criminal. They gave vent to their disapprobation in disgust and scornful murmurings, saying, "This man receiveth sinners and eateth with them." It is this withering contempt hurled at him from their assumed position of height which draws forth the words of the Master as hereinafter reviewed.

The first parable is simple. It shows us a phase of Christ's life—the Shepherd's care—but its lesson, which they soon see, reveals them to themselves, illustrating their failure and showing that he, in doing that to which they refer in contempt, is but doing that to which they, as the shepherds of the sheep, the appointed guides, had been appointed and with which they were charged. They, as the shepherds of the sheep, were thus shown to have been false to their duty. This in a shepherd land and spoken to a shepherd people, meant far more than it does to us.

Then follows the second parable. It is the story of the diligent search of a woman for a lost coin. It illustrates, as they soon see, the diligence with which they should have sought for the lost souls of humanity, for which seeking they are condemning him with scorn. To get the real force of it, one must see the cause of the woman's diligent search. The coin was one of ten pieces given her at her wedding, as is the ring in our day. Thus being invested with sanctity, should one of its pieces be lost, it would be regarded as an indication that the possessor had not only been careless, but that also she had been unfaithful to her marriage vow. In the light of this reflection on the woman, should she be careless of the coin, in what light must we view this careless contempt for the poor and the lost of earth? She, failing to guard the coins, was counted unfaithful and cast out as a social outcast; but should they not also have guarded the proof of their plighted love? In thus failing in their trust and openly holding in disdain and contempt those whom they were to keep, as the woman the coins, we see the view of themselves that the Master would have them get.

Having thus shown to them their faithlessness as shepherds in their duty to man in the first parable, the Master then shows to them their faithlessness to God in not guarding and keeping the sheep—the proof and evidence of their love to God.

Now we come to the third parable, called the "Parable of the Prodigal Son." This is a misnomer, for the lesson of the parable is not the prodigality of the son, but the abounding love and abundant forgiveness of the father and the strong and striking contrast between the attitudes of the elder brother and the father. Thus I take it that according to its meaning the parable should be called, "The Parable of the Father's Love and an Unloving Brother." To get the full view of the meaning of this parable, we must understand the younger brother to symbolize the publican and sinner, or broadening it, the whole outcast world, including the Gentiles and all.

For the present we view it as applied to the immediate audience, the scribes and pharisees, and not in its full detail or in its application to us. The prodigal, then, is the publican and sinner, while the elder brother who stayed at home is the pharisee, scribe, etc. Their attitude toward the publican, as shown by their contempt of the Master, is shown to them in the act of the elder brother. The view which God held of it is shown them by the reproof given the elder brother by the father, and also in the striking difference in the manner of the reception of the son upon the father's part from that suggested by the boy supposed to be good for having stayed at home. His goodness, however, is seen as of no avail, for it lacks the spirit and real animus of a goodly, Godly heart.

These parables are an attempt upon the part of the Master to open the eyes of the spiritually blind pharisees. They are also his defense of himself—his arraignment of his arraigners, and the "Magna Charta" of the poor. The greatest lesson to us, or to me as I see it, is its view of the Father. Jesus came with a new and bewildering idea of God, so transcendent that many, many generations were to elapse, and will yet elapse, before the world shall begin to grasp anything like its full meaning. God is a Father. Not the father of a sect, nor a nation, but the Father of every man and woman who walks the earth, of the publican, of the sinner, and of the outcast, even of all who will return unto him. He is a Father who sees in all the possibility of sonship, no matter into what state of bestiality they may have fallen. The Christ view of man is that any man or woman, however low they may be, whoever they may be, or whatever their relationship in life may be, is not to be turned away from, but sought for. The "I will arise and go to my father," when spoken by any penitent, opens the gates of heaven and restores to the heart of God. Herein we have three thoughts: God's love and the true view of his Fatherhood; secondly, man's possibilities when returning to that Father (this including man under all conditions), and thirdly, our duty to that erring brother. We are thus face to face with the work of the Church, made possible by this revelation of the Father's love, and also made necessary upon the part of the saved son as shown in the reproof of the elder brother—my work and yours in the world.

How shall I do it? This is the question. Must local, current ideas bind my acts, or shall I anticipate the thought of an age yet unborn, and live this glorious, broad, and all-comprehending life, which makes of all mankind one family and each man a debtor to his fellow-man, whoever or whatever he may be?

THE CORONATION OF CHRIST.

The following were the closing remarks of Rev. H. G. Henderson's able Christmas sermon, delivered at the Methodist Church, South, in Lexington, Miss., last Sunday:

This is the One of whom we ask, "What think ye?"

Hear the verdict of the centuries!

"Infidels, what think ye of Christ?" Pilate answers, "I find no fault in him." Julian, the apostate, cries, "O Galilean, thou hast conquered!"

Rousseau in glowing tribute says: "Socrates died like a philosopher, but Jesus died like a God."

Napoleon declared, "Alexander, Caesar, Charlemagne, and myself all founded empires. But on what did we rest the creations of our genius? Upon sheer force. Jesus Christ alone founded his empire upon love, and at this hour millions of men would die for him."

Renan confesses: "Thou, O Christ, shalt become the corner-stone of humanity so completely, that to tear thy name from the world would be to rend it to its foundation."

Jean Paul Richter exclaims: "The holiest among the mighty, the mightiest among the holy, he lifted with his pierced hand empires off their hinges, turned the stream of centuries out of its channel, and still governs the ages."

So we might continue these panegyrics from the skeptical world, only to find that infidelity pays unstinted praise to the lofty character of Jesus.

Christians, "What think ye of Christ?"

The penitent cries, "O that I knew where I might find him!" The new-born convert, flushed with the felicity of his new-found rapture, exclaims: "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and all that is within me, bless his holy name." Zion's pilgrim, as he nears the cypress avenue of death, chants the minstrel's last lay: "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me." The blood-washed throng around the throne sings: "Unto him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood, and hath made us kings and priests unto God and his Father; to him be glory and dominion forever and ever. Amen."

The Christian minister repeats:

"Happy, if with my latest breath
I may but gasp his name,
Preach him to all and cry in death,
Behold, behold the Lamb!"

In all ages men have striven to leave behind them memorials to give them a posthumous fame. Shaft and shrine, pile and pyramid and other monumental attestants have been erected by the regal and the great, in the vain hope that brass and stone might survive the ravages of time and the mutations of fortune and redeem their names from destruction.

But hoary pillars and ancient arches have crumbled to parent dust and the tooth of time has destroyed the proudest works of antiquity. Not so, with the monument Christ has built. True, he left no book, nor bronze; no autograph nor writing, or other material memorial to perpetuate his name; yet he built a monument more enduring than brass and more impregnable than adamant. It was quarried from the granite of Gethsemane and cemented with the blood of Calvary. It has stood the tests of time and tide, of fagot and fire, of sword and ax, and all the cruel enginery of its enemies; yet despite the hostile onslaughts, it stands to-day as majestic as the immovable rock of the sea, against which billows break and the waves spend their impotent rage.

Jesus! What magic in the name! What music in its accents! It has been emblazoned on our banners; blended in the rhythmic measures of sacred song; woven in the exquisite creations of Christian art; embodied in the folios of philosophy; inwrought in the pages of literature, and associated with all that is purest and best in the world's progress. Jesus is to be crowned Lord of all. Crowns and scepters are to be laid at his feet. See the multitudes coming to the coronation of the King of kings. "From the plains of Tartary, from the ghats of India, from the ancient seats of China, from Africa's sunny fountains," from the isles that gem the sea, and from all the dark places of the earth, they come to unite in singing the marseillaise of Christendom—Coronation:

"All hail the power of Jesus' name!

Let angels prostrate fall:

Bring forth the royal diadem,

And crown him Lord of all."

AN INSPIRING CONFERENCE.

Having been appointed Conference Missionary Secretary at the recent session of the Louisiana Conference, I felt the need of getting some preparation to be able to serve the Conference in that capacity, and found the opportunity of doing so in the "Mid-winter Institute and Leaders' Conference," which is held in the "Methodist Training School" at Nashville during the holiday season each year. The plan of this Conference is to bring together as far as possible Conference Missionary Secretaries, Chairmen of Conference Boards, Presiding Elders and other leaders in missionary work for the discussion of the problems of the work, and inspiration by contact with the great facts and leaders of missionary work and achievement. From over twenty of the Conferences an attendance of some fifty or sixty representatives were regularly present this year, including two, Brother Schuhle and the writer, from the Louisiana Conference. I am sorry that other representatives of the Board and all of our presiding elders could not be present. There were also in attendance many of our connectional leaders, Missionary Secretaries, Bishops and others, a number of missionaries, and great missionary leaders who occupied places on the program.

I feel like trying to bring the message of this inspiring institute, through the Advocate, to the Louisiana Conference. While it is impossible to follow out the program in detail, I shall try to report the features of special interest.

Each day of the session there were practical and earnest conferences of the Conference Secretaries and others, conducted by the General Secretaries, as to such vital problems as the development of the missionary spirit through the Sunday school, the Epworth League, the dissemination of missionary literature, the missionary sermon, the development of the district and of the Conference in missionary spirit, and practical questions of the home field. In these conferences were reported the great successes which have been won in particular Conferences and individual churches and districts. It was inspiring to hear how the Thomasville District, South Georgia Conference, has advanced until it is supporting, in addition to its assessments, a number of special missionaries, and of how the Virginia Conference has added many thousands of dollars in specials, over and above their assessments in full.

In addition to these conferences, there were two great addresses each day by leaders in world evangelization. Three addresses were delivered by Dr. Chas. R. Watson, Secretary of the United Presbyterian Board, and one of the great missionary leaders of this country, dealing in a masterly way with the great problems; forces and resources of the enterprise of world evangelization, which gave a broader vision of our responsibility and a new hopefulness in meeting them. Bishop Hendrix, in addition to the Conference sermon on Sunday morning on the "Unchangeable Christ," gave an address, based upon a thorough familiarity with the field, on the "Future of Protestantism in Mexico," which indicated great possibilities for the development of Protestant Christianity in that republic on account of the favorable attitude of the present leaders of the country toward our gospel. Dr. I. N. McCash, Secretary of the Home Board of the Christian Church, out of a large experience in Home Mission work, gave two strong addresses on vital questions in reference to this work, as follows: "Creative Forces at Work in America," and "Cities, as Related to the Kingdom of God." Perhaps no address of the occasion was more fruitful than the powerful presentation of the doctrine of "Christian Stewardship," by Dr. Egbert W. Smith, Secretary of the Southern Presbyterian Board. The Institute requested the publication of this address, and no doubt the reading of it by our people would stir them to a new sense of responsibility in the matter of money.

We were fortunate in having several great missionaries present to tell of their fields from first-hand knowledge. Our own T. H. Haden, of Japan, gave two statesmanlike addresses on the present situation in that wonderful country, culminating in the emphatic statement which we may take as the gist of his message, that "there has never been a time when the Japanese were more willing to give a fair hearing to Christianity than now," and the added statement that "the facts point to a much greater success in the next ten years than at any previous time." He pointed out the necessity of our Church meeting this great opportunity by sending out four or five new missionaries each year for five years.

Dr. W. M. Morrison, a well known and heroic missionary of the Southern Presbyterian Board of Africa, gave a thrilling address on his work in the Congo country, telling of the eagerness with which natives welcome the gospel, as illustrated by the fact that he had found a twelve-year-old boy who had heard the gospel and having moved to a village where the missionaries had not gone, was teaching them about Christianity in a chapel which the villagers had erected for the purpose. He told of a great section north of the Presbyterian station inhabited by the Batatas, a very interesting people, which had for years been reserved for our Church to occupy. This is the field recently visited by Bishop Lambuth and Dr. Gilbert, and which our Church in co-operation with the C. M. E. Church is planning to occupy shortly. The natives are eagerly awaiting our coming.

Perhaps no field is at present of greater world interest than China, and it was our good fortune to have several great addresses from Dr. I. T. Headland, of the M. E. Church, who is connected with the Imperial University at Peking. He brought a message of the responsibility of American Christianity for the redemption of the new China.

Such burning messages as these from the world's white harvest fields are a challenge to the genuineness of our faith in the gospel, and call for enlarged vision and increasing liberality on the part of our churches and people. The example of those churches and Conferences which have made such great advances in the last few years ought to suggest that it is time for our Conference to measure up to the assessments, which are the minimum of obligation in the face of the increasing call of the world field, emphasized by the imperative of the Master's last command.

Nothing was more impressive in this gathering of earnest missionary leaders than the note of emphasis upon intercession as the keynote of success in all our plans for missionary advancement. If our preachers and people in Louisiana will spend some time each day in specific prayer for the success of our missionary enterprises and for the opening of the heart of the Church to this great cause, the foundation will have been laid for a great advance in our missionary zeal and liberality.

A NEW DEPARTURE IN EDUCATION.

The High School Board of the State of North Dakota offers to give to high school students a credit of one-half unit toward a high school diploma (sixteen units being the value of the entire course) for the successful completion of a course in the English Bible. An outline of this course is published, and may be had on application to Rev. Walter A. Snow, Fargo, N. Dak., at a cost of 25 cents. Instruction in the Bible course is given outside the high school. It may be given at home, in the Sunday school, or elsewhere. The examination on the course of study is given under the direction of the high school authorities. The following is a statement of interest concerning the matter from a joint committee representing the State Educational Association and the Sunday School Association of North Dakota:

"This makes Bible study an elective in high school. The instruction is to be given outside the high school, of course, and may be pursued privately or under the direction of some religious organization.

"One or two things ought to be made clear in justice to the High School Board. This is not a Protestant movement. A Catholic can carry it on in his own Bible with or without the immediate supervision of the priest or spiritual adviser. Again, it is not really a religious movement, so far as the schools are concerned. The examination will not bear on religion, but merely on Biblical history and literature. Sunday schools or other religious agencies may use it and blend as much religious instruction therewith as they please. From the point of view of the school, the religious instruction is incidental, although from the point of view of the Sunday school, it may be the chief thing."

"Finally, it is wholly voluntary, and is purely outside the work. It is not taught in the school, or paid for with State money.

"It is hoped that this plan of promoting Bible study will meet with the unqualified approval of all those who are interested in religious education, and in the diffusion of a knowledge of the Book which has done more to mold English literature than any other single thing."

Church News

The Methodists are preaching the Gospel in six languages in Russia.

Bishop W. R. Lambuth and family are now at Oakdale, Cal., where, it is reported, they may spend several months.

An institution known as the Florida Winter Bible School opened at Leesburg, Fla., on Jan. 7, and will close on March 30. Dr. W. R. Newell is the director.

The Florida Conference levied an assessment of $2500 to aid in maintaining the Florida Christian Advocate. The present editor, Rev. D. B. Sweat, is making a creditable and interesting paper.

Mr. A. D. Vick, a prominent citizen of Camden, Tenn., who died last week, provided in his will for the building of a home for superannuated Methodist ministers. It is to be maintained by a 160-acre farm.

The Virginia Conference reported a net gain in membership of 2040 last year. Its total membership is 113,505. It is the second largest Annual Conference in the Connection, the North Georgia Conference coming first.

At the request of the attorneys for the complainants, the trial of the Vanderbilt lawsuit will not be resumed until January 27. We are not informed as to what prompted counsel for the Church to ask for this delay.

The London Chronicle recently announced the discovery of some interesting manuscripts of John Wesley in the archives at the Wesleyan headquarters in the great world metropolises. These are said to include many letters and a complete diary of the last ten years of Wesley's life, written in shorthand. Any thing new connected with the illustrious founder of Methodism now commands the immediate attention of English-speaking people everywhere.

The Methodists of Texas are a mighty host. According to the Texas Christian Advocate, the five English Conferences and the German Mission Conference have a total membership of 237,000. The aggregate gain of the five English bodies during the past year was slightly more than 6000—a little less than 3 per cent, and an average of less than 3 to every congregation. So small an increase should excite grave concern among our people in the Lone Star State, though doubtless it will compare favorably with the percentage of gain in most parts of our territory.

Bishop M. C. Harris, Missionary Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church for Japan and Korea, sailed for the Orient from San Francisco on Dec. 27. After spending a few days in Tokyo, he will visit Seoul, Korea. The Bishop's name has been mentioned in connection with the alleged conspiracy to assassinate the Japanese Governor-General of Korea, but the suggestion that he knew anything of such a plot is regarded by all who know him as absolutely preposterous. Bishop Harris went to Japan as a missionary in 1873, and was decorated by the former Mikado with the Order of the Sacred Treasure.

Robert College (at Constantinople), which has been frequently mentioned in the press dispatches relating to the war between Turkey and the Balkan States, will celebrate its semi-centennial during the present year. This institution is a direct product of missionary enterprise, and its first President was Dr. Cyrus Hamlin. The value of the property is about $750,000, and its income last year was approximately $243,000. Its students number 408, of whom 114 are in the college proper. The greater part of them are of Greek nationality, with Armenians, Turks, and Bulgarians following in the order named.

It is claimed that the World's Conference on Church Unity, in which the Protestant Episcopal Church is leading, is making good headway. The Archbishops of Canterbury and York have announced a committee of twenty to represent the Church of England in arranging for the occasion, and it is stated that twenty denominations have signified their acceptance of an invitation to participate in the proceedings. This movement was started at the Episcopal Conference in Baltimore about two years ago at the suggestion of Dr. Manning, and later Mr. Pierpont Morgan contributed $100,000 to aid in carrying it forward.

Wofford College (South Carolina) reports an enrollment of 491 students—305 in the College and 186 in the Fitting School. Of these pupils 304 are from homes where the father and mother are both Methodists; 29 from homes where one parent belongs to the Methodist Church and the other to some other Church; and the parents of 112, nearly 25 per cent, belong to some other denomination. Eighty-three per cent of the students are church members; of these about 25 per cent are not Methodists. Persons who are imbued with the idea that Methodist schools are strictly sectarian need to open their eyes and learn a few facts.

The Western Methodist says: "In the forty-five years of the history of Winnfield Memorial Church of Little Rock, Ark., only four ministers have been appointed to that pulpit for the fourth year—Alonzo Monk, A. R. Winnfield, James Thomas, and P. C. Fletcher." This is not a good record for long pastorates, but we should not be surprised if it is quite up to the average. As a rule, there is too much disposition to desire a change upon the part of both our preachers and people. Both need to exercise more patience and forbearance. Hunting for the ideal in either the minister or the charge is chasing after a veritable will-o-the-wisp. Perfection in either men or organizations is not to be found on earth.

The American Messenger, a New York monthly published by the American Tract Society, passed the seventieth milestone of its honored and useful history on January 1. During this time it has grown from a four-page to a twenty-page journal. The work wrought by this Company in the preparation and circulation of Christian literature of all kinds in these three and a half score years has also been a growing one. Its operations have not been confined to the home land, but have extended into practically every field where missionaries have gone, giving to many foreign peoples religious reading in their own tongue. It is estimated that the books, tracts and periodicals scattered gratuitously abroad by this organization are together equivalent to over four billion tract pages, with a value of $2,500,000. Who can compute the harvest that will be reaped in the last great day from this mighty sowing of the precious seeds of truth?

LAYMEN'S MOVEMENT.

North Mississippi Conference.

What I have done as Conference Lay Leader during the past two years has been an effort to enlist the laymen in the regular work of the Church, rather than in specials. This, I think, is wisest under any conditions. The largely increased assessments have made such a course imperative. Energy expended in regular church channels pans out better than that spent in special spasmodic stunts, and yields more permanent results.

I know instances wherein the organized Laymen's movement saved the situation during these two years; others, where trusting too much to it without wise direction led to disaster. Greenwood and Winona used laymen's banquets with a happy effect and good results in promoting fellowship and in increasing interest.

In securing the interest of men in specific work the children of this world have been wiser than the children of light. I do not say this in either praise or blame of clubs and fraternal orders. Personally I never had time to belong to anything but the Church. I do not censure those who have.

Ever and anon recurs the discussion of the question as to whether men attend church. If any pastor will take note of the number of official members who never miss the lodge and never attend prayer meeting, he will realize that we are at fault somewhere. May we be able to use the Laymen's movement to reach the great mass of men who are scarcely in touch with the great interests of Zion!

I hope that the Advocate readers are reading of the great Missionary gathering to be held at our Southern Assembly grounds next June.

If our District Lay Leaders and Pastors will send names to me, I will see that representatives from every charge in North Mississippi are appointed delegates.

A CHANGE IN MANNERS.

Mr. Henry Cabot Lodge, the most literary of our United States Senators, in the January number of Scribner's Magazine, under the caption "Social Changes," writes of the transformation that has taken place in the manners of the people in and about Boston during the course of his life, which covers a period of sixty-two years. He says:

"I was taught in my youth, and very vigorously taught, that it was not good manners to discuss physical ailments in general society, and that it was the height of vulgarity to refer to money or to what anything cost, whether in your own case or in that of other people. I now hear surgical operations, physical functions, disease and its remedies freely and fully discussed at dinner and on all other occasions by the ingenious youth of both sexes. Money is no longer under a taboo. One's own money and that of one's neighbor is largely talked about, and the cost of everything or anything recurs as often in polite conversation as in a tariff debate. I am not concerned to decide which is the better fashion, the old or the new. I merely note the difference. The world of Boston when I opened my eyes upon it, was a very small and simple world as I look back at it now in the glare and noise of the twentieth century. There was an abundance of gayety, but expenditures were small. Everybody knew everybody else and all about everybody else's family. Most people were related, for in the small colonial communities of the eighteenth century the established families had intermarried in a manner most bewildering even to the trained genealogists. Yet the extreme familiarity and ease of intercourse which I now observe among young men and young women entirely unrelated did not then exist. However intimate people might be, a certain formality of address was thought to be demanded by good manners."

Mr. Lodge very discreetly refrains from expressing an opinion as to whether this change in the deportment of Bostonians is an improvement or a retrogression. Perhaps he was afraid of being called a pessimist. Such seems to be the fate of all who do not sing lustily the song that everything existing in this age is the best that the world has ever known. But the question raised by the Massachusetts Senator is scarcely a debatable one. That every person should have about him a circle of decent reserve is a fact too obvious to need the justification of argument. And the regrettable thing is that the apostasy in manners noted by Mr. Lodge is not confined to Boston or New England. The same trend is observable in every part of the American Union. What is needed is the mother's corrective hand. When the wife forsakes the home for what she regards as more important duties elsewhere, many things go awry.

Almost $19,000,000 were spent during the last year in the fight that is being made against the spread of tuberculosis in the United States.

A pen holder is now in use that has on it a small electric light bulb and a miniature storage battery, which enables a writer to work in a dark room.

The sod was broken for the erection of the first building of the Panama Exposition to be held in San Francisco in 1915 on New Year's Day. The first structure to be erected will be Machinery Hall.

It is announced that thirty-nine lepers were recently shot by authority of the provincial officers of Nanking, China. Of course, the poor lepers are out of their misery, but that does not lessen the barbarity of the act.

Mr. James Keely, general manager of the Chicago Tribune, has been elected Dean of the College of Journalism of Notre Dame University. He is a man of practical experience, which qualification is too often overlooked in naming college professors.

A police jury in North Louisiana recently declined to grant a saloon license to a man who wanted to operate a saloon in a town where a saloon tragedy had occurred. The jury claimed that its business was to safeguard the welfare of the people, even if the law did permit it to grant licenses.

The United States paid last year an average of one and one-ninth cent for each inhabitant of this country in order to guarantee to all a supply of pure food. Such an outlay of money for the safeguarding of the health of a nation does not seem very large, especially in the face of the statement that most of our ailments are due to impure food.

Postmaster General Hitchcock is said to favor some action being taken by Congress that will enable the Post Office Department to purchase all the franchises now owned by express companies doing business in the United States. He says that the successful operation of the parcel-post department demands the very equipment that the express companies now have.

The State of California pays the highest average salary to public school teachers of any State in the Union, the amount being $918 per annum, while North Carolina pays the lowest average, $200 per annum. The national average wage of the school teacher is less than $1 a day, which makes his profession less remunerative than the work of a coal miner or a common laborer.

A measure has been proposed in Germany making it unlawful to sell or expose for sale what Americans call "dime novels." It is said that the German people have expressed their approval of such legislation. If the bill is enacted, it will also provide that all such books found in the possession of any one must be confiscated and destroyed. Such a law would scarcely be amiss in this country.

A colored department of the Anti-Saloon League has been organized, with headquarters in Baltimore, Md. The organization will not be independent but will be managed as a separate district under the general supervision of the Anti Saloon League of America. Booker T. Washington, whose authority on negro social problems is highly respected, claims that most of the crimes committed by the negro against the white man is due to his use of liquor.

A feature of the Swiss public school system is that the teachers are employed for life, or during good behavior. A teacher thus employed makes his home among his patrons, and has the opportunity of studying the home life and personal traits of each of his pupils. In some respects this is an improvement on our system, under which the frequent change of instructors often results disastrously. Switzerland is a small nation, but it has some big ideas.

The Emperor of Germany once gave to Dr. Emil Rathenau a medal for inventing a device for the protection of human life. The designer of the medal has issued a number of medals in replica of the original, and the first of these was recently presented to Thomas A. Edison in recognition for his service to humanity in inventing a storage battery device to be used as a tester of atmospheric conditions in mines and other places where there is much danger of explosions.

Dr. Alfred Russell Wallace, sometimes known as "The Grand Old Man of Science," has recently declared that mankind has made no advancement since the earliest days of the Egyptians, either in intellect or morals. With such an authority as Mr. Wallace talking like that, what is the hope of that branch of scientists that hold to the doctrine of evolution? Erratic notions and sensational announcements are too often the fruitage of a certain kind of scientific research.

The mortality records of Congress have been broken since the 62d Congress began. A Vice President, six United States Senators, and sixteen Representatives have died in that time, as follows: Vice President Sherman, Senators Frye, the president pro tem., Davis of Arkansas, Heyburn, Idaho; Taylor, Tennessee; Raynor, Maryland; Nixon, Nevada; Representatives Anderson, Georgia; Bingham, Kipp and McHenry, Pennsylvania; Connell and Malby, New York; Foster, Vermont; Gordon, Tennessee; Hubbard, Iowa; Latta, Nebraska; Madison and Mitchell, Kansas; Loudenslager, New Jersey; Utter, Rhode Island; Wedemeyer, Michigan, and Wickliffe, Louisiana.

The proposal to amend the Constitution of the United States by granting Congress the power to levy an income tax has thus far been acted on favorably by thirty-three States. Before the amendment becomes a part of the Constitution two-thirds of the States must favor it, and that means that the votes of but three more States are needed. The States that have officially approved the amendment are: Alabama, Arkansas, Arizona, California, Colorado, Georgia, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Maine, Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Washington and Wisconsin. Unofficially, Ohio and Louisiana.

THEIR FIFTY-FOURTH ANNIVERSARY.

On Monday of this week, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Lewis, of Houston, Miss., celebrated the fifty-fourth anniversary of their marriage, on which occasion their many friends gave a sumptuous dinner in their honor. The editor acknowledges an invitation to be present at this dining, and regrets that it was not possible for him to attend. Brother Lewis is one of the first citizens of Chickasaw County, which he has represented in the State Legislature, and he is universally esteemed by his neighbors and fellow citizens. He was a gallant Confederate soldier and participated in a number of hard-fought battles in the Civil War. For many years he has been an official in our Church and a faithful Sunday school worker. Referring to his family life in a note published in a local paper, he says: "We have had religious services often in our home, but the card table was never spread there, nor the intoxicating bowl brought into use." From that home came two effective and influential Methodist preachers—Rev. T. W. Lewis, pastor of the First Methodist Church of Memphis, and Rev. E. S. Lewis, our pastor at West Point, Miss. We extend our best wishes to this worthy couple, who have so long journeyed along the road of life together, and pray that they may yet have many wedding anniversaries before death temporarily breaks their union.

JOURNAL OF THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

The Journal of the Louisiana Conference is being printed by our Publishing Agents in Nashville, Tenn., and the pamphlet will be out before long. Will every member of the Conference whose post office address is not the same as the name of his appointment send to Fitzgerald S. Parker, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn., his correct post office address, giving Rural Route, if any, or street address, if in a city delivery locality. If there are any mistakes in the spelling of names in the previous issues of the Annual, please send corrections. Also, if there are any errors in the data in the Chronological Roll, please inform me of them. It is greatly desired to make the Annual quite accurate in every respect, and the assistance of the brethren will be necessary in order to accomplish this end.

REPORT ON THE SPIRITUAL CONDITION OF THE CHURCH

We are glad to report that there has been a great revival throughout the bounds of the Conference. The presiding elders sounded an optimistic note, when, at the beginning of this Conference session, they reported that more than five thousand souls had been converted during this Conference year. For this decided spiritual advancement we are profoundly thankful. The reports of the pastors indicate that great stress has been laid upon the necessity of church members presenting themselves as living sacrifices, "holy, acceptable unto God," and that many church members who were not heretofore saved have been born of the Spirit.

The reports of the pastors further indicate that there have been about 4500 members added to the Church on profession of faith during the past year. But we should not be unduly complacent. Much remains undone that should have been done. Every indication of Providence calls the Church to a distinctive forward movement in evangelism. As a means of inspiring the Church to the work of personal evangelism, we recommend that the pastors divide their membership into groups of ten; that each member be caused to enter into a covenant to bring at least one soul to Christ during the year, and that the pastors suggest to their members the necessary steps to be taken to accomplish this end.

We further recommend that, since next year is to be celebrated as the centennial of our Conference, we strive to do earnest and faithful work during the entire year; that we, in the beginning of the year, call our people to effectual fervent prayer for a great revival in the Church, and for the salvation of the lost.

Let us persuade ourselves and our membership that "the effectual, fervent prayer of the righteous availeth much;" and let us pray and work for definite results in advancing the kingdom of God.

As watchmen upon the walls, let us warn sinners of the error of their ways, and lift up a standard for the people in all manner of conversation and conduct, to the end that all may see that the realities and benefits in the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ, and that his Spirit is emanating from our lives as we are thrown in contact with the sin-cursed world.

SOUL WINNING.

Have Methodists lost, in any measure, the art of soul-saving? It is an art, beyond doubt, in which our fathers, lay and clerical, excelled. Time was that very many Methodist laymen were as active and successful in leading men to Christ as were the preachers. And time was that nearly all Methodist preachers were past-masters of soul-winning. In the congregations and along the streets and highways, in the prayer meeting and at the fireside, wherever they had a chance publicly or privately to speak to sinners they sought to save—and succeeded. It is probable that there are not now as many laymen, comparatively, who distinctly set themselves to save men, and, possibly, fewer preachers are extraordinarily gifted in awakening and guiding the lost. It seems that the laity has largely left this work to the preachers; and some preachers have turned over much of it to the evangelists. We have no objection to the use of our faithful evangelists—no, no, if anything we should use more freely those who are aflame with love for souls and alive with genuine loyalty to the Church. But no layman is enjoying his best privileges who is not seeking the conversion of men, and no preacher dare leave to others his highest duty as an ambassador for Christ—calling sinners to reconciliation with God.

Would it be hoping for too much to expect each pastor to pray and work to bring into the Church and into a satisfying experience, one soul per month? Is it too much to dream that in addition to this, each church officer and Sunday school teacher should bring to Christ and his Church one soul during the whole year? Surely these are not unreasonable expectations of those who are the leaders of the Church, which Church exists only for the salvation of men. And yet if these only—out of all the membership of the Church (and every member should seek to save)—were to bring in the above mentioned sheaves, even the great gain of 1912 would be more than quadrupled!

We are not urging any new or untried effort. The religious history of the world is full of examples. About ten years ago, Dr. (now Bishop) Bashford, of the Northern Methodist Church, wrote as follows in the Northwestern Advocate:

"Surely you can begin praying for one, two, three, or a dozen personal acquaintances whom you already love and who are not yet members of our Church. After praying for a person sufficiently you will perhaps desire to speak to him in regard to an open confession of Christ. You will be surprised to find how tender and receptive your friends are. Even if they do not accept your invitation, they will always honor you and love you for giving the invitation to them. Some of them will surely accept. You may always count upon the Holy Spirit going before you to help prepare the way and tarrying after you have left, in order that He may impress your words upon the heart of your friend. The most blessed work on earth is to win souls for Christ, and anybody who loves people can do this work."—Southern Christian Advocate.

IN MEMORIAM.

Mrs. Holland C. Moore (nee Jagers), wife of the Rev. W. W. Moore of the Mississippi Conference, was born in Kemper County, Mississippi, April 24, 1862. Her father was of Irish descent, and her mother was from a French Huguenot family who settled in South Carolina. Her maternal grandfather, Rev. Jesse LeGette, was a local preacher, and a great uncle, David LeGette, was an itinerant preacher and devoted much of his life as a missionary to the slaves.

Her father, Mr. Arnett Jagers, was a Confederate soldier and was wounded several times in the siege of Vicksburg, and died in the army at Resaca, Ga., when she was only two years of age.

Her education was acquired in the common schools of the country and at Cooper's Institute at Daleville, Miss. Her quick and strong intellectual apprehension, and her amiable disposition won for her high praise from her teachers and a place in the hearts of all fellow-pupils who survive her going away.

Her conversion under the preaching of the Rev. J. M. Gann, was thorough and all-inclusive of her future life. The maternal administration of her young life was quiet and yet strong, mingled with love and hope, and inspired in her young life correct ideals and loving obedience to all constituted authority.

On January 21, 1886, she was married to the Rev. Waldo W. Moore, of the Alabama Conference. This was a union that blended two compatible personalities into one, and carried into the future the smiles of heaven and the benedictions of our Father. With the tenderness of the tendriled vine, she clung to the home with a loving devotion that made her every thought and touch fragrant and beautiful as the dew-besprinkled flower. And yet when Providence opened before her the duties and sacrifices of a life in the itinerancy, not a murmur arose from her heart, not a shadow clouded the smile of approval she always gave to her husband's efforts to meet and discharge his duties to God and to man.

And yet, like "The bruised reed," hers was a life of suffering. Why should it be so? For an answer go ask John of Patmos. For five years she suffered under the knife and medical treatment with the vain hope of the cure of the cancer that was wasting away her consecrated life on earth. And yet no bodily pain nor mental sorrow at parting with loved ones on earth ever dimmed her vision of the tearless shore, or hushed her triumphant song. Never demonstrative, her peace flowed with the depth and definiteness of purpose of the great river. While others grieved with a great sorrow around her, she would answer it all by requesting her devoted husband to sing to her one of the sweet songs of Zion. And none of these seemed so much in tune with her confiding spirit, or so nearly expressed her own sense of triumphant hope, as "The Comforter is come."

On the 1st day of October, 1912, the Rev. W. B. Jones led the congregation in long and earnest prayer for her, and from that hour to the close of her life a holy calm settled upon her, like that of an evening sun upon a cloudless day. On the 7th of that month she gently passed to the other shore, leaving her aged mother, who has since joined her, her stricken husband, and her motherless son, Waldo W. Moore, Jr., in that blinding sorrow that only those who have experienced it can know. J. M. WEEMS.

CENTENARY'S TRIBUTE TO DR. CARTER.

At the regular chapel exercises of Centenary College on Friday morning, January 3, 1913, President Felix R. Hill made announcement of the recent death of Dr. C. W. Carter, at one time president of Centenary, and for many years one of the leading ministers of the Methodist Church.

Dr. Hill paid a beautiful tribute to the memory of his friend with whom he had been intimately associated in the work of the Church in New Orleans. For the inspiration of the students he pointed out the many noble qualities of mind and heart which made Dr. Carter a power for good throughout his years.

At the conclusion of his remarks, on motion, a committee was appointed, consisting of one representative from the student body and two from the faculty, to take suitable notice of the death of Dr. Carter. The report of the committee follows:

"In the death of Dr. C. W. Carter, Centenary College has lost one of her staunchest friends, Louisiana one of her most influential citizens, and Methodism one of her greatest representatives. We desire to record our grateful appreciation of the ministry among us of this great and good man. We hold in tender memory the notable and inspiring Commencement sermon he preached for us last June.

"We commend his pure character, his sweet spirit, and his vigorous intellectuality as a worthy example for young men everywhere.

"Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be furnished each member of the family of the deceased, and that copies be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate and the Nashville Christian Advocate for publication.

"Signed: H. T. Carley, J. S. Johnston, T. J. Holladay, Committee."

TWO ARITHMETICS.

I know a girl who multiplies
Her sorrows by dividing.
Whatever cause she has for sighs
She always is confiding.

And so she adds to other's woes,
And from their joy subtracts—
A strange arithmetic, I know,
But these, my dear, are facts.

I know a girl who multiplies
Her joys by cancellations.
She draws the line through tears and sighs
Of all denominations.

Dividing joys, she multiplies
Her friends and sunny hours,
Now tell me, which arithmetic
Shall we adopt for ours?

KIND-HEARTED.

The Springfield Republican tells a story of a boy of Boston, aged six. His mother noticed that at bedtime every night he laid his little boots together upon their sides instead of setting them upright. "Please tell me why you always place your boots in that way," she said. "Why," answered the little boy, "it's because they must be tired of walking so much all day. I lay them sideways, so they can rest."

BETTER WHISTLE THAN WHINE.

As I was taking a walk early in September I noticed two little boys on their way to school. The smaller one stumbled and fell, and though he was not very much hurt, he began to whine in a babyish way—not a regular roaring boy cry, as though he were half killed, but a little cross whine. The older boy took his hand in a kind and fatherly way, and said: "Oh, never mind, Jimmy, don't whine; it is a great deal better to whistle." And he began in the merriest way a cheerful boy whistle. Jimmy tried to join in the whistle. "I can't whistle as nice as you, Charlie," said he; "my lips won't pucker up good." "Oh, that is because you have not got the whine out yet," said Charlie; "but you try a minute, and the whistle will drive the whine away." So he did. And the last I saw or heard of the little fellows they were whistling away as earnestly as though that was the chief end of life.—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

SOME BLUE JAY WAYS.

"Tap! tap! tap!" sounded from the front of the house. "Mamma, somebody is knocking at the door," said little Marjory.

Mrs. Green dropped her sewing in haste and went to see who was there. To her surprise, there was no one in sight, but "tap! tap! tap!" sounded again just as she reached the open door. She laughed softly to herself at what she saw, and, stepping back, she motioned to Marjory to come very quietly to see the funny sight.

Near the edge of the porch floor, right in front of the door, were two blue jays. The footsteps had made no noise on the soft rugs, so the handsome birds did not hear them, and they were quite undisturbed by the two people who stood there watching them.

Each jay held in his bill a black and white bairy caterpillar like those that come every summer on the walnut tree by the gate. He would give the poor caterpillar a quick rub on the hard floor one way, then, turning his head, give it another rub the other way. Each time the bird's bill would tap against the floor, making the noise that sounded so much like some one knocking. Presently the birds ate the limp caterpillars and flew away.

"What were they doing, mamma?" asked Marjory, drawing a long breath when she lost sight of the beautiful blue-feathered creatures in one of the maple trees.

"Really, I don't know," answered Mrs. Green. "Perhaps they wanted to kill the caterpillars before they ate them; or perhaps they did not like the taste of hair, and were trying to rub it off. We'll watch the birds every day, and perhaps we'll learn why they do it."

So Marjory and her mamma watched closely, but they did not see the jays eat caterpillars again, though they saw them do many other things just as interesting.

One day Mrs. Green sat by the open window with her sewing, and Marjory sat in her little rocker, pretending to put her best-loved doll to sleep. The room was very still, and a bird began singing a sweet song just outside. It was a soft little warble, and the song went on and on, as if the little bird's heart were brimming over with happiness.

"That sounds like a catbird's song and yet not just like it, either; I wonder what bird is singing so prettily for us," Mrs. Green said in a low whisper. She leaned forward to see, and there on the trumpet vine that grew on a trellis close by the window was perched a blue jay.

Mrs. Green was greatly surprised, for she did not know that the jay could sing. She and Marjory watched him for several moments before the music ceased and the bird flew away.

"I have read that the blue jay can mimic the calls of other birds," said Mrs. Green, "and that they have sometimes been taught to speak a few words quite distinctly. I think this jay was trying to imitate the catbird's song."

One other thing Marjory learned about the blue jays that summer. She saw one fly down on the grass and drop three or four grains of corn out of his mouth. Picking up one of them again, he hopped with it a little to one side, then pushed and poked and pounded until he had buried it in the ground. Then he smoothed the place over, picked up a small dead leaf that lay near, and put it carefully over the spot to hide it. He buried the other grains of corn in the same way.

When the jay had finished his work and flown off, Marjory ran to look for the hidden corn. She peeped under all the dead leaves, but she could not find any spot that looked as if it had been disturbed.

Her mother told the little girl that all jays bury acorns, beechnuts, and other seeds that they like to eat. Sometimes they forget where they have hidden them away, so the seeds grow. In Maine, oak trees often spring up over the lands where pine forests have been cut away. The acorns were planted and forgotten by the blue jays; so, when the pines were cut down, and the sunshine and rain could reach the ground, the acorns grew and made a new forest.—Julia Ellis Edwards, in Little Folks.

A CHRISTMAS CORONATION.

Dear Brother Meek: On December 21, 1912, my precious loved sister, Mrs. Julia Troy, after a lingering illness of sixteen months' duration, slipped away to heaven to keep our Savior's birthday where she will be free from her sorrows and heartaches forever more. How I miss her! my twin sister, from whom I had never before since infancy been separated. I shall go about life's duties and pleasures with ever and anon and always that quiet feeling of something lost. The strains of the songs she loved will have for me always an undertone of sadness. The flowers she loved will bloom in all their luxuriance and beauty, and yet the hand that once tended them so carefully will be plucking asphodels beside the great white throne of God. Ah! it was good to have her within touch of the hand, and to hear her voice in loving counsel and sympathy was pleasure untold; and yet she had suffered so much and so long, that I feel we should be shouting peans of joy over her release, instead of grieving for her. Her little canary bird misses her so as to sing only in the softest and most subdued notes since she went away.

In the last few months of her illness she realized that there was no hope for her recovery and sought comfort in God's Word and precious promises. In childhood we knelt together at the altar, in the old Methodist Church in which you served your pastorate here in Tupelo, and together dedicated our hearts and lives to God. Rev. Gilderoy Porter was our pastor then, and he often spoke of my sister and me as his "spiritual children."

For several weeks before her death she told her loved ones that she was praying for God to take her home. I'm glad, too, that when all earth celebrated the birth of our Savior she stood in his presence in that Celestial City, eternal in the heavens. What a grand thought, that after the fever of living there comes a rest eternal! The prayers of the Church are requested for the two sons and the daughter, just bordering on womanhood.

Sincerely yours,

VICTORIA THOMPSON HOYLE.

THE CHURCH AND THE THEATER.

The attitude of the Church toward the theater has long been under discussion. There have never been wanting church members and even clergymen who insisted that it was a mistake to place all theatrical performances under the ban; that the Church should recognize that there are both good and bad plays, and leave it to the individual Christian to discriminate between them. And ever and anon the view is advanced that there is too much good in the theater for the Church to antagonize the whole institution; that what is needed is to reform the stage and make it an agency for good instead of evil.

Dr. A. C. Dixon, formerly of Chicago, but now occupying the pulpit in London that was made famous by the ministry of the late Dr. Charles H. Spurgeon, in a recent letter to the New York Examiner, engaged in a somewhat extended discussion of this much debated question. It seems that some minister had stated that he occasionally attended the theater, with a view to being able to guide his young people in the selection of performances worth seeing. It appears that this utterance was, in part at least, what inspired Dr. Dixon's communication, and it explains the opening sentences in the following extracts from it, for which we are indebted to The Literary Digest of January 11:

"The minister doubtless means that he would guide them in selecting the best plays and would take them to the best theaters. Well, there may be some good plays, so far as acting a part can ever be good; but, so far as we have been able to learn by rather careful investigation, there are no good theaters. Sir Henry Irving tried to make the Lyceum a good moral theater, and failed. Edwin Booth determined to make his theater in New York such a place morally that parents might take their children to it without fear of contamination, with the result that the enterprise went into bankruptcy and the building was sold for a warehouse. Hannah Moore wrote some good plays, full of Christian sentiment, but they did not pay.

"We have been searching for a theater on earth in which a play that appeals to the baser natures of men and women is never acted, and we have not yet succeeded in finding one. The theater as an institution is bad, as is admitted by its friends, whatever may be the quality of occasional performances. When our ministerial friend leads his young people to the theater occasionally, that they may enjoy together what he considers a good play, he may be assured that he is leading them to the bait which is almost certain to allure them to the bad play also; and even if it should not, he has linked himself and them in association with an avowedly bad institution, and has violated the principle which the Apostle Paul adopted in dealing with the question of eating meat offered to idols. Paul refused to do so, not because it would hurt him, but because it linked him with the great evil institution of idol worship, and would thus lead to his loss of influence for good.

"The purpose of the stage is to teach people how to act a part; the purpose of the Church of Christ is to teach them how to be real. The purpose of the stage is to amuse; the purpose of the Church is to save. The symbol of the Church of Christ is the cross; the symbol of the stage may well be the baby's rattle. The purpose of the stage is to make money, and managers are not slow to do so, even at the expense of good morals; the purpose of the Church of Christ is to make character, and good morals are not for sale at any price. The stage gives what the people want, and, sad to say, the worst plays often draw the biggest crowds; the purpose of the Church of Christ is to give what people need, regardless of its popularity. The stage ministers to 'the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, which is not of the Father;' the purpose of the Church of Christ is to crucify these things. The stage is a caterer; the Church of Christ is a prophet. The stage in its tragedies glorifies revenge; the Church of Christ teaches forgiveness of enemies and the patient endurance of wrong. The tendency of the stage is to make people childish in their feverish desire for diversion; the work of the Church is to make people childlike in their faith and love and simplicity of character. The tendency of the stage is to keep the race in its childhood of self-gratifying amusement; the work of the Church is to lead the race into the manhood of self-sacrificing achievement. The footlights are suggestive of the fact that the lower tendencies of human nature are there brought into prominence; the Church of Christ would magnify the head-light and heart-light that reveal and develop the higher attributes of our being. In a word, the real Church is the incarnation of the spirit of Christ, pure, humble, self-sacrificing, and forgiving; the stage is the incarnation of the spirit of the world, lustful, proud, selfish, and revengeful. And what God hath put asunder, let no man join together."

A FACETIOUS EDITOR.

The Baltimore Southern Methodist makes much ado over a recent paragraph in the New Orleans Christian Advocate hearing on the question of the election of a Chaplain for the United States Senate, because incidentally it was stated that we did not know to what Church Dr. John Polsal Hyde, who is a candidate for that position, belonged. In order, if possible, to whittle down a bit the wonderment of our contemporary, we will state that we knew of Dr. Hyde and were under the impression that he is a Southern Methodist minister, but exercising our usual care in such matters, we turned to the Directory of Southern Methodist preachers in the General Minutes of 1911 (the latest edition), and, to our surprise, found that no such name appeared in the list for the Baltimore Conference or anywhere else. This raised a doubt in our mind which we did not hesitate to express. As an editor, we have not yet acquired the habit of affecting to know everything, and we hope that we never shall. It may appear to our learned confrere that we ought to have been informed as to why Dr. Hyde's name was not in the official directory of Southern Methodist preachers, but we beg to remind him that the world is large, and that, though a part of the territory which he serves is in Virginia, the eyes of all men are not fastened continually upon it. A few things are going on elsewhere.

PRESIDING ELDERS' ANNOUNCEMENTS.

When the Publishing Committee of the Advocate met last October, the question as to what is the best method to pursue in making quarterly conference announcements was gone carefully over, and it was decided to print them in full once, and after that to carry the dates of each presiding elder for one month in advance. This is now our rule, and we are satisfied that it is a wise one. Space in the Advocate is valuable, and if the question were viewed merely from a financial standpoint, the carrying of these announcements in full all the time would result in the loss of a considerable sum of money. Nor do we think that there is any real advantage in having the full list in every issue of the paper. The great majority of the stewards do not take the Conference organ, and an energetic presiding elder would hardly undertake to hold a quarterly conference without giving the officials a written notice of the meeting. Moreover, the tremendous pressure upon us for space from our various Conference and General Boards and other working agencies makes it necessary for us to keep open to them every column that we possibly can. At any rate, it seems to us that the appearance

In every issue of the Advocate of each presiding elder's slate for four weeks ahead ought to meet every requirement and satisfy all the parties interested.

BOIL IT DOWN,

We are pleased to have the brethren write for the Advocate, but we do not desire long contributions. The scribe who would secure readers in this busy age must be brief and to the point. The best writing is that which states what is to be said clearly in the fewest possible words. An excess of verbiage frequently spoils an otherwise very creditable piece of composition. It takes more genius to condense than it does to spread out. If you cannot say all that you wish to say in a comparatively small amount of space, you had better let part of it go until another time. In reporting your work, do not go into commonplace details. What can be written on a couple of pages of note paper should be the maximum amount of matter ordinarily offered as tidings from the field. There are persons who are as tedious with the pen as others are with the tongue. And they are soon sized up and tahoed by the reading public.

SUNDAY SCHOOL INSTITUTES POSTPONED.

A telegram just received from Rev. P. O. Lowrey states that Dr. H. M. Hamill has informed him that he cannot come to Louisiana before March, and that in consequence the Sunday School Institutes announced on Page 11 of this week's Advocate are called in. This does not mean that Dr. and Mrs. Hamill will not make their itinerary at all, but only that it is postponed. The time of their coming and a full schedule of their appointments in Louisiana will be published later.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. Wm. Schuhle, presiding elder of the Monroe District, requests us to announce that his address is Monroe, La.

Rev. W. H. Lewis has been delightfully received at Brookhaven, Miss., and has entered hopefully upon his pastorate in that cultured and progressive city.

All communications addressed to Rev. H. W. May, the presiding elder of the Alexandria (La.) District, should be directed to No. 216 Thirteenth Street, Alexandria, La.

The District Stewards' Meeting of the Lafayette (La.) District has been announced by the presiding elder, Rev. R. H. Wynn, to be held in Crowley on Jan. 23, at 10 a.m.

Rev. J. E. Craig, who was assigned to the Shongaloo Circuit at the recent session of the Louisiana Conference, has been changed and given charge of the Ashland Circuit. His address is Chestnut, La.

In renewing his subscription to the Advocate a few days since, Mr. James Simrall, of Pochontas, Miss., took time to express his appreciation of the Conference organ. We are grateful to him for his kind words.

We are in receipt of a postal card from Rev. F. N. Sweeney, of Wilson, La., announcing the death of one of his most faithful members, Brother W. A. Thompson, which occurred on January 5. We extend sympathy to the bereaved.

The wives of the New Orleans preachers will hold a meeting the latter part of this week at the home of Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Moore for the purpose of organizing an Association of Preachers' Wives.

Rev. J. W. Faulk, who did excellent work for the Church on the East Feliciana Circuit last year, has reached his new appointment at Sibley, La., and reports that he has been pounded in a most generous manner.

Rev. S. L. Pope, of Itta Bena, Miss., writes that the work is progressing favorably in his charge. This is not surprising, since Brother and Sister Pope are efficient leaders in the Master's service and have quite a number of capable assistants in their present field.

Rev. J. M. Lewis, who has been returned to serve the last year of his quadrennium on the Vancleave (Miss.) charge, announces that he was cordially received upon his return from Conference, and made to feel that the Vancleave people really want him as their pastor.

Rev. J. H. Hoffpauir, who is beginning his fourth year as pastor of the Vermillion Circuit, has moved from Henry, La., to Abbeville, La., at which place he will receive his mail. The Vermilion Circuit is Brother Hoffpauir's first charge, and he has done a fine work in a very difficult field.

Rev. Wm. Schuhle, the presiding elder, requests us to announce that the Monroe (La.) District Stewards' meeting has been postponed to Feb. 8.

Rev. W. F. McCrory, who served the Rocky Springs Circuit in the Mississippi Conference last year, has been appointed to supply the Bell City charge in the Lafayette (La.) District. He has reached his new field, and reports that the people are very spiritual, and that he has three Sunday schools and three Epworth Leagues.

Miss Ada Parker, who is a graduate of the Scarritt Bible and Training School, and who spent five years as a missionary in Brazil, has accepted work with the McDonoghville Church of this city as visiting missionary. She has already begun her work, which promises to produce good results in that field.

Rev. C. C. Miller, in a business note to the Advocate office, adds the following postscript: "I have arrived at Monroe and have met with a most cordial reception. I am very much pleased with the field and am promised the co-operation of all the good people of Monroe. We are anticipating a splendid year, and shall strive earnestly for the advancement of the kingdom of our Lord."

Rev. J. T. Lewis, our pastor at Clarksdale, Miss., contributed to The Daily Register of that city, just before the opening of the new year, a bright and helpful article, entitled "New Year Resolutions." Brother Lewis knows how to use his pen as well as his tongue. He is beginning his fourth year at Clarksdale, where he has done an excellent work.

Rev. T. J. Norsworthy, who located at the recent session of the Louisiana Conference in order to engage in evangelistic work, paid our office an appreciated call last Monday. He reports that Rev. C. C. Miller has made a good beginning at Monroe. Brother Norsworthy's family is now in Yazoo City, Miss., where they will remain until the meningitis situation in Monroe has improved.

Rev. Geo. A. Baker has been moved from Mantachie, Miss., and has been placed in charge of the Mooresville Circuit, North Mississippi Conference. He has already reached his new appointment and been the recipient of a liberal pounding. He reports that he has been royally received, and that the prospects are favorable for a good year's work.

Rev. T. J. O'Neil, President of the Mississippi Conference Training School at Montrose, Miss., is pleased with the status of things and the outlook at that institution. He reports the entrance of four new pupils since the Christmas holidays. This school is meeting a felt need in South Mississippi, and deserves the hearty support of all our pastors and people.

We have before us a copy of Dr. J. W. Lee's "New Year's Letter" to the members of his church and congregation (St. John's) in St. Louis. Like everything else that comes from Dr. Lee's pen, it is a noteworthy production. Dr. Lee is one of the great men of Southern Methodism. Though a profound student, he is a diligent and successful pastor, which often is not the case with clerical men of letters.

From Shubuta, Miss., Dr. B. F. Jones writes as follows: "The lines are fallen unto me in pleasant places for a fourth time in Shubuta; 'yea, I have a goodly heritage.' We dare say that the people are equally as well pleased with the continuance of Dr. Jones as their pastor. It speaks well for both the preacher and the people when their pastoral relations are maintained for a full quadrennium."

Rev. J. D. Simpson, of Pickens, Miss., writes: "Dr. W. M. Clanton, a prominent citizen of this town, died of pneumonia on January 10. He had been a member of the M. E. Church, South, for many years, and had practiced medicine for fifty-seven years, making a great reputation in his profession. He was 81 years of age. He leaves two children, one sister, and many friends to mourn his departure."

The McDonoghville Church of this city has undertaken to open and conduct a mission on the Lower Coast. There is already an organization at Daisy, La., and other points will be opened as rapidly as possible. Mr. W. H. Black, a member of the McDonoghville Board of Stewards, who is recognized as a man of considerable platform ability, will conduct religious services in the Daisy church once a month.

Mr. George T. Walton, a layman residing at Big Cane, La., in a letter containing his renewal to the Advocate, says that the place where he lives is without a preaching service, and that because there are so few members of the Church and of the fact that they are divided among several denominations, the field is being neglected by all, and that there is danger of the young people going astray. He requests the prayers of all Christians for the people of Big Cane.

Rev. S. L. Riggs, who was recently assigned to the Oakdale (La.) charge, after having served the St. Francisville charge for four years, has reached his work, and reports that he has a great opportunity. He will begin at once the completion of a parsonage, and then erect a church building at Oakdale. The board of stewards has fixed the salary for the pastor at $1000, and has provided a parsonage for his use until the new one is completed.

Rev. K. W. Dodson is now happily domiciled in the parsonage at Lake Charles, La. He reports that he has there the most enthusiastic Board of Stewards he has ever had. We are not surprised, for Lake Charles is the home of Brother A. M. Mayo, the President of the Louisiana Conference Auditing Board, and a member of the Conference Sunday School Board, who has the happy faculty of inspiring any body with which he is connected with enthusiasm.

Note the re-arrangement of the Quarterly Conference dates in the Port Gibson District, a full list of which we publish on another page. Rev. T. W. Adams, the new presiding elder, already has the harness on, and is meeting regularly his engagements. Brother Adams has before shown his metal in this responsible office, and if the charges under his jurisdiction fail to prosper this year, it will not be for the lack of vigorous and capable leadership.

Rev. R. P. Neblett is having large congregations at Houston, Miss., where the work of the new year has started well. Every department of the church is active, and the kindness of the people to the pastor and his family is unceasing. The first quarterly conference was held on Monday night, Dec. 23, the presiding elder, Rev. J. W. Bell, being on hand and rendering most acceptable service. The various reports evidenced a healthful condition of things, and the stewards showed their appreciation of their pastor by raising his salary.

In our editorial last week, entitled "Not Left in the Dark," the brief poem quoted should have been credited to Mrs. Corinne Roosevelt Robinson, instead of to "Miss" Robinson. It is strange how one's fingers can strike the wrong keys on the keyboard of a typewriter or on a linotype machine, and how errors can be overlooked when once they are in type. The explanation in the latter case, of course, is found in one's habit of reading a whole line at a glance, instead of taking it word by word.

Dr. I. W. Cooper left New Orleans for Havana, on board the steamship Chalmette, last Saturday morning. He expects to be joined en route by Bishop Candler, who has gone to Cuba on his annual official visit to our churches and missions there. The Editor had been invited to become one of this party, but found it impracticable to go. We wish our esteemed friends a pleasant visit to the Pearl of the Antilles, and a safe return home when their mission shall have been fulfilled.

Rev. Paul D. Hardin, the new presiding elder of the Capital District of Mississippi, promises to be a live wire. One of his latest moves was to have some cards printed and sent to each pastor, with a view to securing from him a monthly report of his work. It is manifestly the purpose of this enterprising sub-bishop to keep in touch with every part of the territory under his supervision, in order that he may re-enforce the preachers where his assistance is needed. He has a large opportunity in his present field, and we predict that he will measure fully up to it.

We were delighted to receive a few days ago a letter from Bishop Hoss, written with his own hand from Muskogee, Oklahoma, where he is resting for a time in the home of his son, Dr. Sessler Hoss. Referring to his physical condition, he says: "My health is growing a little better, so I think, all the time; but I am not yet out of the woods." Let earnest prayer continue to be made for the speedy and complete recovery of this faithful servant of the Church, than whom there is no greater figure in American Methodism. We are sustaining a considerable loss every day that he is out of the active service.

We were pleased to have as caller at our office last Thursday afternoon Rev. Felix R. Hill, Jr., the new pastor of the Rayne Memorial Methodist Church of this city. Dr. Hill has already taken up the work of his new appointment, and has made a most excellent impression. He was stationed at the Noel Memorial Church of Shreveport for the past two years, and in a letter to the editor a few days ago, a gentleman in that city who is a competent judge of good preaching stated that he has pulpit gifts of a high order. It was under Dr. Hill's leadership that the institutional annex to the Crawford Street Church of Vicksburg, Miss., was erected.

Rev. M. B. Sharbrough, after four strenuous years on the Hattiesburg District, finds it delightful to be again in the pastorate. In a note to our office, he makes the following reference to his present charge: "Columbia is an excellent little city. It is charming in its social life, and our church here is great. A most kindly reception has been given us." We are grateful to Brother Sharbrough for an invitation to spend a Sabbath with him, and we may wander over his way when the bright spring days put in their appearance. We have long desired to lay eyes on Marion County's attractive capital, of which we have heard not a little.

Mr. Fred Clark and Miss Rebecca Graham, both of Cleveland, Miss., were married at that place on Sunday night, January 5, Rev. L. A. McKeown officiating. Mr. Clark is a son of the late Hon. Fred Clark, who was widely known in Mississippi as a lawyer, and a grandson of the Hon. Charles Clark, the war governor of the Magnolia State. He is a young man of fine business capacity, who for several years, before he was of age, largely conducted the business of the Chancery Clerk's office of Bolivar County. The bride is a charming young lady, who has many friends and admirers in the Mississippi Delta. We extend to the happy couple our congratulations and best wishes.

Rev. J. W. Dorman, the capable presiding elder of the Sardis District (North Mississippi), writes as follows: "I am beginning the rounds again, hoping for a year of progress and good results. All the pastors are at their posts and are doing well. Brother Randolph is at last at work again. He will soon go into one of the best churches at Como that can be found anywhere in this section. The erection of this fine structure is a great achievement, and all acknowledge that Brother Randolph's management has had much to do with making it possible." The news that Brother Randolph is again able to put on the harness will delight his friends throughout North Mississippi and elsewhere. We trust that he will soon be quite himself in every respect, if he is not already so.

On January 6 those members of the Louisiana Conference residing in Shreveport, La. (twelve in all), formed themselves into an organization known as The Methodist Ministers' Association, and elected the presiding elder of the Shreveport District, Rev. Paul M. Brown, president. The Association will hold monthly meetings. It has made arrangements to purchase a tent that will seat 500 people, and has engaged Rev. A. W. Turner, one of the Louisiana Conference evangelists, to conduct an evangelistic campaign. All of the Shreveport pastors, together with the choirs of the several churches and the best of their trained workers, will assist Brother Brown, who will be personally in charge of this forward movement.

To Rev. O. L. Tucker, our promising young pastor at Jonesboro, La., belongs the honor of sending us the first club of subscribers since the opening of the new year. We extend him our hearty thanks, and pray that his labors for the Master may be crowned with a large measure of success. We trust that this first club may prove to be the harbinger of many others that will come from the brethren within the next few days. Why not? If our calendar is not wrong, the holidays are well behind us, though our meager receipts do not indicate it. Let every pastor and friend lend us a helping hand. We need it. We never have "poundings" in the Advocate office, except those administered by scribes whom we have in some way displeased. While feasting on your sausages and spareribs and backbones, dear fellow-worker, do not forget your lean and hungry brother on the tripod. The way to assist him is to boost the Advocate and send in subscriptions.

Dr. J. W. Beeson, President of the Meridian Female College, reports an excellent revival held for that institution and the Male College located in the same city, of which Dr. M. A. Beeson, his brother, is the official head. It was under the direction of Rev. C. M. Dunaway, of Atlanta, Ga., whose preaching is said to have been most spiritual and searching, and who as a revivalist knows how to lay hold of the hearts of the unsaved and bring them to Christ. Valuable assistance in the meeting was also rendered by Rev. John Paul and Rev. A. S. Stewart, the two college pastors, as well as by many of the consecrated teachers and students. There were a number of conversions and many were lifted to higher heights in the Christian life. The Drs. Beeson are setting a good example in seeing that a vigorous revival campaign is annually conducted at the institutions under their control. Before leaving Meridian, Brother Dunaway held two other successful meetings in that city.

ISAAC BLUME was born in South Carolina September 3, 1847, and died at Minden, January 4, 1913. From 1849 Bienville parish, La., was his home, until he came to Minden in 1907. In 1894 he united with the Baptist Church and was a member at the time of his death. He leaves his wife and eleven grown children—six sons and five daughters—to mourn his loss. These have the sympathy of a great host of friends in their great bereavement. The local Masonic lodge buried him with the honors of the order, on Sunday afternoon, January 5, 1913.

C. A. WESTBROOK.

JOHN ALVIN SAUCIER was born May 8, 1909, and died November 24, 1912, aged 3 years, 6 months and 16 days. Little Alvin was the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Saucier and was the pride of the family. Though his stay on earth was of short duration, he endeared himself to all. But he did not come on earth to stay. He was only as an angel pointing to heaven's glory. Dear loved ones, little Alvin will never return to earth to live; but, as David said, "He will not return to us, but we can go to him." Grieve not, for little Alvin is with the angels in heaven. He is beckoning you to come. Rejoice, ye hosts of earth, for God is love! Look to God, for we can join loved ones where there is no death, sickness or sorrow.

L. FAYARD, P.C.

Miss LUCINA CHAPMAN was born in Pointe Coupee Parish, La., February 7, 1890, and died at the home of her mother, Mrs. Susan Chapman, in Melville, St. Landry Parish, La., Dec. 21, 1912. The deceased lived the greater portion of her life in St. Landry Parish. She professed religion and joined the Church in Melville under the pastorate of Rev. S. H. Whatley. During the last years of her life she suffered much, but she bore her afflictions patiently, realizing that the end was not many years off. Notwithstanding her afflictions, she was always cheerful and happy, except when actually in the grip of severe pain. During the years of the acquaintance of this pastor with her, the Church and its interests were matters of vital concern to her, and we feel safe in saying that another Christian woman has gone. Her remains were laid to rest in the Melville cemetery after a religious service, conducted by this writer.

P. A. SWAN, Pastor.

Mrs. MARY A. GREER, nee McClen-don, was born Dec. 24, 1842, and died, after eight days of painful illness, at Antioch, La., Dec. 7, 1912, aged 69 years. In 1878 she was married to Mr. R. W. Green, who preceded her to his eternal rest twelve years. To them were born three children—two daughters and one son. Mother was born of Christian parents and as a product of a Christian home she developed into a noble Christian woman; she united with the Methodist Church at Lisbon, La., at an early age. For sixty years she lived a consecrated Christian life. The funeral service was conducted by her pastor, Brother J. B. Williams, in the Lisbon church, after which she was laid to rest in the Lisbon cemetery. She had been a reader of the New Orleans Christian Advocate for a number of years. All that medical skill and loving hands could do was done to heal and restore her, but God in his wisdom lifted her out of the pain and suffering of bodily affliction and took her to her beautiful home in heaven. She is now safe in the "home of the soul." Let us meet her there.

 HER DAUGHTER.

PREACHERS' AND STEWARDS' MEETING.

At a joint meeting of the District Stewards and Preachers of the Brookhaven District, Jan. 8, the plans and aims as set forth by the Presiding Elder were agreed to by the adoption of the following paper:

Having the best interests of the Church we love at heart, and believing that the plans and aims of our presiding elder stand for the intellectual, material, and spiritual growth of the Church within the bounds of the Brookhaven District, we hereby commit ourselves to a determined effort to strive for the realization of all these aims, as follows:

I. That every pastor be diligent in looking after the interest of the Church—by administering the Sacrament and holding church conferences—in stations once a month, and on circuits once a quarter; by a careful revision of Church Registers where needed; by an increased circulation of the Conference organ; by stimulating an interest in the reading of our church literature; and by becoming better acquainted with the Discipline.

II. That every pastor get in close touch with the homes of his people, striving to secure the conversion of their inmates, the attendance of our people upon all the services of the Church, and an aroused conscience upon the matter of church loyalty and family worship.

III. That every pastor, with the aid of his official members, begin the first of the year to meet the assessments on his charge ordered by the Annual Conference, with a view of having these assessments paid by the middle of the summer.

IV. That the Presiding Elder appoint an Evangelistic Committee, the duty of which shall be to direct the work of evangelism in the district, thus affording a good opportunity for the district to take a large part in securing the conversion of ten thousand souls this year, which is the centenary year of the Mississippi Conference.

The following Committee was appointed: W. H. Lewis, J. A. Moore, L. L. Roberts, J. V. Bennett, J. A. Wells, W. H. LEWIS.

REPORT OF ADVOCATE PIANO CLUB.

Some idea of the magnificent success which has attended the Club during the past year may be had from its annual report which shows that it would require a railroad train of over thirty-five large freight cars to carry the pianos and player pianos which were distributed to Club members. Hundreds of readers have expressed their desire and determination to join the Club during 1913, and it is expected that this year will far surpass 1912 in the number of pianos and players that will be required.

The office was almost flooded with letters from Club members just before Christmas and the President and his assistants had to work day and night in order to give prompt service to all members.

The Club's catalogue with full particulars can be had by addressing the Managers, Ludden & Bates, Advocate Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga.

Tidings From the Field

Washington Street, Vicksburg.

The people of this charge gave us a cordial and hearty welcome on our return for the fourth year, and our friends in the city also gave us a warm reception. It makes our hearts glad to feel that we are able still to serve the Master's cause in this field, and we hope to be able to accomplish more this year than in all the three preceding years. If our plans materialize, this will be the case. The church and the pastor are planning to do the best in the history of this charge.—W. H. Saunders.

Jackson District, Mississippi Conf.

Dear Doctor Meek: You will be pleased to know that the work in the Jackson District starts off well. The pastors are all at their posts and at work. The District Stewards' meeting yesterday (the 8th) was a very pleasant and harmonious occasion. The presiding elder's salary was made the same as last year, and a satisfactory apportionment was made of the assessments ordered by the Annual Conference. The brethren present spoke enthusiastically of the encouraging outlook for the new year.—P. D. Hardin.

Tyro, Miss.

The good people of Tyro have not quit their old-time ways. On our return to take up our second year's work during the Christmas holidays, the inmates of the parsonage were not forgotten. Many articles for the pantry, besides individual presents and fireworks were given to us. We have a sufficient supply of good things to eat to load the table for many days, and the boys of the manse, from the oldest to the youngest, a lad just ten months old, have already enjoyed the fireworks. Indeed, these good people have given us a most cordial reception, and we feel encouraged to press the battle with greater zeal than ever before.—Mrs. T. E. Gregory.

McCool, Miss.

I reached my new work on Saturday morning after Conference adjourned, and was met at the train by Dr. J. J. Howell, a son of Brother F. A. Howell, of Durant, who carried us to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher Taylor, where we were royally entertained while the ladies set the parsonage in order. We moved in late in the evening and found the larder well filled. When I made inquiry to find to whom we were indebted for the filling of the larder, I found that Methodists, Baptists and Presbyterians had all had a hand in it. We have been kindly received everywhere I have gone, and I am looking forward to a successful year.—C. Wesley Bailey, P. C.

Richton, Miss.

We arrived in Richton on Thursday after Christmas. That princely layman, Mr. C. H. Stevens, met us at the depot and conducted us to his attractive home where we partook of a fine dinner. Sister Stevens then accompanied us to the parsonage, where we found an abundance of good things, put there for us by the ladies of the Woman's Home Mission Society. We have a neat parsonage that is very well furnished. These people have given us a splendid reception. Our congregations are large and appreciative. Everybody seems to be optimistic. We are looking for a great year in Richton. There is plenty to do, and we are willing to do it.—M. L. White, P. C.

THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL INSTITUTES.

The Louisiana Conference Sunday School Institutes will be conducted at the following places on the dates indicated:

Dr. H. M. Hamill, of Nashville, Tenn., Institute Conductor and Teacher Training Superintendent of the M. E. Church, South, Mrs. H. M. Hamill, Elementary specialist, Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick, Field Secretary of the North Mississippi Conference and Adult Bible Class specialist, our local Sunday school workers, and our Field Secretary, will conduct these Institutes.

An important feature of the program will be the perfecting, or at least the completing, of our District Sunday School Conferences in the several districts, and the planning of local Institutes in various parts of each district. The most vital question now is to get a large attendance of our pastors, superintendents and teachers, and all prospective workers, that they may sit under these specialists and gather information and inspiration to give out to the local schools, and to enable them to be of service in local institutes. The State requires its teachers to attend institutes regularly and to read prescribed books. Ours is as important an educational responsibility, and for the sake of magnifying our sacred work as Sunday school teachers we should gladly avail ourselves of these institutes that are brought within easy reach of all. We are limited in our equipment for sending out large quantities of advertising matter, and must trust our pastors, presiding elders and the readers of The Christian Advocate to see personally and plan with our Sunday school workers to attend, and to announce the institutes in their local papers. This is a brotherly request that this be done, in the interest of one of our most important works. We shall expect the hearty co-operation of all our leaders.

Believing that a great Sunday school year is upon us, I am fraternally,
P. O. LOWREY.

BIBLE BEES.

The "Bees of the Bible" are very numerous. They never sting; they yield a great deal of honey, and it is their nature to be found together in swarms. Here is a specimen of them:

"Be kindly affectioned one to another."
"Be sober and watch unto prayer."
"Be content with such things as you have."
"Be strong in the Lord."
"Be courteous."
"Be not wise in your own conceit."
"Be not unmindful to entertain strangers."
"Be not children in understanding."
"Be followers of God as dear children."—Southern Churchman.

The Sunday School.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

Here are six absolute necessities for class growth and ideals: increase in numbers; use of the Bible in class; give to missions; training of workers to become teachers; to be of service to the community; and to carry on personal evangelism.

During the holidays beautiful and thoughtful service was done for Home Department shut-ins by quite a number of Women's classes, and the radiant appreciation was so visible that it is passing strange that more people did not get the glory left over from the star in the East.

The Young Men's Bible Class of Stewart has for president Dr. Harris. Dr. McKnight is the vice president and Miss Moore is the teacher. Great things are expected of them. All over the Conference such classes are springing up. Two years ago there were not a dozen such classes in the Conference, and now quite two hundred are doing good work for the Master.

On Monday before Christmas Rev. S. A. Brown and his fine Sunday school at Boonville filled 60 stockings with things they would have really liked themselves for the children at the Orphanage. These were hung all about the altar and brought the real Christmas spirit very close to each participant. Then, these same Sunday school people filled a stocking each for Mr. and Mrs. Williams and gave them the fine pleasure of receiving gifts from Santa Claus along with their 200 children.

A New Year resolve that every teacher should make is that he will take a Teacher Training course and learn how to teach, who to attempt to teach, and strive to realize the great why of teaching. Pastors and superintendents alike agree that the very greatest reason our Sunday schools are not the successes they should be is on account of the lack of on-time, trained, willing-to-work, and consecrated teachers. "You cannot teach what you do not know. You cannot lead where you do not go."

"Will you be in town Sunday morning? If so, you are cordially invited to attend the Junior Baraca Class meeting at the First Methodist Church at 9:30 a. m. You will be a stranger there but once. Give us a trial. Mot to: You can if you will. Hobby: Meet Me at Sunday School Next Sunday." This attractive card is handed to every young man who reaches Water Valley, and then he is given a rousing good welcome at the First Methodist Sunday school. This class started with about a half dozen members and last Sunday had 32 present. Organization, team-work, mottoes, and babies count.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

By Rev. R. A. Maddox.

Do not fail to write for the Field Secretary if you need help. Don't wait for him to ask you to let him come to your charge. He likes to have an invitation.

Remember that the Sunday school superintendent and pastor who are the most successful are not the ones who do the most work, but the ones who get others to do the most.

Keep in mind the slogan of the Mississippi Conference: "Ten Thousand Souls for Christ." How many of the ten thousand will you lead to Christ? Try for at least one.

Let every Sunday school have the following: An organized Wesley Bible Class, a Home Department, Cradle Roll, and the Intermediate and Senior classes organized. Stick to our Methodist names for the classes. Why have a name and not use it?

The Louise Sunday school, of which

Mr. A. B. Kelly is superintendent, gave a beautiful Christmas tree. The school very properly gave to every child in and out of the Sunday school a present. Let those on the outside know that you think of them at least once a year.

Summary of my report for the three months' work before Conference: I traveled 1637 miles, organized 25 Teacher Training Classes, with 217 members; organized 12 Home Departments, 8 Cradle Rolls, and 14 Adult Bible Classes; put the Graded Lessons in 7 schools, visited 36 Sunday schools, made 49 talks or addresses, and organized 3 new Sunday schools.

There are ten points in our Standard of Excellence or Model Sunday School, as follows: Cradle Roll, Home Department, Wesley Adult Bible Class, Teacher Training Class, Graded Instruction, Decision Day, Children's Day, Good Records (such as the O. K. Record System), Missionary Instruction, and a Session Every Sunday. How does your Sunday school measure up to these points? If it does not come up to this Standard and you cannot work it out, you need the Field Secretary. Write to him that you want his help.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

"The Woman's Bible Class" of the Felicity Street church of New Orleans has the record of having furnished eight teachers to the Sunday school since its organization, and it still grows in numbers. This is according to the divine law. "Give and it shall be given unto you." Miss Alice Wynn is the consecrated teacher, and it is no little compliment to the work of her class that the demand upon them for teachers is so great. We do not need our adults in the class any longer than they are qualified and needed for service, and however much the teacher may dislike to part with them, no complaint should be made when they are thus taken away. This plan of building up the class in spite of the drain upon it for teachers is ideal. Thus does the lumber mill gather its raw material and continue to give out its finished product to bless the world. This class also has a record of good works in the way of ministering to the bodies of people. On Thanksgiving Day it sent eleven baskets of edibles to the eleven Methodist old ladies of Saint Anna's Home. Here the Master's example both of teaching and serving is carried out by a growing class of Sunday school workers. Miss Corinne Wilson is the Secretary.

The Apple Street Mission, in connection with the Carrollton Avenue Church of New Orleans, has grown since its organization seven years ago to seventy pupils. There is in the school, too, a Missionary Society and a sewing circle. Brother L. Herman is at present Superintendent, and Miss Emma Clauset is one of the leading teachers. The Carrollton Avenue Church is also the mother of the Epworth mission, which has grown into a church and is taking the lead in the new Ursulines Avenue Mission that is now being conducted by the New Orleans City Epworth League Union. If we mistake not this is more in a missionary line than any other Methodist church in the city has done in the same length of time. This is carrying out the principle of "every church working itself out into a mission, and every mission working itself up into a church." If this standard were lived up to by New Orleans Methodism it would soon double its membership and influence.

One of our Presiding Elders, who operates in the lumber manufacturing section of our State where there have been labor troubles, testifies that as a rule where the proprietors and managers of these plants have been church-goers and supporters, no serious labor disturbances have occurred. Thus is the efficacy of the Golden Rule again demonstrated as the best law for settling the disputes of men, Jesus himself being a bringer of peace and good will. Can the imagination of man conceive of what would be the effect of having our capitalists and their employees studying in the same Sunday school class, hearing the same gospel of love preached, and engaged in the same work of ministering to the needy? And in this day of rush and competition, were it not for these principles that are adhered to directly by so many, and which indirectly affect so many more, what would the social consequences be? Verily, the reflected light that is in the disciples of the Light of the World is "giving light to all that are in the house," and though unobserved, the "little leaven is leavening the whole lump."

Quickly Disperses Stomach Distress

Whatever the Trouble, it Disappears in Five Minutes After Taking a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet.

All of the unpleasant sensations attendant upon eating too heartily are almost instantly relieved by a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet.

Heaviness of the Stomach from Undigested Food Quickly Relieved by a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet.

When you take food into a stomach that is tired and over-taxed, the gastric juices do not form fast enough to digest it properly. So the food becomes sour and at once begins to throw off gases. Your stomach becomes inflated just as surely as if you attached a toy balloon to a gas jet. Then the gases and foul odors issue forth and pollute your breath. Your tongue quickly becomes coated and you can taste the foulness that is within you.

Now all this condition is changed almost instantly by a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet. This little digester gets busy at once—supplies all the digestive elements that were lacking—digests the food in a jiffy and sweetens and refreshes the mucous lining of the stomach and bowels and restores peace and content.

One grain of a single ingredient in Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest 3,000 grains of food. This saves your stomach and gives it the rest it needs. All muscles require occasional rest if they are ever over-taxed. The stomach is no exception to this rule.

Try a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and you will wonder how you ever got along without them. They are sold at 50 cents by all druggists everywhere.

Do you observe why the wise men saw the King when all the others that night at Bethlehem were blind to Him? The simple reason is that they were seeking Him, and just because they were seeking Him, they saw Him.—G. H. Morrison.

THOSE BAD SPELLS.

Lebanon Jct., Ky.—Mrs. Minnie Lamb, of this place, says: "I believe I would have been dead by now, had it not been for Cardui. I haven't had one of those bad spells since I commenced to use this medicine." Cardui is a specific medicine for the ills from which women suffer. Made from harmless, vegetable ingredients, Cardui is a safe, reliable remedy, and has been successfully used by weak and ailing women for more than fifty years. Thousands of women have been helped back to health and happiness by its use. Why not profit by their experience? A trial will convince you that Cardui is just what you need.

A LETTER FROM OUR LOUISIANA GIRL.

Kansas City, Mo.,
Jan. 1, 1913.

Dear Mrs. Harrell: On this bright New Year's morning, my thoughts turn homeward to fair Louisiana, and to my friends of the Conference Missionary Society, whose representative I am in our beloved Scarritt. My prayers ascend to the Father's throne for them all, and I wish them a very happy New Year, and an entire year of success and great joy to all.

We have the New Orleans Christian Advocate, among other papers, on the library table, and I enjoy, especially, the missionary page. It is a pleasure to keep in touch with home by this means when so far away.

This has been a very happy Christmas at Scarritt, and as Louisiana women have part ownership in the training school, I am sure they would like to hear something of our way of celebrating this happy season.

We were told before Christmas that we would have the best day of our lives on this anniversary of our Lord's birth, a day which we would remember ever afterward when working in the dark slums of the city, or away on the foreign field. This prediction was fulfilled, for, commencing at five o'clock in the morning and ending late at night on Christmas day, the house echoed with sounds of joy and mirth.

We were awakened at five o'clock by sweet carols sung by a chorus of seniors passing up and down the long halls. Never has the hymn, "Long Years Ago, o'er Bethlehem's hills," sounded as heartful to me as when caroled in the early Christmas dawn by our elder sisters. This was a fitting preparation for the day, and we praised God and reconsecrated our lives to him because of the birth of his son. The rising bell rang shortly afterward and we were down stairs at 6 o'clock in response to an invitation to a home-coming of all the nieces of our five maiden aunts, Patricia, Penelope, Agatha, Eunice, and Josephine. When we reached the reception hall, there were our dear aunts (seniors suddenly grown older), with powdered hair and wearing handsome satin and lace gowns. They very graciously welcomed us back to the "old Southern manor where so many famous belles had been entertained in years gone by."

We were then ushered into the drawing rooms where a gaily decked Christmas tree reminded us of happy, care-free childhood. At its base were piles of tissue-paper packages and boxes of happy surprises to gladden our hearts. For a week before Christmas all packages received by mail or express were carefully stowed away by one of our teachers, and these were brought out on Christmas morn and distributed to the nieces of our fond "aunts." Many were the exclamations of joy and delight as remembrances from friends and loved ones at home were opened, adding to the flood-tide of Christmas spirit of our big family. Then the gifts were carried upstairs to be examined and admired more at leisure.

At 8 o'clock breakfast was served in the dining room, which had been transformed into a veritable fairyland, the result of thoughtful planning and skillful work by a committee of students. The tables were arranged in the shape of a large Greek cross, with a small Christmas tree in the center of the cross, and on each arm of the cross was a small house, snow-covered and set in a bank of glistening snow, while Santa with a full pack rode on the roof. Gay polusetias, wreaths, and sprays of holly completed the decorations; while high up on the wall at one end of the dining room were the words, "Glory to God in the Highest," reminding us of the anthem of the heavenly choir nearly 2000 years ago. Breakfast was a happy meal, further extending the Christmas joys by the breaking of bread together.

The entire day, so beautifully begun, was full of love and good-cheer, the result of the Christlike spirit in our home. At seven o'clock we gathered in the chapel for our Christmas service. After singing some of the beautiful hymns in the Methodist hymnal we listened to an inspiring talk by Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, of Mississippi, who has been visiting us. Her subject was, "Our Gift to Christ—The Consecration of Our Lives Fully to His Service." Following this beautiful message the students were given the privilege of testifying for our Master, and our hearts glowed with new life and new purposes as each one spoke of the great peace in her soul because of her fellowship with Christ and because she was giving her life in response to the great commission. This is the largest blessing which comes to us at Scarritt—gaining a clearer knowledge of Christ and learning to have sweet fellowship with him.

This is the twenty-first session of the school, and in order to celebrate the attaining of her majority it was decided to have a linen shower, as the supply of linen was very limited. Accordingly, we wrote to our friends, who responded readily, sending bed linen, table linen, hand-embroidered doilies and center-pieces from north, south, east and west. These we presented to Miss Gibson, our Principal, on Christmas evening, in two large clothes-hampers, which were decorated in green and white crepe paper, Scarritt's colors. Another gift to the school from generous friends was a chest of silver containing six dozen knives, forks, and tablespoons, and twelve dozen teaspoons. Besides these, other friends from Texas and Georgia sent barrels of preserved fruit and jelly, which we appreciated and enjoyed very much. We did not know that Scarritt has so many friends. We sang with grateful hearts, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

I wish more of Louisiana's daughters might share with me the wonderful opportunities and privileges of this beautiful school and home, and might know the joys of giving their lives in definite service for the Master.

With best wishes for a happy New Year,
CORA F. GODAT.

MRS. E. B. CHAPPELL'S PLAN.

The McKendree Church in Nashville has adopted a plan which has proven not only a help to the Treasurer of the auxiliary, but has acted as a stimulus to its members. One member is appointed to assist the Treasurer by giving an object lesson monthly on the blackboard. Right here we make an urgent plea for a more general use of the blackboard in our missionary meetings. Facts written upon them make lasting impressions upon the mind. Can we fail to embrace any plan or method which will appeal to our women and thus gain their interest? This is a digression, we know, but it seemed such an opportune time

On One Ranch

The A. H. Pierce Estate, Pierce, Texas, uses 8 Hart-Parr Oil Tractors on that vast ranch.

Their first tractor, purchased in August, 1909, did such excellent work in threshing rice and breaking black, waxy sod land, they bought 7 more in less than three years' time.

They depend on these 8 tractors to do all their important farm work—plowing, seeding, harvesting, threshing and hauling. Their experience has proven to their entire satisfaction that Hart-Parr Oil Tractors are a big paying investment. That's strong evidence of Hart-Parr Tractor efficiency, reliability and economy.

A. P. Borden, executor of the estate, says: "Hart-Parr Engines are the best on the market today and I recommend them to anyone wanting an Oil Tractor for farm work".

What Hart-Parr Oil Tractors are doing on the great Pierce ranch in Texas, they will do on your ranch. No matter if you farm 160 acres or 1000 acres, a Hart-Parr Oil Tractor furnishes you big, reliable power for every kind of work, both traction and belt. Dependable power that enables you to get your work done on time. Power that saves you money every day. This MODERN FARM HORSE uses cheapest KEROSENE for fuel, takes the place of 15 to 30 horses or mules and is easily operated by one man. You owe it to yourself to investigate.

to say a few words along this line. Now, let us go back to this plan, which we hope will be used by many of the auxiliaries throughout the connection. It is as follows:

- The amount of dues paid to date and deficit.
- The amount of pledge paid to date and deficit.
- The amount of Conference expense fund paid to date and deficit. And so on with all funds. Let this be placed conspicuously before the members each month, and it will keep the entire membership fully informed of its financial standing. Isn't it an excellent plan, and one worthy of trial? We wish every auxiliary would put it to the test. If the auxiliaries do not care to appoint an assistant for each month, this could come under the supervision of the Press Superintendent. How varied are her duties!

A BUSY AND SUCCESSFUL YEAR.

(The report of Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick, Sunday School Field Secretary of the North Mississippi Conference, to the Conference Sunday School Board for the year 1912).

In closing the year's work for 1912 the Field Secretary wishes, in making her annual report, first, to express thanks for the uniform courtesy received at the hands of the Sunday School Board and each and all the members of the North Mississippi Conference, as well as the teachers, superintendents and interested friends all over our good territory.

Besides the trunk of Publishing House samples carried to so many places, the use of our church periodicals, plans and helps has been urged and emphasized, and their larger usefulness accentuated. The value of hearty co-operation between superintendents, pastors and teachers has been emphasized also, as well as a wholesome awakening as to the use of better teacher-training methods.

The Secretary has been ready at all times and places to render assistance by letter, personal conference or address, and finds the personal touch as ever the "open sesame" to greater helpfulness. Numbers have been added to every department, a higher type of efficiency has been attained in many schools, graded instruction has been accentuated, Home Departments and Cradle Rolls have attained a larger usefulness. Teen Age visions have been widened, and our Standard of Excellence has made many strive to reach its helpful requirements. Definite statistics can not be given because of the difficulty in securing such information.

It has been earnestly desired to push the Adult Class registration to 100 classes, in order to arrange an Adult Bible Class Federation for our whole Conference, looking to a unified effort to put all our workers in a rhythmic and determined effort with a definite social service program.

The Sunday school work is really the greatest religious activity of the century, utilizing, as it does, people of every age and station and every type of mental and spiritual ability, and as such should receive our highest and best attention.

As an incentive to Bible study, the building of a higher type of citizenship, and as a training for pupils of lesser years in higher paths, as well as a reservoir from which come members, money and enthusiasm to fill our churches, this great work demands our skilled leadership, our earnest prayers, and above all our hearty co-operation and interest. Shall we not have this?

INTERESTING MEETING AT GREENVILLE, MISS.

Dear Brother Meek: We have just returned from a most pleasant and profitable meeting of the preachers and district stewards of the Greenville District. The Conference was held in the Methodist Church at Greenville on Jan. 7.

The devotional exercises at these meetings are always helpful. A committee of five was appointed to consider the apportionment of the Conference claims, which committee recommended that the apportionment be on the basis of last year, with only a few minor adjustments. The report was accepted.

The district parsonage being in rather bad condition, a committee was appointed to investigate its needs, devise means for its improvement, and make a report to the District Conference.

A sum amounting to one per cent of the pastors' salaries was assessed for repairs on the district parsonage, and the Woman's Home Mission Societies of the district are asked to appoint representatives, whose duty it will be to keep informed as to the needs of this property and report the same to the several societies that they may assist in its upkeep. The good ladies who are so considerate of the preachers, we are sure, will appreciate an opportunity to manifest that same consideration for the presiding elder and his family.

There were interesting and helpful discussions on various subjects of interest to the district; and we heard a good sermon in the evening. We returned to our charges feeling better for having come together—for having exchanged experiences, received words of encouragement, felt the warm hand-grasp of fellowship, and for having worshiped in conference.

The prospects for 1913 look bright in the Greenville District.

WORTH ITS WEIGHT IN GOLD.

S. T. Trigg, Richton, Miss., says: "I had a sore on my leg for nine years, and tried everything I could get and two doctors, and all failed to cure me. Then I decided to try Gray's Ointment and three boxes cured the old sore sound and well. It is worth its weight in gold." No wonder this man feels grateful towards Gray's Ointment. Think of the suffering caused by a chronic sore for nine years. If you are troubled with old sores of any nature, ulcers, boils, bruises, carbuncles, burns, tumors, etc., try Gray's Ointment. You will recommend it ever afterwards. It is one remedy that can be absolutely depended upon to effectually relieve skin diseases. A free sample can be had from Dr. W. F. NOTICE

To Louisiana Pastors and Sunday School Superintendents

We are arranging for the printer a directory of our Sunday schools and all their organizations, including the District Sunday school officers and chairmen of departments and all the superintendents of departments of all local schools, and such other information as will show the status of our Sunday school work. We simply want a directory of all the organizations and their officers, so that any one who wants any information concerning any of our Sunday schools may get it at a glance, and we are planning to put copies of this directory in the hands of all our superintendents and pastors.

But we are dependent upon the pastors for this information, and less than half of them have returned the statistical blanks mailed them before Conference. So we call on you again, brethren, to fill out the blanks and send them in, or if they can't be found, simply tell us the names of your Adult Bible Class presidents and teachers, your Teacher Training leaders, your Home and Cradle Roll Superintendents, assistant Superintendents, Adult, Elementary, and Missionary superintendents, and whether or not your school uses graded literature, is graded, and whether it comes up to our Standard of Excellence. The Directory will be printed immediately after the close of Dr. and Mrs. Hamill's round of Institutes.

Feeling sure of your sympathy and co-operation in this enterprise of our Sunday School Board (the expense of which will be borne by a business firm for the advertising privilege), and that you will help us to make the directory complete, I am faithfully yours,

AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY.

This Society was organized in 1825. Its work is interdenominational and international in scope, and is commended by all evangelical denominations.

It has published the Gospel messages in 175 languages, dialects and characters. It has been the pioneer for work among the foreign-speaking people in our country, and its missionary colporters are distributing Christian literature in thirty-three languages among the immigrants and making a home-to-home visitation among the spiritually destitute, both in the cities and rural districts, leaving Christian literature, also the Bible or portions of the Scriptures.

Its publication of leaflets, volumes and periodicals from the Home Office totals 791,354,461 copies. It has made foreign cash appropriations to the amount of $784,795.39, and grants of electrotypes to the value of $61,120.12, by means of which millions of copies of books and tracts have been published at mission stations abroad.

The gratuitous distribution of the past year is to the value of $18,399.77, being equivalent to 31,951,215 pages of tracts. The grand total of its gratuitous distribution has been to the value of $2,566,572.25 which is the equivalent of over four billions of tract pages.

The total number of family visits made by the Society's colporters during the last year is 254,910; the total number of volumes distributed by sale or grant is 77,582, making the total number of volumes circulated by colporters in the past seventy years 17,650,163, and the total number of family visits in the same period 17,616,521.

Its work is ever widening, is dependent upon donations and legacies, and greatly needs increased offerings.

THE FIRST KOREAN TYPEWRITER

Among the many signs of progress in things Korean is the announcement that for the first time in history a typewriter has been built to write the Korean language. This machine is a curiosity among writing machines, and its completion required the assistance of native Korean talent.

Unlike the Chinese and Japanese languages, the Korean language has an alphabet which was invented by the great King Seijong about five hundred years ago. It was built upon purely phonetic principles, and, being made complete at one time, is free from the inconsistencies resulting from the gradual evolution of an alphabet or the adoption of the alphabet of one people to the speech of another.

The Korean language is based upon one of the simplest yet most perfect linguistic systems known. The Korean alphabet proper consists of twenty-five letters: eleven vowels and fourteen consonants. From these twenty-five letters nearly five thousand different sounds can be evolved. The whole system of Korean writing is made from the combination of three elements: one line, one dot and one circle.

The fact that the Korean alphabet is composed of just twenty-five characters seems to make the problem simple from the standpoint of the typewriter maker. But there are other practical difficulties. Each of these letters has two or three different positions, and enough other characters are used to overcrowd the keyboard of the average machine. All these difficulties, however, have been surmounted and the Korean typewriter is now a fact.

Of the eighty-four keys of this typewriter seventy-two are Korean letters, eight are numerals and four bear miscellaneous signs. Forty-six of these keys are "dead," which means they do not space when struck, and this leaves only thirty-eight "live" keys on the entire keyboard—certainly a strange and unusual typewriter compared with those in common domestic use. Four thousand six hundred and twenty-seven different syllabic combinations have been actually written from the seventy-two characters of the Korean machine.

The significant fact about this typewriter is that it has been built in response to a strong Korean demand, and so far as the writing machine is concerned Korea is now ahead not only of China, but of Japan, for neither the Chinese nor the Japanese languages have yet been conquered by this latter-day time-saver. This machine will doubtless be of inestimable service to the missionaries in the prosecution of their literary work.

ONLY TO-DAY.

The coming year will have three hundred and sixty-five days in its calendar, but really will have only one working day, and that is called "To-day." Serve your Master by the day. Each four and twenty hours brings its own duties to be done, its own temptations to be conquered, its own loads to be carried, and its own progress to be made heavenward. There never was a Christian yet strong enough to carry to-day's duties with to-morrow's worries piled on top of them. God takes care of us, and yet we can not tell just what to-morrow or the next year will bring forth.

"Straight is the line of duty;
Curved is the line of beauty;
Follow the first, and thou shalt see
The second ever following thee."

Happy is he who keeps the commandments of the Heavenly Father! The path of obedience leads to all good things—to increasing knowledge, increasing holiness, increasing usefulness, and increasing nearness to the everlasting home of the redeemed. Indeed, it is the only forward and upward way for the millions of mankind.

The Bulgarians are said to have among their sayings the following proverb: "Who lives in sin is buried alive." There is profound truth in this aphorism. The Scriptures call the emerging of the soul from a sinful state a resurrection. Before that takes place it is fettered and entombed, and knows nothing of the larger and more glorious life in Christ.

A Meridian (Miss.) dispatch states that the "aristocratic Stonewall Club" of that city has barred the "turkey trot" and "grizzly bear" stunts, and will allow in its new home only dances that are "refined." This regulation properly applied would leave them without any dancing at all, or at least would force them to go back to the stately minuet and other square figures of our forefathers, for a round dance that is REFINED is something unknown on the planet.

We quote the following dispatch, taken from a daily not a thousand miles away, as a sample of how the secular papers frequently give church news: "Laurel, Miss., Jan. 15.—The Mississippi annual conference of the C. M. E. Church, which embraces all the churches of that denomination in South Mississippi, will convene at St. Paul's M. E. Church here to-morrow. Bishop Wilbur P. Turkel will preside." What a "mixtry!" Yet there are Methodists who say that they do not need their Conference or General Organ, because they can get the church news from the secular daily or weekly that they take.

Ours is neither an unheroic nor saintless age. Every day deeds of heroism are wrought equal to any recorded in the annals of the past. Scarcely any community is without its good men and women—its shining lights. Wicked as are our modern cities, they have in them many whose garments are undefiled and who are seeking to throw out the life-line to those who are going down beneath the black waves of sin. As bad as things sometimes look, there is no cause for despair. True, the world is in the Church, but the Church is also in the world. And, best of all, God is with his people now, as he has ever been. Let those who think that the Church is worse to-day than in any former period, as a cure for their pessimism, read intelligently the epistles of Saint Paul to the churches of his day.

"THE CHURCH PAPER AND THE HOME."

The following, which we take from Zion's Herald, the vigorous organ of New England Methodism, is most suggestive:

"We might draw attention to the fact—which all pastors will substantiate—that in every home in which they visit where Christian Science is making headway, they find Christian Science publications. Thus it is with every other institution that is gaining ground at the present time—they do so by circulating the printed page. Methodism neglects her church paper at her peril. The Bishops, realizing this, are determined in every way possible to bring about a different condition of things from that which now exists. Bishop Anderson wants the name of every man who will not throw himself into the movement to increase the circulation of his denominational organ. And well he may, for that church where the Methodist paper does not circulate is a point of weakness in our economy. The Bishops have come actively to the help of this situation none too soon. Their action is timely."

No recent action of the authorities of the Methodist Episcopal Church has evinced greater ecclesiastical statesmanship than the organized effort which they are making to strengthen and circulate the church papers of their denomination. The point that our contemporary makes as to Christian Science is true, and, as is stated, it also holds good concerning all the other modern fads and cults. The fact is, while the orthodox Churches have been moving along complacently, paying comparatively little attention to what their people were reading, the great Enemy has been sowing tares among them, poisoning their minds and hearts and perverting their faith.

We predict that great good will result from the active assistance which the Northern Bishops are now giving their various organs, and we sincerely wish that our Bishops would follow their example in this respect. If they would inquire carefully as to the circulation of our periodicals in every charge at the District and Annual Conferences, and pointedly stress the importance of placing them in the homes of our members, in our judgment, the effect would soon be felt in every part of the connection. Too often it is the case in the gatherings where our work is under review that every other agency and form of religious activity is emphasized, while the church paper is scarcely mentioned. Yet no part of our machinery is more indispensable to the prosperity of Zion and the upbuilding of the Divine Kingdom.

A REVIVAL OUR MOST URGENT NEED.

The holidays are now well behind us, and the pastors in our patronizing territory are beginning to form their plans for the work of the new year. Their duties are varied and complex, and many things will demand their attention; but we hope that each of them will resolutely determine to put their chief emphasis upon the need of reaching the unsaved in his charge and deepening the spiritual life of those who claim to be Christians. Beyond any question, this is our most urgent and imperative call. Far too many of our people are moral, and nothing more. They need such a conscious knowledge of salvation as will make them happy in Christ and set them earnestly to work to extend his kingdom among men.

The one cure for all our ills in Church and State is the dominance of pure and undefiled religion. When employer and employee have caught the spirit of Him who lived for others, our labor problems will have been solved. When every man sees in every other man a brother, the rich will open their purses to relieve the necessities of the poor, and armies will no longer engage in bloody battles. When Jesus shall reign in the hearts of the people who make up our congregations, they will cease to be stingy and worldly, and will become liberal and have a passion for unselfish service. To see and know the Master is the only thing that can transform men and enkindle in their bosoms the true light that shines out as a beacon to earth's benighted ones, groping in darkness.

We are living in the most remarkable age of the world's history. The sublimest opportunities of all time are challenging the Church, yet we are but poorly responding to them. We are wasting more money upon mere trivialities than we are giving to carry the gospel to the appealing millions in heathen lands. Our institutions at home, which ought to be strengthened to meet the increasing demands of the present and future, are struggling and languishing for the want of means. The pews in many of our churches are painfully empty, and penitents at our altars are distressingly rare. Like a drouth-stricken land in which the springs are flowing feebly, the crops are standing still, the plowboy has ceased to sing, and the unplanted fields wait in vain for the coming of the sower, is the appearance which Zion presents in this day. What she needs is refreshing showers from above.

The truth is, all the activities and enterprises of the Church at this time are waiting on a revival, and there will be no truly great forward movements until it comes. Shall we not, therefore, recognize this fact and make the securing of it our chiefest aim? Let every pastor get the burden more fully on his heart; let every Christian, in his secret devotions, pray for it with all the earnestness of his soul; let every saved man and woman strive by personal work to hasten its arrival; and let the beseeching cry of every congregation be that of the Psalmist, "Wilt Thou not revive us again, that Thy people may rejoice in Thee?"

God will not fail to pour out his Spirit upon us if, with a profound consciousness of our urgent need, we will call upon him in true penitence and faith and surrender ourselves unreservedly into his hands for service. The "All Power" that stood behind "the Great Commission" in the beginning may still be ours, if we will but meet the conditions of its bestowment. With it, we can take the world for our Lord; without it, we shall continue to dally and do little, in the face of open doors that would thrill the heart of an archangel.

THE SAPPERS AND MINERS.

By William Watson, in The Spectator.

In lands that still the heirs of Othman sway,
There lives a legend, wild as wildest tale
Of birds that haunt the Arabian waste, where rolls
Tigris through Bagdad to the Persian Sea.
Tis fabled that the mighty sorcerer,
King Solomon, when he died, was sitting aloft,
Like one that mused, on his great lion-throne;
Sitting with head bent forward o'er his staff, Whereon with both his hands he leaned. And tribes
And peoples moved before him, in their awe
Not venturing nigh, and tawny fiercenesses.
Panther and pard, at timorous distance couched;
While Figures vast, Forms indeterminate,
Demons and Genii, the Enchanter's thralls,
Cloudily rose, and darkly went and came.
But so majestic sat he lifeless there,
And counterfeited life so perfectly,
That change of hue or feature was by none
Seen, and none guessed him dead, and every knee
Rendered him wonted homage, until worms
Gnawing his staff, made fall that last support,
And with it fell the unropt Death, divulged
In gorgeous raiment to the wondering world.
So may an Empire, from whose body and limbs
The spirit hath wholly fled, still seem to breathe
And feel, still keep its living posture, still Cheer with semblance of glory and power
The fading Earth, until the evil things
That batten in secret, and by night destroy,
Unseen the grandiose semblance, and man's heart
Hastes to forget the obsequies he made
To a jeweled corpse, long ripe for sepulture.

OUR COLLEGES SHOULD REPRESENT THE CHURCH.

The Vanderbilt suit is in its last stages before the Chancellor's Court. The testimony has all been submitted. It is generally thought that the Church will win the suit in the lower court, but counsel for the majority of the trustees have said that they expect to win in the Court of Appeals.

There has been talk of a compromise. It has been suggested that the Board of Trustees agree to recognize the trustees elected by the General Conference at Asheville, and allow them to act as members of the Board, with the agreement that the General Conference will not elect any more trustees, but that the Board of Trustees be given the right to fill all vacancies, subject to the confirmation by the General Board of Education acting for the General Conference. This method would be entirely acceptable had this issue of the ownership of the University by the Church, and the right of the General Conference to control never been raised. But now that the issue is squarely before the courts for settlement, it is probably better to let the exact relationship be determined and the authority of the Church be defined.

It is better for the Church to lose the University than for the present status to continue. The University, outside of the Theological Department, is not representative of the Church. The ideals and standards are not Methodist, and it is better for it to be clearly understood that the University is not under the control of the Church, and that the Church is in no wise responsible for its management, unless there is a decided toning up of the spiritual life of the University to make it to conform to the Church's standards in spiritual things. If a compromise should mean the maintenance of the present status, then it ought not to be made, but the suit should be pressed, and the question of Church control be definitely settled.

And what is true of Vanderbilt is true of all our Church schools and colleges. If they do not maintain Methodist ideals and standards, then they are of no value to Methodism, indeed they are probably a distinct damage and the Church would be better off without them than with them.

So long as they call themselves Methodist schools they attract students from Methodist families who take it for granted that they are truly representative of Methodism, and send their children there to receive their education under Methodist influences, and are sorely disappointed, when their children return, by the lack of the very thing which was chiefly considered in the choice of a school. Our Annual Conferences owe it to our people to give them the facts in the case as to the moral and spiritual condition of schools which come up to the Conference for recommendation. What value is it to the Church to speak of "our schools," or of institutions "as belonging to us," if they do not strengthen the Church, or the Kingdom of God, by turning out well-trained, spiritually-minded, efficient, Christian young men and women.

I have made a study of these questions for twenty years, and a more intensive study since my own children have been of college age, and my honest conviction is that there is not the intensity of spiritual life that there should be in our schools and colleges. If there is any reason for their being, it is that Scriptural emphasis shall be placed upon the spiritual. It must be recognized, indeed taken for granted, that "the heavens do rule," that the spiritual life is the dominating factor in the institution, and that the body and the mind have no reason for their being except as instruments of the soul. It should be a matter for surprise and alarm when this is not the case, and those in positions of responsibility in our institutions should be made to realize that the institutions are failing in the purpose of their being unless the spiritual life is recognized as the naturally dominant life of the institution. The oratorical spirit, and the athletic spirit, and the literary spirit, and the scientific spirit are all well enough in their place, but over all, controlling and shaping the entire life of the institution, should be the spirit of Christ. The student body should understand that the president and faculty set more value upon the fruits of the Spirit than upon the products of the hand or brain, and that they truly agree with the Master, when he said, "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul, or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?"

I do not think a college course is simply a prayer meeting, or a Sunday school, but I do believe that the proper emphasis must be placed on the spirit life: it must be the dominating thought, or the institution will be a delusion and a snare, and lead men to the destruction which comes from intellectual pride and vainglory.

Let us have institutions which represent Methodism, in the stress they place upon spiritual life, and when a school fails at that point, let it be admonished, and if there is no amendment, let us demand a change in the management, and if that is not possible, let us decline to recommend it or to assume any responsibility for it.—James Cannon, Jr., in the Baltimore and Richmond Christian Advocate.

PROF. EUCKEN IN BOSTON.

Dr. Rudolph Eucken, the distinguished professor of Philosophy at Jena, who is delivering lectures for some time this winter at Harvard University, greatly favored our Boston Preachers' Meeting and our Theological Club (or Alpha Chapter of the Convocation of Berlin University) by appearing before them recently. To the latter company of ministers, which meets once a month in the rooms of the City Club, he spoke in the very highest and most appreciative terms of Prof. Borden P. Bowne's philosophy in its relations with ethics and religion. To the former (in Wesleyan Hall) he spoke, Professor Perrin interpreting, on Christianity. He discussed first the status of religion in the world, dwelling on the perilous degree to which the spiritual was being smothered by the material in the tremendous rush of modern culture, invention, and civilization with its imposing, visible results which make so strong an impression on the human mind. Nevertheless, the soul's life is a very real one. Humanity craves something more than mere culture or outward show, feels that there is a deeper truth, that behind all the changes abides the Unchangeable, who alone can satisfy the hunger for true life. Hence religion. There is a longing in the heart for the Divine. Man can not respect himself unless he has respect for something higher than he. Christianity has before it the great task of strengthening this stream of religious feeling flowing toward the Eternal. It has a great past, but a still greater and more wonderful future, and this future we must do our best to make, as soon as possible, the present. Professor Eucken has a profusion of gray locks in admirable disorder, a gray beard, a piercing eye, is of small stature, and speaks with very great earnestness. It was a rare privilege to listen to one whose words have made so strong an impression in the world of thought—"Sagamore," in the Western Christian Advocate.

AN OPEN LETTER.

Corinth by the Sea.

Dec. 1, 1912.

To the Women of Southern Methodism.

My Dear Sisters: As a friend and well-wisher would I address to you this open letter. Were I not in the heartiest sympathy with you in your great work, and had I not been closely identified with you from the beginning of your labors, I would not have the courage to address you at this time. Knowing your consecration and your desire to do the very best for our Lord's Kingdom, I would modestly make a few suggestions. I do not believe, as has been said, that "the women are more eager to exercise the prerogatives of the episcopacy than to secure the rights of the laity." I am convinced that if this desire obtains at all it obtains amongst a few ambitious spirits, and that it has no hold on the rank and file of the women of our Church. Most of our women have as the upmost desire in their hearts the advancement of the kingdom of Christ and the salvation of their sons and husbands. By the side of this consuming passion, "seats amongst the mighty" sink into insignificance.

In a kindly loving spirit I wish to offer you the results of my study and investigation. In reaching my conclusions, I have insulated myself from preconceptions and have sat down before the facts to learn calmly what they would teach me.

Both Jesus and his great apostle and inspired expositor, St. Paul, recognized that the spheres of activity of men and women were not co-incident in the Church. They reached their conclusions, not from the narrow view of local customs and prejudices, but from a profound knowledge of human nature. Hence they gave certain duties to men to perform and certain duties to women, whilst together they formed one homogenous organization called the Church. This assignment was not arbitrary, but was reasonable and was based on a perfect knowledge of our nature.

The student of sex psychology is struck by two facts, namely, sex-attraction, and sex-repulsion. I do not like the term "sex-repulsion," which I have just used, but my meaning will become apparent in the course of this argument. That there is a powerful attraction between the sexes any love-lorn youth or fancy-struck maiden can abundantly testify. Even old maids, and suffragettes at that, will also bear abundant testimony. That there is an opposite tendency, a tendency to separation and segregation is also apparent to every philosophic mind. Even in childhood we find an expression of this latter tendency when the boy refuses longer to play mere girl games, and the girl becomes more deeply interested in dolls, and thinks balls and tops rude and boys but vulgar barbarians. In the Sabbath school we find it necessary to have the boys and girls in separate classes if we wish to hold either. In children of larger growth we find men in clubs and lodges across whose threshold no woman may come, except for a limited time and that on sufferance; and women organized to death in clubs and leagues, until one's head seems dizzy in trying to unravel the intricate skein of association. A man in their midst would create almost as much consternation as a mouse.

We find the same expression in the great business and educational world. A few weeks ago I asked a shoe-merchant why he did not carry a stock of women's shoes? He replied, "I could put them in and build up a good trade, but in three weeks' time I would lose three-fourths of my men's trade. Men will not trade where women trade." In the industrial world, those occupations into which women have entered in numbers, men have practically abandoned.

A great experiment has been recently made in mingling the sexes in co-educational institutions. College presidents tell us that the tendency is for the boys to go to those schools that maintained the old idea and to turn the co-educational schools over to the girls. Leland Stanford had to limit the number of girls admitted so as to maintain a male patronage. Chicago University, after years of trial, introduced a form of segregation. In many places a prejudice between the sexes developed in these institutions where co-education has been in vogue, sometimes going to the extreme of social ostracism.

Just why the Almighty Father constructed us this way it would be presumption in me to say. I frankly tell you I do not know, unless it was that he might preserve man eternally masculine and woman everlastingly feminine. But it was in recognition of this fundamental fact in our constitution that St. Paul legislated. Let us not quarrel with Omniscience, but the rather find out his will as revealed in nature and his Word.

Now, my dear sisters, I would call your attention to a chapter in the history of the Church that, so far as I am informed, has been almost entirely overlooked. Did women ever exercise greater privileges than those she enjoys to-day? A study of the fourth and fifth centuries will be enlightening. These centuries have much in common with the social conditions obtaining to-day. Chrysostom, the golden-mouthed, has left us a picture of that age. Wealth had accumulated in the great centers with consequent luxury. If any man thinks that blondined hair, rats, and painted shirt-waists are modern devices of the devil, he has another guess coming. It was before the day of automobiles, but even then women of fashion and church members would not so much as exert themselves to walk across the street to church, but must have a conveyance. The women of the world had hunting scenes painted upon their silken garments, whilst Christian women, equally as worldly, had scenes from the life and miracles of Jesus adorning their dresses. They were peripatetic picture galleries. Nor was the paint entirely confined to their dresses, as witness the confessions of Paula. At church they "were to be seen with their necks, heads, arms and fingers loaded with golden chains and rings, their persons breathing precious odors, and their dresses of gold stuffs and silk." To use a slang expression, "they have not gotten anything" on their Western sisters. It was the golden age of the suffragette. There were quite a number "who affected masculine attire and seemed to blush for their womanhood, cutting their hair short and presenting faces like eunuchs."

At this time women began to minister at the altar as priests and preachers. Rights of laity did not satisfy, and will not satisfy, her. Clerical rights were assumed. Now, what was the result? The men took to the tallest of the tall timber. In a brief period of time the deserts of Egypt were peopled with anchorites and studded with cells. A mania for monasticism seized all classes. "A morbid aversion to woman ensued and married life fell into contempt." St. Anthony said that the "devil appeared to him in the form of a woman," and Chrysostom had some remarks to make that I am too gallant to place in print. Basil forbade his monks "to speak to a woman, to touch one, or to look on one if it were possible to avoid it." Simeon Stylites mounted his pedestal, ate his one meal a week, but was safe. The Church became thoroughly feminized.

What was the result? An effeminated Church began to worship a woman, Mary, just as an effeminated Church to-day is worshipping Mrs. Eddy. Mariolatry began to curse the world and has cursed it ever since. Then Mohammedanism arose and nearly swept this enervated type of Christianity from the face of the globe. Before forcing a similar issue, it were well to look ahead and count the cost.

Very many thoughtful men and women are of the opinion that the Church in its ideals is already too feminine. Benjamin Ide Wheeler, in a recent address, pointed out the fact "that the Church was cultivating the female side of religion." The Church is so largely now composed of women, that unconsciously the preacher, in some instances, types his sermons to suit their tastes and mingles so much with them in the work of the church that he becomes a regular Miss Nancy. For virile, strong men he has no message, and these men linger with the "Morning Sewer," which at least does not part its hair in the middle. Mahan recently addressed the students at West Point, and during the course of his lecture said, "The masculine and military side of religion as portrayed in the Bible is overlooked, because women are more religious than men." Now, at this juncture, when the thought of the world is being turned toward evangelizing men, does it not appear inopportune for you to further effeminate this institution, even modifying the divine chart and constitution of the Church in so doing?

Now, in conclusion, dear sisters, I would observe that you can take entire charge of the Church and all of its work, if you have the mind to do so. Our men have been accustomed in this realm to give you whatever you may desire. Furthermore, you now compose more than 60 per cent of the membership. But when you take the Church over in all of its departments and assume full responsibility for its welfare, know well that then you will part company in church life with the men. Even under present conditions, men are seeking the expression of their religious and social life in lodges guarded by a sacred oath from female intrusion. Unless human nature can be revolutionized and man made completely over from what he has been since the creation, such a result as predicted will follow. Where the invasion of man's sphere has been granted as a theory and withheld in fact, the hurt has not been so apparent. But it is only a step from theory to fact. Southern Methodism is to-day the most successful and aggressive branch of the Church, and no denomination has a stronger hold upon its men. Is it wise now to abandon the plan of Jesus for the dreams of some obsessed by a great ambition that would revolutionize both Church and State? These vagaries of a decadent civilization will soon pass away in a time of stress which is sure to come.

I believe, my dear sisters, that you would rather choose the salvation and the church fellowship of your husbands and sons and brothers, than the doubtful honor of collecting money for the preacher and of answering Question Eight in the Quarterly Conference, or even voting to "non-concur" at the General Conference. I know our Southern womanhood and how truly and unselfishly their hearts desire the good of the Church. I have other features that I would like to write you about, but you have not the time to listen to me now.

With an abounding love for you through whose instrumentality I was saved, and believing in your unselfishness and devotion to the Christ, I subscribe myself,

Your true friend and brother,

JOHN WESLEY ROGERS.

PERSONAL EVANGELISM.

Converting an Infidel.

By Rev. H. P. Lewis.

It was in July, 1874. I had been more than two years in charge of a work near where I was born in 1836. Here (at China Grove) I gave my hand for membership in the Church in 1846. Here I made my first pulpit effort, under difficult circumstances, and failed, in 1856. It was here I went to school when a boy. I knew nearly everybody in the neighborhood. I loved my people. A revival was needed. I saw and felt it, and had been praying for it all the year. My heart was burdened on account of the indifference of so many people—some of my officials included. How hungry I was to witness an old-time Methodist revival! Scores, if not hundreds of times, I had been on my knees all alone with God, talking with him about the matter. Somehow I felt sure it was coming. My third quarterly meeting was held by my presiding elder Saturday and Sunday. It was a cold affair. One man went away after Sunday and said: "They won't have a revival; Lewis is cold, Ball is colder, and the presiding elder is the coldest of the three." All this did not discourage me. I wanted a revival and was intent on having one, or of doing my part of the work. The devil got uneasy. He stirred up one of my officials against me. This official said we did not need a revival, and that the people did not have the time to devote to the work of a revival—that they were "too badly in the grass." A man in the community, who claimed to be an infidel, said that if I attempted to run the meeting on after Sunday, he would announce Sunday that he would let off the water in his mill-pond, and invite everybody to come and help catch and eat fish. He said he knew that people would rather go to a "fish-fry" than to a protracted meeting. I paid no attention to it all. I was intent on having a revival. I felt sure the Lord was on my side. Then I knew I had some faithful standbys in the person of Brother William Connerly and in a few good women. Brother Connerly was a power for good when the Holy Spirit had him in charge. No better man ever lived in that country. I felt safe with the good Lord and Brother Connerly backing me up.

The people saw I was in earnest—meant business—so many of them got to thinking and talking about the meeting. The devil got busy. One of the devil's pets said, "Lewis is pulling one way and I am pulling the other." The Lord saw, and heard, and answered. He caused a bone-felon to appear on one finger of the infidel. He had the doctor to lance it. About that time a felon appeared on another finger of the same hand. The man was kept busy nursing his pet fingers—too busy to make ready for his fish-fry, so that "fry" was a failure, while the interest in the meeting increased. I never felt more like throwing my whole soul into the good work of saving sinners! I begged the people to let me go where the Holy Spirit indicated I ought to go. I asked the Lord to take me, use me for his glory, and guide me where I ought to go.

I never felt more completely in the hands of God, under the guidance of the Spirit. I ate but little, I slept but little, but did a vast amount of earnest knee-work. Let me say to the younger brethren of the ministry, note this. Your business is to save souls. You cannot do it without God's help. I don't care how well you may be able to sermonize, your work in soul-saving will prove an utter failure if God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost is not in charge of the work. Don't forget this. Keep in touch with the Lord, if you want fruit. "Without me ye can do nothing." (John 15:5.) Too many trust too much to their learning, skill and other things and not enough in the Lord; hence they fail.

I attended a meeting in one of our principal cities some years ago. I was only a visiting brother. All the preachers were invited to a certain brother's to dine one day. I went. Being only a visitor, I had but little to say. The brethren talked, and talked, and laughed, cracked jokes, etc. They talked politics more than anything else. Not a word was said during the time I was there about the meeting that was in progress. Not a word said about prayer while I was there. I was troubled. About all the good I got out of the social gathering was a good dinner, and I really think that was all the good any of the brethren got out of it.

Back to my revival meeting. I think it was on Wednesday, the fifth day of the meeting. My infidel friend, who had been to the services regularly, and was becoming interested, came to me while I was still in the pulpit, after the benediction, put one hand on my shoulder, looked me squarely in the face, and said, "You must go home with me this evening." "If I can, I will," was my reply. "You must," said he: "it is essential that you go." "All right," I said. "I will be there about sun-down." It was then about 4 p. m. I visited some families where, as a pastor, I was needed, and quieted some troubled hearts. By sunset I was in the home of my friend. I found him in great agony of soul. He had a genuine case of conviction, and I rejoiced to know it. We sat up until a late hour, during which time he had me to kneel in prayer twice for him. The day following he and his wife were the first ones at the altar, and the last to leave. Both were saved. He was wonderfully saved, but not until he had decided to let the Lord have his way with him, and to do just what the Lord wanted him to do. He went to work, raised money to buy some Sunday school literature, organized a Sunday school, and did good Sunday school work as long as he was in that neighborhood. He left the Sunday school in good hands when he moved away several years afterwards.

How it pays one to surrender himself fully into the hands of the Lord, ready for service and sacrifice! A large number were converted; fifty joined the Church.

The Methodists of Philadelphia have purchased for Bishop Berry an episcopal residence at a cost of $25,000. The building was formerly the residence of a banker, and was built at a cost of $28,000.

Dr. C. M. Sheldon, who still owns the copyright to his book, "In His Steps," has declined to allow it to be dramatized unless the managers will guarantee that every actor that plays the part of one of the characters shall be a recognized Christian. This the managers refused to do.

The proposal to change the name of the Protestant Episcopal Church to the American Catholic Church seems to have gained a considerable following. Those favoring the change are mostly members of the High Church party of that denomination.

The Missouri Wesleyan, an institution located at Cameron, Mo., has just brought to a successful termination a canvass for $200,000 for its endowment fund. This school, which has hitherto ranked as a College, will from now on be known as the Missouri Wesleyan University.

The Grace Methodist Episcopal Church of New York City gives a moving picture entertainment every evening (except on Sunday) and on Saturday afternoons. It hopes thus to keep the children of the church from attending questionable moving picture shows. We doubt the wisdom of such an undertaking.

Bishop Luther B. Wilson and Rev. Allan MacRossie, the district superintendent (presiding elder) of the New York City District, are leading in a revival campaign in the great American metropolis. All of the seventy Methodist churches of the city are co-operating, the services being conducted at several convenient centers.

A modest layman, who refused to allow his name to be made public, recently gave $75,000 as an endowment to the Foreign Missionary Board of the M. E. Church, the proceeds from its investment to be used to care for worn-out missionaries, their widows, and orphans. An effort will be made to increase this endowment to a half-million dollars.

The Board of Bishops, at its semi-annual Conference in Toledo, pledged its co-operation in increasing the circulation of the Advocates, and also appointed three of its members—Bishops Cranstoun, Smith and Wilson—to meet with the Book Committee at its next meeting, in order that this pledge of co-operation may be made effectual in the largest measure.—Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

Five thousand persons connected with the Holy Name Society of the Roman Catholic Church paraded the streets of New Orleans last Sunday afternoon. With many things that the Romish Church undertakes we are not in sympathy, but with her warfare against profanity we are in most hearty accord. Christians of every denomination should join hands in combating this widespread and most inexcusable vice.

The Missionary Review of the World for January reports that there are now 24,092 missionaries, including the wives of missionaries, in active service in the various foreign fields, and 111,862 native helpers. It also states that there are in these fields 15,393 organized churches, and 2,644,150 communicants. It is gratifying to note that the work of the foreign missionaries is beginning to show such large visible results.

The Canadian Council of the Laymen's Missionary Movement has tabulated the 1912 gifts to missions from the Protestant bodies of Canada, the total of which is $2,499,315, being an increase of slightly more than 66 per cent in five years. The larger denominations contributed as follows: Methodists (numbering 338,500), $570,493; Presbyterians (290,000), $898,037; Anglicans (150,000), $303,762; Baptists (135,000), $292,842.

The year 1913 will witness four important religious gatherings, besides the usual number of annual conventions and conferences. The four large convocations referred to are as follows: A meeting of representatives of the assemblies of both the Northern and Southern Presbyterian Church in Atlanta, Ga.; the Episcopal General Convention in New York City (a triennial body); the World's Sunday School Convention in Zurich, Switzerland, in July; and the Congregational National Council in Kansas City, Mo., in October—also a triennial body.

The interdenominational character of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago is shown in the composition of its faculty, which includes six Methodists, four Congregationalists, three Presbyterians, three Baptists, two Episcopalians, one United Brethren, and one United Evangelical. While all these denominations hold and teach the fundamental truths of Christianity, this variety in the church relationship of the instructors gives opportunity for an even balance, while, properly emphasizing the important tenets of all the larger Protestant religious bodies of the United States.

The mission that is being conducted by the Baptist Church in Russia is meeting with great difficulties. All the churches in the Province of Lavonia have been closed with padlocks by the secret police, working under the sanction of the Holy Orthodox Synod, and by the authority of the Czar. Also at Omsk, in Siberia, a number of farmers have been evicted from their lands simply because they do not belong to the Greek Catholic Church of Russia, but are Baptists. The Examiner, of New York, recently published a detailed account of the persecutions of the Baptists in Russia.

The following utterance of Dr. James Cannon, Jr., was contained in the Baltimore and Richmond Christian Advocate of January 9: "Were it to happen by any chance that the Church should lose in the Vanderbilt lawsuit, I should favor the sale of the Publishing House and the removal of our connectional officers from Nashville, for I do not think that city seems to appreciate how much Methodism has helped to build it up, and it does not seem that our great corps of secretaries and professors carry the weight in the city life that would naturally be expected." We do not think Dr. Cannon is alone in the sentiment which he has expressed. We heard a gentleman not long since who had swung the round of the Conferences and had touched preachers in all parts of the connection predict that the loss of the Vanderbilt lawsuit would result in the removal of the Methodist Publishing House from Nashville, and the establishment of the headquarters of the Church in some other city.

A NOTE FROM DR. WATKINS.

Dear Dr. Meek: Of course, you have heard about our disastrous fire in the dormitory of the Training School. We have suffered a severe loss, but were not disheartened for a moment. The main building has supplied all needed study halls and recitation rooms, and with scarcely an interruption of an hour, we took up the work the next morning, and within a short time all the students had settled down to their accustomed tasks as if nothing had happened. The cottages and boarding houses on the campus, and in the immediate vicinity, have provided adequate boarding and lodging facilities, and with a single exception, not a boy has gone home.

We are grateful that not a student was hurt and but a few of them lost anything. We have not a sick boy in the institution and scarcely a discontented one. The loss has seemed to give expression to a more enthusiastic college spirit than I had supposed existed, and I believe the disaster will in the end prove a blessing to us.

The roof and upper stories of the building were entirely destroyed and the basement and lower floors very much damaged by water and breakage. It is impossible just now to estimate the amount of the loss; but as soon as the insurance has been adjusted we shall take up without delay the work of rebuilding. We should build a larger and more up-to-date structure, and I hope that some of our friends in Mississippi will feel moved to help us in the work of building up a greater Millsaps. Such calamities furnish the opportunities for, and should prove the incentive to, the doing of the things for the cause of God that a grateful heart has long felt constrained to do. There is no more important or needed work in the whole field of Christian education than just such work as is being done by the Millsaps Training School, and we are happy in the thought that this great work is not to be interrupted by the fire. Would that some man, whom God has richly blessed, would say, "This is my opportunity!"

We are in the midst of our mid-session examinations, and are expecting a number of new boys within the next two weeks.

THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL INSTITUTES.

A letter from Dr. Hamill fixes March 16-31 as the date of his and Mrs. Hamill's Institute tour in Louisiana, and we are rearranging our schedule for the places formerly announced so as to reach all the districts in the time given us. Some of the dates will not, perhaps, be so convenient as the former ones, and some of the visits to local schools between institutes must be omitted because of the shorter time the workers can be with us, but we shall have more opportunity to advertise, and with spring weather, we expect to do a fine work in behalf of our Sunday school interests. A definite schedule will be presented later.

Secular News and Comment

By Rev. A. J. Gearheard.

The Chicago Record-Herald announces that the world of letters has entered upon a new era, which is to be an era of poetry. It claims that not for many years has there been such a demand for poetry as now, and that the poet is at present receiving better pay for his productions than ever before.

During the year 1912 $327,000,000 was given for philanthropic work in the United States. Mr. Andrew Carnegie led the world's list of benefactors, while Mr. J. D. Rockefeller and Mr. J. P. Morgan were very close seconds. In England the total amount given for benevolent purposes was but $20,000,000.

President Emeritus Charles W. Elliott, of Harvard University, in a recent speech, predicted that in the future physicians would be able to give preventive medicines that would be capable of doing away with poverty and misery. Such a prediction does not harmonize with a certain inspired statement of the Master, "The poor ye have with you always."

According to the report of the Director of the Census, Mr. E. Dana Durand, the white population of the United States, aside from immigration, increased during the decade from 1900 to 1910, 14 per cent; the Indian population, 12 per cent, and the Negro population, 11 per cent. During the same period the Chinese population decreased largely and the Japanese increased three-fold.

Recently in Chicago a number of families of wealth were stirred at the sight of so much poverty. These families decided to relieve the situation by giving a charity ball. Their combined wealth was $500,000,000. The dancers, for the evening spent $29,000 for their own pleasure, $10,000 of which was for drinks served in style. The poor of Chicago received $14,000. Comment is unnecessary.

President Taft has announced that, in view of his election to the Kent Law Professorship in Yale University, he will retire from the Board of Management of that institution. Mr. Taft has obviously adopted the only proper course. There is a manifest impropriety in a president of a college or any of its instructors sitting as a member of the body that is charged with the duty of supervising their work.

A news dispatch from Hastings, Neb., reports that two lads of that place were awarded prizes for having led in a corn-growing contest, one having raised 33 bushels and the other 16 bushels per acre. Such a record does not well compare with that made by an Alabama boy last year, who produced 234 bushels on an acre of ground. After all, is not the statement that the South is America's greatest agricultural section a conservative one?

The order forbidding the use of opium in Shanghai, China, was recently enforced with the death penalty, when on Jan. 9 a woman was shot by order of the provisional governor for having been caught smoking. It appears that the Chinese know how to make prohibition prohibit. In reality, such punishment was brutal in view of the fact that the government may have been partly responsible for this woman's formation of the opium habit.

Harvard University will soon establish a Chair of Prints. It has already secured $100,000 of the $150,000 required for the endowment of the new department. In fact, a somewhat general effort to arouse more interest in art in this country seems to have been started recently. The Boston Museum of Fine Arts has secured a new curator for its Print Department—Mr. Fitz-Roy Carrington, who is one of the best known print connoisseurs in America.

A year ago the science of surgery announced to the world that by an operation a confirmed criminal had been cured. The criminal was released from a New York prison. Recently he suffered a "relapse," and is again in the tolls of the law for stealing. Leading psychologists are now said to be veering toward the opinion that criminality cannot be cured by surgery. Certainly not; sin never was cured by anything less than the grace of God.

On Jan. 13 the presidential electors met at the various State capitals and formally announced the votes of their respective States for President and Vice President. The vote was as follows: Wilson and Marshall, 435; Roosevelt and Johnson, 88, and Taft and Butler, 8. The returns will be canvassed before a joint session of both houses of Congress on Feb. 12, at which time the candidates receiving a majority will be officially declared elected President and Vice President of the United States.

The former Commissioner of Indian Affairs, Mr. R. G. Valentine, recently recommended that the American Government leave the Indians alone and allow them the same right to manage their own affairs that all other inhabitants of this country have. His request seems fair enough, but this writer's experience in business dealings with Indians causes him to believe that, because of their inherent disposition to live in ease, they would soon spend their substance in dissipation and become a public charge to the nation.

A press dispatch dated Jan. 16 states that President-elect Wilson has written a letter to Mr. W. C. Eustis, who is in charge of the plans for his inauguration, requesting him to omit the usual inaugural ball. It is quite comforting to know that there is about to enter the White House a man who will reflect the true principles of Christianity. It would look somewhat incongruous for Governor Wilson, the son of a Presbyterian minister, and himself for many years a teacher in Methodist and Presbyterian church schools, to be the guest of honor at a dance.

The popular vote in the recent Presidential contest is set down as follows: Wilson, 6,293,454; Roosevelt, 4,119,538; Taft, 3,484,930; Debs, 900,672; Chafin, 206,275; Reimer (Social labor candidate), 28,750. The Roosevelt and Taft vote combined was 74,380 less than the Taft vote in 1908; the Wilson vote was 115,650 less than that of Mr. Bryan four years ago; the Chafin vote was 47,535 less than that of Mr. Swallow, the prohibition candidate, in 1908. But Mr. Debs received 360,907 more votes than were cast for himself, Watson and Hisgen combined in the preceding Presidential race. These figures would seem to indicate that Socialism is growing rapidly in the United States, and that it is gaining recruits from all the other parties.

A LETTER FROM CUBA.

We left New Orleans at 11 o'clock Saturday morning, Jan. 11, on the steamship Chalmette for Havana. The trip was a delightful one as far as the weather was concerned. The officers were all one could desire—polite and attentive. It was very gratifying that not an oath was heard on the entire trip. Swearing is an abominable habit and no gentleman should have to suffer the humiliation of hearing vile language. The first morning at sea only a few were at breakfast, and those who were, appeared as if they had been in a wreck. The writer felt as if he were leaving the United States to escape punishment for some crime. The charms of the sea had then all disappeared. There were several newly married couples on board, and to their credit each couple was dignified. Neptune has great power to calm the mind and heart, and we most ardently recommend a sea trip to those who are starting out on "life's tempestuous voyage." There is no land in more perfect harmony with the joys of early married life than Cuba. With flowers on which the touch of frost has never fallen, with the breath of the lemon and orange blossoms in the air, with the songs of countless birds, and the company of the Cubans whose life is one of constant childhood, Cuba is an ideal place for bridal couples.

Monday, Jan. 13, at 11 o'clock a.m., our steamship passed into the Havana harbor under the shadow of Morro Castle. President Bardwell of Candler College gave us a gracious welcome. The college, now in new buildings, is enjoying a most prosperous season. The main building has been completed at a cost of approximately $40,000. The institution is located on the outskirts of the city of Havana and is on a high hill overlooking the sea. No more beautiful place could have been selected for its site. This college will play an important part in giving to the inhabitants of this beautiful country proper views of home life, of government, and of God.

The name of Candler will give an added interest to this school. Few men are loved here as Warren Candler is. He has been most intimately connected with our Church on this island from the beginning. If he lived in Cuba he would be known as the leading statesman. Candler College will be dedicated on Tuesday, Jan. 21. To attend this service is the object of my visit.

The Conference is now in session at Santa Clara, the capital of Santa Clara Province. The capitol building is new, and is one of the most attractive structures to be found in any country. The city has 20,000 inhabitants; it is on the Cuban Railroad, 200 miles from Havana.

Bishop Candler has been coming to Cuba for sixteen years. The Conference sessions are very spiritual. Indeed, it is a spiritual tonic to be with these missionaries. The year has been an unfavorable one for our Church work. The revolution and presidential election have tended to divert attention to other things, and have hindered the efforts of our laborers in this field.

The election of President Menocal seems to have given great satisfaction among the people. They call him the man of destiny.

Among the Methodists of Cuba there is the spirit of optimism. No Conference ever had a truer body of men. With Baker, Clements, Parker, Smith, Gilbert, Bardwell, Stewart, Muller, Hopkins, Hill, Alonso, Caperton, Neblett, and Hester to lead, the Church goes forth to war with victory in sight.

SOME RULES FOR THE NEW CHURCH YEAR.

1. Spend no less than thirty minutes each day in the devotional study of the Bible and in prayer.
2. Try if possible to speak to at least one person each day about his soul; and invite him and as many others as you can to the church service.
3. Bring one or more new scholars to the Sunday school every Sunday.
4. Attend the Wednesday evening prayer meeting, and take part whenever there is opportunity.
5. Endeavor by God's help to persuade one or more persons each week to definitely accept Christ as a Savior.

If a person keeps the above rules he will spend during the next twelve months one hundred and eighty hours or more in Bible study and prayer; he will invite three hundred and sixty-five or more souls to Christ and the Church, he will bring fifty or more to the Sabbath school; he will attend fifty prayer meetings, and he will probably lead fifty or more persons to Christ. If all our members would adopt the same or similar rules, and by God's help live up to them, what great things might be accomplished by our Church during this new year!—Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

CHRISTMAS AT THE SCARRITT BIBLE AND TRAINING SCHOOL.

Sometimes our dreams come true. This is what happened to me when I enjoyed the good fortune of spending the Christmas holidays in that institution which should be the pride of every woman in Southern Methodism, the Scarritt Bible and Training School, in Kansas City, Mo. A daughter in training for mission work, and a sister who has been for many years the beloved Bible teacher in this school, furnished an occasion for the visit, which occasion I was quick to take advantage of. These dear ones gave me a warm welcome, to which was added a gracious greeting from Miss Gibson and the other members of the faculty to a humble fellow-worker for the cause of missions, and yet another by the young women of the student body to the mother of one of their number.

It would be impossible in this brief space to do justice to all the pleasures of those happy days, but I feel I would be depriving my sisters in the Mississippi Conference of inspiring information, and my Scarritt friends of the due acknowledgment of their courteous hospitality, were I not to attempt at least a brief description of the school and the life there as I saw it during that memorable Christmas week.

Beautiful for situation is the Training School, built as it is on the high bluff overlooking the Missouri River. Kansas City is built on more hills than Rome was, and Scarritt is built on the highest point in the city. The buildings are attractive and most admirably suited to the purpose for which they exist. The site, with $25,000, was the gift of Dr. Nathan Scarritt of Kansas City to the women of Southern Methodism for the establishment of a school in which young women should be trained for Christian service. This session makes the twenty-first year of its existence.

After a week's observation of the methods and management which are in force at this institution, I am confident that nothing is being omitted in the training of these young women that would aid in fitting them for the highest degree of proficiency. The religious training is deep and helpful. The quiet morning watch before the gong sounds for breakfast, the family worship around the breakfast table, the constant expressions of love and sympathy for each other, the busy ministries for the needy ones outside, and the vesper service with which the day closes, all testify that "Christ is the head of this house."

I saw the institution during the holiday period, but I discovered that the training given in the classroom is of the highest order. Each member of the faculty is a specialist in her department, and the course of study and methods pursued are admirably adapted to the needs of those who desire to become skilled workers in our Master's vineyard. Miss Mabel K. Howell, the teacher of Church History and Sociology, is a university woman, and brings to her work a rich endowment of personality and scholarship, which she gives most lovingly for the equipment of these young women. Miss Gay, teacher of Religious Pedagogy, is from New England, and has been at Scarritt but a few years, but her efficient instruction and beautiful spirit have won for her a large place in the life of the school. Mrs. Mary Lipscomb Hargrove is not only the able teacher of the Bible, but is the tender, sympathetic friend and wise counselor to the students during these days of testing for service.

Over all, as the presiding genius of the home and school, the mother of the household, is Miss Maria L. Gibson, who from the beginning has been the Principal. Too much praise cannot be accorded Miss Gibson for the standards she has set and maintained and the results obtained. With great joy she read to me a card written by a friend traveling in the East, on which were these words: "Everywhere, your Training School girls shine as lights in the dark." This is what she has labored and prayed for, and God has richly blessed her labors and answered her prayers.

A course in domestic science is required of all students, and the housekeeping, presided over by Mrs. Jackson, is one of the most attractive features of the Training School life, and in itself constitutes a thorough course in household economics. The young women do all of the housework, and the most painstaking care is exercised to secure not only the most perfect cleanliness, but beauty. I am sure that in many mission fields and in Wesley Houses where graduates from this institution are in charge, there is a grateful acknowledgment of the benefits of this feature of the life there. Business training, without which women are so often hampered in their work, is supplied by a course in bookkeeping under Miss Elizabeth Billingsley, the accomplished Secretary and Treasurer.

I should like to describe all the days spent at Scarritt that every reader might see how the social instinct is trained and developed by the home life, but I will only attempt a short description of Christmas Day. Nowhere could the Christmas celebration be more in accord with the spirit of Christ than here, where every heart is His dwelling place. For days a spirit of mystery and joyous anticipation had enveloped the household, the meaning of which was fully revealed when on Christmas morning we saw the beautifully decorated parlors and dining room and the great number of gifts. We were awakened in the early morning by a group of seniors singing a carol in the halls. In the parlors we were greeted by another group of them dressed in costumes of long ago, and these gave us a most stately welcome to the home-coming at the "Laying Manor." After we had all sung "Joy to the World," they delivered the gifts with merry speeches. While the personal gifts brought much joy, there was one for the Scarritt Bible School which swallowed up all individual joys in a great flood of household joy, and that was a gift of silver from the Board of Managers and local friends in honor of the twenty-first anniversary of the founding of the school. This consisted of six dozen each of knives, forks and tablespoons, and twelve dozen teaspoons and eight carving sets. "Praise God from whom all blessings flow" was spontaneously sung by the happy family. The Christmas dinner was truly a feast of good things, most exquisitely served. The company lingered long around the table in merry conversation. An appropriate story, charmingly read, and a Christmas song brought this part of the day's pleasures to a close.

On this day the vesper service was another feature worthy of special mention. Many were the testimonies to the nearness and preciousness of Christ on this anniversary of his birth. Miss Gibson read many letters and cards from the Training School's daughters whose hearts turned back to the happy Christmas seasons spent here. These written messages mingled harmoniously with the words of those present, who said, "This is the happiest Christmas I have ever spent," and I realized that the Training School's daughters at home and out in the world at work for the Master are one family in Christ.

The last event of the day was rather an overflow of pleasure, as there had been as much crowded into the previous hours as could be contained; but on the twenty-first birthday of "Miss Scarritt," she must have gifts showered upon her, and this time it was a linen shower. Mrs. Jackson and the juniors were responsible for this, as they had several months before presented to the auxiliaries in the different Conferences the great privilege of making gifts of linen on this occasion, and this privilege had been most eagerly embraced. While we enjoyed music and conversation in the drawing rooms after vesper service, there was a sound of horns heralding the entrance of the juniors bringing two hamper baskets of linen which they presented to Miss Gibson, who so truly embodied "Miss Scarritt," with a most appropriate speech. Out of the fullness of a happy heart Miss Gibson responded most feelingly. Bishop Hendrix, who is often an honored guest, and always a valued friend and counselor to the members of the Training School family, gave in a humorous way a sketch of "Miss Scarritt's" beginning and twenty-one years of life. The linen shower was a most worthy one, and contained many beautiful and useful pieces, which represented the loving thought of many women in far away auxiliaries.

I shall always cherish the memory of this beautiful Christmas as one of the best gifts of my Heavenly Father, and shall carry its precious influence through all my future days. I would that all the women of Southern Methodism could know the school and what it stands for, from the viewpoint of one who has seen into its heart, as I had the pleasure of doing during these days.

CAUSE GRANDMA CUDDLED ME.

Each morning soon as I'm awake
Before my prayer is said,
Or 'fore I'm ever dressed at all,
I climb in grandma's bed,
I put my arms about her neck
And she puts hers 'round me,
And I just lie so comfy there
While grandma cuddles me.

She talks to me so soft and low
About "this clean, new day,"
And what I'd ought to put in it
Of study, work, and play.
It really is the queerest thing,
But true as true can be,
It's easy to be good all day
'Cause grandma cuddled me.

THE RIGHT KIND OF BOY.

A boy who had thoughtlessly hurt the feelings of a friend called in the evening and said: "Is Theodore in? I want to see him." The two had a few moments' earnest talk, after which Theodore came back to the living room with a very bright face. "Kenneth is a good fellow," he said, as his mother looked up inquiringly. "He was rather horrid to me to-day when I made an error on the third base, and he came around to-night to apologize. He said he was sorry that he had been rude and he thought he had been unfair. There are not many fellows who take the trouble to ask your pardon when they have been in the wrong." "Kenneth is a manly boy," said Theodore's father. "Yes, and a generous one," the mother added. "We are glad to have you cultivate the friendship of a boy such as Kenneth. You won't go far astray when in his company."—The Comrade.

NAMES OF THE MONTHS, THEIR ORIGIN AND MEANING.

January—After the Roman god, Janus—deity with two faces—one looking into the past and the other gazing into the future.

February—Latin ferruaro, to purify. The Romans observed the festival of purification during this month.

March—Named after an old god of war. Among the Saxons this month was known as Lenet, spring. This is the origin of our word Lent.

April—Latin, aperio, to open, opening of the flowers. The Saxons called the month Eastre, in honor of their goddess of spring, whence our word Easter.

May—Named after Roman goddess Maia, the mother of Mercury, to whom the Romans sacrificed on the first of the month. It was the third month of the old Roman calendar. The Romans considered it unlucky to marry in this month, on account of the celebration of the Lemuria.

June—So called in honor of Juno. Ovid also gives derivation as juniores, while others connect his name with Junius, or with the consulate of Junius Brutus. It may have an agricultural reference as, originally, it denoted the month in which crops grow to ripeness. Originally it had twenty-nine days. Caesar added the thirtieth.

July—Named in honor of Julius Caesar.

August—Gets its name from Augustus Caesar.

September—From the latin, septem, seventh month according to the old Roman calendar.

October, November and December retain the names they were known in the old Roman calendar, when there were but ten months in the year: Octo, novem and decem, meaning, eight, nine and ten.—Presbyterian.

SARAH JANE, ASSISTANT M.D.

Sarah Jane lived with Dr. Knipe, and in some of his cases even the kind and wise physician would not have known how to get along without her assistance. She never looked at people's tongues, nor felt their pulse, like the doctor did, but she was often worth more than medicine to some of his patients. Indeed, Sarah Jane might have been regarded as medicine, since it is something that helps to cure people when they are sick; for sometimes medicine is fresh air, or sunshine, or exercise, or even a good laugh.

Sarah Jane was a little black-and-tan terrier, so small that in very cold weather the doctor carried her in the pocket of his great fur coat. Often when the doctor and the fathers and mothers of the sick boys and girls were unable to get them to do what was needful for their recovery he would say: "Oh, I understand this case; all he needs is a dose of Sarah Jane," and she would always come to their assistance.

There was Helen Bath, who would not take the milk the Doctor had ordered; so the next morning when he came he brought Sarah Jane with him.

"Sarah Jane, you show Helen how a little lady takes her milk when the Doctor orders it." And Sarah Jane sat up on a chair beside the Doctor, looked very obedient as he fastened his handkerchief about her neck. Then the doctor took from his medicine-case a little glass and a tube, poured some milk into the glass, and as he held it Sarah Jane slowly drank it through the tube.

Helen laughed, and thought she might drink some, too, if she had a small glass and a tube like Sarah Jane used.

"Why, here are both in my case," said the Doctor: "and now you show Sarah Jane how you can drink it."

Helen really got to like the milk, and she would ask for it every hour, but she couldn't drink it without the little glass and tube.

Harry Wagner had the measles, and did not want to take his medicine; so the Doctor had to call in his assistant.

"Sarah Jane, you show Harry how to take it, will you?" and she jumped up on a chair, opened her mouth, and the Doctor gave her some out of a special bottle. Harry laughed, and opened his mouth, and thought it great fun to take it every time the clock struck the hour.

Charlie Lewis had broken his leg by a fall, and when it was taken out of the cast he was afraid to try to put his foot to the floor, for it hurt him every time he attempted to do so.

"Well, never mind to-day, Charlie; I'll bring my assistant with me to-morrow, and she will show you how to do it."

The next morning the Doctor and his assistant came to see Charlie.

"Charlie, this is my assistant," said the Doctor. "Speak to Charlie, Sarah Jane." Sarah Jane stood up on her hind feet and said, "Bow! wow! wow! wow!" which the Doctor said meant "How do you do?"

"Now, Sarah Jane, show Charlie how you walk when you are lame." And she started off on her two hind feet, limping a bit as she went.

"You try it, Charlie, and see if you can do as well," kindly urged the Doctor. Charlie tried, and though it hurt him some, he persevered, and was soon able to run about as well as ever.

All the boys and girls wanted the Doctor to give them Sarah Jane, but he always said, "I'd almost have to go out of practice, as far as boys and girls are concerned, if it were not for her, she is such a valuable assistant. Come, Sarah Jane, we must go to some one else who needs us." And the Doctor would open his big pocket, and Sarah Jane would slip into it, and away they would go. Always, as they left the room, the patient would say: "Bring Sarah Jane to-morrow, will you, Doctor?"—Frank E. Graeff, in Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

HOW TO ASK FAVORS.

"I want to ask a favor of you, Mr. Carson."

The youth who said this entered Mr. Carson's office in the early morning and hung about for some time as if he had some mighty burden upon his mind which he was unwilling to confess. When he managed to say the few words that revealed his object in coming, his tone said: "I don't believe you'll do what I want you to do."

"What a woe-begone face you wear," said the good gentleman briskly. "And you speak in such a doleful way that I suppose you think, of course,

I'm the last man you would ask if you had your choice. It is a poor compliment you pay me, asking a favor after that fashion, let me tell you. What do you want? Out with it in a manly manner, and if it is a reasonable request I'll grant it if I can."

At this the young petitioner's face brightened, and he made his request in a straightforward manner. It was fear of refusal that had influenced him in the first place. It proved to be a groundless fear, but he saw clearly afterward that however he felt, it was a mistake to ask for anything as if he did not expect it.

"Here is an old saying for you to remember," said Mr. Carson, after granting the desired favor: 'A cheerful asker is the next thing to a cheerful giver.' Don't ask as if your request were the last resort and a forlorn hope. That will go far to make it so. Don't claim a favor as a right, but ask for it hopefully, if it is reasonable. Be a cheerful asker.—Young People's Weekly.

SHALL THE CANTEEN BE RESTORED?

The following press dispatch, bearing date of January 8, was sent out from Washington, D. C.: "Secretary of War Stimson and a number of high officers of the Army, including Major General Wood, Chief of Staff, and Surgeon General Tawney, are expected to appear before the House Committee on Military Affairs to-morrow to advocate the Bartholdt Bill for the restoration of the army canteen. Among others to be heard by the Committee will be Mrs. Alice G. Burbank, who has led the wives of many Army officers in an effort to have the canteen restored."

We publish this dispatch that the friends of the temperance cause in Mississippi and Louisiana may see the importance of doing what they can to defeat this movement to open saloons again in connection with our various Army posts; for, stripped of all deception, that is really what the canteen is. It should be remembered that by no means all of the Army authorities are favorable to the legislation proposed by Mr. Bartholdt. The late General Frederick D. Grant, who had abundant opportunity for observation, and who was noted for his sound judgment, was an uncompromising opponent of the army canteen; and it has been but a short time since we printed in the Advocate a statement sweepingly condemning it from many eminent physicians and scientists who have had opportunity to observe its effects.

But we do not need to argue this question with the readers of the Advocate. The morals and behavior of the men in the Army may need to be improved, but to place intoxicants easily within their reach would be a poor way to better conditions. The notion that our soldiers must have stimulants because of the kind of life they lead in reality has nothing to sustain it. Robert E. Lee, the greatest soldier that the English-speaking race has ever produced, and one who saw something of hard campaigning, uttered the following memorable words: "My experience through life has convinced me that, while moderation and temperance are commendable in all things and beneficial, abstinence from spirituous liquors is the best safeguard to morals and health." We dare say that if the Chaplains in the Army were to express their views as to the effect of the canteen, it would be quite different from that of the officers whose names appear above. The truth is, the influence of the liquor forces in the affairs of our Government is far-reaching and powerful. Indeed, it is not unlikely that if an honest investigation were made to show to what extent they are shaping legislation, disclosures would result even more startling than those which have followed from uncovering the secret doings of the money magnates and trusts.

If you are interested in keeping the canteen out of the Army, write the Congressman from your district and the Senators from your State, asking them to oppose the Bartholdt measure, or what would perhaps be better, get up a petition from your community urging them to stand against it. True, the bill is yet before the Committee, but there is no wisdom in waiting to see if it is favorably reported. Even if it should not be recommended for passage, it will do no harm to let our national legislators see that the prohibitionists among their constituents are wide-awake and watchful.

THE BALKAN WAR.

At this writing there seems to be but little prospect of the ambassadors representing Turkey and the Balkan States, who have been in Conference in London for some weeks, agreeing upon terms of peace. Indeed, their sittings have ceased and they have stated that they are only tarrying as a matter of form and courtesy until the Governments at home, to which the questions at issue have been referred, shall have officially recognized the futility of further negotiations. The chief points of disagreement have been as to the disposition of the beleaguered city of Adrianople and the Aegean Islands, the Allied Powers insisting that Turkey must surrender them, and the latter stubbornly refusing to do so.

The six great Powers of Europe, which through accredited representatives also gathered in London but sitting as a separate body, have been parties to this consultation, seem, in the main, to have pursued a conciliatory and commendable policy. We mean, of course, that so far as their actions have been in the open they appear to have done this. But, as ex-Senator Beveridge pointed out in our recent Presidential campaign, there is such a thing as "invisible government" which often is more potent than that which is visible, and what the jealous and suspicious European nations may have done in secret it is now impossible for the general public to know.

The civilized world will regret to see Turkey and the Balkan States again unsheathe the sword. Already, if we may believe the statements of the newspaper correspondents who are near the scene of hostilities, this has been one of the bloodiest wars of modern times. Mr. Frederick Palmer states that, with a population of only 4,000,000, Bulgaria alone has put an army of 300,000 in the field. And of these soldiers he estimates that in two months of fighting 75,000—one out of every four or five—have been struck by bullets or shrapnel. He places the number of the slain at 15,000, and the number dying from disease at 5,000. He figures the number killed and taken off by sickness in all the armies in the field, on both sides, at more than 60,000. The number of the wounded, some of whom will yet die, and many of whom will be left hopelessly crippled and maimed, is, of course, many times that large. When the short period that the conflict was in progress is considered, this is indeed an appalling record.

We can scarcely conceive of anything more horrible than war, yet sometimes it is the only recourse left a suffering people. It is our opinion that the Balkan States had just grounds for an appeal to arms. The cruel oppression of Turkey has long been one of the blackest outrages of the modern world. Her cup of iniquity was full and running over. The Allied Powers should have the sympathy and prayers of the good people of all lands, and if they succeed in driving "the bloody butcher" out of Europe, they will be entitled to the applause and gratitude of mankind.

A FIRE AT MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

On Thursday night, January 16, at 7:30 o'clock, while the students were assembled in the study room and engaged in the preparation of their lessons, fire broke out in the attic of Founder's Hall on the Millsaps Campus, and by 10:30 o'clock had practically destroyed that substantial three-story brick building. This structure was erected about twenty years ago by the Northern Baptists, who then were maintaining a college for colored young people in Jackson, as the main building of their institution. It, together with some smaller buildings and the land attached, was purchased by Major Millsaps some ten years ago at a cost of $40,000, and, with the exception of a little of the land, was donated by him to Millsaps College. Founder's Hall (the name given to the principal building acquired by this purchase) has for the past two and a half years been the home of the Millsaps Preparatory School, which has been detached from the college proper. In it the subfreshman students lived and had their recitations.

The fire is thought probably to have originated from an uninsulated electric wire. A blaze is said to have broken out in the same part of the building on the Sunday night preceding, but was extinguished by some students who happened to discover it in time. Major Millsaps is reported to have estimated the loss sustained at $15,000 or more. The amount of insurance carried was $25,000 on the building and $1000 on the furnishings. The Board of Trustees no doubt will see that the old building is reconstructed, or an entirely new one erected, with the least possible delay. We think it is quite safe to predict that within a few months, at the latest, even a better structure than the one destroyed will take its place on the Millsaps College campus.

AN ADMIRABLE CHOICE.

At a meeting of the Mississippi State Board of Health in Jackson on January 14, Dr. E. H. Galloway of that city was chosen Executive Secretary of that body, succeeding Dr. W. W. Smithson, who on February 1 will become Superintendent of the State Hospital for the Insane. The position to which Dr. Galloway has been elected is one of great honor and large responsibility, and his choice was a fitting recognition of his superior equipment as a physician and his general administrative ability. He was graduated from Millsaps College with an A.B. degree in 1900, and from the Medical Department of Vanderbilt University in 1903, after which he located in Jackson, Miss., for the practice of his profession, in which he was notably successful from the beginning. He was City Physician of Jackson from 1906 to 1911, and was also the County Health Officer of Hinds County for the years 1910 and 1911. He is at present a member of the Jackson Board of Health, a member of the Surgical Staff of the State Charity Hospital, and the Chairman of the Section of Surgery of the Mississippi State Medical Association. Dr. Galloway is the only living son of the lamented Bishop Charles B. Galloway, and he has much of the charm of manner and force of personality of his distinguished father. The people of Mississippi may feel assured that the task of safeguarding the public health in that commonwealth has been committed to capable and conscientious hands. Without disparaging any other, we do not hesitate to say that in our judgment no better selection of a man to fill this important office could have been made.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. G. W. Huff requests us to state that his address is Hattiesburg, Miss.

Rev. J. S. Duke, pastor of the Southside Methodist Church of Corinth, Miss., states that his work has opened well, and that he is expecting a fruitful year.

Rev. U. D. Mooney, pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church of Birmingham, has accepted a call to the Napoleon Avenue Presbyterian Church of New Orleans.

The people of the Flora charge, Mississippi Conference, have given Rev. G. P. McKeown, their new pastor, a royal welcome. Brother McKeown is busy getting things in hand, and is hopeful of success in his new field.

Brother J. H. Ramsey, a highly esteemed layman, formerly of Timberville, but now of Houston, Miss., in renewing his subscription, expresses in generous words his appreciation of the Advocate. He also states that he finds Methodism flourishing and well to the front in the town which has become his new home.

Rev. J. A. Hall, our popular pastor at Grenada, Miss., writes: "Things are going on well in this delightful charge. We have had 11 accessions since Conference. The stewards fixed the salary at $1600, an increase of $100 over last year." It is not unusual to hear of advancement in the pastorate favored with Brother Hall's ministry and leadership.

The Sailors' Rest, at Gulfport, Miss., under the able management of Rev. W. T. Griffin, has enjoyed an unusually large attendance of late. The ladies of the W. C. T. U. of Mississippi recently prepared and gave to sailors coming into this port five hundred "comfort bags."

The Monroe District Stewards' meeting will be held on Feb. 3, instead of Feb. 8, as was erroneously announced last week. Presiding Elder Schuble hopes that there will be a full attendance.

Dr. J. W. Lee, the popular pastor of St. John's Church of St. Louis, Mo., and a well known author and lecturer, will visit New Orleans in the early spring. He is announced to lecture in the Parker Memorial Church on March 4, 5 and 6.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Smith, of Durant, Miss., have issued cards announcing the marriage of their daughter, Miss Odel, to Mr. Wm. Curtis Herbert, at their residence, at 1 o'clock, Jan. 23, 1913. We extend congratulations and best wishes.

Rev. R. M. Brown has made a most excellent beginning as pastor of the Algiers Church of this city. He reports that he has received 15 new members into the Church, and that there has been an increase in the Sunday school enrollment every Sunday since Conference.

Rev. Thomas H. Mills, of Kossuth, Miss., is rendering excellent service in that fertile field. He is preaching to large congregations and has fine prospects for a good year's work. He is planning, and wisely so, to make an active canvass for new subscribers to the Advocate.

Rev. W. M. Commander, of Chester, Miss., who is in the habit of doing nice things for the Advocate, favored us with a list of five subscriptions a few days since, for which we extend to him our thanks. Brother Commander is entering upon his fourth year in his present charge, and considers the outlook highly encouraging.

A pleasant caller at our office last week was Dr. J. C. Ballard, who was until recently a surgeon in the United States Army, but who is now located at Bay St. Louis, Miss., for the practice of his profession. Dr. Ballard has for many years been an interesting contributor to the columns of the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Rev. H. F. Griffin, a son of Rev. C. C. Griffin of the Mississippi Conference, is now serving efficiently his second year as pastor of the Midland Heights Church of Fort Smith, Ark. He has received 96 into the Church since going to that charge. Brother Griffin transferred from the Mississippi Conference to the Arkansas Conference five years ago.

We regret to announce that Rev. J. E. Sampley has found it necessary on account of his health to take a year in absolute rest. He has gone to Georgia, where he hopes the climate will help him. His presiding elder, Rev. T. W. Adams, has released him from the Harrison Circuit, Mississippi Conference, and appointed in his stead his son, Rev. M. F. Adams, to supply the charge.

In a brief communication Rev. E. H. Cunningham, of Myrtle, Mississippi, says: "Our presiding elder, Rev. J. H. Mitchell, was here last Saturday and Sunday. He held our first Quarterly Conference and preached two most excellent sermons. Our people are delighted to be assured of the wise and efficient leadership of Brother Mitchell in the capacity of a presiding elder for another year."

The face of Rev. N. E. Joyner, formerly of the Louisiana Conference, but now in charge of our church in Monterey, Mexico, and director of the Instituto Laurens, located in that city, looks quite familiar in the Baltimore and Richmond-Christian Advocate of Jan. 9. A letter from Brother Joyner concerning the Mansfield College property appears in this issue of the New Orleans Advocate.

The Fifth District of the Orleans-Jefferson Parish Sunday School Association will hold a rally in the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church of this city on the evening of Jan. 24. The meeting will be presided over by Mr. J. H. Carter, the superintendent of the Carrollton Avenue Sunday school, and the principal speaker will be the Rev. Mr. Cochrich, of the German Evangelical Church.

The wives of the New Orleans Methodist pastors met last week and organized themselves into an Association by electing the following officers: Mrs. J. W. Moore, president; Mrs. J. M. Henry, secretary, and Mrs. H. R. Singleton, treasurer. This organization will meet once a month, and will hold its next meeting at the parsonage of Rayne Memorial Church, with Mrs. F. R. Hill, Jr., as hostess.

We regret to be informed of the illness of Sister Johnson, the mother of Mr. J. H. Johnson, of Clarksdale, Miss., who has been confined to her bed in the home of her son in that city for several weeks. We remember Sister Johnson quite well as a member of our church at Hernando, Miss., which it was our pleasure to serve in the early years of our ministry. We hope soon to hear of her recovery.

We are indebted to Rev. J. L. Nell, the pastor of Broad Street Church of Hattiesburg, Miss., for a list of five subscribers. Brother Nell is one of the most promising young ministers in the Mississippi Conference, and is doing much to strengthen Methodism in his present field of service. He is fortunate in having the co-operation of a number of most excellent people in his work.

Among those who attended the Southern Publishers' Association, which met in New Orleans last week, was Mr. D. R. Barbee, the enterprising and resourceful Managing Editor of the Mobile Register. That he called at the Advocate office was shown by a card left on our desk, but unfortunately we were out, and failed to see him. We feel a distinct disappointment in having missed this opportunity for a chat with him.

Rev. H. H. Smith, pastor of the M. E. Church, South, at Alberta, Va., has had printed a very neat card that he is distributing among his members, with a view to enlisting them in a systematic reading of the Bible. He has the plate for printing these cards, and can furnish them at a low cost. Persons interested in promoting a similar work in their communities might do well to write Brother Smith in regard to his plans.

The Times-Democrat recently announced the entrance of Rev. E. P. Craddock (who for many years was a preacher in our Church) into the Presbyterian ministry. He was received by the Tuscaloosa Presbytery. The Presbyterians are given to priding themselves upon having a highly educated ministry, but they generally seem to be willing to take Methodist preachers into their ranks when they can get them, without any very great stressing of the matter of scholastic attainments.

Rev. W. W. Perry, our pastor at Haynesville, La., has been ill nearly ever since his arrival in his new charge, and has not yet been able to see many of his people. He states, however, that they have been exceedingly kind and attentive, and now that he has recovered sufficiently to be up, he expects soon to be fully in touch with them and to have his work well in hand. We thank Brother Perry for the assurance that he will take care of the interests of the Advocate in his rounds.

In a note to the Editor, Dr. T. C. Wier, an honored veteran of the North Mississippi Conference, whose home is at Starkville, Miss., says: "Our new pastor, Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, has been given a cordial reception by his congregation, and is starting well in this important pastoral charge." Serving where one of the largest male colleges in the South is situated, and where he is in touch with hundreds of young men who hail from every part of Mississippi, Brother Lipscomb's opportunity is, indeed, an inspiring one.

It will be pleasing intelligence to our readers to learn that Mr. J. R. Pepper, of Memphis, Tenn., who met with a serious accident at Waynesville, N. C., some weeks ago, is able to be out again, having apparently recovered completely from the injuries that he sustained. No son of Wesley anywhere has wrought more faithfully for the Master than this noble layman, and few have touched helpfully so wide a circle of men and women; and it is no wonder that he is loved and honored around the world for his work's sake.

If all the stewards of your charge take the New Orleans Christian Advocate, please report the fact to us. If they do not take it, why not set out at once to get them to do so? We cannot expect much from officials who do not know what is going on in religious circles. Bishop Hughes, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, propounds the following inquiry, which is well worth reflecting upon: "Do you know any layman, exercising a vital influence in the local and general life of the Church, who is not taking and reading his church paper?"

Brother and Sister H. E. Carter, lately engaged as assistants at the Mississippi Orphans' Home at Jackson, have entered enthusiastically upon their work in connection with that institution. In the January number of "Our Home," Rev. W. M. Williams, the Manager, speaks commendingly of the interest they are showing in the affairs of the orphanage, and Brother Carter addresses an interesting card to the public. We are pleased to see Brother and Sister Williams so strongly reinforced in the great service which they are rendering the Church.

Our hat is off to Rev. A. M. Broadfoot, of Forest, Miss., who sent us last Monday a club of ten subscribers, with a cheering check to correspond. Referring to his work, Brother Broadfoot says: "We are at Forest to finish our quadrennium, and have been given a most kindly and cordial welcome. The outlook is more encouraging than it has been at any time since my connection with this charge. The people seem anxious to make this the best year of my stay with them. We have, I think, already had an earnest of what awaits us spiritually."

Rev. R. W. Lovett, of Mathiston, Miss., is moving steadily forward with his work, having been cordially greeted by the people at every church that he has visited. He has already received several members by letter, and has forwarded a club of subscribers to the Advocate. A fine beginning for one just starting in the work of the itinerancy!

Rev. J. W. Ramsey, of Mendenhall, Miss., writes: "Our Sunday school at this place has enthusiastic teachers and has been graded. Its already large attendance is increasing. The Sunday schools at other points are flourishing. Our prayer meeting at Mendenhall is growing, and I am preaching to crowded houses. The people here are great church goers." Happy himself, Brother Ramsey desired to make some one else happy; so he enclosed in his letter a list of sixteen subscribers, along with the handsomest check that we have laid eyes on in many a day.

To Rev. H. T. Carley, the accomplished Professor of English at Centenary College, Shreveport, we are indebted for the following items of interest: "Rev. W. W. Armstrong has made a splendid beginning at Noel Memorial Church. The seats are being placed in the new building, and we hope that we shall soon be able to occupy it, though nobody knows definitely when it will be ready for use. Our school work is about as usual. All the boys who left during the Christmas holidays have returned, and we have received several new students."

Rev. W. W. Hopper, of Woodville, Miss., says: "A gracious reception was given us by this good people upon our return for another year. We expect to build a new church here before the meeting of the next Annual Conference. Our first quarterly meeting was held on January 5 and 6. Rev. T. W. Adams was with us, and was given a genuine Methodist welcome to our community. We expect this to be the greatest year in the history of the Woodville charge." We thank Brother Hopper for a kindly invitation to attend the Port Gibson District Conference this year, which will meet in his church.

Rev. R. W. Tucker reports that he is in place at Leesville, La., and that he has been accorded a kindly and appreciative welcome. He thinks that the signs are already hopeful, and expects progress during the year now beginning. Elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate appears a note of thanks from Brother Tucker to his many friends for the kindness that they have shown him since his great bereavement in the loss of his beloved wife. He also pays therein a beautiful tribute to his faithful helpmeet, who for years had walked by his side along life's road, but who has now left him for awhile.

Though the circulation of the New Orleans Christian Advocate is chiefly in Mississippi and Louisiana, we have quite a number of appreciative readers in other States, if we may judge by what they write us. Among those who have lately sent renewals, accompanied by kindly words, we note the names of Mr. J. B. Wray, of Memphis, Tenn., and Rev. J. M. Johnson, of Waddy, Ky. The latter says: "Though I am not acquainted with you or any one in your patronizing Conferences, I have a deep interest in your work and your excellent paper." We are grateful to these brethren for their encouraging messages.

Rev. W. S. Lagrone, of Greenville, Miss., whose gifts as a pastor are remarkable, recently issued to the members of his flock a most interesting "New Year Letter." It showed that this church last year had fifty accessions and met all its financial obligations in full. Besides this, $200, in money and goods, was contributed to the Methodist Orphanage at Jackson, $500 was pledged (and part of it paid) to the Tri-State Hospital in Memphis, and the Woman's Missionary Society raised over $400. Brother Lagrone has a large amount of work in contemplation for the coming year, and that this congregation under his leadership will continue to forge forward, we do not at all doubt.

There is talk of breaking the Senatorial deadlock in Tennessee by electing to the upper branch of Congress Mr. C. P. J. Mooney, the editor of the greatest daily in that State, the Commercial Appeal. A loyal Southerner, a friend to the masses of the people, and a man of brilliant intellectual gifts, there is no doubt that Mr. Mooney would worthily wear the Senatorial toga if his fellow-citizens should see fit to confer this honor upon him. We have often been pleased in reading Mr. Mooney's editorials with both his reach of information and his independence of thought. Though loyal to his party, he has a mind of his own, and can do justice to those who belong to the opposition. Men of this stamp are rare in any section of the Union.

On Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 5, 1912, at 5:30 p.m., the Black Water community was made sad by the death of WILLIAM ALEXANDER, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Bogan, aged 3 years and 11 days. He was laid to rest in the Magnolia Cemetery, Baton Rouge, La., the funeral service being conducted by Rev. S. D. Howard. Weep not, father, mother, brother, sister; he is not dead, but is asleep in Jesus. He is only a flower transplanted from earth to heaven to live and bloom in angelic beauty. God only wants the purest and sweetest flowers to bloom in his heavenly home. Ah! we know his bright face, his sweet voice, and footsteps are missed every moment in the saddened home he left. He was always bright and cheerful, and ever ready to make friends with every one, and was greatly loved by all that knew him. He was sick only a few days, and bore his sufferings patiently. I am sure there was rejoicing in heaven over the arrival of dear little William. So, let us all meet him in heaven, where we shall part no more.

A LOVED ONE.

THOMAS HARVEY DILWORTH was born Aug. 7, 1850. He professed religion and joined the Presbyterian Church in 1863, of which Church he remained a member until 1872. He married Miss Delphia Ann Hatley on Dec. 21, 1871. To them were born five children, all of whom are living. His first wife died Oct. 30, 1884. On Jan. 28, 1885, he married Miss Fannie E. McHaffey. To them were born eight children, five of whom are living. He died Dec. 5, 1912. He was a devoted husband and father. A faithful wife and nine children survive him, to whom we extend deepest sympathy. As a member of the Church and as a Christian he was faithful unto the end. He united with the M. E. Church, South, in 1872. Although he suffered much during the last few months of his life, he endured it all with patience, and was ready to respond to the last call. Not only will he be missed at home, but the Church feels that it has lost one of its stays, and the community has lost a good citizen. "The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away."

THOS. H. MILLS.

Mrs. ORA BUTLER WHITTINGTON, the subject of this sketch, was born Aug. 21, 1825, and died May 21, 1912. She was twice married: first, to Thomas Causey. To them two children were born. Mr. Causey died, leaving her a widow. In 1844 she was married to Mr. Whittington. To them were born eleven children, six of whom preceded Brother and Sister Whittington to their reward, leaving five to mourn her death. Sister Whittington was a consecrated Christian, having been converted and having joined the M. E. Church, South, in early life, and having lived a consistent Christian life until death. So, dear children and friends, do not mourn as those who have no hope. We know where to find Aunt Ora, as she was called. She has gone to be with Jesus and the redeemed of the Lord. The Apostle has said, "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord; yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labor, and their works do follow them." The funeral was conducted by the pastor at the home of her grand daughter, after which the deceased was followed by a large concourse of friends and relatives to the family graveyard, where we laid her away by the side of her husband to await the resurrection of the just.

Her pastor, C. H. HERRING.

MRS. ELIZABETH P. DAVIS.

Since our last gathering as a Sunday school our entire congregation has been saddened by the death of our sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Davis, upon whose presence and prayers and labor we have been so accustomed to rely, and whose going away has deprived us of a friend and co-laborer rarely found in any community.

Brief and comparatively uneventful is the story of her placid and beautiful life. She was born in Natchez in May, 1856, the daughter of James T. Balance and his wife, Mrs. Maria Balance. Her own mother dying while she was a young girl, she was reared in the home of Uncle David Gunning, of blessed memory to all the people of Natchez. In 1878 she joined the Jefferson Street Methodist Church by vows, and at the time of her death there were only nineteen people who had been members of this church for a longer time than she had; and among all who have come and gone in these years there have been none truer to their vows and more loyal to the Master than was she.

In April, 1879, she was married to Brother H. B. Davis, her childhood playmate. He survives her, and today sits in the shadow of the great sorrow of his life. To them there was born one child, "Annie," who became the wife of our brother, Robert E. Bost; and they and their children now cherish the memory of one of the tenderest of mothers and grandmothers. Outside of her beautiful and affectionate home life, the center of Sister Davis' life was the Church of Christ. To it she gave the wealth of her love, attention and care. It was fitting that the papers at the time of her death should have spoken of her as a prominent church woman. That was a better tribute than to have wielded the largest influence in the service of worldliness and society. But she was better than that, for she was in the best sense a Christian. No one among us lived closer to the Lord. Quiet and utterly undemonstrative was she, and yet leaving by her untiring devotion, her uniform attendance, her careful life, no doubt as to where her life was hid. "By their fruits shall ye know them."

In the Woman's Home Mission Society she has been for years a leading spirit, especially loving the work of seeing that the pastor's home was in every way properly equipped. No pastor that was ever here has failed to appreciate her loving attention to his every need. We need say little with reference to her work here in the Sunday school, where she has been a faithful and efficient teacher. Her class was the pride of her heart, and she leaves to her girls the benediction of a beautiful life and character. We shall miss her here at every meeting, but we shall not think of her as dead, for along with many others she has but entered into life. And there is not a member of the Jefferson St. Sunday School but that can feel that he has a friend at the Beautiful Gate waiting and watching.

Because these things are true, therefore be it resolved that we spread the foregoing on the record of this school as a faint expression of the appreciation we have for the memory of one whom we have loved and "lost awhile;" that we extend our tenderest sympathy to the household so bereaved by this providence, and that we ask that a copy of these resolutions be published in the New Orleans Advocate.

Signed: H. B. Watkins, H. F. West, A. Trimble, Committee.

Dr. Jowett, of New York, furnishes this happy and very perfect description of the true optimist: "An optimist is a man who can scent the coming harvest while the snow is on the ground; a man who can live in the sunny days of June even while he is in the dingy days of December; a man who can believe in the best even in the arrogant and aggressive presence of the worst."

Tidings From the Field

Pickens, Miss.

I think we are beginning the new year well. We have been kindly received by the good people of this charge. As you know, these people are noted for their kindness and hospitality. We have had many tokens of appreciation since Conference. Indeed, the pastor and his family are remembered here all along through the year, not only by Methodist people, but by others as well. One Baptist brother remembered us with a fine barrel of flour Christmas. Any preacher is fortunate to be pastor of this splendid people. May the Lord help us to be worthy.—J. D. Simpson.

Sidon, Miss.

We have been kindly received by this splendid people for another year, and my work has begun well. Our people remembered us with many nice things Christmas. The pastor's salary has been increased over last year. Our congregations are good. The Leagues and Sunday schools are progressing, and the women's societies are busy. Sidon is to entertain the Durant District Conference, and you, Mr. Editor, have a cordial invitation to be present. Brother Morehead lives here and is a benediction to the entire town, and quite a help to the pastor. This is a growing charge, and we are planning great things for our Lord this year. We will hold our revival meetings in April or May.

—O. P. Armour.

Charleston, Miss.

We are now settled down in our new charge and getting our work fairly well in hand. Our reception here far surpassed our expectations, and was far above what we deserved. Our field here is broad and promises much to our Church if properly cultivated. Brother J. W. Bell, my predecessor, is held in high esteem by this people, just as all faithful men of God should be. Our town is taking on city proportions, having most of the modern conveniences, and is growing all the while. It is a fine business place. We have one of the best public school buildings in the State, with over 300 pupils in attendance. The school is presided over by Prof. Andrew Burdine, formerly of Nettleton, Miss. We hope for a great year in our church work. The New Orleans Christian Advocate shall have its share of attention. It grows stronger all the while, and we hope the editor will reconsider his resolution to resign. Come to see us.—D. W. Babb.

Clinton, La.

After a long move from the northwestern to the southwestern part of the State, I find myself and family here in Clinton, with our household goods somewhere on the way (I know not where). The parsonage being in need of repairs, I have had to move into another house furnished us by the good people of Clinton, until the needed repairs can be made. In the meantime, we are doing the best we can at housekeeping. The day we moved into the house prepared for us a gentle breeze seemed to come from every quarter in turn, and with it came all sorts of good things for the parsonage larder. The people are so kind and considerate of our welfare that we feel at home among them already; so, Brother Meek, you can send the Advocate to us here, instead of at Lisbon, for we have decided to live here among these good people. Brother Coleman was here with us a few days last week, and held our first quarterly conference and looked after our welfare. He is a good, considerate and painstaking presiding elder.—J. B. Williams.

Greenville, Miss.

Things are moving off well at Greenville. We look for the greatest year of our quadrennium. The first Quarterly Conference came off last evening with the best attendance we have ever seen and a spirit of optimism and fraternity manifested by all. Our new presiding elder wears his honors with grace and becoming dignity. The work of the district is in safe hands, and we expect the best reports this year the district has ever made. As for Greenville, we are striving to be at the front with a great forward movement along both material and spiritual lines. This is the mind of preacher and people, and we are standing on the promises.

—W. S. Lagrone.

Black Hawk and Acona (North Miss).

These towns are four miles apart, and the first an easy sixteen miles from Lexington, Carrollton and Sidon, on as many different railroads, and twenty-one miles from Greenwood. On every side these larger towns are suburban to the Black Hawk section, and make by all signs a most excellent and helpful environment. A few miles' drive passes for little, and is many times as a complete delight, if en route to a desirable location. A long line of worthy men have driven these roads, from the times of the youthful pastor, C. B. Galloway, and previously, unto the journeying thither of the learned and long prominent Dr. W. T. J. Sullivan, and some later assignments, the very most recent to "ring the gospel bells" at these churches being the Rev. J. H. Bell, late to us from the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. The churches here are very fine for the cost, the two being valued at $7000. The parsonage is fully furnished, and among the best of the Conference, with money in hand to make beautiful the entire premises. We were delightfully received. The rooms were warmed, and ready for use; a sumptuous supper was in waiting, and a cheerful delegation of the membership accorded the welcome. Donations have been frequent, and a fine company of callers took possession on Christmas evening. People of prominence and of great excellence have originated in this section, and the supply is by no means yet exhausted. Others make their home here who are extensively known; and no few of the "younger set," at some later time, will enter the arena of contest for a name upon the temple of distinction. Many from this church membership have departed to the City of Mansions, and some to serve usefully in other congregations, but a great company still remain to perpetuate, in His name, the splendid record of their worthy predecessors. . . . We had a glimpse of West Point and Carrollton in crossing from Shuqualak, and heard kind words of Rev. S. M. Thames, now of Hernando, and of his fortunate successor at Carrollton, Rev. W. W. Jones. . . . Rev. W. C. Carlisle, from Second Church, Columbus, was to have an open door and cheering reception at Shuqualak. . . . We trust for a year of good in this long-time and very interesting Black Hawk and Acona pastorate.—A. H. Williams.

The Sunday School.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

By Rev. R. A. Maddox.

The Teacher Training Class at Mendenhall is progressing nicely, having finished one book, except taking the examination. They meet every Sunday afternoon.

Carry your Bible to the Sunday school class. The teacher and pupil going to the class without their Bibles reminds me of a contractor going to build a house without a saw and hammer. We must have tools with which to do work. The Word of God is the tool for the Sunday school to use.

The Columbia Methodist Church has 421 members and 432 in the various departments of the Sunday school. The Fifth Street Church of Meridian has a little more than 400 members and over 600 are connected with the Sunday school. How do your church roll and Sunday school roll compare?

The Mendenhall Sunday school has taken on new life. The Senior Wesley Bible Class has just been organized, and is divided into three sections. The boys and girls are very enthusiastic in the work, and the fact that they are organized appeals to them. They say they are going to send forth preachers and missionaries from their class. It is a high ideal.

The Sarepta Sunday school is located about ten miles in the country, and is doing up-to-date work. The old people of the community are taken care of in the Sunday school by a wide-awake Home Department, which has about 50 members. Mr. Westrope, the Home Department Superintendent, got on his mule and canvassed the community to secure this membership. Can't others do the same thing?

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

Remember that success belongs to the enthusiastic.

There are three G's needed by Intermediate and Senior teachers: "Grace, gray matter, and ginger."

"Whatever you would find in the Christian life of to-morrow, you must build into the child-life of to-day."

When Christ, the great teacher, was here, no need escaped his notice. All that he taught or did was in response to need. How far can we follow him in this great principle of his life?

Standards are erected to produce work along definite lines: witness the Standards of Efficiency for Sunday schools in our own Church. Dean Brown of Yale says "Sodom would have been saved by ten men. Ten good men, real men, can save any community."

Listen to the real truth as voiced by a great Christian orator as he advised young men on the how and why of religious education. "Religious education and business have a vital relation. Religious education is the chief support of business, the chief relief of business; it challenges the support of business men, and gives to a business man his best investment." Religious education is largely secured in the Sunday school.

The following are a few reasons why handwork should be used: (1) Childhood is an age of expression; (2) the child begins to know only what he does; (3) it affords an opportunity to express the knowledge gained; (4) it intensifies the impression; (5) it affords the teacher the opportunity of seeing what impression the child has gained and gives her a chance to correct wrong impressions; (6) it is one of the strongest links between the home and the school.

No more beautiful Christmas "good-will" was exhibited during the recent holidays than by the Methodist girls of the I. I. & C., under Mrs. Wyatt's skillful leadership. They found out the name and age of many orphans in the Home; these were then checked off, and one girl made herself responsible for the cheer and happiness of one child. The box was all that nimble, artistic and loving fingers could arrange, and brought corresponding happiness. One Methodist teacher also contributed largely to the donation. Surely this was the efflorescence of sweet service!

Some New Year "resolves" made by a class of young girls called the "Ever Ready" Girls' Class are as follows: To look over the magazines each month and clip from them any suggestions which might be helpful in solving class problems, in planning social affairs, or helping a shut-in over a bad half-hour; to sit by the visitor or new pupil in class and make them feel at home; to be prepared to act as substitute teacher; to read the Bible every day; to strengthen the habit of never refusing to do any duty imposed by the teacher; to be "ever ready" to do Christ's work. These resolutions are well worth while equally as character and Sunday school builders.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

It was once recorded of a minister that he was a splendid preacher, but that he spoiled his sermon by manifesting a bad spirit in the delivery of it. So with a teacher a manifestation of impatience, resentfulness, or anger may ruin an otherwise excellent handling of the class recitation. To "think twice before we speak once" is still a good rule.

The Hammond Sunday school has started the new year by inaugurating a Missionary Department, with Mrs. J. B. McGehee as superintendent; a Home Department, with Mrs. Lester Smythe as superintendent; a Cradle Roll Department, with Miss Josie Smollen as superintendent; a Teacher-training Class, with Rev. Elton Wilson as teacher; and a Pocket Testament League, with Mr. Streak as superintendent. A Sunday school annex is in the plans for the near future.

The Sunday school event at the late session of the Louisiana Conference was the unveiling of a splendid portrait of the late Mrs. Jack Parker, founder of the Parker Memorial Bible Class of the Monroe Sunday School, with Rev. R. H. Wynn and Rev. W. W. Holmes, former pastors, as the principal speakers. The sight of the magnificent likeness brought a flood of sacred memories to the minds of the friends and class members present, and deep emotions surged through the hearts of all. Mrs. S. S. Keener, the present teacher, had charge of the program. The class, at the death of the founder, which occurred while Rev. R. H. Wynn was pastor, numbered 175 members; and it is still large and doing fine work.

Rev. W. H. Coleman began his new work as presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District at Hammond, where the district parsonage is located, and in his sermon pledges were made to magnify the Sunday school and League work of his district—to look after the religious life of the young people. No one thing could more surely insure a successful administration. The church that takes care of its children takes care of itself. The Sunday school to-day is chiefly the church of to-morrow, and this presiding elder seems to have discovered this fact. He begins with the foundation when starting to build his house.

Banish Those Ugly Pimples

Skin Cleared in a Short Time by Stuart's Calcium Wafers, the Greatest Blood Purifier Known.

Pimples, blotches, skin eruptions of all kinds, are simply the impurities in the blood coming to the surface. All the external treatment in the world won't do a particle of good unless you purify the blood. And there's nothing so humiliating as a face that's all "broken out" and spotted.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers will clear the most obstinate complexion, because they go right into the blood and remove the cause of the trouble. The blood is cleansed of all impurities and foreign substances and these are quickly eliminated from the system. You'll notice a wonderful change in a few days—you will hardly know yourself in a week.

And Stuart's Calcium Wafers are absolutely harmless to any one. Their ingredients are just what a physician prescribes in most cases of skin eruptions and poor blood. These wafers are put up in a concentrated form, which makes them act quickly and thoroughly.

Begin taking Stuart's Calcium Wafers to-day and then look at yourself in the mirror in a few days, and find all those awful pimples, blackheads, acne, boils, liver spots, rash, eczema and that muddy complexion rapidly disappearing and your face cleared like the petal of a flower.

You can obtain Stuart's Calcium Wafers at any drug store at 50 cents and there is now no reason why any one should be disfigured by pimples or any other skin eruption.

FARM HAULING BY TRACTOR.

Hauling or freighting in the South is a serious problem and a heavy task. It matters not whether it is marketing the crops of the farm, hauling fertilizer and other supplies to the farm, or the freighting and hauling of the contractor. It is an expensive proposition.

Farmers and contractor freighters of the South will welcome the advent of the Old Tractor, the Modern Farm Horse. These tractors will easily and cheaply haul one wagon or a train of wagons on the city streets, the country roads or in the fields.

You do not need specially built wagons. The ordinary farm wagons can be hitched in a string with a cable, a chain or a rope. If it is a contractor, he can use his regular freighting wagons.

One type of these tractors, rated at 40 brake-horse-power, will pull a load requiring 15 to 17 ordinary mules to haul. It is built with two speeds, one of 2-1/4 miles an hour and the other four miles. When used for freighting it will haul a heavy train of wagons at the low speed and return with the empty ones at the high speed. Or it will haul lighter trains at the higher speed. This tractor is especially well adapted to hauling work, because of these two speeds.

These tractors are used a great deal throughout the world for doing all kinds of agricultural and contract hauling. In addition to this they do all kinds of field work, ordinarily done with horses and mules.

For complete literature on the subject of tractors write the Hart-Parr Company, 324R Lawler Street, Charles City, Iowa.

Woman's Missionary Work

Edited by Mrs. R. F. Harrell, 1329 Josephine St., New Orleans
Conference Press Superintendents:

Louisiana Mrs. A. C. McKinney, Ruston, La.
Mississippi Mrs. H. L. McCleskey, Hazlehurst, Miss.
North Mississippi Mrs. A. C. Yeager, Water Valley, Miss.

All communications for this department should be sent to the Editor at the address given above.

Splendid Work of a First Vice President in the North Mississippi Conference.

To begin with, she is the wife of a preacher whom the Bishop, in his wisdom, saw fit to move, and in the midst of her packing has taken time to write a detailed account of her work. She has written numberless letters in the effort to work up both departments among the children; has met with remarkable success; is ambitious to "catch up" with the Holston and Tennessee Conferences, which still lead in Junior work and the Baby Division. During the fourth quarter she organized four new Junior societies and two adult societies, one at Sumner and one at Webb. She organized the children at Schlater and Webb and North Carrollton.

She sent 17 baby certificates and mite boxes to Indianola and 12 to Coldwater. She also writes that Macon reports a new Junior society with 18 members. Her post office address for 1913 will be Hernando. She requests all first vice presidents to send her a good program on children's work, or children's meeting, as soon as they possibly can from those that she receives she intends to select the best to be used in compiling a book of programs. She wishes to ask if any vice presidents desire to have promotion certificates from the Baby to the Junior Division; if so, she can supply them. She and her husband hope and intend to use every effort to make this the most fruitful year of their ministry.

Mrs. Thames has made a splendid record during all the years in which she has been a leader in the Foreign Missionary work. Now that union has been decreed, she is doing every thing she can to prove that it is the best form of service. She has estimated that as an economic measure it will save in the expenses of the annual meeting the salary of a missionary to some foreign country. Her contemporaries are very proud of her, and her gentle, ladylike ways have won the love of all hearts. A. C. Y.

Meridian and Hazlehurst Notes.

If the presence of their leaders among the soldiers in any army means an inspiration and encouragement, how great things the missionary army of the Brookhaven District ought to accomplish! The recent Conference moves added three more Conference officers to this district, making seven in all.

The auxiliary at Hazlehurst feels that indeed their lines have fallen in pleasant places. In that Mrs. W. H. La Prade, Conference Corresponding Secretary for the Foreign Missionary Department, with her scholarly, consecrated husband, has been sent to them for the coming year. The presence of these two, who have long been identified with missionary affairs in several Southern States, will be of inestimable help to this society.

Central Church, Meridian, has one of the most consecrated Press Superintendents in the Mississippi Conference, Mrs. J. C. Templeton. We would be glad to publish here several articles from her pen, which have reached the desk of the writer, but lack of space forbids. Here are a few items of interest reported in the Meridian Star by Mrs. Templeton:

"The first Monday of the month is devoted to the local work and reports; the second Monday to foreign work; the third Monday to devotional service; the fourth Monday to home missions; and each fifth Monday to the Missionary Voice. The Study Circle meets the first Thursday of each month."

"Miss Womack, the head deaconess at Wesley House, returned to the Home last Thursday, after a vacation pleasantly spent with friends in the city. Miss Tinsley, the assistant deaconess, arrived in Meridian Tuesday night, and will take up her residence at Wesley House right away. We extend to Miss Tinsley a hearty welcome to our midst."

"Work on the new Wesley House is progressing, and the City Board of Missions will soon have a house in which they can carry on their work more effectively. The deaconesses at Wesley House have their sewing class organized, and it is a large one. They have some volunteer helpers in this class. They have instituted a story hour also." MRS. H. L. McCLESKEY.

Report of Miss Knapp, Deaconess at Corinth, Miss.

For the month of December: Number of visits made, 283; visits to the sick, 46; funerals attended, 2; garments given, 3; story hour, total attendance, 132; story hour, average attendance, 26. Christmas donations: 1 barrel apples, 1 box oranges, 1 box raisins, 2 buckets candy, 20 toys, $5 in money. Santa Claus suit and trimmings; W. O. W., toys for 24 children; Y. M. C. B., toys for 9 children. Given out: Toys, candy, and fruit to 96 children; baskets to 18 families; coal to 6 families. Fifty children and a number of mothers were present at the Christmas tree. The Story Hour is progressing nicely. Have rented a whole house now for club work, and am making plans for playgrounds.

Mrs. A. Percy Holt.

We are pleased to learn that Mrs. Percy Holt of Crowley, La., the Foreign Corresponding Secretary for Louisiana, is able to assume her duties as conference officer once more. On account of the illness of her husband, Mrs. Holt has been unable to attend to these matters for a time past. The ladies interested in our work throughout the whole State will be glad to get this important information.

Millsaps Missionary Society.

During the year 1912 the Millsaps Missionary Society has taken on new life. This is a united society, and is composed of women who belong to First Church, Jackson, but who live in the neighborhood of Millsaps College.

As we take a retrospective view of our last year's work, we realize how little we have done when our opportunities for larger things have been so great; but at the close of 1913 we hope to make a better report. We claim for our membership 20 loyal, consecrated women. For the year just closed we have raised for the Home Department $22.45; for the Foreign Department $77.88, making a total of $100.33. We have a fair list of subscribers for the Missionary Voice. We observed the Week of Prayer, and will soon take up the Mission Study work. At our last meeting new officers were elected for the incoming year. We consider ourselves fortunate in having Mrs. A. F. Watkins for our "heloved" President, and feel that our little hand will be led wisely and well to undertake much for the Master. In the several departments, we have fine, capable women who have the success of God's Kingdom at heart.

Smoke of Herbs Cures Catarrh

A Simple, Safe, Reliable Way and
It Costs Nothing to Try.

This preparation of herbs, leaves, flowers and berries (containing no tobacco or habit-forming drugs) is either smoked in an ordinary clean pipe or smoking tube, and by drawing the medicated smoke into the mouth and inhaling into the lungs or sending it out through the nostrils in a perfectly natural way, the worst case of Catarrh can be eradicated.

It is not unpleasant to use, and at the same time it is entirely harmless, and can be used by man, woman or child.

Just as Catarrh is contracted by breathing cold or dust and germ-laden air, just so this balmy antiseptic smoking remedy goes to all the affected parts of the air passages of the head, nose, throat and lungs. It can readily be seen why the ordinary treatments, such as sprays, ointments, salves, liquid or tablet medicines fail—they do not and can not reach all the affected parts.

If you have catarrh of the nose, throat or lungs, choking, stopped-up feeling, colds, catarrhal headaches; if you are given to hawking and spitting, this simple yet scientific treatment should cure you.

An illustrated book which goes thoroughly into the whole question of the cause, cure and prevention of catarrh will upon request, be sent you by Dr. J. W. Blosser, 204 Walton Street, Atlanta, Ga.

He will, also, mail you five days' free treatment. You will at once see that it is a wonderful remedy, and as it only costs one dollar for the regular treatment, it is within the reach of everyone. It is not necessary to send any money—simply send your name and address and the booklet and free trial package will be mailed you immediately.

The Best Cough Syrup is Easily Made at Home

Costs Little and Acts Quickly.
Money Refunded If It Fails.

This recipe makes a pint of cough syrup, and saves you about $2.00 as compared with ordinary cough remedies. It stops obstinate coughs—even whooping cough—in a hurry, and is splendid for sore lungs, asthma, croup, hoarseness and other throat troubles.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle, and add the Sugar Syrup. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours. Tastes good.

This takes right hold of a cough and gives almost instant relief. It stimulates the appetite, and is slightly laxative—both excellent features.

Pinex, as perhaps you know, is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, rich in gualacol and the other natural healing pine elements.

No other preparation will do the work of Pinex in this recipe, although strained honey can be used instead of the sugar syrup, if desired.

Thousands of housewives in the United States and Canada now use this Pinex and Sugar Syrup recipe. This plan has often been imitated, but the old successful formula has never been equaled. Its low cost and quick results have made it immensely popular.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

A NOTE FROM REV. R. W. TUCKER.

I take this means of answering the many friends throughout this and other States who have written to us words of sympathy in our great sorrow. We greatly appreciate your desire to comfort our bleeding hearts, and these kind words have not been in vain. No husband ever had a truer, more devoted wife than was Mrs. Tucker, and those who knew her best know that children never had a more faithful mother. She saw good in all her children and believed that God would answer her prayers for them. Our sorrow is more than we can express in words, but we sorrow not as those who have no hope. We believe that she was fitted for an "abundant entrance through the gates into the City," and we do not doubt that ere the last rays of her setting sun had left the earth, she had sight of gleams from the other shore; and that louder than the death-bells rang the sweet strains of heavenly song, welcoming her to that blessed realm where God the Father crowns the faithful.

But, while the above is my faith concerning her, my poor heart bleeds because of our separation. Yet not once has it questioned the goodness of God, and by his grace I can say, "Thy will be done." God bless each one of you who have done what you could to hold me up in this hour of sadness. May all God's providence bring us closer to him, and may we at last meet and shake glad hands where there are no sad farewells, and death is unknown.

There we shall know as we are known
And see as we are seen—
Bathed in light from the eternal throne

And never a cloud between.
Our natures there will be enlarged,
Our powers all energized;
And with immortal youth surcharged
We'll rise and explore the skies—
Singing forever the old, old story
Sung by all the heavenly host;
And on and on from glory to glory,
Praising Father, Son and Holy Ghost.

Faithfully,
R. W. TUCKER.

OUR WORK AT VICKSBURG.

Dear Brother Meek: Will you please give me space to say a few things about this charge—Washington Street, Vicksburg—for I think some things are taking place that the brethren of the Mississippi Conference should know. Up to this time our Church has been the only denomination working in the southern end of this city, but that is not the case any longer. Last summer the Episcopalians secured a building and have a Sunday school organized, and are holding services regularly every Sunday. Our Baptist brethren have had a second church for some years in the northern end of the city, and it has had a hard struggle. Last summer they secured a lot in the southern end for the purpose of moving as soon as possible. A few days ago Dr. Rowe, Secretary of the State Board of that aggressive and growing Church, came over to Vicksburg and took over all the property of the church and obligated the State Board to build a nice, modern building and parsonage for this second church on the lot in the southern portion of the city. They also have a man of first-rate ability as pastor of this church, and the Board pays him $75 per month to stand by the enterprise. For us to fail now to go forward with our work would be nothing less than forfeiting our chances for the future, and perhaps losing much of what we have already done. We are bound to go ahead and build.

Our new presiding elder has just spent two days and a half in our charge, and he feels that we must have this new building, and will stand by us in our efforts to secure it. It is our purpose to start the building just as soon as we can sell the one we now have (which I think we can do at an early date), and push the matter until we can occupy the main auditorium. The new year opens up with brighter prospects than heretofore, and our people are hopeful and full of faith.

Brother Adams is no novice in the work of the presiding eldership, and puts his trained hands to the wheel with a strong grip, and things in the district have already begun to show the effects of it. He has led our forces wisely in the past, and will do so again. Brother Emery, the new pastor of Crawford Street, has made a fine impression. The church has accepted his leadership and fallen in line for a good year's work. May this be the best year in the history of the Port Gibson District!

W. H. SAUNDERS.

THIS WILL INTEREST MANY.

F. W. Parkhurst, the Boston publisher, says that if anyone afflicted with rheumatism in any form, neuralgia or kidney trouble, will send their address to him at 701 Carney Building, Boston, Mass., he will direct them to a perfect cure. He has nothing to sell or give; only tells you how he was cured after years of search for relief. Hundreds have tested it with success.

PRIMING FOR THE PUMP.

I have just received a copy of the little book, "Priming for the Pump," compiled by Dr. W. F. McMurry, the enterprising and indefatigable Secretary of the Church Extension Board. It bristles with facts. It is full of up-to-date suggestions from men who are doing things. The sermons and addresses by Bishop Marvin, and Revs. Jones, Lewis, Granbery, Seelman, and others, are well worth a careful reading. I should like to see a copy placed in the hands of every foreign missionary in the Church, and a translation made of selected portions adapted to our work in Brazil.

LINCOLN FEATURES IN THE CENTURY.

The February Century will contain three Lincoln features of much interest. One will be an explanation of Lincoln's secret promise to cooperate with McClellan to save the Union in the event of McClellan's election. A facsimile of the manuscript, which is owned by Mrs. John Hay, will illustrate the article. John Langdon Kaine has written of "Lincoln as a Boy Knew Him," giving several anecdotes, both serious and humorous. The third feature will be "A New Story of Lincoln's Assassination," a hitherto unpublished record of an eye-witness, by Jesse W. Weik.

DUMB CHILLS AND FEVER.

Douglasville, Tex.—"Five years ago, I was caught in the rain at the wrong time," writes Miss Edna Rutherford, of Douglasville, "and from that time, was taken with dumb chills and fevers, and suffered more than I can tell. I tried everything that I thought would help, and had four different doctors, but got no relief, so I began to take Cardui. Now I feel better than in many months." Cardui does one thing, and does it well. That's the secret of its 50 years of success. As a tonic, there is nothing in the drug store like it. As a remedy for women's ills, it has no equal. Try it. Price $1.

EVERYBODY PLEASED.

The record of universal satisfaction made by the Advocate Piano Club during the past year is probably unparalleled in history. Of the hundreds of members who have received their pianos and player-pianos not a single case of dissatisfaction has been recorded. On the other hand, it would require a large book to print all the letters of praise and endorsement which have been received during the year.

This record only goes to show how intelligent co-operation and high-class business methods can accomplish results which were heretofore considered impossible. The Club has "made good" on a magnificent scale, and starts the new year with a host of friends and no enemies.

Catalogues and full particulars can be had by addressing the Managers, Ludden & Bates, Advocate Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga.

THAT LOT FOR MANSFIELD COLLEGE.

Dear Dr. Meek: Permit me a few words that I may endorse the efforts of Brother T. H. Morris to buy "the old church lot" for Mansfield College. This lot is the main entrance to the College, and is one half of all the front campus. In my presence, the officials of the local congregation were offered $2000 for the lot, and I am confident they could sell it for $2500. Their only reason for not selling it is that the lot is absolutely necessary to the College. Its sale to an outside party would ruin the appearance, and, in a large measure, the usefulness of the entire College property. Inasmuch as the local church had to buy another lot and build a new church, the interest of their congregation would seem to demand that they at once sell the lot to the highest bidder, but out of loyalty to the College, they refuse to do so, and continue paying interest on their debt.

In view of these facts, the Methodists of the entire State should be glad to raise $1000, in response to the call made by Brother Morris, to meet the very liberal offer made by the Mansfield Methodists. In the face of their pressing financial need, they offer to sell this lot to the College for less than half its actual market value.

One last word: In view of the work being done by President R. E. Bobbitt, we should take special pleasure in making this splendid donation to the College. The resuscitation of Mansfield College is the best single piece of work done for Louisiana Methodism within the past ten years. Hats off to Bobbitt! And, now that they are off, pass them around and send the collection to Brother Morris for the purchase of the lot.

Send attached coupon to-day and I will send you free my illustrated book on Rupture and its cure, showing my Appliance and giving you prices and names of many people who have tried it and were cured. It is instant relief when all others fail. Remember, I use no salves, no harness, no lies. I send on trial to prove what I say is true. You are the judge, and once having seen my illustrated book and read it you will be as enthusiastic as my hundreds of patients whose letters you can also read. Fill out free coupon below and mail to-day. It's well worth your time whether you try my Appliance or not.

Pennsylvania Man Thankful

Mr. C. E. Brooks,
Marshall, Mich.

Dear Sir:—

Perhaps it will interest you to know that I have been ruptured six years and have always had trouble with it till I got your Appliance. It is very easy to wear, fits neat and snug, and is not in the way at any time, day or night. In fact, at times I did not know I had it on; it just adapted itself to the shape of the body and seemed to be a part of the body, as it clung to the spot, no matter what position I was in. It would be a veritable God-send to the unfortunate who suffer from rupture if all could procure the Brooks Rupture Appliance and wear it. They would certainly never regret it.

My rupture is now all healed up and nothing ever did it but your Appliance. Whenever the opportunity presents itself I will say a good word for your Appliance, and also the honorable way in which you deal with ruptured people. It is a pleasure to recommend a good thing among your friends or strangers. I am, Yours very sincerely,
JAMES A. BRITTON,

Mr. C. E. Brooks,

Dear Sir:—I am glad to tell you that I am now sound and well and can plow or do any heavy work. I can say your Appliance has effected a permanent cure. Before getting your Appliance I was in a terrible condition and had given up all hope of ever being any better. If it hadn't been for your Appliance I would never have been cured. I am 68 years old and have served three years in Eckle's Artillery, Oglethorpe Co. I hope God will reward you for the good you are doing for suffering humanity.

The above is C. E. Brooks, inventor of the Appliance, who cured himself and who has been curing others for 30 years. If ruptured, write him to-day.

Yours sincerely,

Others Failed But the Appliance Cured

Mr. C. E. Brooks,
Marshall, Mich.

Dear Sir:—

Your Appliance did all you claim for the little boy and more, for it cured him sound and well. We let him wear it for about a year in all, although it cured him 3 months after he began to wear it. We had tried several other remedies and got no relief, and I shall certainly recommend it to friends, for we surely owe it to you. Yours respectfully,

Cured at the Age of 76

Mr. C. E. Brooks,
Marshall, Mich.

Dear Sir:—

I began using your Appliance for the cure of rupture (I had a pretty bad case) I think in May, 1905. On November 20, 1905, I quit using it. Since that time I have not needed or used it. I am well of rupture and rank myself among those cured by the Brooks Discovery, which, considering my age, 76 years, I regard as remarkable.

Very sincerely yours,
SAM A. HOOVER.

Child Cured in 4 Months

21 Jansen St., Dubuque, Iowa.
Mr. C. E. Brooks, Marshall Mich.

Dear Sir:—The baby's rupture is altogether cured, thanks to your Appliance, and we are so thankful to you. If we could only have known of it sooner our little boy would not have had to suffer near as much as he did. He wore your brace a little over four months and has not worn it now for six weeks. Yours very truly,
ANDREW EGGENBERGER.

Ten Reasons Why

You Should Send For Brooks
Rupture Appliance.

1. It is absolutely the only Appliance of the kind on the market to-day, and in it are embodied the principles that inventors have sought after for years.
2. The Appliance for retaining the rupture cannot be thrown out of position.
3. Being an air cushion of soft rubber it clings close to the body, yet never blisters or causes irritation.
4. Unlike the ordinary so-called pads, used in other trusses, it is not cumbersome or ungainly.
5. It is small, soft and pliable, and positively cannot be detected through the clothing.
6. The soft, pliable bands holding the Appliance do not give one the unpleasant sensation of wearing a harness.
7. There is nothing about it to get foul, and when it becomes soiled it can be washed without injuring it in the least.
8. There are no metal springs in the Appliance to torture one by cutting and brushing the flesh.
9. All of the material of which the Appliances are made is of the very best that money can buy, making it a durable and safe Appliance to wear.
10. My reputation for honesty and fair dealing is so thoroughly established by an experience of over thirty years of dealing with the public, and my prices are so reasonable, my terms so fair, that there certainly should be no hesitancy in sending free coupon to-day.

I send my Appliance on trial to prove what I say is true. You are to be the judge. Fill out free coupon below and mail today.

"Prove All things: Hold Fast That Which is Good."

WHOLE No. 2971.

Editorial

To stand for principle often entails sacrifice, but nevertheless it pays to do so. The gain is greater than the loss, whatever the latter may be. He who barter his manhood for anything else makes a poor bargain.

Mr. C. P. J. Mooney, the Managing Editor of the Memphis Commercial Appeal, who is known as a friend to the dumb animals, is said to be opposed to the war which is now commencing to be waged against the buzzard. It is stated that he does not believe all the doctors are saying concerning the carrying of the germs of disease by the scavenger bird. We think ourself that the evidence adduced is yet rather too circumstantial to warrant the administration of capital punishment.

Dr. Glibert, of the Western Christian Advocate, observes that a convention of German scientists recently declared that "men do their best work between the ages of 45 and 55, and give the richest results of their mental work after 60." It has not been very long since Dr. Osier startled the world by suggesting that men ought to be chloroformed upon reaching their three score years. Truly, ours is an era of conflicting opinions. The fact is, age is no standard by which the intellectual vigor and usefulness of men can be determined. William Pitt filled the world with his fame as prime minister of England when he was but twenty-five years old, and Gladstone was not less great as a premier when the snows of eighty winters had whitened his lofty brow.

The editors appear to be forging to the front. One in Texas and another in Arkansas have lately been honored with seats in the United States Senate, and the press dispatches show that in all parts of the country they are expecting President-elect Wilson to remember them "when he comes into his kingdom." They deserve recognition. Greater fidelity than theirs the world has rarely seen. Do they not stand by their party, right or wrong? Do they not exclude the news which seems to be unfavorable to it, and extol everything that its leaders do and say? And surely they ought to have some compensation for the violence they do their consciences in making forecasts of the elections. Yes, let the occupants of the tripod be rewarded. They have paid for all that could be given them many times over in what they have sacrificed on the unholy altar of party subservency.

OUR INTEMPERANCE PROBLEM.

A writer in the Associated Prohibition Press states that the consumption of distilled liquors in the United States has steadily increased during the past three years, the amount used during the twelve months ending June 30, 1912, being 135,226,789 gallons, an increase of 1,226,596 gallons over the quantity consumed during the preceding year. Even more startling is the statement that the first three months of the current year, as the authorities reckon it (July, August, September, 1912), show an increased consumption over the same period in 1911 of 865,324 gallons. If anything like this ratio is kept up until next July all records will be broken, and the figures will be vastly larger than those of any other year in the history of the nation.

The same authority quoted above informs us that the consumption of beer and fermented liquors for the year ending the 30th of last June was smaller than that of the year preceding by 34,354,758 gallons. This would be encouraging, were it not for the fact that the first three months of the year beginning on the 1st of last July show a decided upward trend in the use of this kind of stimulants, the gain for the single quarter over the corresponding period in 1911 being 13,310,320 gallons. If this percentage of increase keeps up the consumption of this variety of intoxicants during the present year will wipe out the decrease of last year and go considerably beyond that of 1911.

The receipts of the United States Government from the liquor tax last year was $212,042,339, and the amount paid by the people of the United States to liquor dealers in our own country was $1,645,000,000; while the sum that went abroad for imported liquors was approximately $200,000,000. This vast sum would pay for four canals as large as that now being constructed on the Isthmus of Panama, and is $100,000,000 more than the value of the nation's gigantic corn crop of this year (the country's most valuable crop).

This is only the direct expense of the liquor traffic to the American people. The cost of the additional police force and courts which it compels us to maintain and the loss in efficiency in labor resulting from drink are yet to be considered. Including these outlays, it is estimated that it takes $60 for every man, woman and child beneath our flag to maintain this iniquitous business. And who can describe the awful suffering, the horrible crimes, and the fearful wreckage of men and women for time and for eternity that follows in its cruel wake?

And is there not a lesson for us in this rapidly increasing consumption of intoxicants, in spite of the widening sway of prohibition? We regret that we have not before us the figures showing the amount of liquor consumed in each State, so that we could see what the trend in the dry States has been as compared with that in those which are wet. We dare say, however, that such an investigation would show that the increase in drinking has been chiefly, if not wholly, in the commonwealths that are under the dominance of the saloon.

But, after all, do not these distressing figures plainly teach that the fight against intemperance will never be won by legislation alone? To be sure, it helps immensely to strike down the dram-shop, but we must go back of that and teach our people the lesson of temperance in the home, in the church, and in the school, if we would lift from our land the blighting curse of strong drink. If we fail to do this, we will soon lose all, including the sentiment that enacts laws. Have we not been too negligent in this essential work? Do we not find herein the explanation of the increasing consumption of liquors by our people, and the occasional swinging back into the wet column of States that for years had been without the legalized sale of intoxicants? It is our conviction that we imperatively need more scientific temperance instruction and a more vigorous insistence upon temperance as a Christian principle.

There are some who seem to think that if we can secure the passage by Congress of the Kenyon-Sheppard Bill our intemperance problem in the prohibition States will be largely solved; but, though that measure will doubtless considerably help, those who hold this view will find themselves mistaken. There is nothing in the Bill to prevent a man from ordering whiskey for his own use. It merely brings the strong arm of the Federal Government to the assistance of the States in preventing its importation for sale into territory where the State law is against it.

The truth is, there is but one effective solution of the drink question, and that, as we have already suggested, is so to teach and train our children and rear them in such an atmosphere that they will form habits of sobriety and have intelligent convictions as to the evil of intoxicants. This work, of course, includes both the striking down of the saloon and proper and persistent instruction (by both precept and example) by those in a position to give it. And of the two things, we regard the latter as the more important, because if faithfully done, it will accomplish the former, and extend its influence vastly beyond it. It will not only give us dry States, but a sober people as well. In our judgment, the time has come for the old-style temperance lecturer to reappear upon the scene alongside the secretaries of our Anti-Saloon Leagues. And the pulpit needs to open its batteries against dram-drinking and drunkenness, as in the days ago. The demand of the hour is not for less emphasis on legal suasion, but for more of moral and religious suasion. Loud and clear rings the call for more vigorous and aggressive action. Never did brave hearts rally in a nobler warfare than this.

UNDER THE WORLD'S SCRUTINY.

The Christian lives under the espionage of the keen-eyed men of the world. They weigh his every word, carefully watch his actions, seek to interpret his motives, and through these media endeavor to form an estimate of his true character, of what he really is. And their notions of us are far more correct than we sometimes imagine, though when talking of church members and professed disciples of Christ, they do not always express their honest convictions. To counterfeit true piety is one of the most difficult things conceivable. A man may successfully play a part for a time, but he cannot always be on guard and keep his real self out of sight. If a person who is worldly, self-seeking, or in any way insincere, affects to have a genuine Christian spirit and thinks that nobody knows any better, he would be quickly undeceived if he could hear the private conversation of his neighbors.

THE OTHER MAN.

By Emma C. Dowd.

(A copy of this impressive poem was given us by a friend in 1908. It is our impression that it was first printed in The Independent, though the copy we have does not so state.—The Editor.)

A man devout once kept a store.
And, not contented, he wanted more.
So he schemed and schemed, and he planned so well
That his neighbor merchant was forced to sell.
And he bought, and flourished, and flew into fame.
The other? I never heard what became
Of the other man.

The man devout, so people say,
Once gave a hundred dollars away.
And, of course, he wanted it back again.
So he docked the pay of one of his men.
And the fool rebelled, as some fools will,
Till, actually, it made him ill—
This other man.

The man devout increased his gold
To millions and millions, as I've been told;
And he held a claim on a snug little house,
Where a man as poor as the old church mouse
Abode and toiled till his strength gave out,
And then the rich man put him to rout,
And sold the cot to a youth and his bride.
The other? Oh, I believe he died—
That other man!

The man devout fared all alone
The old, old way that is still unknown,
And, stripped of his wealth and power and state,
He stood at last by the heavenly gate,
And he called, "Here waits a man devout!"
Saint Peter answered, "What about
The other man?"

He raised his eyes, with a look serene,
"I know not what other man you mean.
My life has been too filled with work
To think of others. I've been no shirk!"
Then good Saint Peter shook his head;
"None enter here but have loved," he said,
"The other man."

HOW TO PROMOTE A REVIVAL.

Promote! Yes, that is what I said. I never knew a revival to come by accident. Nothing comes that way that is worth having. Every force in nature is working together toward its production when the spring with its verdure and flowers comes. Where all the spiritual fires of the Church join with all the inspirations of God, there the revival comes.

You must have a vigorous promoter of these conditions. Do not pin your faith to a professional evangelist. Where the pastor is dead and conscious of it and willing to remain dead the professional may be called in, but if a pastor has sensibility enough to see the need of an awakening among his people, he can do better work than any stranger.

Be your own evangelist. But, you say, I have no evangelistic talent. Then what are you doing in the ministry? Is not the great end of your vocation to infuse the principles and spirit of the gospel into popular thought and thus correct the lives and reform the characters of men?

Dig up that napkin in which you have buried your talent and get down to honest work, and you will be surprised by the results. If you fail to do this you may be called a wicked and slothful servant some day under very embarrassing circumstances.

Get away from the idea that a revival comes uninvited. It never has so come and never will. Some people say you cannot get up a revival. It must come down like the rain and the snow which cometh down from heaven and watereth the earth, causing it to bring forth fruit; the revival must go up before it can come down.

There is no dew on the dusty road because it contributes nothing to the atmosphere, but on the well cultivated field which is constantly exhaling, every blade is decked with diamonds. A soul that is ever giving up itself to God in worship and service is in a perpetual state of revival. Be a promoter.

The promotion of a revival is the highest and holiest work in which you can engage. In the plan of God it stands first after redemption. Redemption is God's own peculiar work. Saving men who have been redeemed is our work. Here we are laborers together with God—God works and we work, and men are saved. God is always on the job, and if the plan fails it is because we fail. "Ye are the salt of the earth." The earth needs salting. Let God use you. First win the love and confidence of the people. Not by fine preaching to the people. Fine preaching is often "as the lovely song of one who hath a pleasant voice and can play well on an instrument." Preach as clearly and forcefully as you can, but if your preaching is to win men to Christ your honest pastoral work must first win men to you. Jesus said, "I call you not servants, but friends." That sense of friendship no doubt explains why the "common people heard him gladly."

A preacher who seeks popularity is contemptible, but a preacher who seeks the love and confidence of the people among whom he lives is in company with the Master.

How may I win the love of the people? By getting down to their level, living among them, being much in their homes, especially in times of sickness and trouble. Let them feel that they have not a sorrow you do not share. Then you can lead them whithersoever you will.

I would like the next line printed in capitals on your heart—

Look carefully after the aged, the poor and the sick. That big strong man who lives in the fine house on the hill is worth looking after, but the surest way to find him is to look after that poor old man and woman who live in the little shanties down the lane.

The big man said to me one day, "What is the matter at old Baker's? I see you going over there every day." I said, "He is ill and his wife is so crippled with rheumatism that she is almost helpless. I look after them because they are sad and poor." "Well," he said, "I ought to help you." He handed me a large note, and in less than a year the big man on the hill and the old man down the lane stood side by side and received the right hand of fellowship at the church altar.

Do you want a revival? Do not preach special sermons on the vices of the day. Preach the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of Men, and be a brother of men in your every day life.

Do not slap a man on the shoulder and tell him he is a good fellow and you would dearly like to have him in your church. A man who is caught by that kind of bait will not be worth anything after he is caught.

Wisely seek your opportunity and sit down and reason with him of righteousness, temperance and judgment. He will like that. It puts a premium on his intelligence. It appeals to his self-respect. He can answer back, and he likes to do that. You should like it too, for it gives you a chance to explain and clinch the truth. One good, honest heart-to-heart hour with a man of common sense is worth a whole year of fine pulpit work. Try it.

Another good way of promoting a revival is to get your people to do something besides coming to church and prayer meeting to sing hallelujah hymns and relate emotional experiences. Get them deeply interested in something that is not so pronouncedly pious as to frighten them, and they may be provoked to thinking, and if you can only get them to think they will become pliable.

A man of rare quality was sought after by his pastor and friends every communion day and urged to profess faith. He declined, I thought absolutely. Finally, I said to him, "I have said my last word. I shall pray for you, but never intend to ask you to unite with the Church."

But I was not done with him. I organized a

Bible class. Had him made secretary, and the next season he was elected president. He took a deep interest in the social functions of the class and finally in the study of the lesson. In two years he came forward on his own initiative and joined the Church and is a valuable worker.

My pen is in a mad gallop to-night, but I must stop. Brother, you may have a revival if you will pay the price. Try it.—W. M. Strayer, in the Methodist Protestant.

WHY I AM A METHODIST.

Rev. T. W. Lewis.

My parents and grandparents were Methodists, but I cannot say that I am a Methodist because they were. True, I went to their Church, and joined it when I was 17, but I have stronger and higher reasons for being a Methodist.

1. I am a Methodist because I believe its doctrines. I believe every one of them. I believe them, not because I was taught them, but because, after twenty-five years of earnest study, I find them to be true. They harmonize with the Bible and with my experience; hence they must be true. Methodists hold to the great fundamentals with other orthodox Christian bodies, but we also believe in certain doctrines which are peculiar to us as a denomination.

2. I am a Methodist because I like its spirit and enthusiasm. Methodism has been defined as "Christianity in earnest." It knows no class, no racial distinctions, no geographical lines, but it recognizes every man as a brother, and seeks to reach the lowest man as well as the highest. Its gospel says, "I am debtor to all men;" and the girl of the shop and counter is as much at home in its pews as the society miss whose father owns a million. It is said of Jesus: "The common people heard him gladly." Yet he had some rich friends who ministered unto him. So Methodism has no call to minister to one class to the exclusion of another, but goes to all alike. It is as much at home in a stately cathedral where its message is faithfully delivered as it is under a brush arbor.

3. I am a Methodist because I like its system of government. Its system of ministerial supply is the best in the world. Every pastor has a charge and every charge has a pastor. When necessary the pastoral relation can be dissolved and a new pastor sent without a particle of friction. Methodist church government is not a monarchy. The Bishops do not have absolute power. They are under law as well as the most obscure member of the Church. Methodism is a great connectionalism, and every department of its machinery is vitally connected with every other part, so that each member of the Church is not a member of a local society simply, but he belongs to the whole of Methodism, and the whole of Methodism belongs to him.

4. I am a Methodist because I believe this great Church is meeting the demands of the times more efficiently than any other Church. Its evangelical spirit, its humanitarian projects, its missionary movements, its care for the young, its provision for the old preachers, as well as the virile gospel it preaches—all declare Methodism to be a Church for the times. I rejoice in its great history, but I rejoice more in its present-day triumphs. If we are true to the ideals of our fathers, modified and enlarged by modern conditions, present and future Methodism will be greater still.—Midland Methodist.

MY VALEDICTORY TO BROTHER LIPSCOMB.

I had thought that I would say no more in this connection; but not feeling that it is just fair to be presented in a light I have not assumed, and as my brethren who think with me in this matter wish me to continue the discussion just a bit longer; and furthermore as the editor of the Advocate continues to put in, now and then, a word of controversy on the subject, I have concluded to at least write my valedictory.

Brother Lipscomb cites Drs. Meek and Tillett as authorities adverse to my contention. Also, as Dr. Meek, whom I love, and Dr. Tillett, whom I reverence, have neither engaged to do my thinking for me, I shall have to do it for myself. I honor their opinions, but I cannot bow to them.

I may not know Greek as my sapient young brother does—I only taught it ten years; but I do know that "anōthen" means, as indicated in the margin of the Revised Version, "from above." See Liddell and Scott, Donnegan, Grove and Hastings—also Cremer's great "Lexicon of New Testament Greek." "From heaven" is given as an alternative rendering. The connection in John, iii., does not forbid this primary and usual sense.

I have heard of "prevenient grace," or, as our Methodist writers put it usually, "preventing grace." Mr. Wesley describes this preventing or "prevenient," or foregoing grace as "that vulgarly (but improperly) called, natural conscience," that with which salvation begins—the first slight transient conviction of having sinned against God." Most assuredly the lighting by "that True Light, who lighteth every man as he comes into the world" is vastly more than this "slight transient conviction of having sinned against God." (Sermon xc. ii. 1 and iii. 4). If my young brother can afford to give the least consideration to the learned and saintly Fletcher let him consult Third Check II. (pp. 127-8, Vol. I).

Banks, in his "Manual of Christian Doctrine," page 146, says: "Such grace (prevenient) comes to man unconditionally, and is the power by which men consent to accept further grace." Thus prevenient is clearly distinguished from saving grace. It does not save the adult—nor does it—neither can it save the infant.

Why is my brother so strangely silent concerning Rom. v:18-19? There Paul unequivocally declares that Christ's free gift of redemption "comes unto all men to justification of life"—"to all men"—"to justification of life." Here is where Fletcher and Tigert build their unanswerable arguments for infant regeneration. Why is Brother Lipscomb silent here?

Yes, we have all sinned (in Adam) and (thus by Adam) come short of the glory of God; and many of us have personally sinned; but this Scripture by no means teaches that babes have personally sinned—my brother does not believe that they have. Why, then, did he quote this passage? Why does he cite here that "all the world is guilty before God?" Does he mean that babes are guilty? Surely not. Why these words then?

He indicates that he thinks it dangerous for our children to be taught that they are born regenerate, and that they do not need the saving grace of our Christ. Does he teach any regenerate people "that they no longer stand in need of Christ's saving power?" Does he? Has he rejected the Lord's Prayer? Does he skip the General Confession in the Service for the Lord's Supper? Is he not a Methodist?

Thousands of our people are basing their hope on some past experience in each life instead of on a constant and present Witness of the Spirit. A taint of the Calvinistic dogma of once in grace, always in, clings to them, and they think they are saved because once there came an experience. It is a thousand times safer to teach them that no past experience is evidence of present salvation—that regeneration at birth is not assurance in any sense of salvation now. This taint of the Calvinistic dogma of Inamissible Grace is vastly more dangerous than any misconception of the Bible doctrine of infant regeneration could be.

There is no ground for my brother's fear, as he tells it, that they will believe that having been regenerated in infancy they do not need to be again. Why? Because once is enough, as it cannot be lost. If this is not rank Calvinism, I never heard it. And yet this is the closing argument of my brother's article. Hear him:

"Our apology for continuing this discussion at such length is the fact, well stated by Dr. Meek, that 'It is certainly a thing of tremendous consequence whether we are to teach our children that they stand in need of Christ's saving power and should seek to come in touch with it, or that they are born regenerate and need no new birth. Upon a right answer to this question the eternal destiny of thousands may be hinged.'"

"Born regenerate and need no new birth"—is that Arminian Methodism? Have not thousands been regenerated over and over again, having lapsed from earlier experiences?

Let us teach our children that every sinner is a wilful backslider—born in sin, but met at birth by Christ's regenerating grace; that they shall not enter life handicapped by deadly inheritances that pull them even in babyhood toward hell. Let them know that by Christ's love and grace they are altogether his and that if they sin they are backsliders, prodigals, turning their backs on God's love and fatherly tenderness.

The Advocate of November 7 contains the following editorial utterance:

"A writer in a current religious journal discusses the question, 'How to Lead the Children in Our Sunday Schools to Christ?' So far as the small ones are concerned, the brother, according to some of our present-day teaching, is misdirecting his efforts. Having been born regenerate, they do not need to be led to the Master, but merely kept from going astray."

Is this a perfectly fair statement? There are children old enough to have become sinners or backsliders by their own acts, and who therefore need to be led back to Christ. I say with utmost distinctness—and have said nothing contrary thereto—that because a child is born regenerate in no wise guarantees that he in later life does not need regeneration. Not being a Calvinist, I believe that men who were once regenerate may lapse to the unregenerate state. This editorial is verily "Queer teaching for the followers of John Wesley."

"We suppose that Adam Clarke was wrong in stating that he was converted at four years of age, and also many other shining lights in the Church who claim to have found the Savior between the ages of five and ten. Or possibly the explanation is that they had backslidden and did not know it; that in addition to the doctrine of infant regeneration, we are to have the doctrine of infant apostasy."

This writer at six years of age had an experience that answers to conversion. I have no idea that the baby Adam Clarke at four could clearly distinguish between an experience which comes after conversion, and one which comes only at the time of regeneration. If the baby Adam was regenerated at four, most assuredly, my dear Doctor Meek, it is a case of infant regeneration. I would prefer to believe, as in my own case, regeneration came early, and blessed religious experiences continued on and on into the years. My dear Doctor, you surely know that your unfortunate remark about infant apostasy needs no reply. There is a time in the life of every one, when he becomes responsible—when he can "ratify and make his own" the act of dedication involved in his baptism—or he may reject it. This point is often—aye, generally reached—not in infancy, but in childhood. Read your editorial in this light, and see how "queer" it is.

Will you permit me to close with some words from Bishop Quayle's "The Pastor-Preacher?" They are these: "There is no unsaved person into this world! Allelujah! How can any man or woman repress the hallelujah when such a truth is grasped? There are no heathen children born into this world. All the babes born into this world are Christian. Hallelujah! I love the thought. It is worthy of God. It is in keeping with the Christ.—This world is born Christian. Every soul born among men is a saved soul. I consider that the greatest thought that has ever crossed the path of my thinking."—page 157. "Youth for God. That is the world's safety. Everybody not an atheist knows that. To start with God, what a shelter from temptation! What a safe conduct on the long, grim way of life!"—page 167.

From the depths of my soul I reply: Thank God for infant salvation! the salvation of living babies as well as dead ones! and that the grace of infant salvation is not merely a prevenient grace, but is regenerating grace!

BY THE EDITOR.

Although a considerable portion of Dr. Featherston's "Valedictory to Brother Lipscomb" is directed at the Editor of the Advocate, we shall not undertake to make a full reply to him. In our opinion, it is not needed. As we see it, what he has to say is little else than a rehash of former utterances, which have been completely answered.

The Doctor's enthusiasm for any cause that he espouses challenges our admiration. When he sets himself to the task of advocating an issue, he seems to see proof sustaining it where others never dreamed that it existed. No ordinary dialectician could transform John Fletcher, the author of the "Appeal to Matter of Fact and Common Sense," which Tyerman pronounces his most carefully prepared work, into an advocate of birth regeneration. It has been but a short time since the Doctor marshaled to his support the Apostle Paul, representing him as saying of all infants, "Now are they holy." What Paul did say was as follows: "For the unbelieving husband is sanctified by the wife, and the unbelieving wife is sanctified by the husband: else were your children unclean; but now are they holy." Manifestly the word, "holy," here has reference to the church relation and privileges of the babe, and not to its spiritual state. But even if it had its usual significance it would utterly destroy the Doctor's theory; for, since the great majority of parents in the world are unbelievers, it would clearly teach that vastly the larger share of the children of the race are born "unclean." Yet, as we have said, the Doctor detached the last clause of St. Paul's statement from its connection and used it as a proof text that the great Apostle taught the doctrine of universal birth regeneration. One who quotes like that can prove anything if let alone.

It is a bit amusing to see how the Doctor discounts Adam Clarke's interpretation of the experience which came to him at four years of age, and the confidence with which he writes of his own at the age of six. In the person of Bishop Quayle, our good friend does seem to have found one who fully agrees with him; but unfortunately for him his new-found authority is chiefly known as a man of poetic temperament and a passionate orator. We doubt if even his most intimate friends ever accused him of being a theologian. Cooke and Quayle have been brought forward and paraded by the Doctor. Is not this going "across the Ohio for our cues?" Why doesn't he tell us what Wilson and Hoss and Candler have to say on the question at issue?

The Doctor remarks that the Editor "continues to put in now and then a word of controversy on the subject." We wish to assure our brother that all our utterances bearing on questions upon which we disagree are not made with him in mind. We read the press of the entire Church, and strike at error, as opportunity permits, wherever we see it rear its ugly head. He is unhappily not alone in his championship of this new heresy of infant regeneration. It is our purpose to do all we can to overthrow this and such other dangers as we think are a menace to the welfare of Southern Methodism between now and the meeting of the next General Conference; and we hope that our friend, whom we highly esteem and honor, will not make the mistake of imagining that every arrow we may let fly at a cause in which he believes is shot at him.

Church News

Dr. G. Campbell Morgan, of England, has engagements which will bring him to the United States in February.

The Board of Missions of the North Georgia Conference will this year undertake to raise, beside the regular assessments, a special of $15,000 for our work in Cuba.

The two Alabama Conferences of the Southern Methodist Church have 428 pastoral charges, which have (including local preachers) 163,081 members. There were 1825 infants and 6039 adults baptized last year.

Bishop and Mrs. W. A. Candler recently gave a reception to the Methodist pastors of Atlanta and the members of the North Georgia Board of Missions, which was holding its mid-year meeting in that city.

Thursday, Feb. 6 is the day when the Northern Methodists will offer special prayer for the 75,000 young people in their various educational institutions. The plan of having a special day for this purpose annually is, we think, a wise one.

The new building provided for our Negro Extension Work in Atlanta, Ga., has been given the name of Galloway Hall. This is a fitting recognition of the large service which Bishop Galloway rendered the colored population of the South.

The schools and colleges of the Methodist Episcopal Church are said to have received during the past year for additional equipment and endowment $7,500,000. The Church also contributed $500,000 for the current expenses of these institutions through its Conference collections.

The Conference Chairmen of Sunday School Boards and Field Secretaries of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, met in Washington City, D. C., Wednesday of this week, and will continue their conference through next Sunday. Their meetings are being held in the Mount Vernon Place Church.

The Woman's Missionary Council of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has announced the receipt of a $20,000 bequest made by Mr. J. B. Toberman of Los Angeles, Cal., as a memorial to his son, Homer Toberman. Mr. Toberman stipulated that the interest on this money should be used for medical work among the destitute.

The gifts of the Protestant Churches of the United States for foreign missions last year showed an increase over the preceding year of $3,000,000. The amount contributed for foreign missions by all the Protestant bodies of the world during 1912 was $30,104,401, a gain of $5,107,327 over the amount contributed in 1911.

Dr. William S. Bovard, Vice President of the University of Chattanooga, has been chosen to succeed the late Dr. Fayette L. Thompson as General Secretary of the Methodist Brotherhood. He is a graduate of the Boston School of Theology, and is one of a family of six brothers who have attained to prominence in the Methodist Episcopal Church.

There was a falling off last year in the number of communicants received by the Protestant Churches in the foreign fields, the number of additions being 116,000, against 152,000 the year preceding. There are said to be 1,750,000 children and young people receiving their education in the mission schools maintained in unchristian lands. This is perhaps the most encouraging feature of present-day missionary operations.

Rev. W. B. Nance, of the China Mission of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, who for a season has been resting in the home land, recently visited relatives and friends in Dallas, Texas. On Sunday, January 12, he occupied the pulpit of our First Church in that city and preached for the Oak Lawn congregation at the evening hour. Brother Nance has been working in the Orient for sixteen years.

The Presbyterians have in New York City a Chinese Church with a membership of fifty and a Sunday school attendance of ninety. It is stated that Dr. Sun Yat Sen, the Provisional President of the Chinese Republic, and who, according to report, is about to become the editor of the China Daily Mail (a Shanghai paper printed in English), was at one time connected with the mission from which this church sprang.

The Roman Catholic University at Washington, D. C., recently granted a special honor to Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan as Patron of Arts and Letters. The reason for the conferment of this distinction was Mr. Morgan's action in placing in the hands of Prof. Hyvernat, who is famed for his knowledge of the Coptic language, the remarkable collection of Coptic manuscripts which he secured at a very high cost. Prof. Hyvernat is assisting in the preparation of the series of Oriental Christian Fathers, now being issued by the Catholic scholars of Europe.

Of the $1,000,000 endowment that is to be raised for the Southern Methodist University, at Dallas, Tex., $600,000 has been paid or pledged. Of the remaining $400,000, the General Board of Education (New York) offers to give $200,000 when the projectors of the institution have secured $800,000, but this promise is limited to July 1, 1913. So if the Methodists of the Lone Star State are to avail themselves of this offer they must raise the lacking $200,000 by that date. This, the leaders are determined to do, and accordingly they are planning a vigorous canvass for funds which will extend to every part of the co-operating territory. We wish them success in this great undertaking.

"PASTOR" RUSSELL'S SERMONS.

The editor of the Dent County Post, one of our reliable county papers, has been studying Russell's propaganda, and his methods of heralding the same. As to the ethics of his methods, and the consciences of the editors of county papers who are forcing such stuff down the throats of their guileless readers, this candid editor of the Post expresses himself in the following lines:

We are very much surprised at the readiness of some papers to print just most any kind of "dope" in order to fill out their columns. Especially is this true with some papers if it comes in plate form and they do not have the trouble of setting the type. In our way of thinking, about the worst injustice inflicted on a long suffering public is the publishing by some papers of "Pastor" Russell's sermons. Any paper can get the plates for these sermons absolutely free. In fact they are sometimes sent unsolicited. This paper has a stock of these plates piled up in the back end of the office. They came, express prepaid, and we are innocent of any desire to receive such articles. We have no criticisms to make of any one who believes the "Russell" doctrine, for no matter how unreasonable a doctrine may be there are always some followers, and usually they are earnest and zealous, but we do not only criticize but condemn the absolutely dishonest method the "Pastor" has of getting his sermons printed. He labels his sermons "Interdenominational" and calls one set of his writings Sunday School lessons, and yet he is antagonistic to all churches, and teaches doctrines that are contrary to all denominational Sunday schools. Hence a member of the Baptist, Presbyterian, Episcopal, Church of Christ or Methodist Church, in order to take certain county papers, have teachings that are entirely contrary to their faith and practice in the reach of their children. For a man to obtain money under false pretense is dishonest, and for a man to receive a great deal of advertisement and newspaper space under false pretense is also dishonest. And the newspaper that runs such "stuff" as the "Pastor's" sermons is treating his readers who belong to the different churches unfairly. If a paper publishes sermons they should publish not only "Pastor" Russell's, but also full sermons from other preachers. If they refuse to do this they should be honest and state that they run the "Russell" dope because they either haven't the time or are too lazy to fill their columns with reading matter that is not offensive to some. As we said above, we have no quarrel to make with any of the "Russellites"—"to those who believe that way, that is the way they believe," but we do say that the people of other denominations are entitled to equal consideration.—St. Louis Christian Advocate.

ANOTHER OVERFLOW.

The breaking anew of the uncompleted levee against the Mississippi River at Beulah, Miss., about thirty-five miles north of Greenville, will result in submerging again a part of several of the most populous counties in the famous Yazoo Delta, as follows: Bolivar, Washington, Sunflower, Yazoo, Sharkey, Issaquena, and Warren. Though there will be a considerable amount of property destroyed and much distress will necessarily ensue, especially among the negroes, it is not probable that the disaster will be anything like as great as it was last year, since the stage of water in the river is nothing like so high. If, however, the Mississippi should remain up and prevent the closing of the Beulah crevasse until the spring rise comes, conditions may take a much more serious turn. We have several pastoral charges in the territory that are likely to be overflowed and our church work in them will no doubt be much interfered with, if not completely interrupted, for a season. We deeply sympathize with our pastors and congregations, as well as the people of the Delta generally, as they face the grave danger which now threatens them; and we earnestly pray that some kindly providence may either avert or mitigate the seemingly impending calamity. We have observed that compensations for the misfortunes of life frequently come when apparently there is the least reason to expect reparation of any kind.

FEDERAL PENSIONS.

We believe in taking care of worthy and needy soldiers, whether they wore the blue or gray or fought in any other war. But we have no more tolerance for pension graft than any other kind. Nearly fifty years have elapsed since the flag of the Confederacy was forever furled at Appomattox, and though our nation has since engaged in no great amount of fighting, our pension appropriations continue to grow. Referring to this question in a recent issue, the New York Independent says:

"The number of old soldiers on the pension list diminished by 31,804 in 1912—87 die every day; yet with the reduction in numbers, the appropriation from the treasury for pensions will have to be $20,500,000 more for 1914 than for 1913. That is because Congress has been very generous in the new pension laws. For years we have been expecting relief to the treasury by death, but instead of that the cost has increased. But it can't continue indefinitely. The last pensioner of the Revolutionary War died in 1869."

The statement of our contemporary that this increase cannot continue indefinitely holds out at least a glimmer of hope. There are so many things that the Government needs to do for the development of our internal resources, the expansion of our foreign commerce, and the elevation and improvement of our citizenship, that there should be no wastage of the public money. Every dollar wrung by taxation from the people should be regarded as a sacred trust to be used in their behalf. He was not far afield who said that the art of governing well is the art of being honest.

Secular News and Comment

By Rev. A. J. Gearheard.

There is a movement on foot to change the name of the State of New Mexico to Lincoln.

Justice John K. Shields was, on Jan. 23, elected to the United States Senate by the Tennessee Legislature.

According to figures compiled by the Southern Banker 333 new banks, with a total capital of $16,018,100, were organized in the Southern States during 1912. Georgia leads in the number of new banks, 54, and Tennessee in the amount of new capital, $3,440,000.

The government of Egypt, through the minister of education, recently ordered 460 Bibles, 400 New Testaments, 20 reference Bibles and 20 copies of the concordance for the schools of that country. This is the first time the Bible has been introduced into the government schools of Egypt.

The remains of Light Horse Harry Lee, the father of General Robert E. Lee, which were interred in Georgia more than a century ago, are soon to be removed from that State and buried by the side of his son in Lexington, Va. The State of Virginia has appropriated $500 for this purpose.

Hon. Joe Cannon delivered his farewell address before Congress on January 18, on which date both Houses joined in giving him an ovation. He announced that since he had been given a leave of absence for which he did not ask, he would go home and spend the rest of his life among the people who honored him by sending him to Congress for forty years.

The United States Supreme Court recently decided that any person who corners the market on any commodity that enters into general use or is transported in inter-state traffic, is guilty of a violation of the Sherman Anti-trust Law. As a result, John A. Patton must stand trial for having run his famous corner in cotton a few years ago.

Gov. Judson Harmon, of Ohio, an authority on constitutional law, has joined Gov. Joseph M. Brown, of Georgia, in declaring that the proposed amendment to the United States Constitution involving the election of United States Senators by popular vote, which needs to be approved by but three additional State Legislatures to become a law, has been improperly submitted, and is therefore unconstitutional.

An act of the Alabama Legislature requires the annual observance of a Temperance Day in the public schools of that commonwealth. February 21 has been designated by the Alabama State Superintendent of Education as the day to be observed this year, and he has asked that each teacher prepare a special program setting forth the evils of intemperance. We heartily endorse the Alabama law that makes such a day possible.

A new law which provides that all checks for pensioners must be delivered to the veterans in person has resulted in the return of $200,000 from Chicago alone since Jan. 1, 1913. Of the 60,000 checks mailed out from the Pension Department in Washington on Jan. 1, already 8000 have come back. There is room for suspicion that all the pension money has not been regularly received by old soldiers.

At the session of the Tuskegee Negro Farmers' Conference in Tuskegee, Ala., in which there were present, on Jan. 21, 1800 negro farmers, a special hour was set apart for the honoring of the name of the late Dr. Seaman A. Knapp, of Louisiana.

The name of Knapp seems destined to stand as a synonym of progressive agriculture, just as the name of Lee stands for true bravery, and that of Jefferson for great statesmanship.

A design for a monument to be erected in memory of Lincoln in Washington, D. C., is now being considered by Congress. The design bears a close resemblance to Greek temple architecture of the Doric period, and represents Lincoln as standing by gigantic white pillars. This design, however, is not meeting with universal favor. Mr. George F. Maher, of the American Institute of Architects, in voicing his protest against the proposed design, said: "Lincoln was a Westerner. He was a rail splitter. He was homely, honest, true and an American. There was nothing about him which was suggestive of aristocracy. To place him in such a position would be nothing short of draping him in the costume of Cicero, standing him before the oracle at Delphi, and hailing him as a Greek god."

On Jan. 19 the Mississippi State Board of Health issued a bulletin urging an active campaign against the spread of pellagra, and asking for an appropriation to be used in the study of its cause and cure. In fact, the whole South is becoming alarmed at the remarkable increase of deaths from this mysterious disease. Its cause is uncertain; but it has been generally held that it is either caused from the use of too much corn, or spoiled corn, or from a germ deposited by a certain species of black fly, or sand fly. An extended article published in the Journal of the American Medical Association advances still another view, viz.: that the disease is due to a lack of animal protein in food. If this theory is correct, then a proper way to remedy the cause would be to either eat more meat or cook what is eaten less.

A NEGLECTED FIELD.

I have been studying for the past year the needs of the people who live along the banks of the Mississippi River between New Orleans and the Gulf of Mexico. Two weeks ago I visited that section and personally investigated its needs. I find that there are living along what is called the Lower Coast more than two thousand people who are without the benefits of any kind of religious services. There are twelve towns, ranging in population from 50 to 500, that are not touched by any railroad, and, for the most part, they are so located that it will never be possible for a railroad to be built to them. These towns are supported by a narrow strip of the most fertile land to be found anywhere. The present population will probably be more than doubled within ten years. To build a church at any of the places would cost probably $1500 to $3000, and would satisfy about 300 people at the most.

There is a way to reach the people of the Lower Coast that is much better than any attempt to build churches. These places have no opera houses, yet they are accommodated by every kind of cheap entertainment. How is it done? By what are called "show boats." Boats are built that will accommodate four or five hundred people, and at the same time furnish a place for the whole troupe to live. Such a boat can be built for the Church that will seat a congregation of 300, and, at the same time be a home for the preacher and his assistant, for $6000. This floating church could be anchored at every town along the Lower Coast and would furnish accommodations for the preaching of the Gospel to more than 2000 souls.

Ordinarily, it would seem that this is a missionary problem that belongs to New Orleans, but it is not. At what is called The Jetties there are scores of families. These families are from all parts of the South, and are there to protect vessels sailing into the Mississippi River. They are there, not in the interest of New Orleans, but the whole South; therefore their evangelization is the responsibility of the whole Church.

In order to reach these people who are now being neglected by all Churches, I would suggest the following plan: Build the "floating church" at a cost of $6000. Place to the credit of the mission $3000 more to be used to run the boat and pay expenses of preacher and boatman for eighteen months. This would demand a total amount of $9000. Within eighteen months' time, in our opinion, there is little doubt that the field would become self-sustaining. The people are not poverty stricken, but just neglected. No Church has as yet had faith enough to undertake this work. Will our Church also "pass on the other side?" If any reader of these lines feels interested in establishing a Lower Coast Mission and building a "floating church," and is willing to assist in the opening of this mission, write to me.

THE METHODIST REVIEW QUARTERLY.

The January number of this excellent periodical spreads before its readers a rich variety of matter. Dr. John C. Granbery writes informally of "Henri Bergen and His Philosophy;" Bishop Chown, of Canada, discusses in an interesting manner the question, "Can Socialism Be Linked with Christianity;" Bishop Hendrix furnishes an able paper on "Jonathan Edwards and John Wesley;" Rev. Frederick F. Shannon gives an entertaining study of "Henry Ward Beecher," and Bishop E. D. Mouzon appears in a luminous article entitled "The Gospel of Reconciliation." There are also a number of other valuable contributions upon pertinent themes. That of Mrs. F. L. Townsend, on "Why I Am Opposed to Woman Suffrage," is alone worth many times the price of The Review, and it ought to be read and pondered by every intelligent man and woman in the Southern States. "The Leverage of Our Lord," by Prof. Thomas Carter is likewise a brilliant piece of writing. The book reviews are up to the usual good standard. Dr. Gross Alexander, the scholarly editor of this stately journal, has certainly begun well the work of the new year.

"THE LITTLE HYMN BOOK."

This choice collection of two hundred hymns has been compiled and edited by our versatile Missionary Secretary for the Home Department, Dr. J. M. Moore, at the suggestion of the General Board of Missions. The work has been well done and the book is an admirable one in every respect. The following are some of its special features: Substantial leatherette binding (boards if desired); good paper and excellent printing; note edition only—round and shaped notes; all words printed in musical staff; order of worship with gloria and doxology; the 165 hymns and 19 gospel songs from the Methodist Hymnal; prepared especially for small churches in country and town; suitable for use in all services, including revivals; has twenty-five psalms and the Ten Commandments; classification and index simple, yet comprehensive; price unusually low—single copies, 20 cents; by the hundred, $12.50.

TO THE POINT.

The Presbyterian Banner has a most excellent article upon the country pastor. It gives certain statements which have become the "stock in trade" of certain would-be experts on country life, in which it is declared that the country minister should become an agricultural expert, and teach the farmer. It says:

"If a country pastor must understand farming and work on a farm, then must not a city pastor understand banking and work in a bank, or iron manufacture and work in an iron mill, or the insurance business and sell insurance to his parishioners? Further, if the preacher is to teach the farmer how to farm, should not the farmer turn the tables and teach the preacher how to preach? This theory of salvation by sociology, of raising the religious level of a community by raising potatoes, adding to or substituting for a minister's proper training the skill of a poultry expert and horse doctor, soon reaches the absurd."

Yes, absurd and worse than absurd, it is bald materialism, and yet it is into this that the Country Life Department of our Church pours annually nearly $18,000.—The Presbyterian.

AN INTERESTING PARODY.

Mr. Editor: In looking over my papers a few weeks ago, I came across a copy of a parody on the "Wayworn Traveler," which I send to you for publication. I think Dr. J. W. Hill, of Texas, is the author. I dedicate this to my very dear friends and presiding elder debutants—Charles Emery, Bob Selby, and Paul Hardin.

T. W. ADAMS.

A Wayworn Preacher.

I saw a wayworn preacher,
In seedy garments clad,
Holding down the station—
It seemed that he was sad.
His pocketbook was empty,
Provisions nearly gone;
But he shouted as he tramped around:
"Deliverance will come!"

The summer sun was shining,
The sweat was on his face,
His step of early morning
Had quickened to a pace,
But the people even grumbled,
Because he would not run;
But he shouted as he visited:
"Deliverance will come!"

I saw him in the evening,
The sun was hending low;
He had that tired feeling,
His step was very slow;
But as he dragged his weary limbs
Toward his humble home,
He shouted loud, "Hosanna!
Deliverance will come!"

He went to bed at twelve o'clock,
But could not go to sleep;
For the wife had said, for breakfast
They had not much to eat;
But when he rose next morning,
With a heart so sad and sore,
He found a ham of bacon
And some flour at the door.

The Conference was a coming on,
The salary was behind,
He had no clothing fit to wear,
Which weighed upon his mind;
But the day before he started,
The ladies rigged him out
In a brand new suit for Conference,
Which made our preacher shout.

The Conference ground out business
Along from day to day,
Till the time came for appointments,
And the Bishop had his say;
Our preacher listened dully

To see where he would fall;
He was made Presiding Elder,
And that atoned for all.

"Then, palms of victory,
Crowns of Glory—I shall wear."

THE CHURCH PAPER AS THE PASTOR'S ASSISTANT.

By Rev. J. F. Jacobs.

There are many able pastors who carry upon their shoulders the entire burden of their church work. The church officers depend upon the pastor. The church members depend upon the pastor. If money is to be raised, the pastor has to raise it, and if the sick or afflicted are to be visited the pastor has to visit them. If prayer meetings, Sunday schools, or young people's societies are languishing, it is the pastor who must take up the burden and inject new interest into their work. Is it surprising that some churches make but little progress, even though they have the ablest pastors, when the pastor is the only active worker in the congregation? Is it surprising that many able pastors break down under their heavy burdens of work and find it too much for them? In such cases it is extremely likely that the pastor's assistant, the church paper, has been neglected by that pastor, or by the church officers, and that too small a number of the church members are taking the church paper.

If the church paper is universally subscribed for and goes into every home of the congregation, the pastor finds his work immensely easier. The officers of the church are not only more active, but they also find that the discharge of their duty is easier because the church members are much more interested and devoted to church interests. All the causes of the church are more liberally supported. All religious meetings are more fully attended. All religious duties are more conscientiously discharged, and the pastor has his hands held up in every good work, and he has a big, active congregation.

Just a suggestion to the pastor and to the people: It will lighten the pastor's work and increase his efficiency if the church paper is sent into every home in a congregation. This would cost very little, comparatively speaking, for probably over half of the substantial homes already receive their church paper, and would not do without it. A little activity on the part of pastor and church officers in securing subscriptions to the church paper would put new life into the congregation, increase the growth of the church in numbers and spirituality, and cheer the pastor with larger returns from his labors.

CHURCH EXTENSION AID.

The annual meeting of the Board of Church Extension will be held in Dallas, Tex., May 1-4. This is the meeting where applications for aid are considered. That those interested may know exactly how to proceed, the following is submitted:

First—All applications must be made upon the printed form provided by the Board for that purpose. These application blanks may be had without cost by applying to this office.

Second—After the application has been properly prepared it should be sent at once to the secretary of the Annual Conference Board, as the following rule provides:

"Every application for consideration at the hands of the General Board must first receive the approval of the Board of Church Extension of the Conference from which it comes, and said approval must be given at the regular meeting of said board or of its executive committee held in the month of March. Said boards or committees shall consider all the applications from their respective Conferences and forward such as they approve so as to reach the Board's office, at Louisville, Ky., by April 1st of each year. Each application so approved must have the action of

Beginning January 1, 1913, the rates of subscription to the New Orleans Christian Advocate will be as follows:

Single subscriptions, one year.....	$1.50 net
In clubs of five or more, each	1.25 net
Eight months	1.00 net
To preachers	1.00 net
To widows of preachers	1.00 net

The commission heretofore allowed has been discontinued, because only a very few of the preachers accept commission, and the great majority we have talked with expressed it as their opinion that a commission has proven a hindrance to them in working up the subscription list on their charges.

In cases where persons are very poor, the pastor may recommend that the paper be sent at a reduction. Remittances should be made by Money Order, Registered Letter, or in Stamps. Preachers may deduct for any expense incurred in remitting.

PUBLISHER.

the Conference Board written therein, certified to by the president and secretary; and all the applications from a given Conference must be by the Conference Board graded and marked in the order of their relative importance, and the secretary is hereby directed not to put on the calendar any application not in conformity with this rule."

Third—The mid-year meetings of the Conference Boards or their executive committees are held in March. Do not fail to have your applications in the hands of your Conference Board secretary by March 1st.

Fourth—Personal representation in the interest of applications by other than members of the Board is not permitted, as the following rule declares:

"The Board has not time to hear oral arguments or statements in behalf of applicants, and while considering applications for aid, its doors are closed. Representations other than those contained in the application can be made in writing or through members of the Board. A different rule would be obviously unfair to applicants too far away or too poor to send representatives."

Fifth—The demands upon the Board have been so numerous and so urgent that over-appropriation has resulted. The fiscal year will close with many unpaid grants on the book which must be taken care of out of next year's receipts. It is hoped, therefore, that except in cases of extreme need, no request will be made for aid this spring.

For further information, application blanks, etc., address W. F. McMurtry, Corresponding Secretary, 1025 Brook Street, Louisville, Ky.

FIVE ZONES—NATURAL AND SPIRITUAL.

Geographers tell us that there are five zones.

Beginning at the north, we come first to the Arctic. Then to the North Temperate, where the sunbeams kiss the flowers into bloom. Then we come to the Torrid, where rank vegetation abounds beneath the fiery skies. Thence as the journey progresses, we find the South Temperate, and at last with every balmy breath left far behind, we encounter the Antarctic, or South Frigid zone, where all is bleakness.

In the spiritual life of many there is a counterpart of this. Beginning in a very cold spiritual region at the beginning of the year, they progress southward as the spring advances. At last, when "protracted meeting time" is at hand, they are highly heated. That being over, they gradually lose their warmth as the autumn comes on, and ere the year is departed, they are in a region like that whence they started. Sometimes they pass through all the zones in much less than twelve months. The question naturally arises, In what zone will death find them at last?

That is a momentous question.—Alabama Christian Advocate.

MARY'S LITTLE COLD.

Mary had a little cold
That started in her head,
And everywhere that Mary went
That cold was sure to spread.

It followed her to school one day
(There wasn't any rule);
It made the children cough and sneeze
To have that cough in school.

The teacher tried to drive it out;
She tried hard, but—kerchoo!—
It didn't do a bit of good,
For teacher caught it, too.

HOW SLATE PENCILS ARE MADE.

I wonder how many of our school boys and girls know where and how slate pencils are made. There is only one firm in America engaged in making them, as they can be made and imported from Germany much cheaper than in this country, says an exchange. This firm has its quarry in Pennsylvania. At the quarry, the rough slabs of slate rock are sawn into pieces of suitable size by machinery, and from each piece a machine made especially for the purpose cuts six pencils of standard length—five and one-half inches. The pencils come from the machine rounded, but not sharpened; the work of pointing is done by boys who take three or four at a time and point them at an emery wheel which is revolved rapidly by machinery. The pencils are now ready to be packed for sale, and this is done by putting them in pasteboard boxes which contain 100 pencils each. These are then packed in wooden cases which contain 100 of the pasteboard boxes. The school slate is made of the same kind of rock, only a little finer than that commonly used for roofing. Immense slabs are carefully cut for blackboards, and these are set up in the school-houses. The smaller pieces are made into the little hand slates which nearly every school child in the world where schools are taught has at some time carried. Unless dropped or otherwise broken, these slates will do good service as long as a family of children need a slate. Some slate pencils are much softer than others, and while some are black in color, others are gray.—Times Democrat.

THE DEPENDABLE BOY.

"I trusted you," repeated the deep voice of Mr. Richards, the school teacher, not sternly, but sadly.

Charlie stood, hands in pocket and head down as if studying his stout shoes, one heel of which was digging into the soft dirt. Near by stood his teacher.

"Yes, sir," replied Charlie in a low voice. Then he swallowed and looked away. He so liked and admired this teacher of his, and it was all that he could do to keep his grimy fist from his eyes. Did this mean that he was not to be trusted or to be this man's comrade again? A big, hot drop slid down his freckled nose in spite of himself, but perhaps no one else noticed it. "I didn't mean to break my word," he began falteringly. "I meant to come right back in time for my classes. It was good of you to let me take little sister home. When I started back, my puppy followed me. I kept taking him home, but he wouldn't stay, and wanted to play awful bad. I let him come on; then a rabbit jumped up from a brush pile, and Fly just tore off after it. I followed, as I couldn't bear to lose Fly. Did you ever own a puppy, Mr. Richards?"

Mr. Richards nodded, but his eyes sparkled understandingly.

"We lost track of the rabbit, but we were so far away I knew I could never get to school in time for my lessons. That's all, sir; but I'm sorry I broke my promise, and if you'll only trust me again, I'll try to do right—try, my level best, sir."

"Trust you again? Why, of course I will!" and a friendly hand was laid on the little bowed head. "Brace up! Take those hands out of their hiding places. They're going to do manly things from now on. That's something like it!" Then the two walked out of the school yard together. "Let me tell you a little story," said the teacher, "just a short one, but it has a good point. A civil engineer late one afternoon saw his little nephew playing in the street. 'Here, sonny,' he called out; 'just take this little red flag in your hand and hold it until I come back and tell you to drop it.' So he left the boy standing in the street holding up the flag and went about his work. But when the work was finished he forgot to go back, and passed that way no more until 9 o'clock that night. Then, to his horror, he saw the boy still standing at his post holding the little flag and shaking with cold. 'Why didn't you run home when the time came?' he cried.

"But you told me to wait till you came back," answered the boy.

"The man took the boy home and did all he could to show how sorry he was. But this boy proved that he could be relied upon, and we are not surprised to hear that, years later, he held a very responsible position in a great bank. He was not brilliant, the story goes; only reliable, dependable. The dependable boy makes the dependable man."

And little Charlie spoke from his brave young heart: "That's what I'm going to be from now on—a dependable boy!"—Southern Churchman.

BEWARE OF THE UNDERTONE.

Mr. Brown was hard of hearing. Lige Jenkins was a trusted clerk in Mr. Brown's hardware store, and was often left in charge of the business during his employer's absence. Gunby is a small town in a Southern State, and, like most small towns have, had in it a number of gossiping men and women. In course of time Lige became the victim of the gossipers' invective tongues. Being a timid and self-conscious young man, he was sorely distressed by ill and false reports that were in circulation concerning him. He was afraid that Mr. Brown might hear them and be influenced by them.

One morning he went into the office and asked for a private talk with Mr. Brown. The interview was granted. "Mr. Brown," began Lige, speaking very loud in order to make him hear, "some vile gossipers have been telling damaging falsehoods about me, and I want to assure you that all their accusations are absolutely untrue."

"Gossipers, did you say?" asked Mr. Brown.

"Yes, sir; that is what they are."

"Listen, my boy. I am almost deaf. What is said to me must be said aloud. Gossip is always spoken in whispers or in an undertone. I have heard nothing against you. Take my advice. Never be influenced by any report that must be spoken in a whisper. Turn from the man who speaks ill of another in low accents. The one blessing, my boy, of being nearly deaf, is that one is freed from the grip of the scandal-monger."

A TRIBUTE TO THE CHURCH BELL.

A traveling salesman, while stopping over Sunday in Montgomery, Ala., sent to the Advertiser of that city the following pretty tribute to a church bell:

"The old church bell! May God forbid that it shall ever cease to ring. The writer, a traveling man who is away from home, and spending Sunday in Montgomery in a downtown hotel, was reminded this Sabbath morning by the peals from the grand old bell in the tower of the First Presbyterian Church, that it was time to go up to the House of the Lord. Never before did I realize the true significance of the church bell. There is no telling the good it does. I am sure it reminds the thoughtless man on the streets of the course he pursues and carries him back to scenes of childhood and mother's prayers in the good old days when all churches rang forth the call to worship the Lord. Would that the modern idea of no bell in our churches could be discarded and the old bell installed in its place on the watch tower to call us to duty."

THE LAUGH ON COL. ROOSEVELT.

The following incident is said to have occurred in the Mercy Hospital in Chicago last October, when Col. Roosevelt was undergoing surgical treatment there, after he had been shot in Milwaukee. A group of physicians were standing around when Dr. Golden remarked that the Colonel was one of his favorite authors. That delighted the Bull Moose candidate.

"Which of my books do you like best?" the Colonel asked.

"African Game Trails," replied the Doctor.

"And what part of that book do you like best?" the Colonel went on.

"The illustrations," the Doctor replied promptly, and Colonel Roosevelt had to admit that for once the laugh was on him.

THE COUNTRY'S FREEST PLATFORM.

The statement is sometimes made that ministers are afraid to speak out their honest convictions, and that in consequence the pulpit does not in this day exercise the influence that it ought. It would be going too far to claim that clergymen are not restrained at all by popular sentiment and considerations of self-interest, and that all of them have the courage to attack prevalent evils openly and aggressively; but we do not think there is any doubt that for independence of thought and utterance the preachers of the country will compare favorably with the men engaged in any other calling. It is, however, proper that one occupying so responsible a position as the Christian minister does, should exercise a reasonable discretion in public speech. Reckless ranting against everything of which he disapproves ill becomes him.

In the January issue of The Ladies Home Journal this subject is interestingly discussed by Dr. Lyman Abbott, the scholarly editor of The Outlook, whose large experience and wide opportunity for observation should vest his opinions with considerable weight. We quote, in part, the striking utterance of this distinguished clergyman and journalist:

"That there are preachers who are echoes of the pews I do not doubt; but I am inclined to believe that any minister who is a slave to his vestry, his presbytery, or his congregation does not greatly desire to be free. Having been a lawyer, an editor, a lecture lecturer, and a preacher, I do not hesitate to affirm that the pulpit is the freest platform in America. The lawyer must consider the prejudices of his client, the editor the opinions of his readers, the statesman the convictions of his constituents, the preacher the beliefs of his congregation. But neither need be an echo. Neither will succeed if he is merely an echo. American congregations and churches and American audiences everywhere want a leader. I have preached the doctrine of human liberty during the Civil War in a city in which, on a day for fasting and prayer called for by the National Executive, every national evil except slavery was mentioned by the speakers. I have preached to a Unitarian congregation, telling them why I believed in the Trinity; to a Universalist congregation, telling them why I was not a Universalist; to a congregation largely Jewish, telling them why I was a Christian; to a congregation trained in the school of individualism, telling them why I believed in fraternalism; to more than one audience of employers, telling them why I do not believe in the wage system; and to Southern audiences, telling them what I believe is the duty of the white man to the negro race. Whatever my faults of speech may be, I do not think I have ever been accused of talking in 'glittering generalities.' My audiences have often differed from me, and some among them have come to me after the service to tell me so. But they have not resented my speech; nor have I ever known a church to attempt to put any limit or hindrance on my speaking."

We are not at all inclined to find fault with one who conscientiously believes that aspersion and affusion are unscriptural modes of baptism for vigorously opposing them in a proper manner. However much we may disagree with him, we admire the man who has convictions and the courage and aggressiveness to seek to maintain them; but we think it is incumbent upon all gentlemen, and especially upon those who claim to be Christians, to keep any discussion in which they may see fit to engage upon a plane of decency and respectability. We regret to say that, in our judgment, the article by Mr. R. S. Gavin, entitled "The Origin of Sprinkling and Pouring as Modes of Baptism," which appeared in The Baptist Record (Jackson, Miss.) of January 16, falls decidedly below such a standard.

The writer referred to, in the course of his jumble of a discussion, seeks to make the impression that sprinkling as a mode of baptism was devised by corrupt Roman Catholic priests as a means of trying to better the condition of their illicit offspring, which came as a result of their improper relations with nuns in the third century of the Christian era. True, this charge did not originate with Mr. Gavin, but upon him rests the odium of revamping and parading it as if it were a dependable fact. We scarcely need to say that there is not a scintilla of proof to sustain this allegation. It is merely a wild conjecture born of sectarian bigotry when hard pressed for arguments to support its contentions. Indeed, this theory is not even plausible, for if dipping was the universally accepted mode of baptism at that time, as Mr. Gavin asserts, why could not the Catholic priests just as well have used that mode in baptizing their alleged illegitimate children? It is well-known that the baptism of infants by immersion was not uncommon in the early centuries of the Christian dispensation? Why, then, was it necessary to invent a new and different method? If men are going to construct a tale with a view to getting people to believe it, they ought at least in some measure to make it comport with reason and common sense. If Mr. Gavin has any real desire to discover the origin of sprinkling and pouring as modes of baptism, let him read with an intelligent and open mind the inspired pages of the Old and New Testaments, and he will have little difficulty in ascertaining from whence they came.

We hold no brief for the Roman Catholic Church (from which we differ radically on many important points), but we think Mr. Gavin's action in painting in the blackest colors the relations between the priests and nuns of that denomination at a certain period, and adding, "It has always been so," does that sect a very grave and inexcusable injustice. We do not at all doubt that there have been had men and women in the service of the Romish ecclesiasticism (to a greater or less extent they are in all religious organizations, the Baptist included); but to affirm that this corruption has been largely and continuously prevalent is going further than there is any evidence to warrant.

We do not think Mr. Gavin has strengthened his statement at all by bringing forward as an authority Mr. Thomas E. Watson, of Georgia, whose outrageous assaults upon Christian missions have brought him into disrepute among the best people of the nation. Reckless, indeed, is he who in any controversy is willing to stand upon the affirmations of one whose sensational facts have so often been shown to be anything else but facts.

We feel like apologizing to our readers for having brought such a matter as this into the columns of the Advocate. We should not have thought of doing so but for the fact that communications reaching our office indicated that some of our people were being disturbed by Mr. Gavin's effusion. We do not like to deal with things that are indecent even when it seems necessary in the interest of truth and justice. We confess that we were surprised to see our usually high-toned contemporary give space to a rigmarole of this character.

ADMIRABLE, BUT OVERDONE.

The New York Herald gives the following illustration of respect and courtesy, shown by one in a humble station in life to the nation's highest official:

"President Taft and his brother went out for a ride in one of the White House automobiles. In crossing a muddy place in the road a wheel mired and the car stood vexatiously still. The distinguished gentlemen alighted and walked on, leaving the chauffeur to get the car out of the mud-hole as best he could. It was no trouble after the car was relieved of its load, and soon the chauffeur overtook the pedestrians and called to them to get back in. 'How did you manage to extricate the auto?' the President inquired. Looking at Mr. Taft's tremendous body, and thinking that the true explanation might sting him, the man said: 'A farmer came along with his team and pulled it out.'"

We admit that there was much in the chauffeur's considerateness to admire, but we cannot join The Herald in commending his misrepresentation. When courtesy leads to prevarication it has gone entirely too far. We are inclined to think that there is decidedly too much deception practiced in the affairs of life in the interest of politeness.

AN ARGUMENT IN VERSE.

We have never been much disposed to favor the new ways of spelling. It has seemed to us that there is too much valuable history in words to throw away as a concession to either laziness or economy; but we confess that the following poetic argument by Miss Maud Going, which we take from the New York Independent of January 16, has made us waver a little in our opposition to the new orthography:

"When Shakespear wrote and Ralceigh sayled
In goode Queene Bees her daye,
As dyverse hookes and lettres showe
They used to spelle this waye.
They did not grudge the tyme it tooke
For thenne you understande
They did not have to catche the mayle,
Their missives went by hand.
Our great-grandsires let letters drop;
Our grandsires dropped out more.
Why should we let the good work stop
Begin in days of yore?
There's precedent for what we do
If we drop letters, too;
E'en if thorough—by time we're through,
Becomes T-h-r-u."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

A concerted effort is being made by the Protestant ministers of New Orleans to engage Rev. "Billie" Sunday for a meeting in the Crescent City.

Bishop E. E. Hoss was announced to preach at the Cabanne Street Church of St. Louis last Sunday, of which Dr. Theo. Copeland is the popular pastor.

Rev. J. A. Bowen, of Birmingham, Ala., who is one of the official Evangelists of the North Alabama Conference, is at present engaged in revival work in Florida.

From Caledonia, Miss., in the great county of Lowndes, Rev. R. W. Evans has favored us with a club of five subscribers. We assure him of our appreciation of this good work.

Miss Iles, the consecrated deaconess of Houma, La., has, in addition to her work as a teacher in the Mission Hall, made 440 visits in the homes of that city since going there last fall.

Rev. W. V. Falcon is making a good start on the St. Martinville (La.) charge. He has been given valuable assistance in his work by Rev. Martin Hebert, the veteran French missionary, who has opened the way for a church organization in Port Barre.

A note from Rev. J. M. Lewis, of Vancleave, Miss., announces the arrival in his parsonage home, on the 18th inst., of a baby daughter. We extend congratulations, and pray that the Heavenly Father may have both the mother and the little one in his gracious keeping.

Our hustling young pastor at Jonesboro, La., Rev. O. L. Tucker, continues to send in subscriptions to the Advocate, for which we heartily thank him. Manifestly this gifted young itinerant is "a chip off the old block." Tucker is a name to conjure with in the Pelican State.

Rev. H. J. Maddox is pleasantly situated at Sa-tartia, Miss., where the people have been sending him nice things, and where the prospect pleases. We are grateful to Brother Maddox for taking care of the interests of the Advocate in his rounds.

We extend our hearty thanks to Rev. J. B. King, of Deasonville, Miss., for valuable work recently done for the Advocate. We are pleased to have our paper circulate among his good people.

Rev. A. F. Vaughan is in great favor with his people at Franklin, La. His predecessor, Brother Weir, received more than a hundred into the Church during his quadrennium, and left for Brother Vaughan a live and enthusiastic congregation.

Rev. J. B. Conner, who serves the Sardis (Miss.) Circuit, favored us a few days ago with a club of six subscribers. We appreciate his efforts in behalf of the Conference organ, and we trust that it will effectively re-enforce him in conserving and carrying forward the work of the Church in his field.

Rev. J. T. Lewis, of Clarksdale, Miss., informs us that the Elks' Club of that city has put the ban upon the "turkey trot" and other indecent kinds of dancing, and that the City Commissioners have declared a warfare of extermination against the "blind tigers." Let the good work continue until an end has been made of all drinking and every form of the dance.

Rev. L. F. Alford, who is noted for doing things, has lately been putting in some work for the Advocate in the Howison-Saucier (Miss.) charge, and as a result he has sent us two renewals and five new subscribers. He has also favored us with an interesting report of his work, which will appear next week.

In renewing her subscription, Mrs. Martha Rye, of Amory, Miss., declines to take advantage of the club price and says that the Advocate is worth several times more to her than the $1.50 it takes to secure it for a year. We are grateful for her encouraging words and are delighted to have her continue with us.

Rev. W. A. Hays, of Bay Springs, Miss., has brought us under obligations to him for three new subscriptions and two renewals. He adds that "there are others to follow." We feel sure that the claims of the Advocate will be faithfully presented in his charge, as will also all the other interests of the Church.

The Legal Conference of the Louisiana Annual Conference held a meeting in the Advocate office last week. There was a full attendance, and considerable business of importance was transacted. The session was held on our busiest day, and it was a matter of regret to us that we were not able to see more of the brethren.

Rev. L. E. Crooks, writing from Clay, La., reports that he has made his first round on the Elmore charge; that the people have been uniformly kind and courteous, and that he is pleased with the general outlook. We are indebted to Brother Crooks for five names for our subscription files, to which list he thinks he will soon be able to add others.

Rev. D. A. Morris, who was admitted into the Louisiana Conference (coming from the M. E. Church) at Monroe, and who was assigned to the Jennings charge, did not accept his work. Rev. L. N. Hoffpauir, who took an appointment as Conference Evangelist, has since been appointed to the Jennings Church and has already made a good beginning.

Rev. John Sholars has begun his work at Rayne, La., with his accustomed enthusiasm. The Rayne Church now has both a Senior and a Junior Epworth League and a Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society. The ladies of the congregation are planning to install electric lights in the parsonage, and there is a spirit of progress manifest in every department of church work.

In sending in her renewal and an additional subscription, Sister W. E. Courts, of Cary, Miss., says: "I have been taking the Advocate for thirty years, and I do not think it was ever better. I look for its coming each week with anticipations of pleasure." We are grateful for these words of commendation, which are not the only kind that we receive in this stirring age of the suffragette.

Rev. J. C. Price, of Lisbon, La., writes as follows: "I think the year here has opened auspiciously. We have a very fine people—a people who have a mind to work, and are at work." In his letter Brother Price sent us the names of six persons to whom the Advocate is to go for another year. A working people and a reading people ought certainly to accomplish something worth while.

Field Marshal W. S. Shipman, of the Durant District, North Mississippi Conference, under date of January 23, writes: "Forward!" is our watch word all along the line. Every charge that I have visited so far has increased the pastor's salary. All the preachers are on their jobs and at the business." We like the ring of this message. Methodism ought not to know how to do anything else but advance.

A note from our worthy young friend, Mr. T. D. Greenhaw, of Como, Miss., states that Rev. T. W. Dye, his father-in-law, has purchased a home in Senatobia, and has moved to that city. We congratulate the people of the Tate County capital upon having secured so able and useful a man as Brother Dye as one of their citizens. And in having Sister Dye also among them they are more than doubly blessed.

Rev. F. M. Freeman, of Bunkie, La., says: "Bunkie is still the best appointment in the Louisiana Conference, and I am sorry that this is my fourth year." It has a good name, and having had the services of Brother Freeman for three years, it is not surprising that it is a delightful charge. There are some appointments which, like persons, grow in grace, and there are a few which attain pretty nearly unto a state of perfection.

We are informed that Dr. H. G. Henderson, our pastor at Lexington, Miss., has made a most encouraging beginning in that cultured and promising charge. The Sunday congregation at both services are said to tax the capacity of the church, and the prayer meetings are reported to be interesting and largely attended. The members of the congregation have given the pastor and his family a royal "pounding," and by many marks of kindness are showing their appreciation.

The famous "Sawney" Webb, of Bell Buckle, has been chosen to the United States Senate by the Tennessee Legislature for a brief term which will end on the fourth of March next. This is an admirable selection. If Mr. Webb would take his "birchen rod" to Washington and use it on the Senators who do not do their duty, as he has been in the habit of doing on shirking students for many years, perhaps business would be transacted somewhat more expeditiously in the American House of Lords.

Rev. H. S. Spragins, who is winning golden opinions wherever he goes in the Greenville District, in a personal note to the Editor says: "It would be difficult to find a finer body of men than those with whom I am associated in the work. We have an encouraging prospect before us." Brother Spragins' estimate of his co-laborers is a correct one: his charges are excellently manned. It has long been the rule of the North Mississippi Conference to send some of its choicest preachers to the Delta; and in doing this it is wise.

The argument in the Vanderbilt University lawsuit was resumed Monday of this week, and is expected to continue ten days or longer. The case was opened for the Church by Mr. Percy D. Maddin, a part of whose able speech was printed in the Nashville Christian Advocate last week. The concluding address for the complainants will probably be made by Mr. G. T. Fitzhugh, of Memphis, who in point of forensic ability has few equals in the Volunteer State, which has long been famed for its great lawyers.

We take off our hat and make two bows to Brother James T. Otts, of Homer, La., who sent us, on Jan. 24, the largest club of subscribers that we have received since the meeting of our Annual Conference, accompanied by a check for $24.50. If more of our laymen would thus seek to lend a helping hand to the Conference organ, its circulation would grow much more rapidly. We shall not soon forget Brother Otts for his great kindness. We sincerely wish that his good example would prove to be contagious.

A telegram from Rev. R. P. Neblett, of Houston, Miss., bearing date of Jan. 28, reads as follows: "Mrs. J. A. Lewis passed away last night after a short illness. The funeral will take place this afternoon." We deeply regret to chronicle this sad occurrence. It has been but a few days since Brother and Sister Lewis celebrated their fifty-seventh wedding anniversary, a notice of which appeared in the Advocate. Sister Lewis is the mother of Rev. T. W. Lewis, of Memphis, Tenn., and Rev. E. S. Lewis, of West Point, Miss. Our heart goes out in tender sympathy to the bereaved.

Rev. C. C. Weir has made a fine impression on the people of Morgan City, La., where he succeeded Rev. H. N. Brown as pastor. The first quarterly conference of that charge, in addition to passing commendatory resolutions concerning Brother Brown for having built a commodious parsonage, extended to Brother Weir a most hearty welcome. In commenting on the new pastor, the weekly paper at Morgan City says: "There is no better pastor in the Louisiana Conference than Rev. C. C. Weir, and his sermons are always worth while. They take their quality from his character."

That choice layman of the Greenwood (Miss.) Church, Brother Rowan Thayer, in making provision for the Advocate to continue to come to his home, takes time to add the following: "Brother Cunningham, after being much blundered, is now in place, and has taken up his work among us. You perhaps know that his oldest son, a lad about 14 years of age, was so unfortunate as to have his hip broken while playing ball, and could not be moved until now. I am glad to say, however, he is much improved, and that we hope that he will soon be able to go about. Brother Cunningham is taking well with our people, and I feel sure that we will have a good year at Greenwood."

We acknowledge the reception of an invitation from Mr. and Mrs. William Harney Beasley, of Hazlehurst, Miss., to the marriage of their daughter, Miss Minnie Jane, to Mr. Read Patton Dunn, of Greenville, Miss., which will take place in the Methodist Church at Hazlehurst on Thursday afternoon, Feb. 6, at 4 o'clock. The bride is a most worthy and attractive young lady, and Mr. Dunn is a young man of excellent business capacity and most superior character. He is the superintendent of the Methodist Sunday School in the city where he lives, and has the confidence and esteem of the entire community. The happy couple will be "at home" in Greenville, Miss., after March 15.

We have before us a program of the ceremonies with which the Joan of Arc Exhibition, consisting of statues, medals, paintings, engravings, photographs, and documents relating to the famous Maid of Orleans, was opened in the building of the American Numismatic Society in New York City on January 6. This exhibit will be kept open for public inspection daily until February 7. Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan, Hon. W. A. Clark, Mr. Rodman Wanamaker and many other celebrities have loaned for this interesting occasion all the treasures connected with the life and career of this prodigy of French history that they have in their collections. Were this exposition closer to us, we should surely avail ourselves of the invitation to look it over.

Through the courtesy of the author, Dr. H. L. Sutherland, of Benoit, Mississippi, we have received a copy of a neat pamphlet entitled, "An Address to the Public School Teachers of Bolivar County on the Application of the Rules of Hygiene and Sanitation to the Prevention of Disease." It is an instructive and impressive discussion, and doubtless will do great good. Dr. Sutherland is the chief health officer of Bolivar County and has long been recognized as one of the ablest physicians in Mississippi. He is public-spirited, and no man in that commonwealth has done more to safeguard the public health by wise modern methods than has he. Such service as he is rendering cannot be too highly commended.

From Clinton, La., Brother W. T. Currie, under date of Jan. 24, writes as follows: "On the 17th of this month Mrs. M. E. Lesley died about four miles north of here. We buried her on the following Sunday, and on the succeeding Wednesday (the 22d) we buried her daughter, Mrs. J. E. McCutcheon. The attending physician said the latter sacrificed her life for her mother. Both of the deceased were members of the M. E. Church, South. They held their membership at the Percy Creek Church, near Woodville, Miss. Let prayer be made for Brother McCutcheon and the eight children who have been left without a mother's care, and five of whom were ill when in obedience to the Master's call she left them. We regret to hear of the bereavement which has come to this household, and we extend to the sorrowing ones our deepest sympathy.

The Woman's city Board of Missions held its annual meeting at St. Mark's Hall on Wednesday afternoon of last week. After reports by the several employees of the Board, Rev. Felix R. Hill, Jr., pastor of Rayne Memorial Church, delivered an appropriate and interesting address. Among those who at present are working in connection with the mission enterprises fostered by this Board, are Miss Roberta Baker, Miss Lottie Keithley, Miss Annie Ragland, Miss Bunkley and Mrs. Lilly Meekins. Miss Margaret Ragland and Miss Wilson are away on account of ill health. The work generally was announced to be in a healthful condition. The following officers were chosen for the next twelve months: President, Mrs. S. A. Montgomery; Vice President, Mrs. D. C. Worrell; Recording Secretary, Mrs. John B. Parker; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. George S. Brown; Treasurer, Mrs. Elmer Wood.

Rev. O. P. Armour, of Sidon, Miss., under date of the 17th inst., writes as follows: "I have just returned from a meeting of the pastors, district stewards and trustees of the Durant District, which was held at Durant on January 15. Rev. W. S. Shipman, the new presiding elder, presided with dignity, and made a spiritual and helpful talk, through which ran an evangelistic note. The apportionment of the assessments to the various charges was made, and the presiding elder's salary was fixed at $1800, a raise of $300 over last year. An expenditure of $300 to improve the district parsonage was ordered. Brother Shipman has made a fine beginning, and our prospects under his leadership are most encouraging. We have adopted as our motto, 'A Revival in Every Charge,' and by God's help, we expect to go forward."

Mrs. FANNIE GULLEY was born November 17, 1838, and died at her home in Philadelphia, Miss., Oct. 6, 1911. Sister Gulley was married at the age of 24 years. She was the mother of eight children, three of whom, one little son and two daughters, and her husband preceded her to that eternal home. Five children survive her to mourn their loss. She joined the Church when a young lady and lived as a faithful member until God said, "Come up higher." She loved the Lord and was devoted to her pastor and the church. She attended the church services regularly and her home was always open to ministers. On the day before she died she called all her children and many of her friends to her bedside and told them good-bye, and gave many exhortations. She called for that beautiful song, "Down at the Cross," and as we sang it through she joined in the singing. May God bless the children and help them to live so as to meet their mother and other members of the family in heaven. Her pastor, J. J. GOLDEN.

Truly, we live in a world where dark shadows are continually falling across our pathway, reminding us that on earth there is no abiding stay. How forcibly was it realized that in the midst of life we are in death, when the sad news of the death of JACK RHODES was announced. The angel of death claimed him as his own and took him home to glory on December 11, 1912, leaving an aching void in the hearts of a mother, father, brothers and friends. Weep not, for he has gone on to await our coming. He suffered two weeks, during which time loving hands did all that could be done to relieve him, but the hand of God was stronger and he took him home. Why one whose life was so full of promise was taken so early, we do not know, but God knows best and doeth all things well. He is not dead, but hath eternal life. It is true that he has gone from us; his voice is silent; his words we miss, and his face we shall see on earth no more, but he awaits us on the other shore. May God comfort and sustain the sorrowing ones. A FRIEND.

JAMES F. PORTER, the subject of this sketch, was born and reared in Franklin County, Miss., near Wright's Church, on the Homochitto river, September 5, 1826. He joined the Methodist Church while a young man. He married Miss G. Burt, April 28, 1853; to them were born five children, two of whom are blessing the world with godly lives to-day, and the other three have been called to meet their Redeemer. Brother Porter joined the Confederate Army in 1862, served three years in Company D. of the 33d Mississippi Regiment, under Capt. Sharps. He fought in the following battles: Franklin, Tenn., the Siege at Vicksburg, Miss., Decatur, Ga., Rome, Ga., Murfreesboro, Tenn., and surrendered with his regiment at Greensboro, N. C. It is with pleasure that the writer states on reliable authority that he was a noble citizen, a true husband and father, a brave soldier, a consistent church member, and a lover of God. He died January 13, 1913; was buried in the Oldenburg cemetery on January 16, 1913. May God comfort the bereaved. G. G. YEAGER.

Mr. W. S. COOPER was born at Carthage, Miss., Sept. 25, 1875. He departed this life at Como, Miss., in July, 1912. He came to Como in 1896 to work in a mercantile house, known now as the Taylor Mercantile Co. Here he worked for 16 years continuously. On the seventh day of September, 1902, he was married to Miss Effie Bridger, of Sardis, Miss. Two children blessed this union, one of whom, together with Mrs. Cooper, survives. Some time in 1907 Brother Cooper united with the Methodist Church at Como and was a consistent and faithful member till death. He loved the Church and never tired in looking after its interest. For a while he served his church as a member of the Board of Stewards, and as teacher in the Sunday school. Noble were his traits of character and beautiful were his virtues. As a citizen he always stood for the best. His strong convictions of right and his splendid courage never failed him. He was as near the ideal husband and father as one could find. He was thoughtful, tender and affectionate in his home. I have never known one more devoted to his family than he. As a friend he was ever faithful and true: one in whom you felt safe in confiding and to whom you could open your heart. The year 1912 took from earth two from among my best friends: B. F. Ward, Jr., of Winona, was one, and W. S. Cooper, of Como, was the other. J. A. HALL.

Mrs. CLARA CASON WEST-BROOKS was born at Big Cane, St. Landry Parish, La., October 25, 1887, and died at Melville, La., December 29, 1912. Sister Westbrooks came here with her parents, F. B. Cason and Eula Ward Cason, in early life. On Feb. 10, 1907, she was married to Mr. Ira Westbrooks. She was the mother of three sons, the youngest being two and one-half months old. In early life Sister Westbrooks was impressed with the beauty of holiness and gave her life to the service of God. She united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Big Cane, La., under the ministry of the late Rev. J. M. Johnston. Sister Westbrooks lived a beautiful, exemplary Christian life. She magnified all the relations she sustained to life, being a dutiful daughter, a loving sister, a devoted wife, a faithful mother, and a true friend. During her last illness of 62 days she bore her sufferings with marked fortitude and patience. Several days before her death she expressed an unwavering faith in Jesus as her Savior and gave directions concerning her children. The funeral service was held in the Methodist Church in Melville. Earth is poorer, but heaven is richer by her death. P. A. SWANN.

On December 21, 1912, the precious soul of little FLOYD, the eldest son of J. B. and Blanche Womble, took its flight from this world of care back to the One who gave it. He was permitted to bless the home of his fond parents only 6 years, 4 months and 25 days. He had been sick only a few days when he fell asleep in the arms of Jesus, who said: "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." Yes, a home has been made sad and fond parents mourn their loss; but let us remember that heaven has been made brighter by his going. Let us so live that we may meet him some sweet day around God's throne above where there will be no more pain or sorrow. Little Floyd was a good child and was loved by all who knew him. The same smiling face, the same sweet voice, the same innocent ways that characterized his short stay here will be our joy throughout eternity. His little body was laid to rest in the Macedonia cemetery, the funeral service being conducted by Rev. Mr. Johnson. May the presence of God take the place of little Floyd and may those who weep remember that the Savior said, "Blessed are they that mourn: for they shall be comforted."

Tidings From the Field

West, Miss.

I arrived at West on Saturday before the third Sunday in December, and my family arrived on Tuesday after the third Sunday. We were met by the ladies of West, who conducted us to the parsonage, where they had prepared us a good dinner, which we very greatly enjoyed. We are delighted with this good people. They are generous, kind-hearted, and attentive. Brother Rogers left the work in good shape, and he is very much loved here. I have made one round, and I am very much encouraged. I hope to be able to do a good year's work.

—W. A. Clark.

Meehan, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: We are settled down in our new home at last. We have a nice, new parsonage, well furnished. We have met many good people here, and they have certainly been kind to us since we came into their midst. We have received two poundings already, and one of them was very severe. It brought everything good to eat for man and beast. We feel that we have the work well in hand, and feel sure that with the Lord's help we can accomplish something for him this year. As we go here and there, we shall not forget the dear old Advocate. We pray that you may have a great year.

—W. E. Dickens.

Deasonville Charge, Miss. Conf.

We are moving on nicely on the Deasonville Charge. The outlook is very encouraging, and we think we are going to have a fine year. This is our prayer, and we think our faith is strong in Him who has never failed us. So far, a good spirit and gratifying interest have been manifested in all our services. The preacher who serves this people is indeed fortunate. They are thoughtful and attentive in caring for their pastor. They furnished us as fine a dinner on Thanksgiving, and also on Christmas, day as any one needs. Many good things are coming in to us regularly. For these we are, indeed, thankful. You may expect more subscriptions to the Advocate soon.—J. B. King.

Baker, La.

At the last meeting of the Louisiana Conference I was appointed to the Baker charge for the third time. I have met with a cordial reception and I believe we are beginning the best year of the three. I am praying that it may be. The kind women of Deerford remembered the pastor and his family very kindly by sending them a bountiful New Year dinner already prepared, which we enjoyed very much. Many thanks to those that were so kind and thoughtful. Rev. W. H. Coleman, our new Presiding Elder, came and preached Sunday, Jan. 12, at 7:30 p. m., and on Monday at 11 a. m. He gave us two fine sermons. After the sermon Monday, he held our first quarterly conference. Three out of the four churches were represented and the financial report was in advance of last year though the conference was held fourteen days earlier. There was a little reduction in the assessment for the pastor's salary, which should not have been. However, I am not complaining. I believe it will all come out right in the end. It was the pleasure of the pastor and family to entertain the Presiding Elder while he was here and we enjoyed his visit very much. Our next quarterly conference will be held at Deerford.—S. D. Howard, P. C.

Topisaw Charge, Miss. Conf.

Dear Advocate: Let me say that we are moving along nicely at Topisaw. We are under lasting obligations to Revs. J. W. Thompson and J. Lloyd Decell for the condition in which we found things on this work. Brother Thompson and the good people, together, made things pleasant for us at Topisaw when we came. Though it was raining, a survey was in readiness at the depot. There were a number of people at the parsonage awaiting us when we arrived. They gave us a cordial reception and a delightful supper. We found the pantry laden with good things to eat. Brother Decell preceded me at Holmesville (the church that was added to the work this year), and his influence was conducive to our pleasant welcome there. Such kindness at the hands of these good people inclines me to get on my knees and implore the Giver of all good gifts to give us grace, wisdom, and strength, that we may be enabled to minister to them in such a manner as to repay them in some measure for all that they have done for us. We are asking God (John 14:14) to favor us with an old-fashioned revival all over the charge, and already we see evidences that He is listening to our petition. And we feel sure that when we have done our part, the needed revival will come, which means that all our other church work will prosper. Amen.—J. A. Wells.

Jackson, Miss., Galloway Chapel.

I have just spent several days at the Methodist Orphanage. On coming to Jackson to serve as pastor of Galloway Chapel, I found no parsonage. Houses to rent are scarce, especially those that suit the size of this pastor's salary. Brother Williams, the Superintendent of the Orphanage, learned of my dilemma and invited me to make the Orphanage my home until I could find a house. I was greatly benefited by my stay there. My interest in the institution has been increased, my love for the orphans deepened, and my heart warmed toward the manager and his worthy assistants. I am sure that Brother Williams is in the right place, for no man could have greater love for the children than he has. Sister Williams also is equally as well fitted for her work in this institution, and together with her husband, made me feel very much at home. While there I met Brother and Sister H. E. Carter, who have but recently been appointed as Bro. Williams' assistants. I am sure they are providentially fitted for the work to which they have been appointed. That God may bless our Mississippi Orphanage and all who are connected with it, is my prayer. I finally found a suitable house, and am now happily located. I am living in a part of the house occupied by Brother and Sister R. Bradley. We have recently been the recipients of a big pounding at the hands of the members of Galloway Chapel, for which we are thankful. May we be a blessing to them, as they have been kind and thoughtful of us.

—W. B. Waldrop, P. C.

If you stand half a mile off from a man and throw the Gospel at him, you will miss him, but if you go close to him and lay hold of him, giving him a hearty grip of the hand, and show that you have an affection for him, you will, by God's blessing, lead him in the right way.—C. H. Spurgeon.

The Sunday School.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

By Rev. B. F. Lewis.

A class of young ladies and men in the Crystal Springs Sunday school met and organized during the past week. Miss Pet Eagan is teacher. This makes four organized classes in this school.

The Sunday school at Canton has taken the preliminary steps for a thorough grading and organization. The departmental method will be used. Money is now being raised for the erection of additional rooms for the accommodation of the school. Rev. C. N. Guice is the pastor, and Mr. C. E. White is the superintendent.

The departmental superintendents elected by the Sunday School Board at its recent meeting in Hazlehurst have arranged to begin work at once. They are: Miss Daisy Magee, elementary superintendent, Columbia, Miss.; Mrs. G. D. Cameron, Canton, Miss.; missionary superintendent; and Mr. N. A. Mott, adult superintendent, Yazoo City, Miss. We bespeak for these workers the heartiest co-operation of the Sunday school forces of the Conference. Their work is being outlined, and in due time will be communicated to the scholars.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

The Clisby Class, West Point, Miss., is rejoicing in the possession of a fine new piano, and is planning for an attractive anniversary celebration at an early date.

Individual and school responsibility is needed to bring the desired results about. Write the Field Secretary all about your school—its needs, its plans, its numbers, its excellencies—and write to-day.

There are some good and helpful Teacher Training classes in our Conference, but not half so many as are needed. Dr. Hamill calls this department the "Heart of the Sunday school," and rightly does so.

Mr. Thos. Mills, of Kossuth, and his enthusiastic Adult Class had gotten out circulars and prepared a well-built program for an all-day Sunday visit from the Field Secretary on Jan. 9, but the very bad roads and inclement weather made her attendance impossible. This engagement will only be deferred till better weather.

No better preparation for a good year's Sunday school work could be made than to organize a Teacher Training Class at once, and register this with Dr. Hamill and get the benefit of his wide experience and splendid efficiency in this line. His new leaflet entitled "Southern Methodist Plans of Teacher Training" should be in the hands of every superintendent and pastor, and then should be acted upon at once.

The progress made in our Sunday school work this year will be tabulated by presiding elders' districts. Each of these eight divisions of our Conference will be given special commendation at our next Annual Conference if it makes noticeable progress in the Elementary, Secondary and Adult divisions, as well as in Home, Teacher Training, Missions and Temperance departments. One district really made phenomenal progress along some lines last year and bids fair to equal that record this year. All did well, but there is vast need for enthusiastic, organized and well planned progress during the year now beginning. At each District Conference further emphasis will be laid on a definite plan to bring about such results. In the meanwhile present statistics are needed along the full gamut of each department of every school, and future plans will be appreciated. No item of information is too small to prove valuable in forming a really good report.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

Mrs. W. H. Coleman has succeeded Mrs. C. C. Miller as teacher of the Philathea class of the Hammond Sunday school. Mrs. Miller turns over to her successor an enrollment of nearly forty young ladies, well organized and possessed of a zealous class spirit. These pupils were gathered by the influence of good teaching, house-to-house visitation, and attention to the social life of the members. The last member to join the class before the beginning of the new year was Miss Bowers, who came to an untimely death by accident the last week in December, being run over by a railroad train while in company with a friend. Miss Bowers was a very popular young woman and the deplorable affair brought great grief to the whole community.

The Christmas giving service of the First Methodist Church of Shreveport was carried out in a very impressive manner. The members brought all manner of groceries and Santa Claus-filled stockings which were placed in forty different piles in the room. The Epworth Leaguers and the members of the Woman's Missionary Society and others, loaded these gifts into automobiles and carried them to forty poor families. There was also a gift of 100 one dollar bills; these were used for buying clothes for the poor children of the school, as it is its policy not to allow any child to come so poorly dressed as to be humiliated. Such a Christmas celebration is in harmony with the spirit of the Master and might well be imitated by many of our Churches.

Dr. J. L. Scales, of the First Methodist Church of Shreveport, remembered each member of his large Bible class on New Year's day with the beautiful Sunday school calendar published by the Sunday School Times. Besides the Sunday school lessons, it also contains inspiring mottoes and pithy quotations bearing on the Sunday school's work. Altogether, this was a practical and appropriate gift from a Sunday school teacher to the members of his class.

Rev. T. H. Morris, at Maudsfield, is using the Sunday school uniform lessons as the Scripture to be studied in his mid-week prayer meetings, and some interesting discussions are drawn from the present Old Testament subjects. At the conclusion of the prayer meeting a workers' council is held from time to time.

At the beginning of this new year it would be a capital idea for our Sunday schools to have installation services for their officers and teachers. When we set apart men to preach we bring them before the congregation, and in a beautiful consecration service lay hands upon them and give them authority to "preach the gospel in the Church of God," and it would be only a parallel service to recognize in some way before the same congregation those who are to teach the Scriptures. Such a service would clothe the teaching function with a reverence and responsibility not now recognized in most churches, and would enlist the sympathy and co-operation of the congregation in like proportion. The Sunday school department of the Publishing House will furnish a suggestive program for the occasion. Why not make this an event at the first Quarterly Conference and use the presiding elder for an address?

Smoke of Herbs Cures Catarrh

A Simple, Safe, Reliable Way and It Costs Nothing to Try.

This preparation of herbs, leaves, flowers and berries (containing no tobacco or habit-forming drugs) is either smoked in an ordinary clean pipe or smoking tube, and by drawing the medicated smoke into the mouth and inhaling into the lungs or sending it out through the nostrils in a perfectly natural way, the worst case of Catarrh can be eradicated.

It is not unpleasant to use, and at the same time it is entirely harmless, and can be used by man, woman or child.

Just as Catarrh is contracted by breathing cold or dust and germ-laden air, just so this halmy antiseptic smoking remedy goes to all the affected parts of the air passages of the head, nose, throat and lungs. It can readily be seen why the ordinary treatments, such as sprays, ointments, salves, liquid or tablet medicines fail—they do not and can not reach all the affected parts.

If you have catarrh of the nose, throat or lungs, choking, stopped-up feeling, colds, catarrhal headaches; if you are given to hawking and spitting, this simple yet scientific treatment should cure you.

An illustrated book which goes thoroughly into the whole question of the cause, cure and prevention of catarrh will upon request, be sent you by Dr. J. W. Blosser, 204 Walton Street, Atlanta, Ga.

He will, also, mail you five days' free treatment. You will at once see that it is a wonderful remedy, and as it only costs one dollar for the regular treatment, it is within the reach of everyone. It is not necessary to send any money—simply send your name and address and the booklet and free trial package will be mailed you immediately.

Resolutions of Respect from the W. F. M. Society of Tupelo, Miss.

Whereas our Father, in his love and wisdom, has seen fit to remove from us Miss Madge, the beloved daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Haughton, of Prairie, Miss., be it Resolved, That we tender our love and sympathy, that we suffer with the family in their sorrow for her, praying that the father and mother may accept this grief and find comfort in One who alone can solace wounded hearts, knowing that he in his mercy and goodness would not permit the budding of such beautiful love and friendship on earth without the glorious assurance of a blossoming in its fulness to shed its rich fragrance in heaven. The end of her being has been fulfilled. May the broken links of that home be knit together again in even closer and more sacred bonds. We grieve with her friends. May the joy and brightness of this precious life, now gone from us, have a spiritual influence as the years come and go, leading to great usefulness in the Master's kingdom.

Signed, Mrs. W. T. Reeves, Mrs. C. W. Hall, Mrs. S. J. High.

Water Valley Reading Circle Meeting.

The Reading Circle of the Woman's Home Mission Society of the First Methodist Church, Water Valley, met in the spacious parlor of Mrs. G. W. Rayburn. All were cordially welcomed by the ladies of the household. The subject of the chapter was, "The Non-Christian Faiths." The particular theme for the evening was, "Theosophy, or Modern Buddhism." While it is not the purpose to dive to the depths of these old-world forms of religion, the students gather sufficient information to keep abreast of the times, and to gain an intelligent understanding of the nature of the perils that threaten our country in the propagation of these effete practices. Theosophy is perhaps undergoing another re-incarnation in appearing in the Western world.

The zeal of Christian people should be redoubled in their missionary efforts. Since these menacing cults do not come under the ban of the things forbidden by the immigration authorities, Christianity should safeguard its followers to prevent the constant falling away of the ranks to this "form," which has in it neither the essence of the spirit of Christ nor of God, but expects to reach perfection through continuous progressive stages of re-births into forms of different animals or varying stages of man's existence. Indifference in Christians is a great ally to these occult sciences—so-called faiths.

As soon as you get them I want you to put them on your eyes, sit down in front of the open hearth one of these cold wintry nights, and you'll be agreeably surprised to discover that you can again read the very finest print in your bible with them on even by the dim firelight; you'll find that you can again thread the smallest-eyed needle you can lay your hands on, and do the finest kind of embroidery and crocheting with them on, and do it all night long, if you like, without any headaches or eye-pains, and with as much ease and comfort as you ever did in your life.

Or, if you're a sportsman and like to go out hunting occasionally, just shoulder your gun and go out into the woods some early morning when the haze is yet in the air, and you'll be greatly delighted when you drop the smallest bird off the tallest tree-top at the very first shot sure, with the help of these wonderful "Perfect Vision" glasses of mine. And in the evening, when the shadows are gathering in the twilight, you'll easily distinguish a horse from a cow out in the pasture at the greatest distance and as far as your eye can reach with them on—and this even if your eyes are so very weak now that you cannot even read the largest headlines in this paper.

but send for a pair at once and try them out yourself for reading, sewing, hunting, driving, indoors, outdoors, anywhere and everywhere, anyway and every way. PISO'S REMEDY

Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by Druggists.

FOR COUGHS AND COLDSSOME NOTES ON CURRENT MATTERS.

Dear Dr. Meek: We had a great many moves at the last session of the Louisiana Conference. We were surprised and almost rebellious that Brother Coleman was promoted before his four years were out here and feel like congratulating the people of the Baton Rouge District on their rare good fortune. Brother Tucker had to leave, having served his four years, and Brother Vaughan felt that he ought to leave and did. We reluctantly gave them all up and, like loyal Methodists, welcomed the three new ministers—Brothers Carter, Holmes and Fontaine—to our community. Brother Carter, however, is not really a new man, having previously served this district four years. About the most unfavorable criticism we have heard of him was that "he isn't handsome," but even looks may improve with age.

We have read with interest the discussion of "Lalty Rights" by the Editor and Drs. Steele and Featherstun. I am so glad that Christians can differ in love. Dr. H. F. Johnson, of precious memory, taught me a valuable lesson along that line when I was a girl of seventeen, at Whitworth College. A class-mate came into my room and announced that a lady was to address us on a certain evening and asked, "Are you going?" I replied, "No, indeed; I do not believe women should speak in public," naturally supposing the question forever settled. But when four o'clock came Dr. Johnson stepped upon the rostrum and said: "Young ladies, I have a rare treat in store for you. Mrs. Hayes will address you on the subject of Missions, and I shall expect every one of you who is not too ill to leave her room to be in your place." That gave the situation an entirely new aspect. Mrs. Hayes spoke, and I heard, no matter what I believed. There are times when we have to "fall into line" and "march," even though we may do it with reluctant feet. Lalty rights and woman suffrage are both coming, if straws show which way the wind blows. "If it be of God ye cannot overthrow it; if it be of men it will come to naught." We are very much like Deacon Smith and Deacon Brown, who were told to go home and pray over a certain difficulty they had had and come back in the morning prepared to make friends. When they met next day Deacon Smith said: "Well, Brother Brown, I've prayed over this matter and have decided that you'll have to give in, for I can't."

MRS. A. C. MCKINNEY.

VETERAN MINISTERS' ASSOCIATION.North Mississippi Conference.

The Veteran Ministers' Association of the North Mississippi Conference held its third annual meeting during the late session of our Conference, at Greenwood, Mississippi, at 3 o'clock p. m., Wednesday, Dec. 4. Rev. S. M. Thames, President, occupied the chair. The annual sermon was preached by Rev. John Ritchey.

We missed the helpful presence of Rev. G. W. Bachman, Vice President, at this meeting. While crossing a street in Greenwood the evening before, he was struck by an automobile, receiving severe and painful injuries, rendering it necessary that he should have the services of a physician and keep in his room during the first part of the Conference session. Later in the session, however, his brethren were gratified to see him in the Conference room and able to look after his work as Conference Colporteur. Brothers Thames, Ritchey and Bachman are still on the effective list. They are members of the Association by reason of their long, continuous service in the itinerant ranks.

A pleasing and edifying feature of the meeting was the cordial greeting and joyous hand-shaking given to the veterans during the concluding part of the exercises. Among the veterans present at this meeting was our Rev. T. G. Freeman. Several years had passed since he had attended a Conference session. Tall and manly in form, he towered above his brethren. None seemed to enjoy the glad fellowship of the meeting more than he did.

Two of our veterans, J. W. Honnoll and J. T. Cunningham, and one son of a veteran, J. T. Murrah, had died during the year. These dear brethren, esteemed and beloved, having fallen on sleep, rest from their labors. What a Conference of our brethren is gathering on the heavenly shore! May we who remain have grace and be ready to join the Conference above, when our Lord shall call us hence. T. C. WIER.

OF INTEREST TO EVERY PASTOR, S. S. SUPERINTENDENT AND LAY LEADER.

Would you like to know the relative extent of our Church's field at home and abroad; the number of missionaries employed; the number of native preachers and helpers; the schedule of salaries; the number of organized churches and church members in mission lands; the number of Sunday schools and pupils; number of day schools and pupils; number of hospitals, and patients treated; missionary progress in the last ten years; per capita gifts for missions of the leading denominations? Would you like to have this information in such form that you could hang it on the walls of your church or Sunday school as a constant source of interest? You can have that and more. A set of four charts, each 28x42 inches in size, handsomely printed in two colors, giving all these facts and many more in graphic form, can be had at the remarkably low price of 25 cents post-paid for the set of four. At this price every pastor, Sunday school superintendent and lay leader should have them. Order of Board of Missions, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn., sending stamps or silver.

THE SILENT PIANO

Is there a silent piano in your home? If so, why not exchange it for one which every member of your family can play, no matter whether they have taken music lessons or not. Even little children of five or six years can render the sweetest music of the masters on the Ludden & Bates' Self-player piano. And the same instrument can be used as an ordinary piano of the sweetest tone and most perfect action by those who have studied music. It is, therefore, two instruments in one—a self-player for those who do not know one note from another, and a regular piano for use by musicians.

Write for the catalogue of the Advocate Piano Club and full particulars of the exchange privilege. Address the Managers, Ludden & Bates, Advocate Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga.

Constipated? Go To Your Doctor

It is impossible to be well, simply impossible, if the bowels are constipated. Waste products, poisonous substances, must be removed from the body at least once each day, or there will be trouble. Ask your doctor about Ayer's Pills, gently laxative, all vegetable. He knows why they act directly on the liver.

This Certified Test Record Means Much To Owners Of Hart-Parr Oil Tractors.

Before it leaves the factory, every Hart-Parr Oil Tractor undergoes a searching inspection and test.

First it gets a severe field parts are working smoothly. and operated under a continuous run to see that all traction. Then it is belted to a dynamo load for 20 to 40 hours.

A self recording instrument, carefully sealed to prevent tampering, registers the load carried by the tractor, every second of the time it is on test. In the last hour of this long run, the tractor must carry a load considerably in excess of its guaranteed brake horse power, or—it doesn't pass inspection.

Four individual inspectors certify to the truth and accuracy of the test. But even then, the test record is first approved by the President of the Company, before the tractor is allowed to leave the factory.

Every purchaser of a Hart-Parr tractor gets a certified copy of the test record covering his individual engine. The original is filed with the rest of the records covering that particular engine.

We can afford this long, painstaking test. The current from the dynamos used for testing tractors, drives motors that operate the machinery thruout our plant. No other tractor manufacturer uses power in this way. None can afford, therefore, to conduct so long and severe a test.

And a 20 to 40 hour test, with constant, searching inspection, means much more to you than the 1 or 2 hour's test that other tractors get. It means that a Hart-Parr Oil Tractor reaches you with bolts tight, bearings properly adjusted and engine perfectly timed. You don't have to waste a whole lot of valuable time in making adjustments that should have been made at the factory. Your tractor is ready for work the minute it reaches you.

J. VAN LINDLEY NURSERY CO. Pomona, N. C.

Dear Sirs:—After 24 years experience as salesman for your Company, I am prepared to state that the business has become a pleasure to me, as well as a success. I have learned enough human nature since I have been on the road to make a success of almost any kind of business that I would want to pursue if I were to lay down the tree business, but I do not know of anything that I could go into that would make me the money in the same time that I am making now. I clear from fifteen hundred to two thousand dollars every year, and only work from six to eight months on both canvass and delivery. My motto is, "Go after them and get them."

Very truly,

WM. RIGHTSELL.

A NOTE FROM HATTIESBURG, MISS.

Main Street Church begins the new year with flattering prospects for a great work. The pastor has been received enthusiastically, congregations are large, and the interest is general. The Sunday school, under the leadership of Mr. C. F. Ames, an aggressive young man, is adding to its membership each week. The Board of Stewards is a body of strong Christian business men who love the Church and are willing to work for its success.

Rev. Geo. H. Galloway has been enthusiastically received at Court Street. At every service he is preaching to a full house. All who hear him praise his sermons.

At Broad Street Rev. J. L. Neill is doing a great work. He is popular with all classes, and his people love him devotedly. According to membership he has the best Sunday school in the city—213 were present last Sunday.

Our new presiding elder, Rev. Geo. H. Thompson, is giving a good account of himself. He is pushing every interest of the district, and is proving helpful to all the pastors.

Hattiesburg has a fine citizenship, aggressive business men, many attractive public improvements, a number of beautiful churches, and a very bright business outlook.

AN APPEAL.

Brother Brethaupt is doing a great work with his band of helpers in Terrebonne and Lafourche Parishes. He is taking the light into many dark corners, and is organizing our work permanently. But, listen! There are no railroads in this territory, and he has to cover long distances every week. Last year his livery bills ate great holes into his salary. At one time the mission had a horse and buggy, but the horse died, and the buggy is now being used by his valuable assistant, Brother Anatole Martin. The other day, to save expense, Brother Brethaupt walked to one of his regular appointments, a distance of fifteen or twenty miles, and walked the same distance back home again. He needs a means of conveyance. He would prefer a motorcycle to anything else. The cost would probably be near $125. Are there not a number of friends of the French Mission work who will send me contributions for this worthy purpose?

BOONEVILLE, MISS.

I am a constant reader of the Advocate, which I enjoy very much. I can not see how any church member who has the welfare of his Church at heart can get along without it. At the last session of our Conference (the North Mississippi) Bishop Morrison returned to us our former pastor, Rev. S. A. Brown, and he has entered upon his third year's work with renewed energy and a determination to do better work than ever before. The North Mississippi Conference has no more faithful and capable minister than Brother Brown. He is plain and practical and speaks from his heart the words that he believes should be spoken, regardless of what men may say, and his words are accompanied by the power of God. If the people of this charge will rally and lend him the assistance that he needs and deserves, we will witness great things for the Lord this year. Our church is not as much alive spiritually as it should be, but the trouble is with the people and not the pastor. We were recently made happy by having with us for a day or two our former presiding elder, Rev. B. P. Jacob. It is always a pleasure to meet him. Methodism has no more worthy or effective soldier in her ranks than is he. We are thankful that we have as our Conference organ a paper of the strength of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and we wish for it abundant success.—Hardie W. Rees.

Editorial

"Our deeds still travel with us from afar,
And what we have been makes us what we are."

A Christian making money fast is like a man in a cloud of dust; it will fill his eyes if he be not careful.—Spurgeon.

The New York Independent most pertinently remarks: "It is curious in these days when we are told that the Church has lost its influence that there should be so many causes clamoring to secure the influence of the Church."

Have you ever observed how nearly all the women who disgrace themselves are described in the daily papers as "pretty?" A bit queer, isn't it? This is only one of the many manifestations of modern newspaper enterprise. The reporters know how to cast a bait to catch readers.

The Nashville Democrat states that the celebration of the centenary of the adoption of trousers by gentlemen is one of the things of interest that is being proposed for the year 1913. There seems to be some doubt as to whether this year is the one-hundredth anniversary of the donning of "pants," but this should not be allowed to delay the celebration, since it is somewhat uncertain how much longer the male members of the race will be allowed to wear them.

Our lawmakers have long been fighting against quacks in the medical profession. Is it not time that we were doing more to check the spiritual quackery that exists in the land? Undoubtedly there is far too much of it. It is even worse to delude a person whose soul is sin-sick with fake cures than it is to deceive him with worthless nostrums when he is physically ill. The one and only specific for any kind of disorder of the moral nature is the cleansing blood of the Lamb of Calvary.

A writer in the Baltimore and Richmond Christian Advocate, in referring to a leading Virginia congregation, says: "They are just simple enough to love the old-fashioned, plain gospel preaching." So are nine-tenths of our congregations. Nothing known to men has the continuous drawing power of the blessed truths of the Bible when presented in their purity and strength. They meet the deep needs of the soul, and they never wear out. Take it around the Christian world, and the ministers whom the people are hearing gladly are those who preach tenderly, lovingly, faithfully the great facts of the divine revelation. Those who prate about other things from their pulpits usually sooner or later find their audiences dwindling. Master and dispense the Word, brother, if you desire to discourse to full pews.

SPIRITUALITY NECESSARY TO CHRISTIAN USEFULNESS.

The first essential requisite to usefulness as a Christian is to become and keep right with God. No other equipment can take the place of a deep and full religious experience, and the spiritual knowledge and power springing therefrom. Character speaks louder than either words or actions. A man must himself first find the way to God and holiness before he can safely guide others to the Cross and the spiritual heights to which it opens the way. This truth is writ large both upon the pages of the Sacred Volume and in the history of the Church. St. Paul recognized it when he wrote, "If a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual restore such an one." David emphasized it when he cried, "Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation, and uphold me with thy free spirit; then will I teach transgressors thy ways, and sinners shall be converted unto thee."

The men of might in the divine kingdom have ever been those who have known and communed with the Lord until they became like him in spirit and purpose. Pentecost and the house-top vision made a new man of Peter. The revelation of Christ that came to Paul on the Damascus road opened his eyes to truths before unknown, set his affections upon new objects, and changed the whole current of his life. Wesley intellectually was no more accomplished after his Aldersgate-Street experience than he was before; but the warming of his heart on that occasion gave him the power to warm other hearts and set all England ablaze.

What the preacher or other Christian worker who desires to bless and enrich the lives of others should first concern himself about is his own spiritual condition. Paul, in writing to Timothy, his son in the gospel, put before taking heed to "the doctrine" the injunction, "Take heed to thyself." The strength of the Methodist Church in the past was in the emphasis which she put on the necessity of a conscious personal salvation and a pure heart and holy life; and any weakening at this point will tend to strip her of power and check her march of progress. In this day of so many fads and new methods, which we are told will insure success, is it not well, lest we forget it, to recall this elemental truth of the Christian religion?

ALL DEPENDENT UPON THE HOME.

A contemporary makes the following observation: "In one of the first addresses that he delivered after his accession to the British throne, King George V said, 'The foundations of national glory are set in the homes of the people. They will remain unshaken only while the family life of our race and nation is strong, simple, and pure.' This was teaching of the best sort, and it is needed in our time. Prof. Coe said a similar good thing some time since when he declared, 'The most efficient educational institution that has yet appeared is the old-fashioned family.' It will be a sorry day for us when we forget these things."

So it will. It is because we recognize the facts set forth in these noteworthy utterances that we stand so resolutely against every movement in Church or State that would tend to take the mothers of the land away from the home. Whatever triumphs woman may win in other fields, if she is thereby made less efficient as a homemaker, society will have been injured more than it is benefited.

A COLLEGE EDUCATION A GREAT ADVANTAGE.

That the college man has a far better chance to succeed in almost every vocation than the uneducated man, is a fact which careful investigation has many times proven. A striking illustration of this was seen last autumn, when we had as the three leading candidates for the Presidency representatives of Princeton, Harvard, and Yale, Princeton winning for the first time since the election of James Madison to the chief magistracy of the Nation. The percentage of college men who have occupied the White House since the establishment of the American Republic is strikingly large. By all means, every youth who can by any possibility do so should obtain a collegiate education. It will vastly enlarge his pleasures in life and immensely improve his prospect for advancement in his calling. And, what is far better, it will capacitate him to serve more efficiently both God and his fellow-men.

Let it not be thought that in writing this we are depreciating persons whose educational advantages have been meager. Far from it. They deserve all the more honor if they achieve success in spite of their disadvantages. Such people usually recognize the fact that they have been tremendously handicapped by their lack of equipment and are anxious above all others to give their children better opportunities than they themselves had. Whatever may be its deficiencies, it is certainly true that in placing an education more nearly within the reach of all, the present age is opening to the millions of the race opportunities such as no other generation has had. The Pierian spring, formerly accessible only to a favored few, is in our country being rapidly transformed into a public fountain at which all who will may drink.

HEART MESSAGES.

If you do not wish for His Kingdom, don't pray for it. But if you do, you must do more than pray for it; you must work for it.—Ruskin.

The best medicine for our own sorrows is the effort to heal the sorrows of some one else. However heavy our personal trials may be, we shall forget our quarrel with life and with God if we will give ourselves steadily to the endeavor to make life brighter and fuller of comfort and blessings to others.—Rev. Philip Moxom, D.D.

SUNSHINE FOR THE AGED.

You will find the aged pilgrim
Where'er you chance to go.
Oft with faces sad and lonely
And a step that's growing slow.
While the world is oft so thoughtless
Of the weary, careworn heart,
You can brighten up their pathway
With a little magic art.

Oft perchance their hearts are hungry
For some loving word or deed.
Take a little time to cheer them,
Learning of their care or need.
Listen to the old-time story,
Oft so full of ancient lore,
Gather up its store of wisdom
Ere it pass forevermore.

When the ear is dull of hearing
And the eye is growing dim,
Read to them our Father's message,
Sing some tender, old-time hymn.
Write them oft a card or letter,
Speak a gentle, cheery word.
You will find their lives are brighter
For the memories you have stirred.

Bear to them the lovely blossoms,
Royal purple, purest white;
Let them read the silent message,
"Purity and age unite."
Sympathize with hearts grown lonely
For their loved ones, passed away,
Render them the truest service
"In His name" while yet you may.
—Mrs. Mary B. Wingate, in the Watchman.

NEGLECTED OPPORTUNITIES.

In a certain city a gentleman of large business interests was converted. After his conversion he said: "I have often wondered why it is that Christian people, if they really believe what they profess, show so little interest in winning others to Christ. I have a brother-in-law who is a minister, and who spends his summer vacations with me. Yet in all these years that he has been coming to our home he has never once talked seriously to me about giving myself to Christ." That minister, through neglect of duty, was condemned in the eyes of that unsaved business man.

—The Master Workman.

"KEPT AGAINST THAT DAY."

By Rev. John T. Sawyer, D.D.

When the Apostle Paul was a prisoner in Rome, having gone there from Crete about the end of the year 65, during the persecution that Nero was carrying on against the Christians under the pretext that they had set Rome on fire, he used these words: "For the which cause I also suffer these things: nevertheless, I am not ashamed; for I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day." Knowing that the Church there was in great tribulation and feeling that his presence would help to comfort, support and build it up, Paul, a true soldier of Jesus Christ, went to the post of danger. And so we see him there in his old age, neglected by his friends, seemingly forsaken of God and in the hands of ruthless men; in prison and in chains; yet, we behold him triumphing over sufferings and approaching death and absolutely unshaken, having the fullest assurance of the truth of the doctrines he had preached and strong in anticipation of the glory soon to be his. Sin had no power over him, death had lost its sting, the grave its victory and hell its horrors. The one true God he knew, feared, loved and obeyed, and consequently he was perfectly happy. He was persuaded that all things work together for good to them that love God. The miserable uncertainty of human friendships, the defection of cowardly brethren, and the apostasy of once zealous professors did not move him. His mind was stayed on God, and he was therefore held of God in perfect peace.

This blessed calm of spirit, this delightful poise of soul, this absolute rest in God, proclaimed the genuineness of Paul's religion. In prison and awaiting martyrdom, and yet calmly inditing his sublimely trustful words, is the expression, and also the confirmation, of the religion of Jesus Christ. "I know of whom I have believed." What a comforting and delightful retrospect was his! He had believed on Christ; and all the circumstances connected with his conversion are given in detail in the ninth chapter of Acts. It happened when, as Saul the persecutor, he journeyed to Damascus, "breathing out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord," that "suddenly there shined round about him a light from heaven." His conversion was thorough, and he gives us his confession of faith in these clear-cut words: "I am crucified with Christ; nevertheless I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me; and the life that I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me and gave himself for me." Therefore, Paul could truly say: "I know whom I have believed."

That he had believed in Christ unto the salvation of his soul was a fact—not a mere surmise, or suppose so; but a positive, glorious fact. He had committed his soul to Christ, that the Lord Jesus might save, keep and sanctify him. He had consecrated his powers of mind and body to the service of his Lord and the spread of his kingdom. His language was this: "Yea, doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus, my Lord, by whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung that I may win Christ." And again: "God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom the world is crucified unto me and I unto the world." Paul was experimentally satisfied with the Object of his faith and trust. "I know whom I have believed" is language that most strongly shows that he did not merely suspect or guess, but that he was perfectly confident of his trust in Christ as his Divine Redeemer. There was no room for doubt, nor need for hesitation, for of no fact was he more conscious than that Christ was his all-sufficient Savior.

How bright, comforting and all-glorious was Paul's outlook! It had reference to his own preservation. It was a statement that he should be kept, and that the solemn deposit of his soul with Christ was perfectly secure. This happy assurance of Paul rested on Christ's ability. His words are "that he is able to keep," etc. Yes, and Paul was right. Does not all power belong to Christ, both in earth and heaven? Is he not "able to save unto the uttermost?" He is the Being "by whom and for whom all things were made that are made, and without him was not anything made that is made." Ah! Paul did well to feel sure of his being kept when he was leaning on the arm that never wearies, for it is girt with omnipotence, being the arm of God. Paul's outlook extended to the judgment day. "Against that day," are his words. He was sure that he would be kept against that day of solemn and exact examination and scrutiny into the details of human lives—that day of destiny and doom—of signal honor and of reward to the saints.

Now, then; what is all this to us? This much: that if we have the same sort of religion as had Paul, we, too, may say, "I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day." This very sort we must all have—none other will do—would we be safe for time and eternity. We must, just like Paul, have the Lord Jesus to take our poor souls and keep them against that day. This religion has in it the element of knowledge. It is not based on a mere theory, nor on human form nor merit, but on positive, exact knowledge. "No other foundation can any man lay than that which is laid, even Christ Jesus," and to know him is life eternal. This knowledge begins in a man's coming to know himself as a sinner, and in danger of eternal ruin if his sins be not removed. It is that knowledge that comes to him when, repenting of every sin and making an unconditional surrender at the cross of Christ and a full consecration of himself, he realizes that God for Christ's sake has pardoned all his sins; and that by the direct operation of the Divine Spirit, his nature has been wholly changed and he regenerated, born of God, and made a partaker of the divine nature, even "a new creature in Christ Jesus." It is that knowledge that he has by the Spirit of God bearing witness with his spirit to his adoption into the family of God, by which he cries, "Abba, Father," and, being a child, becomes also an heir of God and a joint heir with Jesus Christ. It is a knowledge of an immortal hope begotten within him, even "Christ formed in him, the hope of glory."

When Bishop Beverage came down during his last sickness to the crossing over, he did not know any one of the friends who were present; and, when the wife who had traveled the stretch of years in married bliss beside him, asked him if he knew her, he failed to recognize her; but some one asking, "Bishop, do you know Christ?" his face shone and he answered, "Oh, yes; I know Christ and he has been my joy and hope these forty years." So, when I was pastor of old Moreau Street Church in my early ministry there was a member over 80 years old who seemed to have forgotten most everything of her past life; but, whenever I mentioned Christ to her or the love of God or the blessed Comforter, her mind was clear at once, and she talked of her precious Savior and declared that he filled her life and was ever with her. Ah, yes; the knowledge of God our Father, Jesus our Savior, and the Holy Spirit our Comforter, is the most positive and intimate of all knowledge, and the Christian steadily grows in the love and knowledge of God in Christ.

This religion has in it the element of personal experience. The light should be in the mind and a feeling sense of it in the heart. It must of necessity be a matter of happy consciousness. A learned atheist met a simple countryman who was on his way to church, and asked him: "Is your God a big God or a little God?" The Christian countryman answered: "My God is both—he is so great that the heaven of heavens cannot contain him, and so little that he dwells in my poor heart." This religion that Paul had, and millions of others have had who lived in its power and died in triumph, insures absolute safety for time and eternity. All the saints are kept by the power of God unto eternal salvation. Held in the hollow of God's hand, they are kept from the evil, kept "against that day."

A gentleman in crossing a dreary moor came upon a cottage. He said to the host: "Are you not afraid to live in this lonely place?" "Oh, no," he answered, "for faith closes the door at night and mercy opens it in the morning." Alexander, when asked how he could sleep so soundly amidst danger, replied that Parmenio watched. So, the genuine child of God has no need to fear in this life. Neither need he have any fear of the wrath to come. It is said that in the Far East there grows a tree that is a non-conductor of electricity and under its branches one is perfectly safe during an electrical storm. However that may be, we are sure that under the shadow of the cross of Christ there is always safety. Christians are said in Scripture to be "rejoicing in hope," and "to rejoice in hope of the glory of God." They have "a hope that maketh not ashamed; because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us." This hope "we have as an anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast, and which entereth into that within the veil."

How vastly different from the Christian's hope is that of the sinner! The spider weaves her web and rests in the center of it, but the housewife, with one sweep of her broom, destroys both web and spider. The spider made her own winding-sheet, and so with all of our race who put their trust in aught else than the all-saving, all-cleansing blood of Jesus Christ. The eldest son and heir of the Duke of Hamilton lay dying of consumption. Shortly before his death he reached under his pillow for his Bible and opened it at the words: "I have fought a good fight; I have finished my course; I have kept the faith; henceforth, there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." He called his brother and talked to him most earnestly, and at last said: "And, Douglas, you will soon be a duke, but I shall be a king."

Ah, just so; the knowledge of Jesus ultimately makes us to become "kings and priests unto God and the Father," being "set down with Jesus in his throne, as he has overcome and is set down with his Father in his throne." Let all who are Christians, not only in name but by blessed experience, seek to know more and more of Christ; and let them do their best to bring the souls all around them who know not God to this blessed knowledge of the truth in Jesus, opening to them the fruition of an eternity of bliss and glory. "They that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars forever and ever."

A DOCUMENT NEGLECTED AND ALMOST ENTIRELY OVERLOOKED.

Report of the Joint Commission.

Below will be found the report of the Joint Commission, consisting of eight suggestions, as a plan for reorganizing the various branches of American Methodism into one body. This report was first made public when read before the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Minneapolis last May. It will be read before our General Conference May, 1914.

This Commission was duly appointed by the General Conferences of the three leading branches of American Methodism: the Methodist Episcopal Church, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and Methodist Protestant Church—and known as the Joint Commission on Federation.

Following is the Report of the Joint Commission:

I.

"We suggest, as a plan of reorganization, the merging of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Methodist Protestant Church, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, into one Church, to be known as the Methodist Episcopal Church in America or the Methodist Church in America.

II.

"We suggest, that this Church shall have throughout common Articles of Faith, common conditions of membership, a common hymnal, a common catechism, and a common ritual.

III.

"We suggest that the governing power in the reorganized Church shall be vested in one General Conference and three or four Quadrennial Conferences, both the General Conference and the Quadrennial Conferences to exercise their powers under constitutional provisions and restrictions, the General Conferences to have full legislative powers over all matters distinctively connectional, and the Quadrennial Conferences to have full power over distinctively local affairs.

"We suggest, that the colored membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Methodist Protestant Church, and such organizations of colored Methodists as may enter into agreement with them, may be constituted and recognized as one of the Quadrennial or Jurisdictional Conferences of the proposed reorganization.

IV.

"We suggest, that the General Conference shall consist of two houses, each house to be composed of equal numbers of ministerial and lay delegates. The delegates in the first house shall be apportioned equally among the Quadrennial Conferences and elected under equitable rules to be provided therefor. The ministerial delegates in the second house shall be elected by the ministerial members in the Annual Conferences and the lay delegates by the laity within the Annual Conferences under equitable rules to be provided therefor. Each Annual Conference shall have at least one ministerial and one lay delegate. The larger Conferences shall have one additional ministerial and one additional lay delegate for every ——— ministerial members of the Conference; also, an additional ministerial and lay delegate where there is an excess of two-thirds of the fixed rate of representation. All legislation of the General Conference shall require the concurrent action of the two houses.

V.

"We suggest that the Quadrennial Conferences shall be composed of an equal number of ministerial and lay delegates to be chosen by the Annual Conferences within their several jurisdictions according to an equitable plan to be provided therefor.

VI.

"We suggest, that the Quadrennial Conferences shall fix the boundaries of the Annual Conferences within their respective jurisdictions, and that the Annual Conferences shall be composed of all traveling preachers in full connection therewith, and of one lay representative from each pastoral charge.

VII.

We suggest, that the Quadrennial Conferences shall name the Bishops from their several jurisdictions, the same to be confirmed by the first house of the General Conference.

VIII.

"We suggest, that neither the General Conference nor any of the Quadrennial Conferences be invested with final authority to interpret the constitutionality of its own actions."

Delay in Its Publication.

If our readers do not understand why the publication of this plan of unification has been so long delayed, we answer that it is not our fault. The Pacific Methodist is responsible for the statement in the beginning of this editorial that "the report was first made public when read before the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church held at Minneapolis last May," and that "it will be read before our General Conference in May, 1914."

We do not know on what authority our good friend, the Editor of the Pacific Methodist, made that statement, because the Daily Advocate of the General Conference held at Minneapolis never published this important document, nor announced that it had been read before the body, as far as we were ever able to see, and we read that Daily regularly.

If the General Conference ever had this paper read, or made any official reference to it, during its sessions at Minneapolis, or if any official paper of that Church has ever published the language of it, the fact has never fallen under our notice.

It was only by chance that we caught this matter in print as it first appeared in the Alabama Advocate, and was later copied by the Pacific Methodist. And yet it has been many months since the last General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church adjourned and we have been calling editorially and personally for the privilege of reading and publishing this important production of the "Joint Commission on Federation," which was first to be passed upon by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and later by our General Conference, which is to meet in May, 1914.

The report of the "Committee on Federation," made to the Minneapolis Conference, does not quote a word of this plan of unification suggested by the "Joint Commission" or express any opinion concerning it. If they liked it, the other Methodisms of the world would be glad to know; if they did not approve the suggestions why did they not frankly say so and publish their reasons?

Why do we have to continually hear and read pleas for organic union, and yet when a great Joint Commission labors for many months on the question, and has several important meetings and agrees on a suggestive plan of reorganization or unification, its whole labor and prayerful recommendation is thrown aside and no reason given for its rejection? The only thing official on this matter that we have seen in the papers of the Methodist Episcopal Church is the cool and indifferent statement in the report of the Committee on Federation reaffirming the belief of that Church that all our branches of American Methodism should unite, and recommending the continuation of the "Commission on Federation" to meet with similar commissions from other Methodist bodies. When shall we be done with this "endless chain" business of having commissions on union and hearing their reports, and confusing our people by going on in the same old way? We doubt seriously if commissions and official meetings will ever solve the union problem. It will have to start with the people and churches out in the field, and will have to come about by the direct agency and leadership of the Spirit of God. Until that comes about we had as well let the matter alone in our official and representative meetings. We have had several oratorical and diplomatic efforts at organic union; let the next be one that comes out of the hearts of the rank and file of our Methodist people, and which is the outcome of a great spiritual baptism, and let us no longer tamper with the dry bones of an outward and formal Methodist union—Dr. E. G. B. Mann, in the Central Methodist Advocate.

EVANGELIZE OR FOSSILIZE.

"The church which is not a missionary church," once said A. J. Gordon, of Boston, "will be a missing church. * * * its candle of consecration put out, if not its candlestick removed from its place.

"As ministers and churches of Jesus Christ, our self-preservation is conditioned upon our obedience to the Great Commission. We must preach or perish, evangelize or fossilize, be a saving church with girded loins and burning lamp, carrying a lost world on the heart day and night—or be a secularized church, lying on the heart of this present evil world, and allowing it to gird you and carry you whithersoever it will. Which shall it be?"

LOVE IS THE ESSENCE OF RELIGION.

A man's religion, if it hasn't love in it, isn't worth having. If I had my way, I'd sweep every church out of existence that didn't manifest love. That's what makes infidels. That's what draws men away from Christ and Christianity. That form of church has alienated the working men. Nihilism, atheism and every form of evil would flee away if we were baptized with love.—D. L. Moody.

Dr. R. S. MacArthur, President of the World's Baptist Alliance, has tendered his resignation as pastor of the Baptist Tabernacle in Atlanta, Ga.

Rev. Thomas Gregory, the presiding elder, reports an increase of $2500 in the salaries of the pastors of the San Marcos District of the West Texas Conference.

Dr. J. M. Buckley will soon begin in the New York Christian Advocate a series of personal sketches dealing with the leading events of his remarkable career.

The Training School building at Birmingham College was destroyed by fire on January 18. It was valued at $3000, and was insured for $1500. It is stated that another structure will be erected at an early date.

The two branches of the Texas Legislature re-elected their former chaplains, both of whom are veteran Methodist ministers. Rev. H. M. Sears holds this position of honor in the Senate, and Rev. J. W. Joyce in the House.

Prof. H. A. Hayes has resigned the superintendency of "The Children's Home," an orphanage at Winston-Salem, N. C., which is maintained by the Western North Carolina Conference, and Rev. H. K. Boyer has been chosen to succeed him.

Bishop A. V. Wilson, "the grand old man of Southern Methodism," celebrated yesterday his seventy-ninth birthday. He has nobly served the Church, and we hope that he may yet be spared to bless it with his counsel and ministry for many years.

The committees representing the Methodist Protestant and United Brethren Churches in the negotiations for the union of the two Churches, at their recent joint meeting voted in favor of the name "The United Protestant Church," provided union goes into effect.

French Protestantism has recently sustained a great loss in the death of Rev. Charles Lugi, editor of L'Engage Libre, who was eminent as a scholar, preacher, and writer. Both English and American journals have borne testimony to the value and influence of his work.

Zion's Herald, of January 22, in its series of "People Who Are Making Good," gives an interesting sketch of Dr. Gross Alexander, the Editor of our Methodist Review. It also furnishes in connection with the sketch a striking likeness of this widely known preacher, author and journalist.

The Wesleyan Christian Advocate announces that Emory College will provide an elective course in Electrical Engineering in the Department of Applied Mathematics. This historic institution has long been a recognized force in Southern Methodism, but its best days are yet to be. Its gifted president, Dr. W. E. Dickey, is a "progressive," not a "stand-patter."

It is reported that ten wealthy Canadian Presbyterian laymen have subscribed $10,000 each to pay the expenses of every Presbyterian minister in Canada, and his wife, to the General Assembly, which is soon to meet in Toronto. It is also proposed to defray the expenses to the meeting of a number of clergymen from the United States, Great Britain, and other countries.

The sixty-third Convention of the California Diocese of the Protestant Episcopal Church adopted a memorial to the triennial General Convocation, which will convene in New York City next October, to change the name of that denomination to "The Holy Catholic Church of America." Some of the religious sects in the United States seem disposed to draw closer together nominally, if in no other way.

The late Rev. John Henry Ellis, an English clergyman, has bequeathed to Cambridge University an estate valued at $450,000, subject only to a life interest reserved for his wife. The donor stated that he desired this bequest to be used in any way that the University authorities may deem best. This, in our judgment, is the wisest way to give. Contributions with strings tied to them cannot always be administered to the greatest advantage.

It is stated that 60.50 per cent of Germany's 65,000,000 of people are Protestants and that 36.69 per cent are Catholics. The remainder are either connected with faiths which cannot be grouped in these two classes or are unbelievers. The fact that so large a percentage of the population of the Empire is Christian perhaps accounts for the superior worth of the average German citizen. In the making of men and women, Christianity stands unrivaled among the religions of the world.

The Raleigh Christian Advocate, after highly complimenting two sermons preached by Bishop John C. Kilgo in the capital city of the old North State on Sunday, January 19, says: "We do not believe that any man in the Church is doing more to tone up its spiritual life than Bishop Kilgo. He is absolutely fearless in attacking what he believes to be evil, and in presenting the positive side of Christian truth he speaks with great power." Our worthy contemporary is by no means alone in this view.

A writer in the Texas Christian Advocate in giving a brief account of "Methodism in San Antonio," after telling of having heard Bishops Pierce, Andrew and Kavanaugh at the old Solidad Church in that city, adds: "In days a little later Bishop Charles B. Galloway stirred Methodism mightily in San Antonio." It was the habit of "the Bonnie Prince Charlie" so to stir things wherever he went. As a magnetic leader of the masses of the people, he has scarcely had a superior in the history of world-wide Methodism.

It is said that the Y. W. C. A. and settlement work in Washington City will receive valuable assistance from Miss Jessie, the second daughter of President-elect Woodrow Wilson, after the family takes up its residence in the White House on March 4. Miss Wilson is reported to have given already to the local leaders assurance of her purpose to enlist heartily in these two branches of Christian service. She is a member of the National Board of the Y. W. C. A., and has had extensive training in local settlement work at Kensington and Philadelphia.

A New York dispatch dated Jan. 28, says: "John D. Rockefeller has offered $100,000 to six missionary societies of the Northern Baptist Convention if they raise a certain amount by March 28, next. The organizations are the American Home Missionary Society, the Foreign Society, the Publication Society, the Woman's Home Mission Society, and two Women's Foreign Missionary organizations. Mr. Rockefeller will give his first $50,000 on condition that these societies raise $125,000 more than they did last year. This amount was $1,588,000. He will hand over a second $50,000 on condition that when the above obligation is met the societies will raise another $125,000."

Pope Pius X, after having a careful examination of the records made, which showed no trace of their investiture, has decided to eliminate the names of five Popes from the Holy See's list of those who are held to have been the legitimate successors of St. Peter. Those stricken off are as follows: Boniface VI, who died a fortnight after his election; Boniface VII, who usurped the Papacy and imprisoned the lawful Pope; John XVI, who also was a usurper; John XVII, whose election was invalid and whose Pontificate lasted only two months; and Benedict X, who was elected illegally and publicly degraded. This action leaves the present Pope the 259th occupant of the Vatican throne, instead of the 264th, as he was before regarded.

THE BEST WAY TO GET MEN TO CHURCH.

Ever and anon the question is asked, Why do not men attend church services? The recalcitrant men are frequently asked by visiting pastors to answer the question, and many are the reasons given. Almost invariably the delinquents lay the blame on the Church, either claiming that there is too much stress placed on money matters, too much hypocrisy among the membership, too little in the sermons that are delivered, or that the demands of business are so exacting that they must have Sunday for recreation. All of these excuses may be worthy of consideration, but none of them will satisfy the Judge of all the world on the last day.

The men who do not attend church are, for the most part, in a lost condition. They know little more about how to run a church than a cobbler knows how to repair a watch. It may be wise for the preacher to consider the feelings of those who do not attend church, but possibly he would fill his pews quicker if he would study how to minister to their spiritual needs. The need of the men of this age is not preaching alone, but Christ. If a man is won to Christ his attendance on the services of the Church will be assured. If the preacher would but spend the time of the man whose attention he has in talking to him about his own personal salvation, instead of allowing the man to take the time in criticising the Church, doubtless he would come nearer influencing him both to accept Christ and to attend the church services. The man, called of God to preach the Word, has a message for every man: 'tis the "glad tidings of great joy." He has an invitation for every man: 'tis "Come unto Me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

Upon a mighty rock it stands,
A house not made with human hands,
Where fervent hearts delight to meet,

With simple but impressive ceremonies, the body of John Paul Jones, the first Admiral of the American Navy, was on Jan. 26 placed in the new crypt under the Naval Academy Chapel at Annapolis, Md. General Daniel E. General Sickles is now 86 years old, and his downfall is a pitiable one.

Russia has taken steps to establish large manufacturing plants for the purpose of making farm machinery. A bill is now being considered by the Massachusetts Legislature making it a misdemeanor to carry any flag in a public demonstration except the Stars and Stripes (exceptions being made in the interest of international courtesy). The Socialists of the Bay State are making a vigorous effort to defeat the measure; their contention is that the bill is aimed at the red flag, which is their party emblem.

A press dispatch from Austin, on Jan. 22, announced the passage by the lower house of the Texas Legislature of a bill which declared inaugural balls to be against the morals of the State and recommended that no more be held. After twenty years, a bill providing Home Rule for Ireland was again voted on by the British House of Lords on Jan. 30, and, as before, met with an overwhelming defeat. The measure was recently acted on favorably by the House of Commons. The intense feeling against Roman Catholicism in the Upper House of the English Parliament was reflected in the action of that body. The vote was 326 against Home Rule, and 69 in favor of it.

It is said that five new publications came into existence in the United States and Canada every day during 1912. At the same time 1650 publications were discontinued, making a net gain of only 36 for both countries. The current Annual and Directory describes 24,381 publications, of which 2633 are dailies, 17,285 are weeklies, and 3069 are monthlies.

THE CHURCH'S CONTRIBUTION TO VANDERBILT.

Since the controversy concerning the ownership of Vanderbilt University has been going on, it has been affirmed by some that the Church has never done anything worth speaking of for that institution. In concluding his able argument before Judge Allison in Nashville last week, Mr. Percy D. Maddin, of the counsel for the Church, touched upon this question, and the Nashville Tennessean thus summarizes what he had to say:

"Mr. Maddin then took up the history of the University, and showed that in addition to the fact that the original $500,000 was obtained from Commodore Vanderbilt by Church influence through Bishop McTyeire, that another equal amount was obtained from him through the same influence; and that the Church also obtained from Wm. H. Vanderbilt a sum necessary to build Wesley Hall for the theological students; the total gifts obtained by the Church from the Vanderbilt family being nearly $1,200,000. He also enumerated other gifts of Methodists from the Twentieth Century Fund to the Students' Chair in the Theological Department, and to the School of Pedagogy, making a total aggregate of $349,000 in actual money given by Methodists to the University. He then took up the question of support from patronage and showed that the total student fees from 1875 to 1903, exclusive of the law, dental and medical departments, aggregated $437,000; and that from 1905 to 1912 they aggregated $750,000; and that they amounted at the present time to over $112,000 a year. More than 50 per cent of the whole student body came out of Methodist families. Therefore, Methodist influence was to-day contributing to the University more than $50,000 a year in students' fees, besides furnishing the greater proportion of all the student body."

MRS. H. P. GIBBS DEAD.

Dear Brother Meek: Last Sunday the remains of Mrs. Carlotta H. Gibbs, the widow of the late Rev. H. P. Gibbs, of the North Mississippi Conference, were laid to rest here beside those of her sainted husband. She had died in Denver on Jan. 22, and the body was brought home for interment by her children, Miss Mary, Annie Dudley, and Willie. On their way they were joined by their aunt, Mrs. T. B. Hargrove, from Kansas City. Sister Gibbs had been in ill health for quite a while and had gone West hoping that she might recover. But it was not to be. As the end approached, she became aware that it was not far off and met it with Christian courage, and her death was a great triumph of unquestioning faith. Her beautiful and saintly life had a most fitting close. Every preacher and layman of the North Mississippi Conference will lament her going away and feel a most kindly interest in the children who are left. W. W. WOOLLARD.

Thousands of years ago a leaf fell on the soft clay, and seemed to be lost. But last summer a geologist in his ramblings broke off a piece of rock with his hammer, and there lay the image of the leaf, with every line and every vein and all the delicate tracery preserved in the stone through those centuries. So the words we speak and the things we do to-day may seem to be lost, but in the great final revealing the smallest of them will appear.—J. R. Miller, D.D.

LETTER FROM CALIFORNIA.

By Rev. W. P. Andrews.

"When the north wind doth blow, then we shall have snow." Ordinarily this is not true in California. On the contrary, our north wind usually comes in the summer, and is the harbinger of heat. But "there are exceptions to all rules," and why not to this one also? Anyhow, we have had snow in California. Yes, throughout the entire seven hundred miles of its length. It snowed in the north and it snowed in the south. It snowed in the mountains and it snowed in the valleys. It is true that in most of the valley sections the white flakes melted before, or as soon as they touched the ground, but the foothills, as well as the mountains, were clothed in white. This occurred the second week in January. The citrus belts felt the effects. In the south, where the crop was still on the trees, a large proportion of the golden fruit was destroyed, and many of the trees were injured or killed. The central and northern sections fared better. Here the naval oranges had nearly all been marketed, and the trees, the sap having become dormant, suffered little injury. Only the valencias suffered materially in the San Joaquin valley. It may seem strange, but the orange crop ripens from four to six weeks earlier in the northern than in the southern section. This cold spell has been almost without precedent.

The frost came in the wake of our usual Christmas. For the third year in succession an open air concert was given at Lotta's Fountain, in the street, in San Francisco, one of the world's noted singers and others delighting the assembled multitudes with their sweet notes. Last year the San Francisco Examiner played host; this year The Call, another of our dailies, claimed the honor. Christmas trees for the poor decorated Golden Gate Park. This was our normal Christmas weather. There was no rain, no clouds, no fog—just bright, sunny weather, neither cold nor hot. If old Santa Claus could not get around in that sort of weather he must be a decrepit old man indeed.

Up to the time of the cold spell there had been but little rainfall in most of the agricultural sections, and dry weather prophets were predicting "a dry year." But the cold weather gave way to rainy weather, and with it a phenomenon was witnessed in San Francisco. There was thunder and lightning! This was so unusual an occurrence that some of our people were almost frightened out of their wits. Indeed, one death is believed to have been caused by the fright. It made some who had not been away from their eastern homes long enough to forget feel that they were "back home." But the thunder storm was soon over. We have since had more rain, and the prospects for an abundant harvest next summer and fall are bright. The snowfall in the mountains has been heavy, which assures an abundance of water for irrigation.

The work of subdividing large land holdings goes on apace. Recently a tract of 108,000 acres in the San Joaquin valley was put upon the market "in tracts to suit." The enterprising promoters have laid out a "city" on the tract, and are building a railroad to the center of it. Another company has acquired about fifty thousand acres, mostly tule land, in the lower Sacramento valley, which they will reclaim, irrigate and put on the market. The soil is excellent in both these tracts. There are now but few large tracts left that can be had for such purpose. This multiplying of small farms is a great thing for the State.

HOW TO PAY A CHURCH DEBT.

By Rev. J. F. Jacobs.

If you would like to know how to pay your church debt with the greatest ease, here is a plan which will work. Take a list of the families in the congregation, canvass them and find out how many of them are subscribers to their church paper. In the case of those who do not subscribe get them to subscribe and pay for one year's subscription. After all of the subscriptions have been secured that can be secured, call together the more substantial element of the church and raise a fund to pay the subscriptions to the church paper for those families which are not able to pay for themselves, or which are not interested sufficiently to pay their own subscriptions. In other words, put the church paper into every home in the congregation. The effect of this policy will be to increase the interest of all the members of the church in all church matters, to enlarge the attendance on church services, to make those who subscribe for church causes pay their subscriptions more promptly and to increase the liberality of the church members so that when an appeal is made for funds with which to retire the church debt that appeal will be met liberally and will awaken an interest in every family in the congregation.

Why will these results accrue from such a policy? The answer is very simple. Most church members, when they know their duty, are willing to perform it, but when for six days in the week no church influence comes to their homes, they have too much time to forget. Frequently they will not attend church services on Sunday, and this gives them a longer time to become negligent. Put into their hands the church paper, making its weekly appeal to their consciences and lying upon their parlor tables as a mute witness to them of their duty, and as a result you educate the church members. You inform them. Their consciences become enlightened. They see their duty from a new standpoint, and they come to the support of the pastor and church officers with greater earnestness and zeal.

The quickest way to pay a church debt is to make every church member effective, and the best way to make every church member effective is to make every church member well informed as to his obligations on all church matters. The church paper, next to the pastor, is the most efficient medium through which this can be done; hence the church paper should go into every church home just as certainly as the pastor should go into every church home. The pastor cannot go into every home every week. The church paper can, and no pastor, or church officer, should be satisfied until in his church this ideal plan becomes an accomplished fact.

A BEAUTIFUL TRIBUTE.

(Remarks of Rev. R. H. Harper at the funeral of Dr. C. W. Carter, at Natchitoches, La., on Jan. 1, 1913.)

One of my Conference memories is that of a great sermon on the resurrection, preached by him who lies here to-day. Some of its matchless sentences are still fixed in the mind; its eloquence lingers on the ear like the strains of a music that can never be forgotten. The venerable speaker understood then and proclaimed the sublime truth that robs this hour of tragedy and crowns it with glory. Referring to that sermon's theme, it may be said that God hath numbered him with those whom Christ hath ransomed from the power of the grave.

Not many days ago the old man of 80 stood among his brethren, in their memorial session at the Annual Conference, and confessed to a feeling of loneliness, because so many he knew and loved had gone on before. Ah! he is lonely no longer, cheered now by the companions of other years, and the presence of Christ, his elder brother. And they, in whose veins his blood still flows, sorrow not in darkness; they are comforted in their father's faith, their father's hope, and their father's life.

There is only one resurrection—that of the body—the soul never dies. Some day we shall see him again, as we knew and loved him here.

NOTICE TO PREACHERS

Beginning January 1, 1913, the rates of subscription to the New Orleans Christian Advocate will be as follows:

Single subscriptions, one year.....	$1.50 net
In clubs of five or more, each	1.25 net
Eight months	1.00 net
To preachers	1.00 net
To widows of preachers	1.00 net

The commission heretofore allowed has been discontinued, because only a very few of the preachers accept commission, and the great majority we have talked with expressed it as their opinion that a commission has proven a hindrance to them in working up the subscription list on their charges.

In cases where persons are very poor, the pastor may recommend that the paper be sent at a reduction. Remittances should be made by Money Order, Registered Letter, or in Stamps. Preachers may deduct for any expense incurred in remitting.

PUBLISHER.

But till then he will live in our lives, though we see him not. For the good is not oft interred with our bones. That rich voice, deep and clear as cathedral bells, will still be heard, as it has through more than fifty years in pure diction, masterly logic, and irresistible eloquence. At times he seemed to me like some old prophet of Israel, standing on some Carmel of antiquity. And the voice of the prophet will be heard again. Children's children will yet bless the memory of this brave and simple man who lived and died in a brave and simple faith.

When Elisha followed his master to the Jordan, when the last moment of glory came, the descending mantle fell upon a disciple. Oh, may the God of this man cause his falling mantle to abide on us, as we look after him heavenward! He was especially a friend to young men, and a helper, and a good counselor—do not I know? And he leaves behind some disciples, who press, as it were, his cold, dead hand to-day, and cry, "My father, my father, the chariot of Israel, and the horsemen thereof."

We see about us sin, and tragedy, and death. But amid all the sorrow and the darkness, it is good to know the power of God to redeem and use a life. Many honors came to this man—all his brethren could give—but this was the glory of all: God found in him a man he could use. And when he had finished the work God had given him to do, he literally fell asleep. No, he went to sleep last Sabbath night, and awoke in glory. On the morn a loved one found that "he was not, for God took him." No furrow of pain lined his face, no shadow rested on his brow. Serenely he lived and wrought—beautifully he died.

Friends, this is not eulogy, but exhortation. This hour will be robbed of all sting if you and I, on this New Year's day, begin to follow more closely in the way his faithful feet have made plain. Oh, how beautiful upon the mountains, and also in the valleys between, have been the feet of this man of God! Their imprints on the sands of time lead up to the Father's house. Who will follow them?

Some one has said, "A single meteor, flashing athwart the sky, will arrest a larger measure of attention than the serene shining of a thousand planets." But let me look to the light which never dies, which shines on through the years with undimmed radiance, through cloud and sunshine, storm and calm, and which shall shine as the stars forever and ever. Such was this man's. May it light your pathway and mine.

PAPA'S MISTAKE.

Papa distinctly said the other day,
That in the night, when I'm asleep so sound,
The earth keeps turning over all the time,
And every morning it's been half-way round.

I thought how grand to see this big round world
Go turning past this window in the hall,
And here I'm up at 4 o'clock to watch,
And there is nothing going by at all!

I thought that deserts, palm trees and giraffes
Might just be passing by the time I came;
And now, instead of all those lovely things,
Here's this old yellow rosebush just the same!

NO SUNDAY.

"I don't like Sunday!" cried Belle, pettishly, tossing off her plumed hat and velvet coat. "I can't wash my dolly's clothes, nor make mud pies, and I hate to go to church and Sunday school every time."

"I think," replied mamma soberly, "that there are little girls in the world who would be glad of a chance to go to church and Sunday school."

"Because they think there's fun in it! I wish I lived where there wasn't any Sunday, ever."

Not long after this Belle had a chance to see what it would be like to have no Sunday. She went to the far West on a journey with her parents, and on Saturday there was a great rain-storm, washing out the track ahead of them, and they were stranded in a little mining town, where everything was new and dirty and rough. There was no church at all there.

When Belle looked out from the poor little hotel in the morning, she saw nothing that seemed like Sunday. The children who were playing in the mud were not the sort of children she liked to play with. They were ragged, they quarrelled, and threw dirt at each other. Dirty women came out of mean little houses and slapped the children, and quarrelled among themselves.

Some men were at work; others were loafing about, all day; and all looked as if they had never been to church in their lives. Some could not walk straight, and wanted to fight everybody. There was a great deal of loud, coarse language, and the most terrible swearing. Belle thought it the longest Sunday she had ever known. Very glad they all were at night, when word came that the wash-out would be repaired so they could go on in the morning.

"How would you like to live here always, Belle?" asked mamma. "There's no church or Sunday school here to trouble you."

"Oh!" she cried; "I didn't think it would be like this. It's just horrid."—The Young Christian Soldier.

HOW THE ATLANTIC CABLE WAS LAID.

(We take this account of the difficulties which Cyrus W. Field encountered in first cabling the Atlantic Ocean from The Times-Democrat, for which journal it was written by Mr. Madison C. Peters. Mr. Field belonged to one of the most remarkable families that ever lived in the United States; Stephen J. Field, long a Justice of the United States Supreme Court, David Dudley Field, the noted New York lawyer, and Henry M. Field, the distinguished Presbyterian preacher, all being his brothers. The late Justice David J. Brewer, who shed such luster upon the Federal Bench, was his nephew.)

Cyrus West Field retired from business at thirty-five years of age with a large fortune when he first became possessed with the idea that by means of a cable laid upon the bottom of the Atlantic Ocean, telegraphic communications could be established between Europe and America.

Some enterprising men had tried to stretch a wire across Newfoundland, the most easterly point on the American coast, and to have this connected with a line of fast steamers, which it was thought could reach the nearest point in Ireland in five days, so that news could be carried from one continent to another inside of a week. An attempt had already been made to rebuild that line, but it failed, and a man was wanted rich enough to take hold of it and brave enough to carry it through. Mr. Field, known as a man who had built up a large business from the smallest beginning, was strongly urged to take hold of the scheme. He agreed to think about it. Sitting in his library, and turning over a globe, the thought came to him: "Why not carry the line across the ocean?" The more he thought of it the surer he felt that the two continents could be united by a cable.

Morse in 1843 first suggested the union of the old and new worlds by means of the electric telegraph, but the principal obstacle was the unknown depth of the Atlantic and the supposed rock nature of the bottom. When, however, Lieut. Maury discovered that between Ireland and Newfoundland the bed of the ocean was nearly level and covered with soft ooze, Field began to discuss practical methods to lay telegraph lines on the bed of the ocean. He obtained from the Legislature of Newfoundland the sole right for fifty years of landing telegraph cables on the island from both sides of the Atlantic. He formed a stock company, of which Peter Cooper, Moses Taylor, Marshall O. Roberts and Chandler White were members. Field furnished one-fourth of the capital himself. The governments of Great Britain and the United States provided ships, and the first expedition to lay the wire set out in 1857. The attempt was fruitless. In 1858 the cable, 2500 miles long, weighing one ton a mile, was taken in equal portions on board H. M. S. Agamemnon and U. S. frigate Niagara, spliced in mid-ocean and finally landed, the one end at Valentia, Ireland, the other at Trinity Bay, Newfoundland; but the wire was so weak that the congratulatory message from the Queen to the President, ninety words, required 67 minutes for transmission, and after a few more messages the cable became useless.

In 1865 capital was found to make another attempt, and the cable, weighing 4000 tons, was shipped on board the Great Eastern, and when the vessel was 1064 miles from Valentia the cable broke, and this cable, in 1866, by means of the same vessel, was grappled for, brought up from a depth of two miles and completed to Trinity Bay. This lost cable of 1865, lifted from its oozy bed two miles beneath the surface of the Atlantic Ocean, was found in good condition, and the cable, after twelve months at the bottom of the Atlantic, spoke!

Congress opposed Field, backed by a powerful lobby, so that the measure for governmental aid only had a majority of one in the Senate; directors were disheartened, capitalists were shy and the skeptical public sneered, but Field worked day and night, almost without food or sleep. Thirteen years of hard labor amid discouragements and ridicule brought him full reward. Congress now gave him the thanks of the nation, a gold medal and other testimonials, while the people on both sides of the Atlantic proclaimed the cable one of the greatest achievements of the century.

Several Englishmen who had given their money and extended their influence in helping along the work were knighted. The French Exposition, which was held after the cable had stood the test of about a year's service, gave Cyrus W. Field its highest award, its grand medal, given only to those who had proved themselves great public benefactors.

Success is not measured by what a man accomplishes, but by the opposition which he has encountered and the courage with which he has maintained the struggle against tremendous odds.

"The heights by great men reached and kept
Were not attained by sudden flight,
But they, while their companions slept,
Were toiling upward in the night."

GENERAL BOARD MEETING IN DALLAS.

The College of Bishops and the following general boards will hold their annual meetings in Dallas around May 1: Board of Education, Board of Church Extension, Sunday School Board, Board of Missions, Epworth League Board.

Dallas Methodists are alive to the importance of these meetings, and committees are holding weekly sessions to make arrangements for the entertainment of those who will attend. Dr. W. F. McMurry, Secretary of the General Board of Church Extension, advises the committee that he is planning to bring to Dallas a lecturer of ability on church architecture. His lectures will be planned for the general public, and will be illustrated by stereopticon views. They promise to be entertaining and instructive as well. Public meetings each evening will be addressed by gifted speakers. W. C. EVERETT, Chairman.

EPWORTH LEAGUE ANNIVERSARY DAY.

By the calendar the day falls on May 4. It celebrates the birth of the Epworth League, twenty-three years ago. This year it is to be marked by a special and very important feature. An offering is to be taken for League extension. One-half of the proceeds are to find their way to the Central Office, Nashville, Tenn., and one-half will remain in the treasury of the Annual Conference Epworth League for assisting in the home field.

The Epworth League Board has agreed to accept this May Day offering from any chapter in the place of the 10-cent assessment ordered by the General Conference. The aim is to put the League on a basis of support independent of an assessment. Let every League president, therefore, begin this month to make preparation for Anniversary Day. Programs may be had by ordering of Smith & Lamar, Nashville, Tenn., Dallas, Tex., or Richmond, Va. Per dozen, 15 cents; for one hundred, $1.

DR. CARROLL'S CHURCH STATISTICS.

Dr. H. K. Carroll, the eminent statistician who in 1890 had charge of the Government statistics of the Churches, and who for a number of years has been preparing annually a statistical summary showing the growth and relative strength of the various denominations in the United States for the New York Christian Advocate, gave in that paper last week the figures which he has tabulated for the year 1912. It would be going too far to claim perfect accuracy for Dr. Carroll's summary, but we know of no other authority who furnishes more dependable information concerning the status and progress of the many religious organizations existing in our country.

Dr. Carroll's compilation of figures for all the Churches taken together is not very encouraging. It shows that there are in all the denominations 174,896 ministers, 220,814 churches, and 36,675,537 communicants—a gain in ministers of 2,491, in churches of 654, and in members of 579,852, less than 1.7 per cent. This ratio of increase is considerably less than that of the increase of the United States population from 1900 to 1910, which averaged annually a little less than 3 per cent. Taking into consideration the gain in population since 1910, it seems fair to conclude that there are more than 60,000,000 people in our country not connected with any religious organization. Of course, a considerable portion of these are children, but it should also be remembered that quite a number of those set down as members of the Church in this calculation belong to sects that can scarcely be called Christian in any true sense. Manifestly the followers of Christ yet have a stupendous work to do in the home land as well as in foreign fields, if they are to take the world for their Lord.

Dr. Carroll estimates the relative strength of the ten leading Churches in the United States as follows: Roman Catholic, 12,888,466; Methodist Episcopal, 3,293,526; Regular Baptist (South), 2,475,609; Methodist Episcopal, South, 1,919,873; Regular Baptist (colored), 1,912,219; Presbyterian (Northern), 1,348,150; Disciples of Christ (Campbellites), 1,340,887; Regular Baptist (North), 1,175,923; Protestant Episcopal, 970,451; Lutheran Synodical Conference, 807,963. Grouped in denominational families, the showing made is thus set down: Roman Catholic, 12,907,189; Methodist, 6,905,093; Baptist, 5,894,232; Lutheran, 2,353,232; Presbyterian, 1,981,949; Episcopal, 980,851; Reformed, 459,106; Latter Day Saints, 352,500; United Brethren, 320,960; Friends, 124,216; Brethren (Dunkard), 119,644; Adventists, 95,808.

The Christian Scientists are reported to have 85,096 members, and to have had a loss in the number of ministers of 152, and in the number of churches of 36. The Adventists gained 23 churches and 34 communicants. The increase in some of the other leading denominational families is as follows: Baptist, 120,841; Roman Catholic, 125,233; Lutheran, 63,805; Methodist, 85,622; Presbyterian, 37,768; Protestant Episcopal, 23, 921; Disciples of Christ (Campbellites), 32,771. As a rule, the smaller denominations showed but slight gains, the chief increase being made by the larger bodies.

These figures are for the United States alone. The statistics for the Roman Catholic Church are not estimated by families as many erroneously suppose. On this point Dr. Carroll says: "The returns of the Official Catholic Directory, are for population, that is, for all baptized persons. The method of obtaining figures of communicants, adopted by the United States Census Office in 1890 and 1906, is to deduct 15 per cent from the 'population' for baptized children who have not been confirmed. In other words, it is estimated that 85 per cent of the Catholic 'population' are communicants. Whether this is a fair and reasonable estimate cannot be determined; nor is there any certain knowledge that the estimates of 'population' given in the Directory are or are not reasonably accurate."

MR. BAILEY'S ESTIMATE OF PUBLIC MEN.

The retirement of the Hon. Joseph W. Bailey from public life has been discussed by the newspapers in all parts of the country. Whatever one may think of Mr. Bailey's course since he became a member of Congress, it must be admitted that he is a man of remarkable intellectual gifts and one of the greatest public speakers in the nation. Indeed, it is doubtful whether in the two Houses of the National Legislature there are a half-dozen men who, in point of mental vigor and forensic ability, can be at all compared with this brilliant Texan. Some years ago, when he was scarcely more than forty years of age, he frequently engaged in debates on constitutional questions with Senator J. C. Spooner, who was many years his senior and who, it was affirmed, had had no superior in the Senate since the days of Daniel Webster, and in no instance did he fail fully to hold his own.

The farewell speech of Mr. Bailey was an extraordinary utterance, and we were much impressed with many of his statements. If the space were at our disposal, we should like to quote what he said concerning several things; but, for the present at least, we can only call attention to his testimony to the high character of the men with whom he had been associated in public life. Mr. Bailey said:

"Mr. President, I am soon to terminate my public service, and I shall henceforth have no interest in this Government other than that of a private citizen; but before I go I want to bear this testimony in behalf of the men with whom I have served: I want to say of those with whom I have differed, as well as of those with whom I have agreed in politics, that they were as much above treachery and dishonor as any equal number of men ever assembled for any work. During my twenty-two years in these two Houses of Congress I have been associated with perhaps 2,000 men, and among all that number I could count on the fingers of a single hand those whose absolute integrity I have ever had the slightest reason to suspect. Among them I do not believe that there have been five men who could have been bribed with any sum of money to do what they knew was wrong."

With this sentiment of Mr. Bailey (though we might not make the affirmation as to the incorruptibility of the men in Congress quite so sweeping as he did), we are in the heartiest sympathy. It is our settled conviction that there are as many good men in public life to-day as there have been in any other period of American history. And the muck-raker and yellow journal, by sowing the seeds of suspicion in the minds of the people and producing the harvest of distrust in our public officials which now extends throughout the country, have wrought an injury to the nation that cannot easily be repaired. Indeed, we to-day scarcely have before us a graver problem than that of distinguishing in our law-making between the liberty and license of the press—of drawing satisfactorily the line of demarcation between the legitimate criticism of public men and a willful and malicious slandering of them. If this reckless and widespread defamation of those entrusted with office continues unchecked a few decades longer, it is frightful to think of what the results may be. A reasonable amount of confidence in one another constitutes the only foundation upon which human beings can rear and maintain a social order; and if that confidence be undermined, disaster must ensue. He is not a patriot, but an enemy of the public weal, who, without conclusive proof, undertakes to smirch and cast suspicion upon a fellow citizen. There is scarcely a wiser provision in the admirable General Rules of our Church than that which forbids "speaking evil of magistrates and ministers;" and we wish that our people everywhere, whether Methodists or not, would live up to the spirit of that thoroughly Scriptural injunction.

AN APPRECIABLE LOSS.

The death of Mrs. C. H. Gibbs, an announcement of which appears elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate, has entailed upon the Methodism of North Mississippi a distinct loss. As is stated in the notice given of her decease by Brother Woollard, she was the wife of the late Rev. H. P. Gibbs, who was one of the saintliest ministers we have ever known, and a sister of the Rev. T. B. Hargrove, who several years ago died suddenly in our pulpit at Coldwater, Miss., leaving behind a noteworthy record in the itinerancy. Sister Gibbs was a woman of beautiful Christian character, of culture and refinement, and of large capacity for service. She made an ideal preacher's wife, and as a missionary worker ranked with the foremost in the Conference organization with which she was connected. She taught for a number of years in Grenada College, where she was universally esteemed and loved. In common with many others, we deplore her comparatively early death, and we write these few lines to attest our high appreciation of her work and worth. We deeply sympathize with the orphaned children, who will sorely miss her tender care, and all others whose hearts have been made to ache by her home-going. Not soon will the influence of this Christlike woman cease to be felt.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. J. E. Sampley's address is Baconton, Ga. He and his family left Bagdad, Fla., for their Georgia home on January 28.

From Lisbon, La., Rev. J. C. Price sends a list of six subscriptions, for which we are grateful to him. Brother Price reports that the work of the Church is progressing favorably in his charge.

Rev. A. S. Oliver, of Matherville, Miss., has brought us under obligations to him for two new subscribers and three renewals. He serves a good people, and is looking well after all the interests of the Church in his field.

Our capable pastor at Woodville, Miss., Rev. W. W. Hopper, continues to open the way for the Advocate to reach the homes of his people. We sincerely hope that it will prove a genuine blessing to every family to which he is instrumental in sending it.

Rev. P. A. Swann, of Melville, La., forwarded us a club of five subscribers on January 28, for which we extend him our thanks. In his letter he stated that he and his people were looking forward to having Rev. H. W. May, the presiding elder, with them last Saturday and Sunday with anticipations of great pleasure.

We regret to be informed that Sister Robert Scott, of Insmore, Miss., has lately had a severe case of illness in her family, her granddaughter having had to come to New Orleans for an operation. We are pleased to know, however, that the little sufferer stood the ordeal well, and that her physician now holds out the hope of a complete recovery.

Rev. J. W. Ramsey, of Mendenhall, Miss., sends us the following item from his charge: "I preached at Mendenhall on Sunday, Jan. 26, to approximately 400 people, and at the close of the service by a vote of the church conference the pastor was relieved of all responsibility for the collections, representatives of the laity assuming the task of raising them. The churches at D'Lo and Pinola have adopted the same arrangement."

Mr. J. R. Bingham was in Jackson, Miss., last Saturday to attend a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Millsaps Board of Trustees.

The Epworth League of the First Church of New Orleans gave a public reception to Rev. H. W. Jamieson, the junior pastor of that congregation, last Friday evening.

Rev. W. C. Roberts and family passed through New Orleans some days ago en route to their new home at Escatawpa, Miss. Bro. Roberts favored our office with an appreciated call.

Rev. J. H. Holder, our pastor at Okolona, Miss., has announced that his revival meeting will begin on June 15. He will be assisted by Rev. W. M. McIntosh, the successful and widely known evangelist.

Rev. Josephus Stephens, a native of Baton Rouge, La., who was an honored member of the St. Louis Conference and the pastor of the Mount Auburn Church of St. Louis, died in that city on January 30.

The parsonage of the Acadia Circuit, which is located at Prudhomme, La., is being repaired and partly refurnished. Rev. E. B. Troy, the pastor, who is also a skilled mechanic, is personally superintending the work.

Rev. S. A. Belcher, a member of the Brazil Mission Conference, who formerly was connected with the South Georgia Conference, has been in New Orleans for the past week. He delivered an interesting sermon at Felicity Church last Sunday night.

Rev. W. D. Wendel, of Pontotoc, Miss., reports that the work is moving along nicely in his charge. He states that the new presiding elder of the Aberdeen District, Rev. J. W. Bell, was with him on Sunday, Jan. 26, and that he made a most favorable impression.

We regret to be informed that Mrs. S. D. Dove, who for many years has been an esteemed member of our church at Shelby, Miss., has been ill with la grippe for several weeks. We are glad to know, however, that she is improving, and that it is thought that she will soon be able to be out again.

In renewing her subscription to the Advocate, Mrs. E. A. Crawford, of Tallsheek, La., takes time to express her appreciation of it. She also says: "The work here is progressing nicely under the leadership of Rev. T. V. Peters, whom we are all delighted to have with us as pastor for another year."

This issue of the Advocate has been brought out amid the confusion and interruptions incident to the Mardi Gras celebration. We trust, therefore, that our readers will not view it critically, but charitably. This statement will also explain why our paper this week makes its appearance a day later than usual.

Mr. Arthur W. Hawkes, generally known as "Sunshine" Hawkes, who is spending a few days in the city, preached at the Louisiana Avenue Methodist Church last Sunday morning. He is also expected, while here, to lecture at the Parker Memorial Church and to address the Young Men's Christian Association in their hall on St. Charles street.

Read the statement of Rev. H. W. Jamieson, the assistant pastor of the First Methodist Church of New Orleans, concerning the needs of our missionary work in this city, which appears on Page 16. It is a worthy cause for which he asks help, and his appeal should meet with a prompt and generous response from the Methodists of New Orleans and all Louisiana.

Rev. R. F. Cole, who is serving the Pine Valley Circuit (North Mississippi Conf.), has been given a kindly reception by his people and is pleased with the prospect. One of the first tasks to which he has set his hand is to introduce the Advocate into the homes of his charge, and already he has favored us with five subscriptions. It scarcely needs to be said that we are grateful to him for this good work.

The Algiers Church of New Orleans has not been in as prosperous a condition in many years as it is at this time. Its pastor, Rev. R. M. Brown, and the presiding elder has been paid in full to the 1st of February, the current expenses of the church have been met, and there is a balance in the treasury. The leading members of this church are confident that this will be one of the best years it has ever had.

Just as we are closing our forms, the following dispatch from Rev. M. M. Black, of Laurel, Miss., comes to hand: "My little son, Charles, aged 5, who was frightfully burned two weeks ago, died yesterday at 6 o'clock p.m. Our hearts are very sad; pray for us." Brother Black and his family will have the sympathy of many friends who will not fail to remember them at the throne of grace in this time of sorrow and sore trial.

Rev. C. J. Nugent, of New Castle, Ky., is visiting his niece in New Orleans. He paid this office an appreciated call last week, but made us sad by reporting that on Dec. 2, 1912, death claimed his devoted wife. Brother Nugent is a native of New Orleans, and has been a reader of the Advocate all his life, his father having been one of the subscribers to its first issue. We feel deeply for Brother Nugent in his sad bereavement.

Bishop and Mrs. W. B. Murrah were due to arrive in San Francisco last Monday. Their many friends throughout the Church and particularly in Mississippi will be delighted to have them at home again. They have been greatly missed during their several months' absence. (Since writing the above we have received the following telegram from Bishop Murrah, sent from San Francisco on Feb. 4: "We are here in fine shape, after a stormy voyage. I shall be glad to have a hand in Mississippi affairs again. Let it be known that I am on this side of the water, so that my correspondents may take notice.")

At a recent meeting of the Sunday school workers of New Orleans, Mr. J. H. Carter, superintendent of the Carrollton Avenue Sunday School, was elected President of the New Orleans Methodist Sunday School Association. It is the purpose of this organization to hold another meeting on the third Tuesday night of this month in the Rayne Memorial Church to elect a full list of officers and plan for an active Sunday school campaign.

Rev. W. W. Perry, of Haynesville, La., in a note to our office, says: "So, far, I am thoroughly delighted with what I have seen of my new charge. I am preaching to excellent congregations, and I hope that the attendance will be still larger when the weather clears up." Brother Perry's letter brought us six additional subscribers. He manifestly believes that it is worth while to place the church paper in the homes of his people.

A letter from Dr. A. F. Watkins states that Bishop John C. Kilgo will preach the Commencement sermon of Millsaps College on Sunday, June 8, and that he will also deliver a discourse before the Y. M. C. A. of the College on the same Sabbath at the evening hour. The faculty and students of this growing institution have a rare treat in store. There are few ministers in any Church who can equal in the pulpit our brilliant and versatile North Carolina Bishop.

Prof. W. H. Smith, who is the Supervisor of Elementary School Work in Mississippi, has been selected by the United States Commissioner of Education to go to Denmark to make a study of the public school system of that country. Prof. Smith expects to be absent until about the middle of April. It is quite an honor to be sent abroad upon such a mission, but the distinction accorded in this instance was well merited. Mr. Smith is a member of our Church at Durant, Miss.

Rev. C. W. Baley, of McCool, Miss., writes: "All goes well with us on our work, and we are being brought under greater obligations to these good people every day. I have been hindered in discharging my pastoral duties since Conference by illness in my family. Mrs. Baley has been confined to her bed most of the time this week, but I am glad to say that she is able to be up at present. I want to give a hearty amen to your editorial, entitled 'Below the Plane of Decency,' which appeared in last week's issue of the Advocate."

Rev. O. L. Savage has begun his second year on the Belzoni (Miss.) charge most auspiciously. The people have given him many evidences of appreciation since his re-assignment to them, and are co-operating heartily with him in his work. As he always does, Brother Savage is taking care of the interests of the Advocate in his field, having already commenced to send in subscriptions. If all our pastors were as energetic in pressing the claims of the Conference organ as he is, its circulation would soon be largely extended.

Rev. A. S. Briscoe, our pastor on the Smithville work (North Mississippi Conference), says: "I am beginning to get settled down in my new appointment, and have started my campaign for the Advocate. I find few papers taken in this charge, when really it ought to be entering scores of homes." We appreciate the action of Brother Briscoe in giving early attention to the matter of circulating the Conference organ among his parishioners, and we make grateful acknowledgment of the five subscriptions which his good letter brought us.

Rev. E. L. Whiddon, whose address is now Brookhaven, Miss., writes: "After March 1, I shall be at the command of any of the brethren in Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas and Texas who may desire my assistance in revival work. I have a large tent, which I can bring with me as baggage, if it is needed. No field is too hard for me to go to, and the compensation that I ask is a free-will offering from the people. If any brother wishes to organize a new church anywhere and needs my tent, I shall be pleased to serve him."

The Second Methodist Church of New Orleans

was dedicated last Sunday afternoon, the dedicatory sermon being preached by Rev. J. T. Foster, a former pastor. Dr. J. M. Henry, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, Bishop W. P. Thirkield, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Rev. W. E. Thomas, the present pastor, occupied seats on the pulpit-platform while the exercises were in progress. It was a matter of general regret that Mr. Charles A. Adams, whose liberality made possible the dedication of the church, was indisposed and unable to be present at the service.

In a letter to the Editor, Mrs. A. C. McKinney, of Ruston, State President of the W. C. T. U., requests us to urge the friends of the Kenyon-Shepard hill in Louisiana to send telegrams at once to their representatives in Congress asking them to support that measure. She is especially desirous that letters and telegrams be sent to Hon. Garland Durre, of the New Orleans District, who is a member of the House Judiciary Committee, which now has this important measure in hand. If this bill is not passed during the month of February, it may be necessary for practically all the work that has been done to effect its passage to be done over.

By request we print the following notice from Rev. F. O. Bell, of Goodwater, Miss.: "I take this method of announcing that I am available for evangelistic work, and that I shall be pleased to make dates with any of the brethren who may need help this summer. I should like to arrange my schedule of engagements at as early a date as possible. If any of the brethren desire to know something of me and my work, I refer them to Rev. M. B. Sharbrough, Columbia, Miss.; Rev. W. W. Murray, Eucutta, Miss., and Rev. W. D. Dominick, Prentiss, Miss. The Lord has blessed my labors in the past, and I feel sure that he will continue to do so."

Rev. W. J. Porter, who is one of the stirring pastors of the Louisiana Conference, sends us the following summary of his work up to Jan. 30th: "I have made one round on my new charge. I preached at six places; conducted the opening exercises at four of the five schools within the bounds of my circuit; married one couple; officiated at one burial service; visited 75 homes, and secured five new subscribers to the Advocate. I will start on my second round to-morrow. Pray that a tidal wave of salvation may pass through my charge." Truly, Brother Porter has made a good beginning. In religious work, as in everything else, it is the industrious man who succeeds.

Rev. M. C. Holt, the Louisiana Conference Secretary of Education, has mailed to every Methodist pastor in Louisiana a communication calling his attention to the fact that, by appointment of the Conference, next Sunday, Feb. 9, is Education Day. He especially urges that in the observance of the occasion three things be done: (1) That a sermon on Christian Education be preached; (2) that the claims of Centenary and Mansfield Colleges be placed upon the consciences of the people; (3) that a collection be taken for the Educational Assessment. The money raised should be forwarded to Rev. H. T. Carley, of Shreveport, La., who is the Treasurer of the Conference Board of Education.

Rev. John F. Foster spent last Sunday in New Orleans. In the afternoon he delivered the sermon at the dedicatory service of the Second Methodist Church, and on Sunday night he delivered a thoughtful discourse to a large audience in the Algiers Church. On Monday morning Brother Foster paid this office an appreciated call. He reports that his church in De Ridder, La., is soon to erect a new building. The present church building is not too small, but as it is located on the ground desired by the Police Jury of the new Parish of Beauregard for a courthouse square, and as it is wanted for a temporary courthouse, the congregation has decided to sell it and build elsewhere.

We greatly regretted to hear of the death of Mrs. Amos Ward, of Starkville, Miss., which occurred after months of illness, at her residence in that city on January 9. Sister Ward was reared in a religious home, and was an ardent Methodist, an earnest Christian, and in every respect a most superior woman. She had many noble qualities, but none which impressed us more than her unmistakable sincerity. She was incapable of pretense of any kind, and there was a ring of genuineness in every utterance that came from her lips. She was a friend to the preacher and his family; she sympathized with and assisted the needy, and every good cause found in her an outspoken and uncompromising champion. We were not surprised to be informed that she bore her long-continued sufferings with Christian patience and fortitude. This was to be expected of one of her strong faith and force of personality. She wrought well, and we doubt not that she has passed to a rich reward. To the bereaved husband, son, daughter, sisters, and other sorrowing loved ones, we extend our deepest sympathy.

Brother J. T. PETTY was born in Humphreys County, Tenn., May 28, 1860, and died in Calhoun, La., Jan. 2, 1913. Brother Petty joined the Cumberland Presbyterian Church in Tennessee in 1881, and came to Louisiana shortly afterward to engage in teaching, which profession he followed all his life. There being no Presbyterian Church near, he united with the M. E. Church, South, at Calhoun, in the year 1893, and lived a faithful and consistent member to the day of his death. Brother Petty was an earnest and faithful worker in the Church and a true friend to his pastor. We feel that we have sustained a great loss to our community as well as to the Church. O how we will miss him! He leaves a wife and five children to mourn their loss. E. C. GRICE, P. C.

On Thursday, Jan. 23, the Van Winkle and Forest Hill communities were made sad by the sudden death of our beloved friend and brother, Mr. GEORGE ROBB. He did not complain much, and to the suggestion of his family that he send for a doctor, he replied that it was useless, for he did not need a physician; but he died the same evening. Too much cannot be said in commendation of our dear friend. He was always cheerful and had a kind word for everyone. He had been a member of the Methodist Church since childhood, and was in the sixtieth year of his age. He was never married, but leaves two sisters, three nephews, one niece, and a host of friends to mourn his departure. We cannot see how it will be possible for us to get along without him, but we know that our loss is his gain. We believe that the Lord doeth all things well, and we bow in submission to his will. — The Forest Hill (Miss.) Sunday School.

The subject of this sketch, Brother JAMES RAY, has been one among the most faithful men in our beloved Methodism. He was born Feb. 28, 1826, and departed this life Dec. 16, 1912. He leaves a wife and seven children, a number of grandchildren and many friends to mourn their loss. Brother Ray joined the M. E. Church, South, when nine years old and was converted at the age of eleven. He was elected steward when a mere boy and served in that office sixty-six years. He believed in the "old-time religion" and in the old-time way of getting it. His heart was burdened for the welfare of the Church and for all of the unsaved, in or out of the Church, and he seemed never to be happier than when he heard the shout of victory. He was, indeed, the pastor's friend. This scribe only knew him the last two years he lived, for the very day that Bishop Morrison read the appointments of the Mississippi Conference, Brother Ray passed beyond the vale. Weep not, dear ones, as those who have no hope, but be ready to meet him.

M. R. JONES.

Mrs. SARAH J. DuBOSE was the daughter of Marcus Shelby and Sarah Barnes, of Canton, Miss. She was born April 21, 1826, and finished her life in triumph at the home of her son, Brother T. J. Powell, in Lake Providence, La., Jan. 18, 1913. Sister DuBose was a direct descendant of Isaac Shelby, the first governor of the State of Kentucky, and General Evan Shelby, of Revolutionary fame. Reared by most devout parents, she became a Christian and joined the Methodist Church in girlhood and continued in the faith to her death. Sister DuBose was twice married. In 1839 she became the wife of Brother J. B. Powell. She was the mother of thirteen children, only two of whom survive her—Mr. T. J. Powell and Mrs. Jos. E. Ransdell, the wife of Senator-elect Ransdell, both of Lake Providence. Her husband died in 1865 and she remained a widow until 1869, when she became the wife of Judge M. DuBose, who died in 1887. Sister DuBose was one of the most devout Christians the writer has known and died in the full triumph of a living faith. She was universally loved for her singularly beautiful life and the large concourse of friends who followed her remains to the grave attests the high esteem in which she was held in the community in which she lived and wrought for more than half a century. J. W. LEE.

IN MEMORIAM:

At that final roll call, to only a few of us shall come the summons, "Well done, good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things; I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." Though we have lately been bereaved of Mrs. Bernice Gates Crane, who died Jan. 22, 1912, and we know that we shall see her here no more, yet we can bear our loss uncomplainingly, for we are assured that we shall see her on that final day. Mrs. Bernice Gates Crane was born on June 16, 1887. In 1896 she joined the M. E. Church, South, and was faithful unto death. Her true character and genial disposition won for her many friends early in life and on June 1, 1904, she was married to Mr. Crane. Her friends were delighted when the happy couple later returned to Harriston, to live with her mother, Mrs. Gates. Her loss will be greatly felt by the whole community. The interment was made in the cemetery at Fayette, Miss., by the side of her brother. May God's blessings be upon the bereaved ones.

THE PASTOR.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Whereas, It has pleased our Heavenly Father to call to the higher life Mrs. Anna Webb McGehee, wife of Dr. E. L. McGehee: Resolved, that in her death our Missionary Society has lost one of its most worthy and devoted members. Her interest in mission work seemed supreme and she was never so happy as when she felt that the Society had done good work "in His name."

Fitted to adorn any circle, the social, as well as the religious, world will miss her. Of a bright and cheerful nature, she brought sunshine wherever she appeared. Her great big heart was filled with love and charity for all, and her generous hand was ever its almoner.

True, pure and womanly, her judgment of others always reflected her inner self and was marked by tender pity for the erring and by loving kindness for all. Truly, her life inspired others to live for higher and nobler things. Nature gave her superior endowments and she used them in her Master's vineyard. In her home she was the impersonation of all the graces; in her church she was a dependable force that was always subject to call, and in the community she was always counted in for anything worthy. To those who formed the inner circle of her life we extend our heartfelt sympathy. God, who was her hope and comfort, offers to you his help and waits until your day of service has passed, to invite you into his house of many mansions.

We commend to all the faith which made beautiful and strong the character of this loved one gone before. (Signed):

Tidings From the Field

Sharon, Miss.

Perhaps a few lines from the Sharon charge will be of some interest to your readers. I am sure that former pastors of this charge will not be surprised when I say that these good people gave us a warm reception, for they have a reputation for generosity. We arrived at the parsonage on time, and found a number of ladies in waiting for us. Some visible signs of their appreciation were a sumptuous repast and warm rooms, both of which were enjoyed by the writer and his family. The pantry was well filled with the necessities of life. Since then their marks of appreciation have been many and varied. No preacher has ever served a more loyal people. Our members are few in number, but what we lack in quantity we have in quality. We are praying for and expecting a good year. I earnestly ask an interest in the prayers of the brethren.—E. J. Coker, P. C.

Pachuta, Miss.

As published, the undersigned has been assigned by Bishop Morrison to the Pachuta charge. It is due to the good people of this charge to say they gave the new pastor a most cordial welcome. The outlook is hopeful and we are expecting great things for 1913. Our first quarterly meeting, held January 11-12, was well attended. Rev. H. Walter Featherston, our presiding elder, was well received and did us good by his strong, helpful sermons and wise counsel. My wife and I are now on our way to Weatherford, Texas, to visit loved ones. Owing to a belated train, we are spending a few hours in this growing city of Shreveport, La. We hope to reach our destination in the Lone Star State to-morrow. Our prayers are for our people and our brethren who labor with us in the Lord. We may help each other by sincere, believing prayer. Will those who think of us ask in our behalf, journeying mercies.—Yours in Christ, C. H. Ellis.

Crawford Street, Vicksburg.

I had no sooner moved to Newton, prepared to enter upon the work of the district, when a telegram from Bishop Morrison changed my field of labor to this place. I and my family were very kindly welcomed and a delightful reception, which was attended by a large number of people, was given us in the Annex. There is no parsonage belonging to this church, but a very comfortable home has been provided for us. The labors of the pastor here, which are arduous and varied, will be greatly aided and inspired by the cultured and appreciative membership, while the material interest of the church will be looked after by a most efficient Board of Stewards. The outlook for the year seems most encouraging. I am glad to renew the former delightful association I had with Brother T. W. Adams when he was on the Brookhaven District. Doctor, come up and see us and preach for us. With my best wishes for yourself and The Advocate, I am, C. F. Emery.

Patterson, La.

We have received a hearty welcome from the people of Patterson. I have succeeded Brother Scholars here. Our parsonage and church are really attractive and are well located. We haven't a large membership (the Roman Catholics are in the majority); but we feel that we have quite an opportunity here, despite this fact. The Methodist ladies had dinner prepared for us on our arrival and the pantry was well supplied. These good people know how to make a Methodist preacher feel good. I was late getting here, but my excuse was indeed a legal one. The people bear me out in this belief, the presiding elder did not complain, nor do I feel any remorse of conscience. I had to go to Nashville, Tenn., and marry a wife before I could come. I rejoice in the fact that I carried a double course while at Wesley Hall. We need the prayers of the Church in our work here. We often get what we expect. It is worth while to invest much in the Lord's work. Pray for us, that much good may be done here this year.—C. E. Fike.

Marksville, La.

The Louisiana Conference at its last session returned to this field for another year our beloved pastor, Rev. W. B. Perritt, and we more than welcomed him back. Brother Perritt has charge of four churches in this vicinity: Marksville, Centerpoint, Evergreen, and Simsport. We have services in Marksville every second Sunday. The Methodist Sunday school at this place is a fine one, and the teachers and pupils seem to be in earnest. A church conference was held recently at the residence of Mrs. M. Bettevy, and we are informed that it was both entertaining and profitable. Those present, beside the kind hostess, were Mrs. L. J. Coco, Mrs. J. W. Joffrion, Rev. W. B. Perritt, Prof. J. M. Barham, and Dr. E. Regard, of Mangura. Brothers Barham and Regard, the newly-appointed stewards, were installed as church officers. At the Simsport Church, on Sunday, Jan. 26, Brother Perritt had three accessions by letter, despite the heavy rainfall at that time.... I agree with the article entitled, "The Church Paper and the Home," from Zion's Herald, which was published in a previous issue of the Christian Advocate. It is the writer's opinion that there may be much good done by circulating the church paper among church members. People cannot be interested in matters about which they are uninformed; nor do they seem to be specially anxious to learn what the church at large is doing. Human nature changes little, and while it is not innate to love our neighbor as ourselves, it is a native principle to want to know our neighbors' business, and to want our neighbors to know what we are doing. Hence, in this passing use of man's inherent quality we may come to the help of those who are seeking to strengthen and circulate the church paper in the homes of the people, thus making it the means of educating church members up to the standard of all the religious activities of the church, as we lead them gradually and imperceptibly through the other columns to a more expansive and comprehensive view, and a deeper interest concerning all the departments of the Master's work.... With this report we inclose two names for your subscription list. Invoking His blessings upon the Christian Advocate and its readers, and trusting that these humble words may redound to the advancement of your paper financially and otherwise, we commend this field to the prayers of Christians throughout the State.—Mrs. T. T. Field, Press Reporter.

This Wife and Mother Wishes to tell you FREE How She Stopped Her Husband's Drinking

By all Means Write to Her and Learn how She did it.

For over 20 years James Anderson of 301 Elm Ave., Hillburn, N. Y., was a very hard drinker. His case seemed a hopeless one, but 10 years ago his wife in their own little home, gave him a simple remedy which much to her delight stopped his drinking entirely.

To make sure that the remedy was responsible for his happy result she also tried it on her brother and several of her neighbors. It was successful in every case. None of them has touched a drop of intoxicating liquor since.

She now wishes everyone in their homes to try this simple remedy for it has for her. It can be given secretly if desired, and without cost she will gladly and willingly tell you what it is. All you have to do is write her a letter asking her how she cured her husband of drinking and she will reply by return mail in a sealed envelope. As she has nothing to sell do not send her money. Simply send a letter with all confidence to Mrs. Margaret Anderson at the address given above, taking care to write your name and full address plainly.

(We earnestly advise every one of our readers who wishes to cure a dear one of drunkenness to write to this lady today. Her offer is a sincere one.)

The Sunday School.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

"The teacher—every Sunday school teacher—needs to be prepared, not just filled up."

Quite an interesting and helpful book for teachers of this period is "Hand Work in the Sunday School," by Milton S. Littlefield.

A successful teacher of boys and girls says that plans for them must include something to learn, something to do, and something to enjoy.

The "Messenger Service" trains intermediate boys to be messengers for the pastor, superintendent or Home Department, distributing literature, notices, programs, papers, etc.

The right formation of character is better than its reformation. Christian character should be formed while character is in the making. These two things should be memorized by the child's teacher.

From the days children learn that their hands are their own, to be used, these same children are

"Just a yearnin'
To be learnin'
Anything at all."

What are we helping them to learn?

Every backward Sunday school simply awaits the guiding hand of a competent superintendent. Such a superintendent needs vision, information, inspiration, and organizing power, with fine Christian tact. These virtues he can acquire by studying his Bible, attending Sunday School Institutes, going to another Sunday school several times a year, subscribing for periodicals and getting suitable, helpful books. If you want to be a good superintendent, here's the way.

The place of the story in child training has long been recognized. Now we must emphasize the place of the blackboard and pictures in that same connection—but a don't or two is needed in this connection:

Don't use too many pictures—one each Sunday is sufficient.

Don't use a picture just because you found it that week.

Don't talk too much about the picture—let it speak for itself.

Don't hurry—give each child plenty of time.

Don't select cheap or overly decorated pictures—there are good pictures and cheap.

One large class in a certain large school nearly always has charge of the opening exercises of that school. One boy, or all of them, reads the Scripture lesson; they repeat the Lord's Prayer in concert, sing a good, hearty song, and make that exercise not merely a perfunctory or automatic one, but a season of real interest. And the boys keep still. Some of these boys have been known to repeat the whole lesson text from memory and several of them have made a fine map and led the school over the geographical journey of the lesson. Mrs. Bryner says if we expect and plan something worthy, the boys will not disappoint us.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

Rev. H. W. May began his work on the Alexandria District by laying stress on Sunday school and evangelistic work, and by searching his field for suitable candidates for the ministry. We predict that his district will be heard from along these lines. He has begun already to agitate the observance of Children's Day.

At Jena the Sunday school has recently organized a Teacher Training class, with the pastor, Rev. W. D. Kleinsmidt, as teacher; a Cradle Roll, with Mrs. Bertha Baker as superintendent; a Missionary Department, with Mrs. W. D. Kleinsmidt as superintendent, and an Elementary Department, with Miss Ormie Thompson as superintendent.

ment, with Miss Ormie Thompson as superintendent.

The Logansport Sunday school has recently organized a Teacher Training class, with Prof. Payne, principal of the High School, as teacher; a Cradle Roll, with Mrs. W. H. Price as superintendent; a Home Department, with Mrs. Lockwood as superintendent, and a Missionary Department, with Mrs. Payne as superintendent. This brings this school up to our Standard of Excellence.

Superintendent W. A. McKennon, of the First Church of Shreveport, only received two gifts from Sunday school scholars last Christmas, and they were from the two Chinese members of his school, one a restaurant keeper and the other a laundryman. One gave him a hand-worked silk table cover and the other a silk handkerchief and three boxes of tea. This is more of a compliment to our holy religion than to this kind-hearted superintendent. The same spirit that possessed the first worshipers of the new-born Christ is seen in these representatives of this nation that is just now finding "him of whom Moses in the law did write." May our Sunday school workers ever have power to win the hearts of these foreigners who report back to their brethren in the far-away land the type of our Christian religion as it appears at close range!

Dr. L. D. McGehee, our Sunday school superintendent at Hammond, has made quite a record in the establishment and development of a mission school at Zenobia, some six miles from Hammond. While visiting a patient, he inquired of the neighbors gathered and found that they had no preaching in the community, but had a union meeting house. He suggested that he bring a preacher out Sunday afternoon, to which they heartily agreed, and quite a congregation gathered at the appointed hour. A Sunday school was then proposed, with the result that last summer there was an average attendance of 66, and a Primary room has been built and a trained teacher found for it. The church has been painted; a prayer meeting is held weekly; preaching is maintained, and they have an active benevolent committee that is never so happy as when finding some good work to do. This school gave last year $25 to the State Sunday School Association and they are even suggesting that they would be glad to help the school in Hammond build its Elementary room. And after the statistics have been forgotten, who can calculate the blessings from such a work as is carried on by this energetic Sunday school leader? The State has many other "Zenobias" which need only a like type of consecrated leadership to develop them.

STOPPED THOSE PAINS

Copper Hill, Va.—Mrs. Ida Conner, of this place, says: "For years I had a pain in my right side, and I was very sick with womanly troubles. I tried different doctors but could get no relief. I had given up all hope of ever getting well. I took Cardui, and it relieved the pain in my side, and now I feel like a new person. It is a wonderful medicine." Many women are completely worn-out and discouraged on account of some womanly trouble. Are you? Take Cardui, the woman's tonic. Its record shows that it will help you. Why wait? Try it today. Ask your druggist about it.

A sound living tree has a money as well as a sentimental value and is, therefore, too precious to neglect.

Davey Tree Experts Do

for trees what surgeons do for human beings—they prolong life, while mere "tree trimmers" often do more harm than good. Davey Experts are doing a wonderful work in saving the trees of Old Dixie. Here's positive proof.

Try This Home-Made Cough Remedy

Costs Little, But Does the Work Quickly, or Money Refunded.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with 1/2 pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle; then add the Sugar Syrup. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

You will find that this simple remedy takes hold of a cough more quickly than anything else you ever used. Usually ends a deep seated cough inside of 24 hours. Splendid, too, for whooping cough, croup, chest pains, bronchitis and other throat troubles. It stimulates the appetite and is slightly laxative, which helps end a cough.

This recipe makes more and better cough syrup than you could buy ready made for $2.50. It keeps perfectly and tastes pleasantly.

Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and all the natural pine elements which are so healing to the membranes. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

This plan of making cough syrup with Pinex and sugar syrup (or strained honey) has proven so popular throughout the United States and Canada that it is often imitated. But the old, successful formula has never been equaled.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

A FAMOUS STORY REPRINTED.

Recent discussion as to whether the best known stories of the last generation would be accepted by magazines of the present day has suggested to The Century the reprinting of a few of the noteworthy stories by well-known authors appearing in that magazine about twenty-five years ago. The February Century will contain, in this series, "The Lady, or the Tiger?" Frank R. Stockton's famous story, with new drawings by Oliver Herford.

The world stands on ideas, and not on iron or cotton; and the iron of iron, the fire of fire, the ether and source of all the elements, is moral force.—Emerson.

Let men account for this wonderful change since Christ! What did it? How came it, if Jesus Christ be not what he claimed to be—the Son of God, the Savior of the world?—Frances Cable.

Clinton, Ky.—Mrs. M. C. McElroy, in a letter from Clinton, writes: "For six years I was a sufferer from female troubles. I could not eat, and could not stand on my feet, without suffering great pain. Three of the best doctors in the State said I was in a critical condition, and was going down hill. I lost hope. After using Cardui a week, I began to improve. Now I feel better than in six years." Fifty years of success, in actual practice, is positive proof that Cardui can always be relied on for relieving female weakness and disease. Why not test it for yourself? Sold by all druggists.

POTASH

The corn crop fooled lots of farmers last year.

Many fields looked good but fell down on the yield. This was owing to a lack of available Potash, for Potash is primarily a producer of grain.

Your corn must have enough quickly available Potash to produce well-filled ears as well as stalks.

A corn fertilizer should contain at least 8% Potash—better 10%—no matter in what form the fertilizer is used. Kainit, 75 to 100 lbs. per acre, drilled in with the seed, will keep away cutworms and root lice.

If your dealer can't furnish brands rich enough in Potash and won't carry Potash Salts so you can supplement your stable manure or strengthen the brands he does carry, write to us for prices.

We will sell direct in any amount from a 200-lb. bag up. Write for free book of fertilizer formulas and directions.

Meeting of Mission Society at Lexington.

The Woman's Missionary Society met at the home of the president-elect, Mrs. W. W. Wilburn, Monday afternoon to install their officers for the coming year. The installation services were conducted by Dr. H. G. Henderson in a most impressive manner, each officer responding with a beautiful passage of Scripture. Mrs. R. H. Baker sang in her sweet voice the song "Teach Me to Pray," which was followed by reports of the secretary and treasurer and the collection of dues. Committees appointed were: Social Service, Reporters, Parsonage, Church, and Membership. Beautiful resolutions were read from the Columbus Auxiliary as follows:

"Whereas our Methodist system of itinerancy has called to another field of labor our sister, Mrs. H. G. Henderson; therefore, be it resolved by the Woman's Missionary Society of the First Methodist Church, Columbus, Miss.:

"1. That while we part with her with regret, we commend her to her co-laborers at Lexington, Miss., as an earnest and faithful worker—one ever zealous in her Master's cause.

"2. That our best wishes go with her and our prayer that God's blessings may attend her.

"3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to Mrs. Henderson, a copy to the Woman's Missionary Society at Lexington, and a copy placed on our minutes."

Signed by: Mrs. J. T. Stokes, Mrs. W. F. Leigh, Mrs. E. B. Kirksey, Committee.

After the reading of these resolutions the Society was served with a most delicious salad course, hot chocolates, and bon-bons. Every one voted the new president a most charming hostess, and prayed that through her sweet Christian character each one might be inspired to do her work in an untiring way, and be a strong support to her throughout the year.

MRS. G. C. JONES, Treas.

Slavery in America.

"From the December Expositor we learn that there are more slaves to intoxicating liquor and cigarettes in the United States than there were negro slaves freed by the Emancipation proclamation. The figures are also given to show that the United States' annual expenditure for liquor is a greater problem than the tariff. The President and rulers who help to emancipate our millions of drunkards will be worthy a place in the halls of fame of all the earth."

China's Future.

"From the American Advance we learn that President Yuan of China, in an interview, said: 'For nearly sixty years this trade (opium) has stood as the crime of humanity, but we will stop it and free the land from the devouring scourge. China has been dying from this curse for more than half a century. Her people, overcome by this vile drug, have been half asleep and have no notion that they and their country are dying. But our National Assembly has already legislated against it, and these laws will be enforced. Our newly-established armies will fight opium smugglers, opium and dealers, and opium users, everywhere.'"

America's Part.

"How long, oh, how long, must America wait for rulers whose broad statesmanship will equal that of this man who, though a heathen, recognizes that China must advance, if advance she does, along high moral policies shaped by the spirit of Christianity? How long shall the American mother wait for the emancipation of the slaves of rum?"

FOR COUGHS AND COLDS

A NOTE FROM BROTHER PEEBLES.

Dear Mr. Editor: It rejoices me to say that our new year's work has begun well in Meridian. Our presiding elder and pastors are purposing nothing short of the highest achievements for God and the Church this year. Prognostications that their hopes will be realized are not wanting. The attendance upon the Sunday school and church services is increasing. One of the special omens which promises well in this field is the conscious dependence of our brethren on the Trinity and their full appreciation of the work of their predecessors. They have accorded to me the liberty of visiting their charges when I choose to do so and to visit from house to house, also. I have had the pleasure of preaching for Brothers Harmon, Seever, and Jones, and two colored preachers. I am not idle at all, although unengaged in revival work as yet. I am visiting, preaching, writing books, letters, etc., and am doing all the good I can generally, with no salary whatsoever, despite the fact that house rent has to be paid and four in family have to be fed and clothed. If any of our brethren desire doctrinal sermons preached by some one else than themselves, I should be glad to do it for them, and that too, before the revival season begins. I could spend a Sabbath, or two or three nights with them for that purpose only, if desired. There will likely be more revival work than Brother Kelley and I can do, since summer is the principal revival season. May God greatly bless him and me in the great and responsible work assigned us, that our ministry may be so wholly unselfish that our brethren in the itinerancy and the people generally may be convinced that we are not launched for the loaves and fishes, but for the upbuilding of God's people and the salvation of sinners.

ISAAC L. PEEBLES.

MORE INFORMATION WANTED.

A correspondent of the Philadelphia "Ledger" recalls an epitaph which may be seen in an old Moravian cemetery in New Jersey. It is this:

"Remember, friend, as you pass by, As you are now, so once was I; As I am now, thus you must be, So be prepared to follow me."

There has been written underneath in pencil, presumably by some wag:

"To follow you I'm not content Till I find out which way you went."

MRS. CARRIE FOSTER HATCH.

Died on January 4, 1913, at Buckner, La., Carrie Foster Hatch, beloved wife, mother, daughter, sister and friend. She was born in Madison County June 24, 1881. When quite young she came with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. T. W. Foster, to Lexington, Miss., to make her home.

A loving, happy disposition, combined with rare qualities of mind and heart, won the love of all with whom she came in contact, and brought sunshine, not only into her home circle, but into every life which touched her own. Reared in the atmosphere of a rarely Christian home; guided by a sainted mother who ever "walked with God," when but a child, she embraced the religion she had learned at her mother's knee, and through all the years of her sweet, young womanhood, she "kept the Faith." On September 4, 1905, she was married to Mr. John M. Hatch, a rising young business man of Buckner, La., and a member of one of the most prominent families of that State. This proved a most happy and congenial union and they garnered their joys with never a thought of separation, but alas! an unexpected and fatal illness came swiftly upon this happy young wife and mother. All that skill and science could suggest, all the prayers of loving, anguished hearts were of no avail, and before we even realized her danger, the "Angel of Death" had softly closed her eyes. The Hand that had guided her through her childhood, the Hand that had guided her through her young womanhood, also led her "through the valley of the shadow of death," and just as the light heralded the approach of dawn, her pure young spirit winged its flight, and gently she fell "asleep in the arms of Jesus," surely to awake and find her brothers and the ever lamented and saintly young sister awaiting her at the "Pearly Gates." To the bereaved family, we can only say, "A wiser Hand than ours has poured this portion for your lips to drink," and Heaven will seem only the brighter because she awaits your coming to complete an unbroken family.

LIQUOR ARITHMETIC.

"Boy at the head of the class, what are we paying for liquor as a nation?"

"$900,000,000 annually."

"Step to the blackboard, my boy. First, take a rule and measure this silver dollar. How thick is it?"

"Nearly an eighth of an inch."

"Well, sir, how many of them can you put in an inch?"

"Between eight and nine."

"Give the benefit of the doubt; call it nine. How many inches would it require to pile these $900,000,000 in?"

"100,000,000 inches."

"How many feet would that be?"

"3,333,333 feet."

"How many rods is that?"

"505,050 rods."

"How many miles is that?"

"1,578 miles."

"Miles of what?"

"1,578 miles of silver dollars, laid down, packed closely together, our national liquor bill would make. This is only one year's grog bill."

Boys, if you need facts about this temperance question, nail that to a post and read it occasionally. It would take ten men with scoop shovels to throw away money as fast as we are wasting it for grog.—Christian Observer.

THIS WILL INTEREST MANY.

TO THE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETIES OF LOUISIANA.

We take this means of calling your attention to our City Missionary work which is being carried on at the Mary Werlein Mission, which ministers to the most needy and unfortunate in New Orleans. We have a thriving Sunday school, which is continually increasing; also two well organized Leagues and a sewing class. These organizations are contributing much toward shaping the lives of the children and young people who are being reared in the midst of a factory environment. A Woman's Home Mission Society, which is in a very healthy condition, is also a part of our organization. A free reading room for men, open every day, and a Saturday night supper and evangelistic service for them only, are special features of our work by which we are seeking to reach the men. Sister Lily Meekins, our missionary at Mary Werlein, is a deeply consecrated woman, and is untiring in her ceaseless labors. She is doing a great work in feeding and clothing many hungry and destitute people. Our funds, however, are entirely inadequate to meet properly the demands upon us to carry on the work as it should be done. We find it necessary, therefore, to appeal to the Missionary Societies of our State for assistance. Will not every auxiliary arrange at once to send to either Sister Meekins or me a box of clothing? By acting upon this at once and responding to our call, you will do much toward relieving a strained situation.

Send all boxes to 1026 Tchoupitoulas Street.

AFFAIRS AT THE LOUISIANA ORPHANAGE.

We are doing as well as could be expected at the Orphanage. Applications to have us admit children are pouring in upon us, and it is a source of much regret to be compelled to refuse so many. Our capacity is limited, and we can receive only a small number of those that we are requested to take. We need a plant of treble the present capacity. We have 87 acres of land, and all the cattle and hogs we need. My training at the A. and M. College is of much benefit to me here, as there is a constant demand for mechanical skill. I suppose that there could scarcely be found a position where there is demand for a more versatile man than is needed here.

An excessive amount of work to be done by an inexperienced superintendent, has thus far prevented the issue of The Visitor, but we hope to have it in the hands of the printer in a few days.

I expect all the Methodists of Louisiana to unite in making Easter Work Day a great success. If the readers of this could only come here and see what a demand there is for their charity, they would respond with such liberality as to meet our highest hopes.

Brethren, I am here as your servant and I can assure you, without any boastfulness, that things are being, and will be, conducted properly. Now help hold up my hands. There is not a man in the Louisiana Conference who can more fully realize what I mean than Brother R. W. Vaughan. He served faithfully and well, and I have tried to take up the work where he left it and carry it forward. At this writing all the children in the Orphanage are in perfect health.

Sincerely yours,

P. H. FONTAINE.

EXPENSIVE EDITIONS OF THE BIBLE.

One million, five hundred and seventy-five thousand volumes of Scripture were put into circulation in the United States during the year ending March 31, 1912, by the American Bible Society. Of this number, 1,274,787 volumes were in the English language, for the most part inexpensive editions, and were sold without profit or given away. An example of the substantial but low-priced and useful issues of the Society is the twenty-five cent edition of the Pentateuch. The five books for the Sabbath school lessons of 1913, Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy, are separately bound in cloth. They are put up in a neat box, and with them is a strong leather case, which holds any one of the books while in use. Either of the little Scriptures in its leathern case slips handily into the vest pocket, and in any time of waiting invites one to read and meditate.

A SELECT SUMMER CLUB.

Located high up in the Blue Ridge mountains of North Carolina, one mile west of the picturesque town of Hendersonville, and overlooking that city by some two hundred feet, is what is proving to be one of the South's most popular, attractive and exclusive summer resorts—South Carolina Club, a summer club for select Southerners, organized by a party of progressive South Carolinians.

This Club is truly richly favored with those features which go to make an inviting summer place. A cool, bracing climate, unrivaled view of all the high mountains in the Blue Ridge, a tranquil lake bed fed by bold mountain streams; cool springs; lovely drive and walkways, rhododendron, oak and chestnut groves, and a commodious and inviting Club House. It is also fortunately located within a few minutes trolley ride from the shopping district and railroad station of Hendersonville.

The management of the South Carolina Club has spared no pains to maintain a select club for Southern families of refinement and culture, and the plan upon which it is operated not only accomplishes this, but reduces the living expenses of members to a minimum. Membership can only be obtained through the purchase of a share of stock, which participates in the earnings of the Club and gives the holder the privilege of all Club benefits, as well

WHAT SHALL WE DO AT MILLSAPS COLLEGE?

The plea which Brother Bingham makes in this issue of the Advocate for a $50,000 building on the Millsaps College Campus to take the place of Founder's Hall, which was recently destroyed by fire, is certainly deserving of thoughtful consideration. Especially to be commended is his declaration in favor of beginning to plan larger things for this splendid institution of learning, which has really outgrown, in many respects, its present facilities. We are inclined to think, however, that before any immediate course of action is decided upon the Trustees ought to go carefully over the entire situation and formulate plans of a general nature toward the realization of which they are to work in the future. As is well known, this is the method adopted by nearly all of the larger and wealthier colleges of the country. If buildings are erected under the stress of some immediate need without reference to others which may soon have to follow, the proportion and symmetry which ought to exist between the various structures of an educational institution are almost certain to be rendered impossible.

As we see it, whether $50,000 ought to be put into the new Founder's Hall depends upon the purpose for which it is to be used. If it is to be made exclusively the quarters of the Preparatory Department, we are not certain that such action would be wise, though possibly it might be. But, upon the first blush, it occurs to us that it might be the better plan to restore the old building at a cost of $25,000 or $30,000 as a home for our Fitting School, and proceed to raise $25,000 or $30,000 more to provide a dormitory for the students in the college proper, with a spacious and well equipped dining hall attached. We have long considered such a structure as the one last mentioned our most pressing need at Millsaps College. In our judgment, the lack of it has caused us to lose much in the way of patronage within recent years.

Let it not be thought that we are taking issue with Brother Bingham. As yet, we have no definite conviction as to what ought immediately to be done. A more careful consideration of the situation might bring us into perfect accord with his views. But at present there are two points upon which we are disposed to insist:

1. That before any plan of action is adopted, the Trustees shall take time to weigh all the interests involved and consider the needs of the college as a whole.

2. That we adopt Brother Bingham's suggestion to issue an appeal to the Methodists of Mississippi to raise $25,000 or $30,000 to provide more adequate buildings for our work at Millsaps College. This, in our opinion, is an opportune hour for such an undertaking. Considering its resources, Mississippi Methodism is doing less than that of almost any other State embraced in the territory of our Church. Surely, this centennial year of the older and mother Conference of the commonwealth should serve to awake us from our lethargy and incite us to do something that is worthy of us. Is there not some noble-hearted, broad-visioned layman in Mississippi who will lead the way in this movement by giving $5000 or $10,000 for this purpose? There are many in the State who are able to do so, and who would be blessed by such a benefaction. But even if we have to rely upon small contributions, we should set our hands to this task and never stop until it has been triumphantly accomplished. Much depends upon whether we stand still, or go forward at this time.

THEIR EYES ARE OPENING.

In a recent address delivered in Congress, ex-Speaker Joseph G. Cannon, of Illinois, said: "There are certain great characters who will live in the history of the country. First, and barely first, Washington; second, Lincoln; third, Lee, a great man, a great general, who did his duty from his patriotic standpoint; fourth, Jefferson Davis, a great man, performing a great service for the Republic as he saw his duty."

Emanating from such a source, this utterance indicates that the time is surely coming when the North will be able to do justice to the illustrious Chieftain of the Confederacy. Certainly vast progress has been made in this direction since the brilliant L. Q. C. Lamar stood in the Senate chamber and with matchless eloquence repelled the malignant attacks of Senator Hoar, Senator Sherman, and others upon Mr. Davis. The truth is, the man of high character who stands for principle, however much he may suffer from prejudice and misrepresentation for a time, need not fear the final verdict of posterity.

In spite of sectional animosity and calumny, Jefferson Davis is destined to have an honored and secure place in the brightest galaxy of American patriots and statesmen. He was tested by both prosperity and adversity, and never found wanting. He was ever inspired by the noblest of motives, and for no action or utterance of his need apology be made. He was a more religious man than either Washington or Lincoln, and it is doubtful whether either of them could have met any more successfully the difficulties with which he had to grapple. Such a personality and career are an honor to all mankind; they belong, not to a single section, but to the world; and sooner or later, the world will recognize and claim them.

NOT FOR MERE ENTERTAINMENT.

There are not a few who seem to be imbued with the idea that the aim of those who have charge of our church services should be to make them as entertaining as possible. To be sure, there is no merit in having them dull and wearisome, and if bright and interesting they tend to bring people to the house of God where they may be benefited. But entertainment that has no definite purpose to influence religiously the lives and characters of the occupants of the pew, is out of place in the sanctuary of the Lord. The divinely established Church of Jesus Christ has serious work to do. To seek to make it furnish merely a pleasant hour for lazy loungers on the Sabbath is to prostitute its noble functions to an unworthy end. The various features of the Church service are valuable only as they contribute to its spiritual effect. This is true of the music and singing, of the prayers, the Scripture reading, the sermon—in fact, of everything. And in the long run, the church that sticks faithfully to the work which the Master has commissioned it to do will best maintain its hold upon the public.

Sometime since our President-elect, Mr. Woodrow Wilson, touched upon this subject in a manner which showed that he has a much better understanding of it than some preachers. He said:

"When we say that the way to get young people to the church is to make the church interesting, I am afraid that we too often mean that the way to do it is to make it entertaining. Did you ever know the theater to be a successful means of governing conduct? Did you ever know the most excellent concert or series of concerts to be the means of revolutionizing a life? Did you ever know any amount of entertainment to go further than to hold for the hour that it lasted? If you mean to draw young people by entertainment, you have only one excuse for it, and that is to follow up the entertainment with something that is not entertaining, but which grips the heart like the touch of a hand. I dare say there is some excuse for alluring persons to a place where good will be done them, but I think it would be a great deal better simply to let them understand that the church is a place where life is dispensed, and that if they want life, they must come to that place."

THE SKEPTICISM THAT IS DANGEROUS.

What the Grecians could not do by force in the siege of Troy they accomplished by strategy. The famous Trojan horse enabled them to take the proud city and lay it low in the dust. So the assaults of outside infidelity upon the Church have amounted to little; what we need to fear is the undermining influence of that which has found lodgment within the walls of Zion. It is not the Voltaires and Rousseaus and Tom Paines and Ingersolls that should give deep concern to those who would preserve "the faith once delivered unto the saints," but the skeptic in the pulpit, on the tripod of the church paper, in the professor's chair in the denominational college, in the Sunday school class room, and on the platform of the theological institute. This is a time when the Evangelical Churches should put none but men who are known to be thoroughly sound in places of responsibility.

THE AMBASSADOR OF CHRIST.

When the late Prof. William G. Elmslie, of London, was a young minister scheduled to preach his first sermon, his mother, who was too ill to attend the service, asked a lady of her acquaintance to go in her stead and give some report of the young man's work. In fulfillment of that request she wrote the following lines:

He held the lamp that Sabbath day,
So low that none could miss the way,
And yet so high to bring in sight
That picture fair of Christ the Light,
That, gazing up, the lamp between,
The hand that held it was not seen.

He held the pitcher, stooping low,
To lips of little ones below;
Then raised it to the weary saint,
And bade him drink when sick and faint.
They drank; the pitcher them between,
The hand that held it was not seen.

He blew the trumpet, soft and clear,
That trembling sinners need not fear,
And then with louder note and bold,
To storm the walls of Satan's hold;
The trumpet coming thus between,
The hand that held it was not seen.

And when our Captain says, "Well done;
Thou good and faithful servant, come!
Lay down the pitcher and the lamp;
Lay down the trumpet, leave the camp,"
Thy weary hands will then be seen
Clasped in His pierced ones, naught between.

"GENESIS" AND EVOLUTION.

Genesis is a book of beginnings; it is "genesis, not finis." It is a picture book of biographies, a child's religious primer, teaching religion, not science. Its keynote is promise. The Hebrews called it "law," or "torah," which means "direction." It is full of genealogies.

The Hebrews loved concrete truth. "Nothing is more beautiful than Genesis, nothing more useful," said Luther. In one sense it is the most difficult book of the whole Old Testament to interpret; in another, it is the simplest. Such pictures must have had a painter. It is necessary to get the right light upon them. Luther's last lectures delivered in the autumn of 1545 were upon Genesis.

The first chapter contains a vision of creation. It is neither legend nor ordinary history: it is something better—it is revelation. The Bible begins and ends with revelation. As Strachan says, "The stream of sacred history rises among the hills of God."

Two supreme lessons are taught by this vision: one, the personality of God; the other, the dignity of man. The Bible begins with the majestic announcement that God, the almighty and personal God, created the universe which we see about us. "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth." This statement leaves no room for pantheism, atheism, materialism or any other false ism. The Hebrews were pronounced theists. It was the fool who said in his heart there is no God. (Psa. 14:1.) A Bedouin was asked, "How do you know there is a God?" and he answered, "How do I know whether a camel or a man passed by my tent last night?—by their footprints in the sand." The Hebrew is equally logical. His Bible begins with the majestic announcement that there is a first great cause—God—who by a series of divine fiat created the universe.

The second great lesson taught is the dignity of man; that man—vile wretch and villain that he is—was made in the image of his creator. This means that he was given will, freedom, self-direction, and the power of choice. What a difference between man as he was and as he is! On the other hand, what a difference between Adam of Genesis and John of Revelation. Though fallen, he can rise through Christ.

The first chapter of Genesis is not only a "vision of creation," it also tells of the method of creation. It describes by a series of eight deeds how God brought this universe into being. These may be divided into two groups and be made to parallel each other, thus: on the first day, light; on the fourth, light-bearers; on the second day, air (or firmament) between the waters; on the fifth day, air and water animals; on the third day, dry land and vegetation; on the sixth day, land animals and man. The account closes with the establishment of the Sabbath—the primal institution of the race. (Gen. 2:1-3.)

But science criticizes this picture of creation. From the standpoint of astronomy, geology and evolution, there are, it is alleged, palpable defects in the account. Let us consider some of them, especially the major ones.

First, the objection raised by astronomy: How could light be created before the light-bearers—sun, moon and stars? The answer, however, is simple. The light created on the first day is cosmic; that on the fourth is solar. Chaos is self-luminous; contracting, it throws off cosmic light. It is doing so to-day, astronomers tell us, up in the constellation of Orion and elsewhere in the heavens. God is manifestly, at the present time, in the act of creating new worlds. There is, accordingly, no serious conflict between Genesis and the science of astronomy so far as the creation of life before luminaries is concerned. Moreover, in the Babylonian account of creation, they stand in the same order.

The second objection to the Genesis account is that raised by geology, namely, that vegetation being created on the third day and land animals on the sixth, if the "days" of Genesis correspond to geological periods, there is an irreconcilable conflict between the Bible and science; for geology teaches that plants and animals belong to the same period. But, who said that the "days" of creation stand severally or collectively for geological periods? On the contrary, the word for "day" in this chapter is an elastic expression and teaches "order" rather than geology. In one and the same verse the word "day" stands for the period of light, or approximately twelve hours, as well as for an ordinary day of twenty-four hours (verse 14). In chapter 2:4 the same word, "day," is made to include the whole creative week of six days. The expression, therefore, is an elastic one, and is not intended to teach geology. God chose a method. The picture is set in a framework, so to speak, to teach order.

To anticipate the discoveries of modern geology was foreign to the Spirit's mind. Besides, science is continually changing. Science is continuous, but it is also incomplete. Had Genesis been written in scientific language it would have remained unintelligible until the nineteenth century.

There is a third objection to the Genesis account—that raised by evolution. By evolution is meant really gradual creation. Herbert Spencer's definition of evolution is not so simple. It reads: "Evolution is an integration of matter and concomitant dissipation of motion, during which the matter passes from an indefinite, incoherent homogeneity to a definite, coherent heterogeneity, and during which the retained motion undergoes a parallel transformation." ("First Principles," Part II, ch. 17, p. 296.)

There are three kinds of evolution: (1) Materialistic, which denies everything but matter and motion in the evolutionary process; (2) agnostic, which postulates an unknown and an unknowable as the basis and explanation of the process; (3) theistic, which assumes a God back of all, working out results along the unalterable line of natural law. It is with the last we have to deal.

Evolution objects to special creation—the doctrine of special creation is arbitrary; man rather came into being by natural development out of anthropoid ancestors; beyond them there were humble organisms inhabiting the deep. An organ, it is said, owes its existence to the fact that it has performed its function in the past, not to design;—hence it is improved, while others perish. Evolution does not deny a final cause: it merely claims that a final cause lies beyond its province. Science finds no evidence of a soul.

But in answer to all this, it may be said that the Bible asks us to believe more than science can demonstrate. The fundamental object of the Bible is to teach God and theism. Evolution in the ordinary sense of the term has never yet accounted for human speech, human conscience, or human individuality. It cannot explain the origin of life, of sensation, or self-consciousness, or reason, or of the transition from animal consciousness to intelligent thought.

Genesis allows for secondary causes: "Let the earth put forth grass" (1:11); "let the waters swarm with swarms of living creatures" (1:20); "and out of the ground made Jehovah God to grow every tree that is pleasant to the sight and good for food" (2:9).

Even when it comes to the specific account of the formation of man by God's "breathing into his nostrils the breath of life" it is not stated at what point in his development his spiritual nature was given to him; whether God breathed into an organized anthropoid ape the breath of life and thereby endowed him with human personality and immortality, or into a mass of unorganized matter.

Science and religion are both handmaids of God for humanity. They do not contradict each other, for both are from God. Rather, each helps to confirm the other, "and the science that is true is truly religious, while the religion that is true is truly scientific."

Indeed, it is fortunate that the Hebrew authors did not attempt to teach religion through the medium of science; for science is continually changing. The text books on science written fifty years ago are now out of date; the theories of a past generation are now antiquated: how providential, therefore, that the language of Scripture is not adapted to the vocabulary of the science of any one generation, but is rather the language of every age!

The vision of creation is a revelation from God. It bears the stamp of inspiration. In the beginning God, in the middle God, and at the end God!
—Presbyterian Examiner.

THE ORDER OF SERVICE.

Mr. Editor: It is astonishing how many preachers violate the order of service and otherwise mar the beauty of public worship. It is done so often that I am tempted to think that some of our preachers do not know that the manner of conducting public worship is printed in the Discipline. Probably most of them do everything that is prescribed, and some of them I know do more, but they fail to do the things at the right time or in the right way. A few preachers do first what the order of service puts next to the last. They begin the service with the doxology. And not a few, if they follow the order, do it in such a way as to violate the proprieties of the occasion.

Not long since I read of a brother who marred both the beauty and solemnity of the service by spending full five minutes in turning the pages of the hymn book looking for and selecting hymns, a thing he should have done before he left his study. Another brother, it was said, called upon the choir to select the hymns for the 11 o'clock service. I have known both these things, and worse, to be done. I have known the preacher to allow the organist to announce all the hymns. No wonder children composed of young people sing of the crucifixion on Christmas!

In one case alluded to, the leader was a "superannuate." This fact we suppose was mentioned in extenuation of the brother's failure to properly prepare himself for the service. For the other brother, a man in the prime of life, no excuse was offered. In my judgment, no good excuse can be offered for either.

And be it understood that all this violation of the order of service and indifference to the proprieties is not confined to superannuates, nor to men in little out-of-the-way places. Some who occupy high places are guilty. They are the chief offenders. They set the example. It is but natural that small men imitate them, and go a bow-shot beyond them.

Who is responsible for these things? The people are not. The law gives them no authority in the premises, and they never undertake to dictate. But while not responsible, they might possibly remedy the evil by protesting against the needless butchering of our service. The authorities are not to blame. So far from that, the authorities have clearly defined the preacher's duty in the matter, and told them to keep our rules—not to mend them. Any preacher capable of reading understandingly can give no excuse for his failure to abide by the law. It follows that the preacher alone is responsible. How he manages to do violence to his vow, solemnly taken in the presence of his brethren, I do not know.

These slipshod methods of conducting worship, which, in some instances, I am persuaded, are intentional, are new to Methodism. Nothing of the kind was perpetrated in our pulpits twenty-five or thirty years ago. The commonest preachers among us, traveling and local, did everything decently and in order. Not until self-appointed and self-regulating evangelists began to operate among us and monopolize the business of holding revivals, was there any such thing as setting aside our order of service. But evangelists did it—Methodist evangelists—and they were so remarkably successful that pastors (many of them) who were compelled to conduct their our revivals, followed their example, not only in the manner of conducting worship, but in every other way. I have known some little men to swagger, and drawl, and snicker, and say the funny things they had heard some one else say to the disgust of sensible people who knew what was proper in the pulpit.

These things have tended to lower respect for the ministry, and to cause too many people, especially outsiders and young people, to look upon public worship as a social entertainment rather than an occasion for the adoration of God. In not a few places respect for the house of God and form of worship have almost entirely vanished.

We must maintain the spirit of worship, but that does not obligate us to set aside the orderly conduct of worship; least of all does it authorize Methodists anywhere to set their judgment against the General Conference.

A METHODIST.

PREPARATIONS FOR THE GENERAL MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

By Dr. C. F. Reid.

On Jan. 10 there was a meeting of the Steering and Progressive Committees for the Missionary Conference to be held next June under the auspices of the Board of Missions and the Laymen's Missionary Movement at the Southern Assembly Grounds near Waynesville, N. C. Bishop Lambuth, Mr. J. R. Pepper, Miss Mabel Head, Drs. Ed F. Cook, J. M. Moore, G. B. Winton and C. F. Reid were present.

The Secretary reported that considerable progress had been made in securing distinguished speakers outside our own denomination. Definite promises to attend had been obtained from Dr. W. F. Oldham, and Messrs. Robert E. Spear, J. A. McAfee, W. T. Ellis and J. Campbell White, and conditional engagements had been made with Hon. William Jennings Bryan and Rev. Charles Stelzle.

The Literature and Exhibit Committee was instructed to begin at once to assemble from all our foreign and home fields the material for an exhibit that shall be worthy of a great Missionary Conference, and were authorized to make such expenditures for the gathering and transporting of such material as may be required.

The Secretary was instructed to enter at once into correspondence with the Entertainment and Transportation Committees with the view to securing data for a prospectus of the Conference to be prepared and sent out to the Church at the earliest possible date.

The Secretary was also instructed to make plain by personal correspondence and through the church papers that the laymen selected by the Annual Conferences as Conference representatives were not Conference delegates, but were to act rather as chairmen of delegations, and that they were expected to secure the attendance of as many others from their respective churches and communities as possible. The Conference is not to be in any proper sense a delegated body. All who can come will be welcomed as members.

Miss Mabel Head and C. F. Reid were appointed to prepare a leaflet and letter looking to the organization of prayer circles throughout the whole Connection, including our mission fields, that diligent prayer may be made for the success of the Conference and that through its instrumentality there may come a great blessing upon the Church.

Many other details were considered and decided upon. With a short interval for lunch, the Committee sat from 9:30 a.m. till after 4 p.m. Throughout the meeting a spirit of optimism prevailed, and all over the Church there seems to be a feeling of expectancy and assurance that God will pour out a blessing and make this Conference more significant and fruitful even than the one held at New Orleans twelve years ago.

A LARGER BUILDING NEEDED.

Dear Brother Meek: The Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees of Millsaps College held a very interesting and important meeting last week, arranging for the adjustment of the recent damage by fire to Founder's Hall. This calamity will prove to be a blessing if the Methodists of Mississippi are wise. The Trustees should not think of repairing that dormitory. If they entertain such a thought, the hundred thousand and more Methodists in Mississippi should rise up and forbid. The College needs to erect a $50,000 building on that magnificent site facing State Street.

Founder's Hall was a good building, and the $20,000 due us by the insurance companies will make it as good as new. But nothing less than a $50,000 building will now serve our need, and worthily represent us. Such a structure just now would be worth more to us than an additional $100,000 to the endowment.

Some visitors recently went out on the car to visit Millsaps College. When they saw the building facing State Street they said: "This cannot be Millsaps College." So they returned to the city, confident that the building they saw was far too small for Millsaps College. And they were right!

Now is our opportunity to begin larger plans for a greater Millsaps. To put that dormitory back like it was would be a greater calamity than the fire which damaged it. Because to do that would put a stumbling block in the path of progress.

METHODISM IN JAPAN.

We have on our table the "Year Book and Minutes of the Japan Mission of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for 1912." It is a well edited and neatly printed pamphlet of 69 pages, and gives, beside the proceedings of the Conference recently presided over by Bishop Murrain, a comprehensive summary of our work in the Japanese Empire. All of our schools in that country seem to be doing well, though some of them are in urgent need of increased equipment. The Kwansei Gakuin, with its three departments, has been given government recognition, and is prosperous. The Theological Department has an enrollment of 30, and is delightfully situated in its new home, a substantial two-story brick building. The Lambuth Memorial Bible Woman's Training School is making its influence potentially felt, as is also the Palmore Institute, though the latter is pressed for means. The Hiroshima Girls' School has the largest attendance in its history and is doing a monumental work. The united Japan Methodist Church has 105 organized churches, of which 23 are self-supporting, and 88 partly so. Some of its other statistics are as follows: Members 10,558, Probationers 2727, Baptisms during the year 1089, additions on profession of faith 841, by certificate 48, Sunday schools 315, teachers 1016, scholars 25,036, contributions for church purposes 92,362 yen (the value of a yen is 49.8 cents). Bishop Murrain's oversight and ministry manifestly gave great satisfaction.

GETTING READY FOR THE BOARD MEETINGS.

The exact dates of the General Board meetings in Dallas are as follows:

Board of Education, April 27-30.

Board of Church Extension, April 30-May 4.

Epworth League Board, May 4-6.

College of Bishops, May 5-6.

Board of Missions, May 7-11.

Sunday School Board, May 2-4.

The program of the Board of Education promises a rich feast. The main building of the Southern Methodist University will be approaching completion at that time, and two dormitories will be well under way. These three buildings, costing approximately $600,000, will have no superiors in the South. This fact and the vast assembly of the friends of education will make this particular meeting of the Board of Education memorable and historic.

A splendid committee of leading Methodist pastors and laymen of Dallas is holding weekly meetings, and is working with intelligence and enthusiasm on plans for the entertainment of these various bodies of distinguished men. The unusual honor paid our great State and the city of Dallas in giving us this group of meetings is greatly appreciated, and it is earnestly hoped that these great gatherings can be made helpful to our Methodism.

W. C. EVERETT, Chairman.

Church News

Bishop A. W. Wilson was reported to be quite ill with asthma last week at his home in Baltimore.

It is stated that Bishop Hoss will go to Michigan to recuperate, the latter part of this month, and that he will be accompanied by Bishop Collins Denny.

The Florida Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, now has 32,538 members. There were last year within its bounds 1823 additions on profession of faith, and 3317 by certificate.

Miss N. B. Gaines, the accomplished President of the Hiroshima Girls' School, having served twenty-five years as a missionary in Japan, will take a needed rest in the home land. Her present address is Leesburg, Fla.

At the triennial convention of the Young Men's Christian Association, held in Peking, China, there were present 340 Chinese delegates, representing the most important cities, universities, and colleges of fourteen Chinese provinces.

Hon. W. J. Bryan, who has been spending some time in Miami, Fla., this winter, has been teaching a Sunday school class in the Presbyterian Church of that city. The distinguished Nebraskan is one of the world's foremost Christian laymen.

Mrs. O. P. Fitzgerald, the widow of the late Bishop Fitzgerald of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, died in Nashville, Tenn., on Jan. 25. She was formerly Miss Sarah Banks, of Enon, Ala., and was married to her distinguished husband in 1855.

Bishop W. A. Candler has returned from Cuba, where he spent nearly a month in the interest of our church work. He has had the oversight of the Cuban Mission practically ever since it was started, and its gratifying growth has been largely due to his wise leadership.

It has been decided to establish a new Chair of Homiletics at the Drew Theological Seminary, and a committee is searching for a man to fill the place. The reason for creating this additional professorship was that it was felt that the Chair of Practical Theology was being used to cover too wide an area of subjects.

Bishop R. G. Waterhouse was announced to preach at Oakland, Cal., on Sunday, Feb. 2. Our far-Western Methodism is fortunate in having the leadership of this able and resourceful chief pastor, who keeps himself busy visiting the charges and lending a helping hand to the preachers. Though so recently a Virginian, he seems already to have become a pretty good Westerner.

The Baltimore District of the M. E. Church, South, has had approximately five hundred additions to the Church on profession of faith since the last Annual Conference. From this it would seem that our Church is prospering along our northeastern border line, and if we are rightly informed, there is little desire in that section to drop the suffix, "South," from the name of our denomination.

The annual revival meeting at Trinity College, Durham, N. C., began on Sunday, Feb. 2, with Rev. E. K. Hardin, of Rock Hill, S. C., conducting it. President W. P. Few, in referring to this series of evangelistic services, says: "This annual revival at Trinity College is an event of State-wide importance; for perhaps, no other single event in the State holds larger significance for the life of the Church." This distinguished educator is manifestly right in this statement. There is no telling how far into the future a spiritual awakening in one of our institutions of learning may project itself. Out of the little "Holiness Club" at Oxford, England, has come the life-giving stream of Methodism which to-day washes the shores of all lands.

Rev. E. V. Regester, the pastor of Mount Vernon Church, Washington City, the congregation which is to co-operate with the Committee named by the General Conference to superintend the movement to construct a representative church in the National Capital, states that all the money asked for that enterprise has been subscribed, and that just as soon as a site has been secured work upon the building will be commenced. This will be gratifying news to Southern Methodists everywhere.

Bishop J. H. McCoy spent Sunday, January 19, in Henderson, Ky., with a view to giving our new church enterprise in that city a forward impulse. The Henderson Journal, among other statements made in commenting upon the Bishop's discourses and work, says: "Bishop McCoy's sermons created a great deal of enthusiasm for this worthy project. He is a man of rare gifts, a most attractive personality, and a pulpit orator of great power. About $23,000 has been raised for the new church, and it is hoped that the work will move steadily onward to a successful completion."

A Washington City dispatch, sent on Feb. 1, reads as follows: "Hot Springs, Ark., was selected as the meeting place in January, 1914, of the Chairmen of Conference Sunday School Boards and Field Secretaries of the M. E. Church, South, before the present Conference, in session here, adjourned to-day. A resolution was adopted calling upon the next General Conference for an increased appropriation for Sunday school work, and also one in the interest of the Southern Chautauqua Assembly at Waynesville, N. C."

THE CALL TO GO FORWARD.

Bishop A. W. Wilson, in "The Life and Mind of Paul."

There is another thing. Most of us learn our alphabet of religion in the Sunday school, get a few verses of the Bible, and after that we lay it coolly aside, behave ourselves decently, and think that is all we have to do. There are multitudes of members of our churches who do not know any more about God, have never grown in the knowledge of God, any more than the child in its mother's arms, if as much. "Of such," said the Master, "is the kingdom of heaven," and to babes these things are revealed. But these people do not care to know anything more than may serve, as they fondly hope, to save them from the damnation of hell and to secure them a decent and honorable place upon earth, and as for the rest, they will "jump the life to come."

But Paul was never content with that sort of thing. He wants the Church (and he writes it not only to the Colossians, but to others in the Church) to be continually on the increase. To-day's life will not do for to-morrow, and what you have learned of God by yesterday's and to-day's experiences is not going to satisfy you if you are as eager in the Christian life as you ought to be. To-morrow there are new issues to be faced, larger revelations of God in the ordering of his providences; there are greater things to be done, and they are not to be done by the elementary forces of the Christian life that we command to-day. We are to get access to the forces and increase of the knowledge of God day after day, or the Church will stagnate, the world will sink lower, and men will die when they ought to live.

WORTH THINKING ABOUT.

We take the following from an article written by Rev. C. V. Steinger in the Pacific Methodist Advocate of January 30, under the caption, "Why

No More of the Old-Time Revivals":

"I was much interested in Bishop McCoy's article in the Advocate of Jan. 9, where he made a plea for a more spiritual ministry."

"There is no doubt but what the spirit of Bible criticism as freely taught in our colleges and schools of theology has, in a sense, weakened the spiritual life in our pastors to-day, and also destroyed the power of the Bible as it is preached from our pulpits."

"There is an open criticism coming from a majority of our churches to-day to the effect that our pastors are not spiritual enough in their preaching. There is no doubt but what the ecclesiastical power is lacking almost everywhere, and modern methods of etherizing the Word of God concerning the great Bible doctrines, by promoters of the various isms that are being forced upon the public through tramp preachers and some of our regular pastors, are largely to blame for this condition of things."

"You can never persuade the average worldly man that he ought to be converted when he is told from the pulpit that God does not mean what he says in the Bible, and that it is largely allegorical and mystical in its nature."

"Such men as Dr. Matthews of Seattle have long ago sounded words of warning along this line, and have proved beyond a doubt that the Word, just as it is, without the modifications of the higher critics, is the power of God unto salvation, and the multitudes who are saved every year in his church proves it beyond a doubt to any fair minded person."

TO THE FRIENDS OF PROHIBITION.

Dear Dr. Meek: Please allow me the space to urge all the friends of the Anti-Saloon League of Louisiana to respond to the call of the Headquarters Committee to meet in Alexandria on March 4 and 5. This is an important meeting, and Dr. J. C. Barr, chairman of the committee, has expressed a desire for a full attendance. Let every pastoral charge of every denomination send a representative. Yours for Prohibition,

A. W. TURNER.

Hon. James Bryce, formerly the British Ambassador at Washington, has been appointed a permanent member of the Court of Arbitration at The Hague.

Since Jan. 1, 1913, two notable dividends have been declared: One of $40,000,000 by the Standard Oil Company, and the other, $6,000,000, by the American Tobacco Company.

Mr. J. P. Tumulty, President-elect Wilson's private secretary, will continue in that capacity after Mr. Wilson's inauguration on March 4. Mr. Tumulty is present also performing the duties of Clerk of the New Jersey State Supreme Court.

The four leading lumber ports of the United States are located in the South, and, according to their rank, are: Gulfport, Miss., New Orleans, Mobile, Ala., and Pensacola, Fla. Gulfport led New Orleans last year as a lumber exporting port by 4,000,000 feet.

The Richmond Virginian says: "There are only 6534 divorced women in the United States. These figures show that Nat Goodwin has been done a great injustice." If the Virginian's figures are correct, the whole United States has been done a great injustice.

Of the States of the South, the following are rated as the wealthiest, the amounts of money on deposit in the national banks of the respective States being the criterion by which they were judged: Texas, Missouri, and Virginia. Texas had on deposit on Jan. 1, 1913, $223,000,000; Missouri, $147,000,000, and Virginia, $90,000,000.

In the temperance world, three important things have happened recently: Former Premier Clemenceau of France has declared that alcohol is the most formidable enemy of society; the Harrison Bill regulating the sale of deleterious drugs has been reported favorably in the United States Congress, and the Legislature of the State of Missouri, on Feb. 4, passed a measure prohibiting free lunches in saloons.

Recently 27 students were expelled from the Texas A. and M. College for hazing. Later 466 students of the same school signed a protest and asked that the 27 students be readmitted to the College. The President at once expelled every student who signed the protest, and, on Feb. 2, Governor Colquitt sustained him in his course. Evidently the authorities of both the government and the schools of the Lone Star State are radically opposed to hazing.

Mr. James Bartlett Hammond, the inventor and manufacturer of the Hammond typewriter, who died recently in St. Augustine, Fla., bequeathed his entire fortune of nearly $2,000,000 to the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City. Several years ago relatives of Mr. Hammond had him committed to an institution for the feeble-minded, but he was later declared competent and released. The probabilities are that his will will be attacked in the courts.

Mr. Charles E. Finlay, of New York, recently offered Dr. Friedrich Franz Friedmann, the German physician who claims to have discovered a serum that will cure pulmonary tuberculosis, a million dollars if he will effect the cure of his son-in-law and ninety-four other American sufferers from that disease. Dr. Friedmann's faith in his alleged discovery was manifest when, on Feb. 1, he sailed from Berlin, Germany, for this country to accept the offer. If he succeeds in curing the ninety-five patients, he will not only obtain wealth, but will be hailed as a benefactor of the human race.

If he fails—well, he will not have done differently from thousands of others.

A little volume has just been published in Germany, entitled "Germany's Economic Forces," in which it is stated that German farmers raise two and one-half times as much wheat per acre and twice as large crops of oats, barley, rye and potatoes per acre, as do the farmers of America. It is a recognized fact that the German settlers are among the most thrifty that emigrate to this country, and it appears that it is about time that American farmers were beginning to take lessons in agriculture from over the sea.

A staff of scientists, supported by a fund left for that purpose by the late Mr. E. H. Harriman, have been making a close study of the cause and cure of cancer, their experiments being conducted in the Roosevelt Hospital of New York City. They have been studying in particular the process of fermentation and the effect of foods produced by fermentation upon the human system, and have announced that as a result of such study they believe they will soon be able to not only announce the cause and cure of cancer, but also of all forms of tuberculosis.

The income tax amendment to the Constitution of the United States has been acted on favorably by more than two-thirds of the State legislatures, and its adoption is assured. It is estimated that it will yield not less than $100,000,000 annually in revenues. The influence of wealth was against the amendment, but the great masses of the common people favored it. However, there were many ardent State's rights advocates who opposed it on the ground that it is but another instance of the Federal Government encroaching upon the available sources of revenue within the boundaries of the separate States.

The Fourth Annual Peace Congress of the United States will be held in St. Louis, Mo., on May 1 to 3. Congressman Richard Bartholdt, of St. Louis, has been chosen president of this body. In our opinion, the Hon. Mr. Bartholdt will have a hard time maintaining a show of consistency in advocating at the same time both international peace and the restoring of the canteen in the United States Army (Mr. Bartholdt introduced the bill in Congress to restore the canteen), unless he thinks that by restoring the canteen the armies of the nations will become so demoralized that war will be impossible.

BISHOP LAMBUTH AND DR. REID IN MERIDIAN.

The Meridian Male and Meridian Woman's Colleges were highly favored Sunday, Feb. 2, by a missionary rally conducted by Bishop W. R. Lambuth and Dr. Reid, Secretary of the Laymen's Missionary Movement. Bishop Lambuth preached at 11 o'clock a very deeply spiritual and effective sermon on "Prayer," which proved a blessing to quite a number of young men and women who are preparing for the Lord's work in various walks of life. It will be the means of a closer walk with God for many of these young people.

Bishop Lambuth gave the story of his travels in Africa, while looking for a mission station, in the afternoon at 3 o'clock. This was listened to attentively, not only by the large audience of students and teachers, but by quite a number of people from the city. This was a most thrilling and inspiring story, and will be a great blessing to all who heard it. It will serve to show us a little something of our duty and opportunity to carry the blessings of the gospel to the colored people beyond the seas. Bishop Lambuth spoke very tenderly of the great Presbyterian pioneer missionary, Samuel Lapsley, who was a college mate of President J. W. Beeson of the Woman's College. The Presbyterian missionaries in Africa were a great help to Bishop Lambuth in giving him the benefit of their experience, in furnishing men and equipment for his caravan, and in helping to suggest a location for a mission.

In the evening Dr. Reid gave a great address on "The New Republic of China and Our Opportunity." Dr. Reid not only showed great familiarity with his subject, but also showed a broad grasp and statesman-like knowledge of the situation. Dr. Reid spent many years in China and Korea and understands mission work as few people do. He and Bishop Lambuth are prepared to speak on missions as few living men are, both of them having had such broad experience on the field and such experiences of travel and opportunity to study the subject.

Between the afternoon and evening services Bishop Lambuth and Dr. Reid met a large number of student volunteers in the Colleges and answered any questions they had in their minds to ask. Both gave good counsel to the volunteers. Their interest and prayers will be a lasting benediction to these volunteers in helping them to settle not only the question of their call, but also their field of labor. Many recruits for many fields will be found from this band of volunteers. In fact, one of the main objects of the visit was to find suitable material for new missionaries.

This was Bishop Lambuth's second visit to the Colleges. He once preached the Commencement Sermon for us before he was made Bishop. The students and teachers who heard him then learned to love him, and were delighted to have him with us again, and he in turn seemed genuinely glad to make a second visit. He is a man who walks close to the Lord, and is doing a great work for the Master.

Visits from such men are always very helpful. We thank God for being so favored, and ask the prayers of his people that we may continue to prepare young people to go out to bless the world and help to bring it to Jesus.

J. W. BEESON,
President M. W. C., Meridian, Miss.

GOD ANSWERS PRAYER.

Jehovah, the loving God, distinctly promises to answer the prayers of his children. He that gave parents a love for their children, will he not listen to the cries of his own sons and daughters? He has wonders in store for them. What they never heard of, never saw or dreamed of, he will do for them. He will invent new blessings, if needful. He will ransack sea and land to feed them; he will send every angel out of heaven to succor them if their distress requires it. He will astonish them with his grace, and make them feel that it was never before done in this fashion. All he asks of them is that they call upon him.—Spurgeon.

MISSIONARY PLANS FOR THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

I desire to address this article to every presiding elder, pastor, and lay leader in the Louisiana Conference, as an appeal at the beginning of the year, for a united and determined effort for a real forward movement in our missionary work, both home and foreign.

Never in all the history of the Church have the demands for advance movements in all our mission fields been so pressing as to-day. In China, the present epoch-making revolutionary movement, with the strong pro-Christian influences that accompany it, furnishes the opportunity, coveted for a generation, to give the gospel to the Chinese, under the most favorable circumstances.

In Japan, the judgment of our strongest missionaries and our general secretaries is that there is a great opening for evangelization, which can not be adequately met unless we send out at least four new missionaries each year for evangelistic work, for the next five years or more.

Korea, where God has wrought some of the most signal miracles of modern times, has shown the most remarkable indications of immediate evangelization—a work which has only been checked by the season of distress through which the infant Church is passing; and this period of suffering calls loudly upon the Christian world for wise and sympathetic leaders. The revolution in Mexico gives new opportunity for the entrance of our gospel. In Brazil and Cuba every influence is favorable to a great advance in our work.

In our own land the pressure of social and religious problems becomes yearly more intense with the coming of added multitudes of immigrants and the development of industrial life; and this pressure constantly comes closer to the territory which is occupied by our Church. Within the borders of our own Conference, among the large French speaking population of South Louisiana, new doors are constantly opening to us.

In all these fields our prayers that the doors might be opened have been abundantly answered, and the opportunities for advance movements in every direction, constitute a direct challenge to our sincerity and our loyalty to Christ. It is a startling statement that comes to us from the General Board, that if no charge throughout the connection should pay more than its assessment for this year, not only will it be impossible to make any advance, but one-fourth of our forces now in the field must be withdrawn. In this connection, I would remind you that your Conference Board was so seriously hampered by the shortness of last year's collections, that in order to meet the pressing demands from our own field it was necessary to lay upon your Missionary Secretary the duty of raising a $500 special for our French work. This special, which must be raised this year, I will call to your attention more directly in the near future.

In view of the pressing demands for advance referred to above, it ought to be a matter of conscious obligation with every leader in the Church to see that every cent of our assessments is raised. In those charges where it has been the habit to fall short of the assessment, let our rallying cry be "Assessments Paid in Full." In those charges where the assessments are always paid, let us look on the assessment as the minimum of obligation, and resolve to go beyond it and make up the lack of those which fail. The North Georgia Conference is planning this year to raise a $15,000 special for Cuba above the assessment; and Virginia has for several years been raising more than that for specials. Our more progressive Conferences have ceased considering assessments.

We are asked this year for $9300 for Foreign, and $12,700 for Home and Conference Missions, or about 65 cents per member for our combined missionary obligation. No man surely will be so rash as to assert that our Louisiana Methodists can not meet this moderate demand.

Now let us consider some definite plans for accomplishing this purpose:

1. We can arouse a missionary spirit among our members by the circulation of missionary literature in all our congregations. The Missionary Voice can be widely circulated at the moderate price of 50 cents, and will bring large returns. The General Board is publishing for free circulation a large number of effective leaflets that would set our people to thinking on this subject. Your missionary secretary has arranged to secure a large supply of these leaflets, and will be glad to supply any preacher or lay leader who will agree to distribute them systematically.

2. Let every preacher preach a fresh and vigorous sermon often on this inspiring theme. The reading of such a book as "The Decisive Hour in Christian Missions" (50 cents), or "The Call of the World" (25 cents), will help one to preach such a sermon.

3. Let us organize our young people, our good women, our stewards, or any group that we can get together, into mission study classes. The books mentioned above would be excellent material for such study.

4. Let us now, in the beginning of the year, with the help of the laymen, through the missionary committee, or any method that may be best, carry out thoroughly an every-member canvass, and secure systematic missionary contributions throughout the year. Wherever this method has been tried among us it has brought great advancement.

5. Let us plan for the future by adopting the plans prepared for us by the respective Boards, in making the Sunday school and Epworth League active and educative missionary organizations.

6. Let us, preachers and laymen, set apart a season every day to pray especially for our missionary work and workers, and for the solution of the difficult problems of the Boards and those which exist on the fields.

7. Let us have a delegation, as far as possible, from every charge, at the great Missionary Conference at Waynesville, N. C., next June.

Other methods of stirring missionary zeal or imparting information will suggest themselves to the wide-awake pastor, such as the missionary prayer meeting, maps, charts, etc., illustrative of the work. Your Secretary stands ready to assist with information, suggestion, or in any other way consistent with the demands of a heavy pastorate of his own. He will be glad to have a line from any one who will co-operate in carrying out these plans. He is especially desirous of having information as to what charges adopt and will use the every-member canvass, in accordance with the "Financial Method for Methodists," and what results are obtained by its use.

I feel sure that by asking God's help in this hour of opportunity, by earnest work along the lines above suggested, and by determination to succeed, we can make such a record this year as the Louisiana Conference has never made before.

Yours for Success,

W. WINANS DRAKE,
Conference Missionary Secretary.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL COUNCIL OF EVANGELICAL DENOMINATIONS.

By Rev. Charles D. Bulla, D.D.

The third annual session of the Sunday School Council of Evangelical Denominations was held in the First United Brethren Church, of Dayton, Ohio, January 21-24, 1913. The object of this organization is to advance the Sunday school interests of the co-operating denominations (1) by conferring together in matters of common interest, (2) by giving expression to common views and decisions, and (3) by co-operative action in matters concerning educational, editorial, missionary and publishing activities. Membership in the Council consists of the general, executive and departmental Sunday school secretaries or superintendents; editors of denominational Sunday school literature, and denominational publishing agents. There were in attendance seventy-eight delegates representing twenty-nine denominations in the United States and Canada, with an aggregate Sunday school membership of more than fifteen millions.

The program was of a high order. Among the addresses delivered at the general sessions were the following: "The Co-ordination of Agencies in Religious Education," by Rev. Robert P. Shephard, Ph.D., of St. Louis, and "A Survey of the Sunday School Situation in this Country and in Europe," by Rev. C. R. Blackwell, D.D., of Philadelphia. In addition to the four general sessions of the Council, many sessions of the Educational, Editorial, Extension, and Publication sections, and joint sessions of the Council and Executive Committee of the International Sunday School Association, were held. Friday was given to joint conferences of the several departments of Sunday school work.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Rev. R. Douglas Fraser, D.D., publisher and editor of Sunday School publications, Presbyterian Church in Canada, Toronto; Vice President, Rev. Edgar Blake, D.D., corresponding secretary of the Board of Sunday Schools, Methodist Episcopal Church, Chicago; Secretary, Rev. Henry H. Meyer, D.D., assistant editor of Sunday school publications, Methodist Episcopal Church, New York; Treasurer, Mr. D. M. Smith, our own capable Publishing Agent.

Dayton is a flourishing city with a population of 125,000. Dr. W. R. Funk, the genial and big-hearted retiring President of the Council, and Dr. H. H. Fout, and his committee, did everything in their power for the comfort and entertainment of their guests. The reception and banquet tendered the Sunday School Council and the Executive Committee of the International Sunday School Association, in the tea room of the Rike-Kumler Building, on Tuesday evening, was a pronounced social success. Many witty and true and brotherly words were spoken.

The delegates gladly accepted the invitation of the National Cash Register Company to visit their plant on Thursday. Luncheon was served and the work of this great manufacturing company was explained in a most interesting illustrated lecture. While crossing the Atlantic on an ocean liner, in 1879, the attention of Jacob Ritty, a merchant of Dayton, was drawn to the device in the engine room that recorded the revolutions of the propeller shaft. He returned home and invented the cash register that records the nickels and dimes and quarters that are given in exchange for goods and insures accuracy in recording transactions. The millionth National Cash Register has been delivered. The plant covers seventy-four city blocks. Four-fifths of the wall space of the one mile of buildings is glass. The welfare work of this company in the interest of 6000 employees is worthy of the highest commendation.

A visit to Dayton is not complete without a glance through the factory of the Wright Company, where heavier-than-air flyers worth $5000 each are made in two weeks by the force of skilled workmen.

The days were crowded full of hard work and high fellowship. No man can estimate the importance of the work done at this meeting of the Sunday School Council in the Gem City of the Miami.

The Home Circle

A BRAVE LITTLE BOY.

Harry Parks and his mother lived in a small house on the edge of a piece of woods away out in the country. There were neighbors in sight, but it was a lonely place, and Harry was a timid little boy. His school was the other side of the woods on a cross road, and when Harry went through the woods morning and evening he ran all the way. He couldn't tell why he was afraid; there were no wild beasts in the woods, but still, his heart was wild with all sorts of fearful thoughts.

One dark, rainy night, when the wind was blowing a gale, Harry heard his mother calling him in a strange, hoarse voice. He answered her, but she did not speak again, but he could hear her groan as if in great pain, and cough terribly.

Now Harry was only a little boy eight years old, but he had been used to helping his mother in many ways; so he jumped out of bed and ran into her room to find out what was the matter.

"Are you sick, mamma?" he asked anxiously, going close to the bed on which his mother lay, tossing and groaning with pain and fever.

"Yes, dear, very sick," she managed to say. "If I can't have help I'm afraid I shall die."

"What shall I do, mamma?" eagerly asked the little boy. "How can I help you?"

"I must have a doctor," said his sick mother. "Do you think, Harry, you can go for Dr. Carson? He's the nearest. Will you be afraid to go, son?"

Harry hesitated just a moment, but one look at his dear mother decided him. "Yes, I'll be afraid, but I'll go just the same, mamma," he said, and he hurried on his clothes just as fast as he could.

It would have been some comfort if he could have had a lantern, but there was no such a thing in the house. You see he had to go right through the woods, for Dr. Carson lived just beyond the school house on the edge of the village, and it was 1 o'clock in the morning! It was very dark, but Harry knew the way so well, he could have gone with his eyes shut, and never had he run so fast through the woods as he did that night, and never was he so afraid. But he got the doctor in time to save his mother's life.

"I'm afraid, but I'll go anyway," that was when the brave spirit spoke, and that is the kind of courage of which soldiers and great men are made. "Trust in God and do the right." That was Harry's motto.—The Child's Gem.

A DRESSING DOLL'S PARTY.

"Wait, Janie," Bell ran and overtook her friend, "I'm going to have a doll's party Saturday, and I want you to come."

"A doll's party," repeated Janie.

"Yes, but not like the one Lena had, when we just took our dolls and played, this is to be a dressing doll's party."

"Why, what is that?"

Bell was in a hurry and a little out of breath so her words fairly tumbled over each other, "I went with mamma to the Hospital for Crippled Children last week, and do you know some of the little girls there never had a doll in their lives, the ones they play with belong to the hospital. Just think how you or I would feel never to have a doll of our very own? I told mamma it was dreadful, and she said it would be nice to give some dolls. Not our old ones, with their heads cracked and arms off, like so many that are given, but new ones all dressed, that would really belong to them, and that they could take away with them if they wanted to."

"So I am going to ask ten girls to come Saturday, and each bring a new doll—they needn't be expensive ones—then we will dress them; mamma says she will give us the things to do it with. You'll come, won't you?"

"Yes," Janie hesitated. "I think it would be just lovely, and I'd like to give a doll, but I'm afraid I couldn't dress one very well."

"Oh! Sister Helen said she'd help us. She and her girl's club dressed a lot of dolls for the Day Nursery last Christmas, and Aunt Milly will run the sewing machine for us, and we can do a lot of the work on that. There's going to be a supper, too, little teeny biscuit, with jam and cake. You'll miss a lot of fun if you don't come."

"Oh! I'll come," said Janie.

"I must hurry on then, and tell the other girls. Yes, every one must bring her own doll for the tea party."

Saturday afternoon Bell, her own doll in her arms, was on the veranda waiting for her guests. The first to come in sight was Janie, a doll dressed in street suit and hat in her arms, and another in a blue cloak in her doll's carriage.

Bell flew down the walk to meet her. "Why, Janie," she exclaimed, "didn't you bring a doll to dress?"

"Of course, I did, she's right here," nodding towards the doll's carriage. I told Marle it would be polite to let her ride, because we didn't know when she would have a ride again, and she borrowed Marle's cloak so nobody would know she hadn't any dress."

Very quickly the others arrived, each with a new doll to be dressed. Then what a busy time followed! Sister Helen cut out the little garments, Aunt Milly ran up all the seams possible on the machine, and the girls, each with needle and thimble, all did their best. To be sure, some of them did not know how to sew very well, but Bell's mamma was ready to explain, and help over the hard places, so it was quite surprising how many dolls had been dressed by supper time, and what were left Janie invited them to come to her house the next Saturday and finish.

Then came the tea party, the "teeny" biscuit, with jam, the cambric tea in pretty pink cups, the little cakes frosted with pink icing. All the afternoon the invited dolls had sat in a neglected row on the sofa, but now they came to the table where they were the best mannered guests one could ask, and supper was followed by games on the lawn.

But the little guests agreed with Bell that dressing the dolls was the best fun of all, and the best part of it was that they were doing it to make some one else happy. For, while they sewed, Bell's mamma told them about the crippled children in the hospital, how by the surgeon's skill and careful nursing many were made well, and how those who could never be cured were made comfortable by loving care, and with all they were shut away from and all they had to bear, how bright and brave and patient they were. "Just think of them!" exclaimed May Adams, "and what a fuss I made when I sprained my ankle?"

"Yes," added Bessie Potter, "and I never thought before what it was to have two feet that I could walk on."

"And now," asked Bell's mamma, "when the dolls are finished how many would like to go to take them to the children?"

And ten voices answered, "I would," in chorus. —Adele E. Thompson, in The Child's Hour.

JUST A FEW QUOTATIONS FROM PROVERBS.

Dear Advocate: Great men have gone before us and have thought upon their ways and upon the affairs of life. They have reached conclusions. They have said things. It is well for us to ponder over their sayings. I have in my library, as you have in yours, a book called "Familiar Quotations." In it have been garnered the wise sayings of wise men. I enjoy reading them. So do you. Just recently I have re-read the book of Proverbs, and was again impressed with the many wise and terse sayings therein. I have culled just a few of these sayings, and now beg space in your paper to present them in that way to your many readers. The book abounds so fully in these sayings, that it has been a little difficult to make selections. Here are a few:

"Go to the ant, thou sluggard; consider her ways and be wise." "Reprove not a scorner lest he hate thee: rebuke a wise man, and he will love thee." "Where no counsel is, the people fall." "As a jewel of gold in a swine's snout, so is a fair woman which is without discretion." "A wise son heareth his father's instruction." "The way of a fool is right in his own eyes." "A soft answer turneth away wrath, but grievous words stir up anger." "A brother offended is harder to be won than a strong city." "An inheritance may be gotten hastily at the beginning; but the end thereof shall not be blessed." "It is better to dwell in the wilderness than with a contentious and angry woman." "Whoso keepeth his mouth and tongue keepeth his soul from troubles." "Open rebuke is better than secret love." "Faithful are the wounds of a friend." "The wicked flee when no man pursueth; but the righteous are bold as a lion." "Happy is the man that feareth alway." "A fool uttereth all his mind, but a wise man keepeth it in till afterwards." "A man that flattereth his neighbor spreadeth a net for his feet."

NO KEEPING LIKE GOD'S.

Soldiers sleep in quietness and confidence, because all about the camp sentinels walk and watch. So it is that God's peace sentinels the very thoughts of him who makes God his intimate, confidential friend. There is no other keeping like God's. We would better commit to him the keeping of our thoughts, and he will guard them for us. It was a prayer of Fenelon's:

"Take me, O Lord, for I can not give myself to thee. And when thou hast me, O keep me, for I can not keep my own life."—Central Christian Advocate.

Editorial.

MORAL CONDITIONS IN OUR ARMY AND NAVY.

That moral conditions in our Army and Navy are most deplorable, seems to be the uniform testimony of all who have had an opportunity to observe the situation. After inspecting forty-nine of our Army posts, the Secretary of War of the United States Government, Mr. Stimson, stated last December that he found "the military reservations adjoined by dives and ill resorts of the vilest character," and he further said that "the record of our Army in this respect is shameful beyond that of the Army of any other civilized nation." Another interesting side light on the situation is the following telegram which was sent from Sacramento, Cal., to the San Francisco Chronicle on the 9th of last December: "More soldiers and more nurses commit suicide in California than persons in any of the other occupations, according to a report issued to-day by the Board of Health from data prepared by Statistician George Leslie. The soldiers lead the men with 7.9 per cent, while the nurses lead the women with 5.5 per cent." The Chaplains of the Army and Navy and the San Francisco Preachers' Meeting have also recently made a vigorous public appeal in the interest of the men enlisted in our military service, affirming that the conditions under which they have to live are not conducive to morality, and that the provision made for their religious instruction is wholly inadequate.

This condition of things presents an important problem, which should concern the entire Nation, and particularly the Christian Churches of the land. There are in the Regular Army of the United States about 80,000 men and about 62,000 in the Navy and Marine Corps. Most of these are young and would likely be susceptible to proper religious influences. To avert their destruction by the vices which tend to ensnare them and develop them into men of solid character and worth would be a truly great achievement. Not only because they have immortal souls to save and of the value of the influence that they might exert in behalf of the Master's cause, but because of the increased efficiency it would give them in the service of their country. As was stated in The Outlook of Feb. 1, Napoleon is reported to have said that three-quarters of an army's success in war is due to the moral character of its soldiers, and Constantine, according to some writers, was converted to Christianity by the discovery that the Christians were better soldiers, man for man, than the pagans.

What is to be done to improve the moral conditions surrounding those engaged in the military service of the Nation? Secretary Stimson's plan, so far as the Army is concerned, seems chiefly to be to restore the canteen. The wisdom of such action we discussed in a recent issue of the Advocate. That a well regulated (?) saloon would afford any real relief from the evils now existing at our various Army posts, as we have before stated, we do not at all believe. If the "model saloon" has ever wrought a reformation of consequence anywhere, we have never heard of it.

It is our conviction that the proper course of procedure to bring about the urgently needed reform is that suggested by the Conference of Chaplains last September and by the San Francisco preachers in their public statement. The space is not at our disposal to set forth all their recommendations; but the following we conceive to be the most important:

1. Let living conditions in the barracks be so improved that there will be less crowding and more opportunity for decent privacy.
2. Let a sufficient number of carefully selected chaplains be provided, and given ample equipment of every kind for their work, whether the Army is in camp or is campaigning. (There are only twenty-four chaplains in our Navy, though it is the third largest in the world; and in our Army there are only sixty-five.)
3. Let the Government seek to encourage total abstinence among the men in the Army and Navy, and exert its influence actively to safeguard them from the ruinous vices to which, because of the manner of their life, they are peculiarly liable.
4. Let the sanctity of the Sabbath, as far as possible, be preserved, and let the Government show a due appreciation of the importance and necessity of religion in all its plans and operations that have to do with our military service.

IN THE HANDS OF THE JUDGE.

The arguments in the Vanderbilt University lawsuit, after lasting for nearly two weeks, have been completed, and the case is now in the hands of Judge Allison, who has taken it under advisement. The testimony covers about 10,000 typewritten pages, and the speeches delivered about 1500 more; and with such a record to examine, the Chancellor is not expected to render his decision within less than ten days or two weeks, and it may be a month before it is forthcoming. Whatever opinion he may hand down, there is little doubt that an appeal will be taken, and that the case will go to the Supreme Court of Tennessee, and perhaps ultimately to the Supreme Court of the United States. However, no matter what the final outcome may be, nothing can possibly justify the misleading and contradictory course which the majority of the Trustees have pursued in the progress of this regrettable controversy. But of the whole procedure, the most humiliating part is that there have been found Methodist ministers who were willing to stand sponsor for the indefensible expedients that have been resorted to in trying to wrest this property from the Church. This is a chapter of our history that we may well wish could be hidden forever out of sight.

BROTHER DRAKE'S STIRRING APPEAL.

Rev. W. Winans Drake, our pastor at Baton Rouge, La., has something of interest to say this week concerning the cause of missions, both home and foreign. Undoubtedly the opportunities of the Church in heathen lands are in this day more inspiring than in any preceding period of the Christian era; and it follows, as a matter of course, that her responsibilities are correspondingly great. The truth is, we are merely playing at the task of disciplining the nations—the work that the risen Christ commissioned us to do, just before he mounted aloft into the sky. He is coming again; and how shall we dare to meet him if we trifle with this all-important duty that he has entrusted to our hands?

The Southern Presbyterian Church is said to have leaped in its contributions for missions in a single year from $162,000 to $505,000. Many of the Conferences of our own Church are bestirring themselves and are making a creditable showing. But in Louisiana and Mississippi we have been content to do much too little. We sincerely hope that Brother Drake's ringing utterance will prove to be a bugle blast summoning our people to such an advance as will soon bring them abreast with those of any other section of the Church, both in their interest in the cause of missions and their gifts to promote it. Why should we allow any of the disciples of our Lord to outstrip us in the glorious privilege of spreading abroad the glad tidings of salvation?

DR. PRETTYMAN AN ASPIRANT.

The Baltimore Southern Methodist states that Dr. F. J. Prettyman, a leading member of the Baltimore Conference, is a candidate for the chaplaincy of the United States Senate. Dr. Prettyman once held this position, following in the office Dr. W. H. Milburn, the famous "blind man eloquent." A scholarly and able preacher, a splendid Christian gentleman, and a patriotic and public-spirited citizen, there is not the slightest doubt that this gifted son of Southern Methodism would adorn the position which he once filled creditably, and which he again seeks. Knowing him to be in every way worthy, we should like very much to see this distinction again conferred upon him.

WANTED AT HOME AWHILE.

After their long stay in the Orient, the people of Mississippi will be happy to have Bishop and Mrs. Murrah again among them. Both of them are greatly loved in their home State, and are constantly missed when they are away. Nearly a quadrennium has passed since Bishop Murrah became one of our chief pastors, and the authorities of the Church have let Mississippi Methodists see very little of him. We are almost disposed to complain of the Episcopal College for such treatment. We feel, however, that we ought to be forgiving, as we realize that there has been a demand for the level head of our Bishop in responsible places, where there were delicate matters to be handled. But we trust that his colleagues will now leave him at home for a season, since his own people are in urgent need of his wise counsel and the inspiration of his leadership. Mississippi has too long been blessed with a resident Bishop to get on well without one.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. J. S. Parker, of Auburn, Miss., has our thanks for some valuable work recently done for the Advocate and a donation of $1 to our "Helping Fund."

Rev. T. D. Lipscomb reports that his work has opened well on the Donaldsonville (La.) charge. His membership is not a large one, but it embraces some most excellent people.

Rev. J. W. Ramsey, of Mendenhall, Miss., is a pastor-evangelist who is much in demand among the brethren. Those who desire his services for meetings during the coming year would do well to write him at an early date.

Rev. W. N. Duncan, our pastor at Senatobia, Miss., delighted the Publisher a few days since by forwarding to him six renewals and two new subscribers. It is his habit to look faithfully after the interests of the Conference organ.

The people of Florence, Miss., have given Rev. R. E. Rutledge a delightful reception. Nearly every day new manifestations of hospitality and appreciation are forthcoming. Everything points to a year of success and progress in this excellent charge.

Rev. W. L. Blackwell, of Hermanville, Miss., is presenting the claims of the Conference organ in his rounds among his people, with some success. He is in his fourth year in his present charge, and is pleased with the way in which the work of 1913 has begun.

Rev. W. J. Ferguson, of Philadelphia, Miss., gives us a good list of subscribers, and adds: "I think all my officials take the Advocate. If not, they will soon be on that list, and I hope to send you many more names at an early date." This utterance has the right ring.

Our long-time friend, Rev. G. W. Gordon, of Shannon, Miss., who is one of the strongest preachers in the North Mississippi Conference, favored us a few days since with four new subscribers and three renewals from his charge.

Brother Gordon states that his work is progressing favorably, and that he expects a prosperous and happy year.

Dr. A. F. Watkins, the President of Millsaps College, addressed the Y. M. C. A. of Jackson, Miss., last Sunday afternoon, using as his theme, "The Blessedness of a Good Name."

Rev. L. M. Lipscomb has been enthusiastically received by the Methodist congregation at New Albany, Miss., for the fourth year. This is not surprising, since Brother Lipscomb is a preacher of uncommon force and impressiveness.

A baby girl was born to Rev. and Mrs. C. W. Bailey, of McCool, Miss., on February 6. We extend congratulations to the happy parents, and pray that the Heavenly Father may have the mother and little one in his gracious keeping.

In summing up the amount of money paid for various purposes by the members of the First Methodist Church of New Orleans last year, Dr. Luther Sexton, a prominent member of that church, found that they had averaged $28 per member.

A laymen's banquet was given in the Sunday school room of the First Methodist Church of New Orleans last Friday evening, and about 150 men attended. An interesting program of songs and toasts was rendered and the evening was an enjoyable one.

Bishop W. P. Thirkield, of the M. E. Church, delivered a very practical and interesting address before the New Orleans Preachers' Meeting, of the Southern Methodist Church, last Monday morning on "The Influence of Methodism on American Civilization."

Rev. J. W. Booth speaks encouragingly concerning his work at Jeanerette, La. The stewards have raised the pastor's salary over what it was last year, and there is a good prospect of making extensive improvements on the church building and property.

In addition to those elsewhere mentioned, the following brethren have brought us under obligations for clubs of subscribers sent in within the past few days: Rev. L. L. Roberts, Wesson, Miss., 7; Rev. R. G. A. Carlisle, Arkabutla, Miss., 5; Rev. A. H. Parker, Greenwood, La., 5.

Rev. S. A. Brown, our popular pastor at Boonville, Miss., announces that he has a James McCoy Brown in the parsonage at that place, the youngster having been named for Bishop McCoy. May a favoring Providence watch over the little one and bring him to a noble and useful manhood.

Rev. C. E. Fike has made a most favorable impression on the people at Patterson, La. Sister Fike, who is a bride of but a month, is reported to be a valuable addition to the Conference circle of preachers' wives. She was formerly Miss Bettie Proctor, of Nashville, Tenn., a niece of Dr. G. B. Winton.

The Poplar Springs M. E. Church, South, of Meridian, Miss., is manifestly a live organization. This is doubtless due in a large measure to the fact that it has a spiritual and wide-awake pastor. Both in the pulpit and in his daily work among the people, Rev. John Paul makes his influence vigorously felt.

The district stewards of the Port Gibson District met at Harrison, Miss., on February 10, and fixed the assessment for the presiding elder's support at one-eighth of the preachers' salaries. A delightful luncheon was served to the visitors by the Harrison ladies. Everywhere that he goes Rev. T. W. Adams, who at present is in charge of this district, is captivating the people.

From Troy, Mo., under date of Feb. 2, Dr. Theo. Copeland writes as follows: "I have been here one week in a great revival. Last night our pastor here, Rev. Charles Lynch, while on his way to the church fell suddenly to the ground and died in a few minutes. The whole town is in mourning." We regret to be informed of the unexpected decease of this worthy itinerant.

Mr. Read P. Dunn, of Greenville, Miss., and his accomplished bride recently spent several days in New Orleans. Mr. Dunn called at our office, but, much to our regret, we were out and failed to see him. We were sorry to learn that he had been far from well during his stay in the Crescent City. He and Mrs. Dunn expected to leave in the early part of this week for a trip to Florida.

Aberdeen has succeeded in securing the Mississippi Intercollegiate Oratorical Contest this year. It will take place in that city on May 8 and 9, with the following institutions participating: the State University, and the A. and M. Millsaps, and Mississippi Colleges. Millsaps will be represented in the contest by Mr. H. H. Boswell, who won the medal at the Crystal Springs Chautauqua last year.

Mrs. M. F. Cowan, of Vicksburg, Miss., sends us a remittance of $5, with the following instructions: "Please send your paper to me for two years, and with the other $2 you may send it to two other persons who are not able to take it." We appreciate both this double renewal and this generous contribution to our "Helping Fund." This Fund ought to be many times larger than it is to meet the demands that are made upon it.

We take the following from the Wesleyan Christian Advocate of January 31: "Dr. J. W. Lee is to lecture in the Parker Memorial Church of New Orleans in the early spring. Some high talk the people of that city have in store for them. We have known the present pastor of St. John's, St. Louis, for forty years—our acquaintance began early—and if there is another just like him, our pilgrimage has not discovered him."

Brother and Sister H. E. Carter, of the Mississippi Orphans' Home, forwarded us a remittance a few days since to send the Advocate to one who appreciates it, but who is unable to pay for it. This was a kindly act, and we trust that the 52 visits that our paper will make to the home into which they have been instrumental in sending it will prove a great blessing. Brother Carter closes his letter by saying, "All are well at the Orphanage, and everything is moving on nicely."

Rev. A. S. Lutz, of New Iberia, La., spent last week visiting relatives and former parishioners in New Orleans. While here he paid this office an appreciated call. He reports that New Iberia is New Orleans in miniature: It has a large foreign population, is largely Roman Catholic, and is very careless about keeping the Sabbath holy. He also reports that he has an appreciative membership, and that the year has started most auspiciously.

From the Pleasant Hill (Miss.) charge, Rev. A. M. Bennett sends us 11 new subscribers, and calls for a list showing when the subscriptions of those now receiving the paper will expire. It is work like this that counts. If all our pastors would be equally diligent to circulate the Advocate, we would have 10,000 subscribers before the close of the approaching spring; and Methodism in Mississippi and Louisiana would be given such a boost as it has not had in many a day.

In a note to the Editor, bearing date of Feb. 8, Rev. W. L. Duren, our pastor at Tupelo, Miss., says: "My father will next Tuesday undergo a very serious operation for what appears to be a cancer of the lower jaw. I will be with him this week, and will go back to Winona Monday." Brother Duren will have the sympathy of many friends in this hour of trial and anxiety. We have no later news from his father. We trust that the operation will bring him relief and a speedy restoration to health.

Sister Elmira Young, a member of our Church on the Baker (La.) charge, in renewing her subscription through her pastor, Rev. S. D. Howard, is reported to have said: "I had rather give up not only the luxuries, but also some of the necessities of life, than to do without my church paper, if this needed to be done to secure it." Sister Young manifestly has a genuine interest in the work of the Church and desires to keep up with it. It is the merely nominal Methodist who feels that he has no use for his Conference organ.

In a personal letter to the Editor, bearing date of February 5, Dr. J. W. Boswell writes as follows from his home in Nashville: "I have had a serious time nearly all the winter, and am not well yet, though I keep up and at work. The cold with which I have been afflicted is deep-seated, and I have not been able to shake it off." Dr. Boswell's host of friends in Mississippi and Louisiana will regret to be informed of the continuance of his affliction. We trust that he may soon find relief from his malady, despite its tenacity, and speedily regain his accustomed health and strength.

Rev. P. A. Swann, of Melville, La., continues to persevere in his good work in behalf of the Advocate. Last week we acknowledged the receipt of a club of subscribers from him, and since then he has sent in another. And he adds encouragingly: "I think I can yet do more for you." Brother Swann states that a large congregation greeted Rev. H. W. May, the new presiding elder of the Alexandria District, when he was in Melville on Feb. 2. The territory embraced in this charge was largely overflowed last year, but the people are fast recovering from that disaster, and the prospect at this time is gratifying.

In a note to the Advocate office, in which he inclosed a club of eight subscribers, Rev. J. W. Price writes optimistically of the outlook for the work in the Oak Ridge (Miss.) charge, where he is entering upon his second year. It is Brother Price's habit to give a good account of himself in whatever field the Church calls him to labor; and in the present instance he is fortunate in being re-enforced in his efforts by a number of efficient co-workers. When a hustling pastor and a live flock become linked together in the Master's service things worth while are sure to be accomplished.

Rev. J. H. Rogers, who was formerly a member of the North Mississippi Conference, but who a few years ago transferred to Oklahoma, has been returned to Boswell, a prosperous town in that State, for another year. The report which his charge made to the last Annual Conference was not surpassed by any other, and he was highly complimented by the presiding elder on the success achieved. As a token of their appreciation, the stewards have increased the salary $200 over that of last year, making the assessment $1200. Brother Rogers' Mississippi friends will be greatly pleased to hear of how the Lord is blessing his labors in his present field.

Mrs. J. M. Nabors, of Mansfield, La., has been lending the Advocate a helping hand in her community. She sent us a few days since a club of five subscribers, for which we heartily thank her. In her letter she expressed the earnest hope that much good may be accomplished for the Master in this section during the present year, and especially that the missionary cause may prosper. Since we by no means do all the writing for it, we think that we may without immodesty say that a larger circulation of the Conference organ would tend to contribute to this result, and that Sister Nabors is helping to bring it about by placing it in the hands of more of the Methodists of Louisiana.

We scarcely need to say that we regretted the omission of Dr. H. W. Featherstun's name from his "Valedictory to Brother Lipscomb," which appeared in a recent issue of the Advocate. It was in the type at one time, but by some hook or crook the line was dropped out. However, we dare say every reader understood perfectly the source from which that vigorous utterance emanated. By the way, Dr. Featherstun writes that he is greatly enjoying his work on the Newton District, and that he will tell us something about it in the near future. We shall be happy to learn of his wanderings to and fro, and of what is being accomplished for the Master in the territory under his supervision.

We take off our hat to our genial pastor at Monticello, Miss., Rev. J. V. Bennett, to whom we are indebted for six new subscriptions and three renewals. Brother Bennett, in his brief business note, says: "We have been cordially received on this work. Everything is moving along nicely, and we are hopeful of having a great year. The names that I am sending you for your subscription files are just a start. I am not through canvassing Monticello for the Advocate yet, and I will make a house-to-house campaign for it at every church in the charge." Our worthy friend is certainly setting a fine example, and we wish that it would inspire many others to undertake more energetically to circulate the Conference organ among their parishioners.

In an interesting personal note to the Editor a few days since, Rev. T. W. Dye, who, as was stated in the Advocate recently, has lately moved to Como, Miss., said: "We are comfortably domiciled in our new home here, and find much that pleases us—a clever people, a working church, a splendid Sunday school, two up-to-date public schools, many old friends, and, by no means least in this enumeration of good things, the presence of Rev. W. N. Duncan, the pastor here, and his charming family. Duncan is a preacher; he can and does analyze, and, being studious and spiritual and having natural gifts of a high order, he will in the future take a position of worth and usefulness not attained by many in the Church of God. I love to sit under such a ministry."

Rev. M. M. Black, the capable Missionary Secretary of the Mississippi Conference, has written and had printed a ringing address to the pastors in South Mississippi in which he sets forth a plan of work that is admirable in every respect. Let every preacher and lay leader give Brother Black his hearty co-operation. Both of our Mississippi Conferences are too much like a sleeping giant. Neither of them is half awake to its opportunities. It is high time that some one was blowing a bugle blast in their ears and arousing them to the importance of exercising their unused strength to better advantage. A great Methodism dawdling in this inspiring day is an incongruous spectacle. Let the leaders in every department of the work set our banners forward in these opening days of the new year.

There has been considerable discussion in Mississippi as to who is responsible for the delay in reconstructing the levee at Beulah, and the disastrous overflow which is now sweeping over some of the western counties of that State. But we venture the assertion that no one will dare to even remotely connect the name of Mr. Robert Somerville, who has charge of the office work of the Levee Board of the Lower Mississippi District, with that regrettable occurrence. The capacity and fidelity of Mr. Somerville as an engineer has long challenged our unbounded admiration. He is always at his post, and performs his work with a promptness and exactitude that are truly remarkable. And, best of all, he is a Christian gentleman without reproach, and a citizen who measures fully up to every civic obligation.

Tidings From the Field

Philadelphia, Miss.

The good people of this place have given us a most cordial reception, and we are hopeful of a good year. We are planning to build a new $10,000 church as soon as possible. It is very much needed in order that Methodism may keep pace with this growing city. We have some of the Lord's choicest people here, and by his help we expect to make deep inroads on the kingdom of Satan. Brother Fikes and family reached their parsonage today (Feb. 4). He has been appointed to serve the Neshoba charge, but was delayed in moving on account of his family being afflicted with measles at Trenton. The Neshoba Circuit parsonage is located here because the school advantages are better than at any point on that circuit. Jake Long, George Fikes and Wiley Ferguson hope to put Methodism to the front in these parts this year. Pray for us. You are giving us a great paper, and it should be in every Methodist home in Mississippi and Louisiana.

—W. J. Ferguson.

Tickfaw, La.

The first quarterly conference for this charge was held at this place Saturday morning, Feb. 1, Rev. Wm. H. Coleman presiding. While Brother Coleman is in a new sphere, he is perfectly at home. He is both capable and efficient. He preached three strong, spiritual sermons that were well received and which, we trust, will prove an inspiration to all who heard him. Our people, though somewhat depressed financially, are of an optimistic spirit, and we expect the best year the church here has ever had. Our predecessor, Rev. H. C. Murphy, during his pastorate succeeded in building a nice, comfortable parsonage, with the assistance of these good people. We appreciate it very much. Added to this charge this year we have Genessee, a sawmill town, where we have made a good beginning. At our first appointment we had a crowded house and on the following Sunday we organized a Sunday school of 36 members. Though the weather has been very unfavorable, we have had good congregations and the outlook for the new year is gratifying.—R. V. Fulton.

Greenwood, La.

Things are moving nicely in the Greenwood charge this year. Although Greenwood was without a parsonage when we moved over here, the good people had arranged for us to have a house free of rent, and had provided furniture so we could go to housekeeping. With the good things to eat, which I will not try to name, the table was literally filled to overflowing. Flour, meal, rice, sugar, coffee, meat, lard, and such like, found the way to the parsonage on that day, and provisions are yet coming in. They have also stocked the yard with fine chickens. Our presiding elder, Brother Brown, came to hold our first quarterly conference last Friday, Jan. 31. The stores were closed, and the school turned out, and all assembled at the church for the 11 o'clock sermon. The train was a little late, so we passed the time in a song and prayer service. Brother Brown preached an excellent sermon. At 3 p.m. we met to transact the business of the conference. We had a very good report for the first quarter, and the stewards gave a satisfactory answer to Question 3. Don't you think it is great to be a Methodist preacher? Of course, I mean when you serve a charge like this.

—A. H. Parker, P. C.

Waynesboro Circuit, Miss. Conf.

We are moving smoothly on the Waynesboro Circuit and the outlook for the new year is very encouraging indeed. Since our return from the Annual Conference we have visited every church within the bounds of our charge. The pastor has been received cordially by his own people, and also by members of other denominations. I will say just here that I am proud that Bishop H. C. Morrison saw fit to return me to my same work. Quite a number of the people within the bounds of my charge have visited the parsonage since we came home from Conference and have spoken words of cheer and comfort to their pastor and his family. Oh! yes, on our arrival at the parsonage after the adjournment of our Conference, we found that some of the good ladies of the town had come in and dressed two of the rooms with art squares and rugs and had filled the safe with some nice, wholesome food. The evening of our arrival Mrs. W. E. Hlatt had prepared a nice supper for us and we all went over and enjoyed it with her and her family. The prospects, we think, are fair for a fine year in the Lord's work in this part of the harvest field.—Hilary Westbrook, P. C.

Shiloh Circuit, Miss. Conf.

Dear Brother Meek: I have been to every appointment on the Shiloh Circuit and have met large congregations at each place, notwithstanding the bad weather and the bad roads. When we reached the parsonage on Saturday, Dec. 28, we found that some of the people had made ready for our coming. In the safe were many good things, too numerous to mention. It was 3 p.m. when we arrived and, Mr. Editor, you can guess what soon took place when this preacher and his family found so many good things to eat. Almost continuously since our arrival, the good things have been coming in, such as hams, sausage, hackhones, spareribs, butter, molasses, milk and just such good things as country folk have. (Our poundings have not been canned goods affairs.) The Shiloh people are a substantial and appreciative people. The writer has known some of them for quite a while and is not altogether among strangers. We have camp meetings here every year and in that respect this is quite an historic place. Come over the first of October and take a little outing with us, Mr. Editor. We would be glad to have you with us. I have married two couples and hurled three persons since coming here. The outlook for a good year, I think, is very encouraging for us.—C. C. Griffin, P. C.

Dear Sirs:—After 24 years experience as salesman for your Company, I am prepared to state that the business has become a pleasure to me, as well as a success. I have learned enough human nature since I have been on the road to make a success of almost any kind of business that I would want to pursue if I were to lay down the tree business, but I do not know of anything that I could go into that would make me the money in the same time that I am making now. I clear from fifteen hundred to two thousand dollars every year, and only work from six to eight months on both canvass and delivery. My motto is, "Go after them and get them."

The Sunday School.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

To save our lives from having a meaningless row of ciphers for our epitaph, let us read David S. Jordan's "Our Day."

A selected group of interested people ought to be gathered in each school for the study of missions. There are popular and interesting courses which can be completed in 8 or 10 weeks. Climax this by celebrating Livingstone's birthday and you will have put a fine missionary inspiration into your whole year.

The Bible Class movement of these present days represents not only a present but a potential force. Its potentiality lies not only in its increasing members and the momentum which comes from them, but in the new and improved methods of service that are constantly being discovered. This force should manifest itself in these main directions: the church, the community and the country. Community Christianity is not the least need of the twentieth century.

The charge that men do not and will not attend a Sunday afternoon service and that the Devotional Committees of Adult Bible Class work are doing no good, is disproved by the following card handed all men reaching Louisville, Miss.: "Just a Minute. If you have no other previous engagement, or if you are a stranger in Louisville, come and spend the half hour, from 3:20 to 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon, with the Men's Union Prayer Meeting at the Methodist Church. A cordial welcome awaits you—perhaps an inspiration. Our Motto: 'Help whoever, wherever, whenever we can.' Members of classes that have not yet attained to this spiritual excellence have visited this men's prayer meeting with great spiritual profit.

Are you a negative or positive force in your Sunday School? Listen to the wall of the negative soul:

"My life was a problem in ciphers, a weary and profitless sum;
Slipshod and stupid I worked it,
dazed by negative and doubt.
Ciphers, the total confronts me. O
Death, with thy moistened thumb,
Stoop like a petulant school-boy, wipe me forever out!"

To-day is yours and mine, the only day we have in which to play our part. What our part may signify in the great whole we may not yet understand, but we are able to play it and now is the time. This we do know: it is a part of action, not of whining; it is a part of love, not of cynicism—it is for us to express love in terms of human helpfulness.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

Included in his district, presiding elder H. W. May has a church where twenty-seven years ago he rode forty miles and held a revival meeting, and was remunerated by receiving $1 and a plug of tobacco. We hope he will find that these disciples of the "old school" have grown with the world about them, since the days of rail roads, Sunday and public schools, and that they will have a more hygienic commodity with which to pay the presiding elder's pro rata than the juicy plug. All honor to the "old time Methodist," but to support the Christian minister in this day of expensive living, it takes more than a dollar and a plug of tobacco for ten days' work and an eighty mile ride and we must have sons of a more progressive type than their fathers, or else the world will outstrip the Church in the race for better things.

Sometimes we find organized classes whose members have forgotten who the officers are; never heard of any committees, and don't know anything about a business meeting. Such an organization is wanting in proper instruction, and life and growth are impossible. The president of an organized class should feel called by the Church to magnify his class' growth and activities above everything else, and to this end should have regular, well planned business meetings, and see that all three of the standard committees and such others as may be needed do their work faithfully. Then the class members will not forget who the officers or members of committees are. And by all means they should be enrolled in our Wesley Adult Department at Nashville.

Our Sunday school folk are under permanent obligations to Miss Mary Lou Howell, of Lake Charles, for some demonstration work from her Junior Department for our Conference Sunday school exhibit. The specimens are from the work of Julia Watkins, illustrating the 23d Psalm; Dorothy Ryan, illustrating the hymn, "Jesus Savior Pilot Me," and Edith Leithhead and Minnie Stewart, each illustrating the hymn, "The Spacious Firmament on High." (These girls range in age from 11 to 13 years.) We have not seen artistic work by children to equal the above specimens and we are constrained to exclaim: "Behold what modern pedagogy and the graded literature has wrought in the Sunday school!" We thank Miss Howell for this splendid contribution and invite others to send us samples of their work, that we may pass it on. This will apply equally to pictures and records of any department of Sunday school work. "Let your light so shine, that others seeing your good works, may glorify the Father who is in heaven" by improving the grade of their Sunday school work.

In a note, Rev. W. Winans Drake, our newly elected Conference Missionary Secretary, says: "In planning a thorough development of the Conference along missionary lines and trying to make the secretaryship count for something, it occurs to me that one of the most fundamental needs is missionary education in the Sunday school, and one of the best things the Secretary can do is to co-operate with the Conference Sunday School Missionary in promoting that work." We agree with our Missionary Secretary that in childhood is the best time to obtain missionary knowledge, hear missionary sermons and acquire the habit of missionary giving. Our efforts last year resulted in establishing thirteen Missionary Departments, with superintendents and literature, and four already have been organized this year. More and more are we convinced that this department of Sunday school work should be stressed. We trust that Brother Drake will visit our Sunday School Institutes and work up a Conference Missionary policy for our Sunday schools. We congratulate him on his progressive ideas as to the work of his office and expect him to do something definite.

Eczema All Over Baby's Body.

"When my baby was four months old his face broke out with eczema, and at sixteen months of age, his face, hands and arms were in a dreadful state. The eczema spread all over his body. Anyone desiring to test its value for such troubles can do so without cost, by writing Dr. W. F. Gray & Co., 806 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn., for a free sample. THE people we serve do not depend for their time upon the Government Observatory or The Western Union Telegraph Company; they set their clocks by our trains. Traveling is a pleasure when trains are on time, and the conductor smiling—for civil conductors are just as necessary now-a-days as civil engineers. Next to being on time we pride ourselves on the courtesy of our train men. It is their business to answer questions and help you in any way possible. Our double passenger service is dependable. Plan your trips so as to use these "ever on time" trains and ride on the road where there is never a grouch. The ticket agent will be glad to supply you with a folder showing the schedules in detail, and give you any other information you may desire. Trains arrive at and depart from our new Central station in Shreveport and the new Union Depot in Alexandria. Our freight service is equally reliable. Insert in your orders routing c/o L. & A. Ry. Woman's Missionary Work

Conference Press Superintendents:

Louisiana Mrs. A. C. McKinney, Ruston, La.

All communications for this department should be sent to the Editor at the address given above.

Holly Springs District.

The Holly Springs District of the North Mississippi Conference is one of the leading sections in missionary work among the women under its most efficient secretary. All the adult societies have been united, new ones have been organized, and the field carefully watched. There are three societies in Holcomb. The Young People's Societies are being supplied with the fruits of the work among the Juniors.

Corinth District.

There are sixteen Home Mission Societies in the Corinth District of the North Mississippi Conference. But some of them, according to the monthly Bulletin of the Conference, are not as active as they should be. The Secretary finds it hard to get replies from some and others do not respond at all. But the faithfulness of the officers will result in a forward movement in the work. Miss Barcroft will go with the Secretary through the district on a visiting tour. There are nineteen Foreign Missionary Societies in the district with an enrollment of over two hundred. Union has been effected in every place where there were two societies.

Mormonism.

Every woman should be interested in the warfare against this sect that jeopardizes the future of so many women and girls. Though in 1829 the Mormons promised the government to cease their practice of polygamy, they are still fostering this pernicious social evil today. The curse of Mormonism has so spread as to reach a firm footing in five States of the Union, in that they are able to influence the election of Senators and Representatives to our National Congress at Washington, and through them they are able to influence legislation to some extent.

There has never been a religious sect in which the priesthood had more control over the people of its denomination. To be in good standing in this Church, two things are absolutely necessary: to pay tithes and to obey the priesthood. The leaders of the Church can know at any time how a member stands, as they have information relative to his life close by, and they have power to obtain whatever information they desire as to the private conduct of individuals. Danger is ahead for him who criticizes the church authorities.

The Mormons seem to have unbounded faith in the doctrines of their Church. They say the Gentiles believe their religion is true, but they know they cannot be mistaken in theirs. The missionary to the Mormons has a most barren field in which to labor. They resent any attack whatever upon their doctrines, regarding him who teaches that they are wrong as their personal enemy, while they have the greatest confidence in their own shepherds and trust their hearts to them entirely. The Mormons think they have a witness from God that their faith is right. They do not depend upon a process of reasoning for their convictions. They believe God shows them signs. He speaks to them by voice or through dreams. This is a perfect defense against him who would convert them.

Twice a year the saints of Mormonism gather from all over the country at Salt Lake City. This conference usually lasts about four days. Great audiences are gathered in the Tabernacle and are taught by the authorities. These messages come from God, the people believe. All these thousands are but a great host of people in the hands of an unscrupulous priesthood. Their credulity is the source of the strength of those who have the control.

To sum it all up, Mormonism claims to be divinely founded, and ruled over by a hierarchy divinely inspired; that its people only are the people of God; that the gospel it teaches is the only gospel of Christ, restored through the Prophet Joseph, and all this is known through the witness given.

Wherever Mormonism gains a foothold it is always at war with the righteous laws of the State and Nation. It teaches that the government of the Mormon priesthood is the only legal government on the face of the earth. Polygamy is one of its extensive practices, though it is not as openly carried on as formerly.

The Nashville Settlement Home.

The Board of Missions of our Church has bought additional property in the rear of the Warlike Settlement Home in North Nashville for the purpose of erecting a building to be used as a gymnasium and also for public entertainment and services. The Warlike Home is under the direction of the Methodist Training School. The Vanderbilt Medical Department and the City Health Officer have offered to furnish medical services when they are needed. These improvements will make this the finest settlement home in the South.

Kindergartens in China.

The Central China Kindergarten Association is the result of a deep conviction of the need of such work in that great mission field. It started in Soochow in 1911 in the month of February. In a short while the association included all the kindergartens in Central China and had the endorsement of many leading educators and other interested parties.

It had been wondered by those interested in the advancement of China religiously where the influence would come from that would inculcate the virtues of obedience, good morals, honesty, and all other Christian principles necessary to place these people on the proper Christian footing. The question has been answered by the establishment of the kindergarten work. The results so far have been remarkable. Some one engaged in this work said: "Our children know truthfulness and obedience, and can be trained because they have learned these things in the kindergarten."

The young women of China are heartily in favor of this movement, as they see in it a place where they may serve others, and develop their powers for good. It gives them the opportunity for preparation for home life. It exalts womanhood in giving to her a part in the child's education. It exalts childhood in that the child receives such careful attention.

A vast amount of good is expected from this movement. The Church has the opportunity in this way to greatly increase the results of the efforts it puts forth. All the mission boards of the different Churches have been requested to help this new movement, and in this lies an opportunity for philanthropists to expend money in a way that will bring visible results.

The Association has been regularly organized and has its own constitution. It desires to secure the co-operation of persons interested in the educational advancement of China, of

A BIBLE CONFERENCE OF BAPTIST PREACHERS.

By Rev. W. D. Wendel.

We had with us in Pontotoc, Miss., this week (Jan. 29-30) a fine body of Baptist ministers from the larger towns of Northeast Mississippi. They studied the entire book of First Timothy, assigning a few verses to different speakers. Some one preached at the night services. This scribe attended every service and bore himself in as brotherly a manner as he could. He was treated like a brother. I learned to love these brethren.

When I first entered the church, I said to myself, "You are among a lot of Baptist preachers now, be careful." But when they tackled the doctrine of predestination and one brother gave expression to rank Calvinistic views, I said, "No, these are Presbyterian preachers." But when in a few minutes a large, handsome presiding elder looking man got up and said: "Brethren, you know I am not much on election—" and went on to state the Arminian position, I timidly asked for the privilege of seconding his motion, stating that I was glad to meet that noble Arminian. He denied the allegation, but everything was pleasant. One brother expatiated on the meaning of the word "Bishop" and insisted that they were as much Bishops as any in existence. That brother didn't look or talk like the Bishops I have been seeing and hearing.

One very choice minister was very insistent that the brethren should preach on "Election." Several said they didn't believe in it; others said they couldn't preach on what they didn't understand. Finally, on the evening of the last day, a motion was passed asking one of the ministers to preach that night. He arose and said that if he did, he might preach on Election. I seconded the motion. He remarked that he would also ordain Brother Wendel. I timidly suggested again that I would prefer having the Bishop of —, mentioning the home of the brother who had discoursed so learnedly on that subject. I hope my remark did good. My people appreciated it.

Well, the preacher preached a fine Calvinistic sermon—absolutely obliterating the will of man. He stated to the people that the Methodists believe in salvation by works. He referred to this scribe at the conclusion of his sermon and said that he hoped I would not take his remarks as personal. He said it in a nice, brotherly spirit. I replied, in the same spirit, that I was not offended at what he said, but I would like to inform him that he had misrepresented the Methodists, possibly unintentionally, and stated most emphatically that the Methodist Church taught salvation by faith alone. He was very much surprised and said that he was sorry; that he had not intended to misrepresent our great Church. At the conclusion of the service he came to me and was very anxious that I should not take offense. I told him that I had not, but that I didn't think he should misrepresent Methodist doctrine.

Brethren of the North Mississippi Conference, it developed that we have the reputation among these brethren of believing in salvation by works. I am firmly convinced that we should preach our Methodist doctrines more. The Arminian doctrine ought to be stressed from every pulpit in Methodism. We ought not to allow the people to get erroneous ideas about what our Church teaches. The recent work, "The Life of Arminius," by Casper Brandt, is a fine book for any preacher. I have ordered for use some copies of the little pamphlet, "The Things Methodists Believe," by Rev. T. H. Lipscomb.

FROM THE COLPORTER.

The fiscal year of our Publishing House closes Feb. 28, when all dues are expected to be settled. In order that I may meet my obligations by that date I shall need all due me for books—even the smallest amounts—before Feb. 25, that it may be passed on in due time. I trust the brethren for prompt responses to this modest suggestion for help in a time of need.

We are glad to announce "The Little Hymn Book" from the press of our Publishing House. "It has been published upon the recommendation of the Board of Missions, to meet a recognized need in our country and village churches." It is a meritorious and cheap book of 200 of the choicest and most commonly used hymns and songs of the day, 184 having been taken from our standard Methodist Hymnal and 16 from other sources. Those taken from our Hymnal are so numbered that both books may be used together. It also contains the order of service and 25 Psalms from the Psalter. Prices, in leatherette binding: single copy, 20 cents postpaid; per dozen, $2.00 postpaid; per hundred, $12.50, not prepaid. The board binding costs a little more; prices given on application.

The round note edition is now ready; the shape note edition is promised soon. Now "let all the people sing; not one in ten only." Send to me at once 20 cents in silver or postage stamps and get by return mail a sample copy. Every pastor, presiding elder and Sunday school superintendent should have one for examination.

I am truly grateful to the many brethren who have ordered books and to those who have been prompt in settling accounts. Let this good work continue to abound more and more and we shall have a year of great results. In Mr. Wesley's Conference one of the rules prescribed to promote a religious revival was "to be more diligent in circulating the books." And the same will apply in this day.

Yours faithfully,

G. W. BACHMAN.

FARM HAULING BY TRACTOR.

Hauling or freighting in the South is a serious problem and a heavy task. It matters not whether it is marketing the crops of the farm, hauling fertilizer and other supplies to the farm, or the freighting and hauling of the contractor. It is an expensive proposition.

Farmers and contractor freighters of the South will welcome the advent of the Oil Tractor, the Modern Farm Horse. These tractors will easily and cheaply haul one wagon or a train of wagons on the city streets, the country roads or in the fields.

You do not need specially built wagons. The ordinary farm wagons can be hitched in a string with a cable, a chain or a rope. If it is a contractor, he can use his regular freighting wagons.

One type of these tractors, rated at 40 brake-horse-power, will pull a load requiring 15 to 17 ordinary mules to haul. It is built with two speeds, one of 2-4 miles an hour and the other four miles. When used for freighting it will haul a heavy train of wagons at the low speed and return with the empty ones at the high speed. Or it will haul lighter trains at the higher speed. This tractor is especially well adapted to hauling work, because of these two speeds.

These tractors are used a great deal throughout the world for doing all kinds of agricultural and contract hauling. In addition to this they do all kinds of field work, ordinarily done with horses and mules.

For complete literature on the subject of tractors write the Hart-Parr Company, 330-R Lawler Street, Charles City, Iowa.

Where Dollars Make Dollars!

An Opportunity to put your Savings to work in the Greatest Real Estate Investment Field in America, and with associates of known Capacity and Responsibility.

Can you spare a dollar a week from your savings? Would you put that dollar to work for you if you absolutely knew it was always safe and always busy earning you more dollars? Do you know that more money is being made by the reputable, high class real estate corporations than any other? Real estate is the basis of all wealth. It is as safe as a government bond. If it is properly operated nothing is more profitable. Listen—Florida is the best field in America today for building up great assets in legitimate real estate operations. I ought to know. I have signed more property contracts and conveyances, possibly, in the last six years than any other man in Florida. I have just retired voluntarily from the executive management of one of the largest and most successful real estate corporations in the South, with assets today of more than a million and a quarter dollars. Why did I retire? To further an ideal. It is my ambition now to build up one of the largest and one of the strongest co-operative real estate corporations in the world and my partners shall be the working people of America, the salary earners, the savings bank depositors—indeed those who have heretofore been denied the privilege, by reason of their limited means, of investing in the great and really safe and sane corporations; and have thus been left as easy victims of the get-rich-quick plunderers and schemers. Stop giving up the wages of your toil to the professional promoters, who offer you worthless oil and mining and new invention stocks. You are working and sacrificing to provide luxuries for those who are unworthy of your confidence. Put your dollars in the safest of all securities—in the operation of a great, nation-wide business that is founded on the very bed-rock of American finances. Put your dollars to work in the same harness with the dollars of some of the best and most practical real estate operators in the country. Your dollars will grow—your profits will astound you.

All I want you to do now is to investigate. That will only cost you a postage stamp. DO NOT SEND ME A DOLLAR UNTIL YOU HAVE DONE THIS. If the opportunity I shall present to you does not appeal to you, you will at least have afforded me the pleasure of placing before you what I regard as one of the most remarkable real estate operating opportunities ever inaugurated in this country. Do not reply unless you are in earnest and you can invest at least one dollar a week. I shall send you satisfying references as to myself and my associates. If you wish to become a partner you must furnish me with the same. JAMES A. HOLLOMON, President, American Securities Company, Jacksonville, Florida.

As Well As Anyone

SIMPLY join the New Orleans Christian Advocate Piano Club and let the Club send you one of the superb Ludden & Bates Player-pianos. You no longer have to understand music in order to produce it any more than you do in order to enjoy it. Club members tell us that they are simply delighted and astonished to find how quickly the Player-piano develops their knowledge and taste for music and what splendid entertainment and recreation it brings to their families and friends.

The Player-piano has come to stay—for it is really two instruments in one—a regular piano for those who can play and a Self-player for those who have never studied music. It enables all the members of the family to produce for themselves the sweetest and best music of the world's great Masters. Even a child of six short years learns to perform on the Player in a few minutes. To those who did not have the opportunity to study music it opens the door that was locked (the door to the greatest of all arts) and reveals to them a new and beautiful world of which they had only dreamed.

PIANOS OF QUALITY

Ludden & Bates, Managers of the Club, were the pioneers in the Piano business in the South. For nearly half a century they have studied the requirements of the Southern trade. During this time they have placed over seventy-five thousand pianos in Southern Homes. Your parents and grand-parents, in all probability, secured their pianos from this old and reliable House.

Ludden & Bates pianos are their own best advertisement for they are honestly made of the best materials, by skilled workmen whose greatest pride is the "Quality" of their work.

The Club brings these superb instruments within easy reach of practically every home. Investigate its many privileges and advantages.

THE ADVOCATE PIANO CLUB

Brings this most wonderful musical instrument within the reach of practically every subscriber of this paper.

It is a pleasure which you can easily afford to enjoy, but one that you cannot afford to deny yourself and family:

The Player-piano fills the home with new life and interest. It helps to make home what it was intended to be—a little paradise on earth. It provides the delightful entertainment and the pure, elevating pleasure which attracts the young people to the family hearth and prevents or corrects their inclination to roam.

The Ludden & Bates Player-Piano

The Ludden & Bates Player-piano was one of the first instruments of its kind ever offered to the Southern Trade. It is therefore not an experiment, but has demonstrated its practicability and superiority by years of successful service. For the home that has no musician and for the home with a "silent piano" the Club performs a splendid service, for it not only provides a piano of the sweetest tone, but also confers upon every member of the family the ability to play the choicest selections of the world's great composers. The Club also provides a means by which you can exchange your old piano for a new Player-piano.

Editorial

"Who blesses others in his daily deeds
Will find the healing that his spirit needs;
For every flower in others' pathway thrown Confers its fragrant beauty on our own."

A liquor dealer is reported to have sent out recently literature bearing the statement, "Uncle Sam is our partner." There is more truth than poetry in these words. The Federal Government has long been too much in collusion with the rum makers and rum sellers.

The poet says, "The steadfast only wear the crown." This is true. The Master promised it to those who are "faithful unto death." A fidelity that stops short of life's end, forfeits everything that it may have previously won, just as a ship may almost complete its voyage and then go down in sight of the shore. As long as the Christian remains on earth, he needs to be watchful and persevering.

We take the following from the Pittsburgh Christian Advocate: "The school children of Chester, Pa., by adopting penny-saving accounts, deposited in ten years $300,000, which otherwise would have gone for ice-cream cones or to cheap picture shows. This shows the possibilities of pennies." So it does; and it also shows our tremendous loss from wastefulness. The church people of the United States throw away enough every year upon worthless or harmful trifles to maintain hundreds of missionaries in the foreign field.

The Bishops of the Northern Methodist Church have recommended that the Discipline of that denomination be so amended that no person who does not take at least one of the papers of his Church may be elected a steward, a trustee, a class leader, a Sunday school superintendent, or an Epworth League president. If it is so bad as this for a layman who holds official position to be without his church paper, what ought to be done with a pastor who does not take his Conference organ? Though they are not plentiful, we regret to say that there are some such preachers.

A LESSON THAT ALL NEED TO LEARN.

One of the most extraordinarily spiritual men of modern times was Mr. George Muller, of Bristol, England, who maintained large orphanages through the agency of prayer alone, soliciting funds in no other way whatever. In his interesting autobiography this mighty man of God tells how he learned the secret of nourishing and deepening his religious life and of keeping strong and happy in his Savior every day. He states that at first it was his habit, after having dressed in the morning, to give himself for some time to earnest prayer. This was not without some profit, and it was far better to have observed this season of intercession than to have gone without it. But one day Mr. Muller adopted a different method of conducting his private devotions, which he soon discovered to be far more helpful than the one that he had been pursuing. It was thoughtfully to read and meditate on God's Word before venturing to supplicate the throne of grace. By this exercise, he affirms that his heart would soon be "comforted, encouraged, warned, reprov'd, and instructed," and he would find himself in conscious communion with his Lord, and praise, thanksgiving and petition would be bursting almost involuntarily from his lips. The discovery of this better way of refreshing and feeding his soul he counted one of the important events of his truly remarkable religious life.

In this experience of Mr. Muller we think there is a most important lesson which every Christian needs to learn, if he has not already done so, namely: that nothing so enriches and stimulates one's spiritual life as to study carefully and regularly the Holy Scriptures and to meditate deeply upon the precious truths which they set forth. In prayer we talk to God; through the Scriptures God speaks to us. They are the chief instrument that the Holy Spirit uses in his work, and they search and illuminate the heart as nothing else can. What, like them, can disclose the needs and possibilities of the soul? What, like their precious promises, can invigorate a weak and halting faith? What, like their trumpet calls, can incite the saint to quicken his step that he may mount more swiftly to the spiritual heights where he shall see and know more of God and heaven? There has never been a great Christian who was not an unceasing student of the Bible, and there never will be. No one may hope to win worthy triumphs in the great spiritual warfare, either for himself or others, who does not learn how to grasp and wield this mighty "Sword of the Spirit."

IS THERE NOT NEED FOR CAUTION?

We are told that the way has now been cleared for official evangelism in our Church, that in the future every Annual Conference will probably have a Committee organized to promote the work of soul-winning, and that likely a General Bureau designed to aid in directing the evangelistic forces of the entire connection will be maintained in Nashville under the supervision of the Department of Home Missions. We feel that the most urgent need of Southern Methodism is a more aggressive spirit in the work of seeking and saving the lost, and we are strongly disposed to favor any movement that would tend to turn the energies of the Church more fully into that channel. But we confess that, while such an organization as is proposed might possibly help, to some extent, in the accomplishment of this desired result, we very much doubt whether it would meet the expectations of those who think it is calculated to set revival fires to blazing throughout the land and to usher in a new and better era.

Such a Bureau and such Committees might render a good service by constantly emphasizing the supreme importance of evangelistic activity, and in providing literature that would tend to stimulate it and lead to the adoption of the best methods in its prosecution. It is also perhaps well enough to make ample provision in our Church law for the appointment of evangelists and the proper direction of them. But, in our judgment, there are dangers connected with this movement against which we need to guard carefully. It should in no way be allowed to encroach upon the pastor's right to choose whom he pleases to assist him in his meetings, or disparage to the slightest extent his efficiency in enterprising means to reach the unsaved and bring them to Christ. Anything which would have the effect of making our preachers feel that the weight of responsibility resting upon them has been lessened, would in all probability prove harmful, rather than beneficial, in its results. Methodism cannot do better than to hold to her high aim of insisting that every pastor shall be an effective soul-winner; and we had far rather risk the judgment of the man who is on the ground, as to what preacher or evangelist would best meet the requirements in his field than that of a Committee or Bureau hundreds of miles away.

Nor are we prepared to say that we favor stopping altogether the work of independent Methodist evangelists. There may be men unusually gifted in revival work who are so circumstanced that they cannot place themselves wholly in the hands of the Church for service. Are they on this account to have the doors of opportunity closed against them? In the tremendous struggle that is now on between the forces of light and darkness, we need to bring into requisition every agency that can aid us, whether it is quite regular or not. In our opinion, the law governing these matters should be flexible, not iron-clad. As we see it, Southern Methodism is suffering, not from under-organization, but from over-organization. Adding another wheel is the almost invariable prescription of some brethren among us for the cure of every existing ill. And this has gone on until we already have more machinery than we have the forces to operate.

We do not believe that multiplying organizations will ever re-clothe Methodism with spiritual power and make her ministers flaming evangelists, as in former days. Only the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven, and a clearer vision of Christ and service, can do that. Every church an evangelizing center, with the pastor directing the forces under his supervision, is what we want. We shall need to take care lest our official evangelism shall become largely perfunctory, seeking to maintain in the field by the authority of the Church men who, if left to themselves, would soon be without calls. We frankly confess that we do not like the tendencies toward concentration that now seem to be springing up in our Church. It is our firm conviction that Southern Methodism, aside from a baptism of the Holy Spirit, to-day needs nothing so much as a larger amount of local initiative—that our people need to govern themselves more, and to be less governed from a distance.

ALONG THE ROAD.

By Robert Browning Hamilton.

I walked a mile with Pleasure;
She chattered all the way,
But left me none the wiser
For all she had to say.

I walked a mile with Sorrow,
And ne'er a word said she;
But, oh, the things I learned from her
When Sorrow walked with me!

NEW THOUGHT VERSUS TRUE THOUGHT.

In all ages of the Church there have been men—and sometimes women, too—who, to gratify their vanity, or to gain pelf or power; or, it may be in some cases out of sheer ignorance and self-conceit, have tried to introduce fanciful teachings on the subject of religion. In many cases these self-constituted apostles of false gospels have been very ingenious and very shrewd, and have won very large numbers of followers.

One after another these bands of misbelievers have fallen to pieces in the course of time, but the false teaching which had collected them has been revived at a later time in somewhat different forms by other charlatans and has again deceived many.

It seems as if every conceivable idea on the subject of religion has been broached at some time and fully discussed; we do not believe, therefore, that there is any such thing as "new" thought on religious subjects. Old thoughts that have been proved false and discarded many centuries ago seem new to persons who have not read church history, but if the persons who promulgate these ideas really imagine they are teaching something new, they must be as ignorant of history as their disciples. Of course, there is always something new in the details of such teaching, but the substance of it is not new.

Even as early as Paul's day, some of the churches were grievously disturbed by the false teachings of some of these apostles of error. We wish that those of our readers who come in contact with any of these new-old fallacies would study his very earnest warnings against unauthorized teachings. Some of our friends do not seem to realize that they cannot turn aside from the true Gospel to accept any of these false teachings without sin.

The Christians of this age are not sufficiently grounded in the foundations of their religion. They have not studied the Bible in any careful and thorough way, and they are not sufficiently careful to avoid being led astray by clever misrepresentations of truth. And consequently very many earnestly religious people not only fall away from the simplicity of the Gospel of Christ themselves, but become active agents in the dissemination of erroneous ideas with regard to it, and think they are doing God service. If these persons had studied the Bible as they should have studied it, they could not have been so easily misled.

Any clever person who claims to be ahead of the times and to be a teacher of new and better truth can get lots of followers. Mormonism, Edyism, Dowleism, Sanfordism, Theosophy, Russellism, Ingersollism, New Thoughtism, and a host of other plausible misbeliefs and disbeliefs have captured their tens of thousands. And the cause of Christ suffers great injury.

Truth is infinite, because truth is nothing, more or less, but the revelation of the thoughts of God.

Science will always have something new to teach the world, because man can never learn all the thoughts of God as revealed in the universe of material things.

And every individual human being can get deeper and clearer views of spiritual truth the longer and more carefully he studies it. The spiritually minded truth-seeker will be constantly seeing new light.

But there are no new laws of nature. The same old laws have been at work as far back as man's observation goes. And the same laws that govern matter on earth are at work in the farthest star, as far as man has been able to test the question.

And in like manner, there are no new laws in spiritual things. Spiritual laws are necessarily eternal because they are the outworking of the character of God, and God is absolutely unchangeable.

Neither can there be any new revelation of truth till Christ comes again. The earthly life of Christ was a perfect manifestation of God, and his teaching was as full a revelation of the thoughts of God as could be given to man under existing conditions. That teaching needed to be interpreted to the minds of men in an authoritative way, and He promised to send the Holy Spirit to dwell in His disciples, saying, "When He, the Spirit of truth is come, He will guide you into all truth." All truth that we need to know or can know is taught in the life and teaching of Christ as recorded in the Gospels and was interpreted by His apostles after the Holy Spirit had come upon them to guide them into all truth.

All so-called new thought in regard to spiritual things must be tested by this authoritative revelation, and in so far as any new thought differs from the old revelation, it is false and misleading.

There are no greater intellects in the world today, there are no wiser men, than there have been in past ages and very few of the great preachers and teachers of our age study the Bible as conscientiously as many of the saints of bygone ages did. This boasting that our age is so much in advance of past ages that it can invent for itself a new and better version of the Gospel, is a confession of crass ignorance or of utter shallowness of mind. Nine hundred and ninety-nine out of a thousand of those who indulge in this pretentious talk will be forgotten by the world before they have been in their graves for twenty years. But Augustine and Luther and Knox and Wesley and many hundreds of others among the teachers of past generations will never be forgotten; because these were really great men, great of soul, great of heart, and great of intellect; whereas the modern boaster of the greatness of new thought is, commonly at least, a very small man, a very shallow man; even though he may be quite clever and able to push himself into great prominence.

The essential difference between much of what is called new thought and the truth of God as revealed by Christ, is in the view that it gives of the nature and cure of sin. New thought looks upon sin as partly a mistake and partly a disease, and it is to be cured by adopting truer ideas of life and putting these ideas in practice. The teaching of the Bible is that sin is an awful thing, the most awful fact in the universe, and that sin is embedded so deeply in man's nature that he is the bond-servant of sin and cannot free himself from his bondage to sin. He needs to be "born again," to be "created anew in Christ Jesus unto good works." And he needs to be reconciled to God by the atonement for sin made by Christ on the cross. "New thought" does not believe in an atonement for sin and it does not believe in the necessity for a new birth.

From this it will be seen that "New Thought" is not merely a re-statement of old truth, as many of its admirers pretend; it is a practical repudiation of the most essential truths.—New York Weekly Witness.

CALLING ALL OF US TO JOIN THEM, BUT OPPOSING ANY OF THEM JOINING US.

Many of our Northern Methodist brethren never weary of calling for "organic union" with our Church, and, after the Northern habit of Southlecturing, they speak with a tone of censure for us that we are not more ready to accede to their demands for what they call "a united Methodism." But do they really desire Christian unity as much as they lust for ecclesiastical union and domination?

At their General Conference, held last May in Minneapolis, the following action was taken with the obvious purpose to discourage any of their members who come South from joining our Church:

"Whereas, it is an evident fact that many thousands of the members of the Methodist Episcopal Church emigrate from the East and North and West to our Southland—unadvised by their pastors where they may find our Churches in the cities and country in the South; and,

"Whereas, it is an uncontrovertible fact that a very great per cent of such members emigrating from the East, North and West to the South—drift into other Churches to the great loss and detriment of our beloved Church; and,

"Whereas, our Church in the Southland is able and anxious to administer unto their spiritual wants, in the English, German and Swedish tongues;

"Therefore, be it resolved, That our pastors be most earnestly admonished to take due cognizance of the aforesaid facts, for this purpose to advise and direct such members to be loyal to our Church, when they reach the South, to the honor of our great and beloved Church, and to the glory of God."

And this action was taken, notwithstanding the agreement reached unanimously by the Joint Commission of Federation as far back as January, 1898, of which the following is a part:

"Where one of these Churches has been long and firmly established, gives evidence of healthy and vigorous life, is growing surely and rapidly, and is active and enterprising in providing for the spiritual needs of the community, according to the doctrines and usages of Methodism, it seems unwise that the other should enter and seek to divide the Methodist people. If a feeble start has already been made, the societies which have been formed make slow and doubtful progress, and are maintained year after year by the help of missionary funds; to withdraw would endanger no interest of the Kingdom of God, but remove an unseemly and unprofitable competition, and augment the resources in men and money for the cultivation of needy fields."

In supporting the resolution in the General Conference at Minneapolis (a resolution in the teeth of this agreement of the Commission of Federation) it was said by one of the speakers, "It is an evident fact that there are thousands of our people in the South, emigrating from the North, who are constantly seeking our Churches, and, not finding them, drift into other Churches." This statement shows what "a feeble start" the Northern Church has made among the white people of the South; when their Churches are hard to find, they must be "feeble." And their negro membership is not so great as some have supposed. After counting their large negro membership living in Delaware, and about Washington City, it appears from their own Year Book that scarcely one-seventh of the negro Methodists in the United States are in the Northern Methodist Church.

But notwithstanding all these facts, the Northern General Conference took the action, which we have quoted, to stop any of their members who come South, from uniting with our Church. Do they really want Methodist unity as much as they think they do? If our Church is not a good place for any of their members coming South, would it be well to force them into our Churches by organic union? If we can not minister to them now, could we do better for them then? And if they are not enough at home in our Churches now to find in them fellowship, comfort, and edification, what would be their case if they were brought into our Churches by the coercion of "organic union?"

We fear our Northern brethren, who clamor so loudly for "organic union," wish to swallow us in bulk, while they are unwilling to endure us in detail. They still pursue the old policy of Bishop Ames—the policy of “disintegration and absorption.” But this policy will fail, as it has always failed. Their own people, coming South, are generally too fair-minded to endure such a policy; and, hence, they come into our Church. This explains the action of the General Conference at Minneapolis, which is so utterly inconsistent with the agreements of the Joint Commission on Federation.

White people from the North, coming South, do not like the policy of the Northern Church with reference to the negro; and the negroes evidently prefer other Church relations, for most of them (an overwhelming majority) refuse to join the Northern Methodist Church. Nevertheless, the General Conference at Minneapolis declined to consider the recommendation of the Joint Commission to set the negroes apart into a General Conference of their own; ignored the whole plan of unifying American Methodism by re-organization; increased the number of resident Bishops in the South, and then took the action, which we have quoted, which was obviously designed to stop any of their white members in the South from uniting with our Church. All these acts can mean but one thing, namely: “the disintegration and absorption of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South;” and that result they can not achieve.

Perhaps it might be well enough to dissolve finally the Joint Commission. When fraternity is used for unfraternal ends, it seems scarcely worth the cost of keeping up “the appearance.” What is the use?

We may add the expression of the wish that at our next General Conference the fraternal messengers from the North may give us fraternal addresses and not “maternal” lectures on “organic union.” They might even moderate some warmth of affectionate expressions, in view of the action of their last General Conference, lest some evil-minded Bourbon should say, “He that blesseth his friend with a loud voice, rising early in the morning, it shall be counted a curse to him” (Proverbs xxvii, 14).—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

BISHOP McTYEIRE ON THE DENOMINATIONAL SCHOOL.

At this time when we are being told about Nashville that Bishop McTyre understood that Vanderbilt University was to be only nominally a Church school and that it was to be operated upon broad non-denominational lines, the following extract from an address delivered by him at the Pacific Methodist College in Santa Rosa, Calif., makes particularly interesting reading:

“One word more. It seems not the right thing for a college or a school to come before a Methodist Conference annually to be endorsed; to get, in this way, a great deal of patronage and free advertising, and then to set forth such a notice as this: ‘This institution is moral, but not denominational.’

“Now, when such institutions eliminate the Church, the Church should eliminate them. The disavowal ought to be mutual. Shall we be morally responsible for them and derive no moral revenue from them? Let the religious influence be pronounced and prominent. For this the Church puts her hand to this work. Don’t be afraid of the taunt and the cry of sectarian. You can’t have morality without religion; you can’t have religion without the Church; and you can’t have the Church without a denomination. There must be some standard of authority, some symbol of worship, some specific form of truth, inculcated—and, in a Methodist institution this standard, symbol and form ought to be Methodist out and out.

“Institutions which are only moral, and not denominational, remind me of a union Sunday school in Kentucky. I was holding a district conference in that State, and an old brother told us about the union school. He said: ‘It’s broken down and disbanded.’ I said: ‘Give us its history.’ He replied: ‘I said we must get a school paper—the Sunday School Visitor. The Baptists objected—it was sectarian; I suggested the Gem—that was Cumberland Presbyterian. Take the Star; no that’s Baptist. In despair, I suggested a Catechism, but many and various were the objections to it. Finding they were neither fish, flesh, nor fowl, I turned them out to grass.’”

THE METHODIST PREACHERS.

Many thousand of South Carolinians, when they took up their morning newspaper yesterday, read the appointments of the Methodist preachers and not half of them were Methodists. It is a wonderful system, this “itineracy” among the preachers of the people called Methodists. When a Methodist preacher arrives at middle age, nearly everybody in the bounds of the Conference, coincident in this State with the bounds of the State, knows him and he knows nearly everybody. He has lived and preached and rejoiced and mourned with the people of a dozen or more counties, towns and neighborhoods, his friends are all sorts and conditions of men, and in respect to the people of South Carolina he is a specialist of specialists.

“But it’s a hard system,” says some one—and perhaps it is. When a man sets forth to follow the Master and preach his gospel he must expect to have a hard time, and the man who, with true understanding of the nature of the service, enters it does not shrink from it. Men are not burned at the stake or broken at the wheel in these days, but the tedious, trying tests of soul remain, and it is only the brave servant of God who earns the “well done.”

The Methodist preacher takes up his little belongings, abandons his pleasant home, stifles the yearnings to remain with good friends in a congenial community once in each two or four years and, more obedient than ever was Roman soldier to centurion, “goeth” where he is told to go, and ever the Methodist preacher’s helpmeet, on whom the trial falls even harder, goeth with him. But rarely does a community tire of a Methodist preacher. No one of them lags superfluous upon an unwilling congregation for long. The preachers move, but the work never stops. There is new energy and new vitality infused with each yearly transference at the Bishop’s behest, just as an army is revived when it is mobilized, and every preacher learns his people in the whole field and the whole field of the Conference is, in a deep, personal sense, his people. A wonderful system it is, and it is one of the reasons that the great Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is steadfastly aggressive and unvaryingly progressive.—Columbia State.

EDUCATIONAL PROGRESS.

The beginning of the year 1913 finds great activity in the educational work of our Church. In nearly every State of the South our people have on foot organized educational campaigns.

The Twentieth Century Movement which was begun in 1898 and closed out about 1901, sought to secure for our entire educational work $1,500,000. That, as I remember, was looked upon by many as almost an impossible undertaking. Bishop Galloway, who was at that time president of the Board of Education and General Manager of the Movement, eloquently urged “that the whole connection must rally to its support,” declaring that “the material strengthening of our educational institutions is an immediate and imperative need.”

The objective of our present activities goes far beyond that of the Twentieth Century Movement. Our people in Texas alone will close out within the next three months a campaign of something like three years’ duration, for $500,000, which will secure an additional sum of $200,000 from the General Board of Education, at New York. Besides, as a part of the same campaign, they have already secured from citizens of Dallas, land conservatively valued at $700,000, and $300,000 in cash and negotiable notes. Thirteen years ago the entire connection, under the authorization of the General Conference and the leadership of her strongest and most gifted men, closed a campaign for $1,500,000, for educational purposes. And we thought at that time that the upward limit had been reached. During the year 1913 Texas Methodism will close a campaign for education, the material results of which will be $1,700,000 to found a single institution—the Southern Methodist University.

Our Texas brethren are not the only people who are doing large things in the present forward movement. North Carolina is engaged in a campaign to secure $1,000,000 for the endowment of Trinity College; Missouri, to secure $300,000 for Central College; Alabama, to secure $250,000 for Birmingham College; and Arkansas, to secure $350,000 for two of its colleges. The whole movement seeks to secure for endowment, buildings, and the liquidation of debts, not less than $6,000,000. To accomplish this purpose will require the united prayers and efforts of our people. Would it not be well to set aside a day of prayer for our colleges and the success of our educational movements? Let this day be some Sunday in April or May. Let a sermon on Christian Education be preached on that day in every pulpit of the Church. While in most States the campaigns are led by special agents or commissioners, the success of the work depends in large part upon the pastors.

In closing this letter, I call attention to some words of Bishop Galloway, concerning the success of the Twentieth Century Movement, for they are as applicable to the present movement as they were to that:

“But upon the pastors rests most heavily the success of this movement. What they ordain will surely come to pass. If active and urgent, their people will freely give; if unappreciative and inattentive, their pastoral charges will make meager or no reports. The preacher in our Methodism is the key to every situation, the determining factor in every equation, the condition of every success or failure. My earnest appeal, therefore, is to the noble men who stand next to the people, and to whom they look for instruction and leadership. If their hearts are thoroughly enlisted in this magnificent movement, we may at once rejoice in a victory already assured. I would solicit every pastor to at once begin to lay plans for a systematic canvass of his charge, with the purpose of securing at least an average of one dollar per member, as a special thank-offering for Christian Education. Of course some wealthy churches will increase this amount to a hundredfold or more.

“To pastors, presiding elders, teachers, editors, connectional officers, and lay members, I appeal for hearty and continued co-operation. And out of this widespread educational quickening I pray there may come throughout the connection a great spiritual awakening, that will demonstrate as in the early days, the converting and sanctifying power of a God ‘mighty to save.’”—Stonewall Anderson.

It is stated that a $50,000 dormitory will soon be erected at Emory College (Oxford, Ga.), and that it will be named for Bishop A. G. Haygood.

Bishop Thomas F. Gailor, of Tennessee (Protestant Episcopal), has been chosen to preach the baccalaureate sermon at Columbia University this year.

The Florida Christian Advocate will hereafter be published in Lakeland instead of Arcadia. Rev. D. B. Sweat, the present editor, is giving his constituents a newsy and helpful paper.

Bishop E. R. Hendrix spent Sunday, February 2, in El Paso, Texas, and was given a public reception by the Methodists of that city on the Monday evening following.

Seth Ward College, at Plainview, Texas, reports a gracious revival, in which there were 70 conversions and reclamations, and four persons offered themselves for special life-work.

Rev. H. G. Hawkins, the Associate President of the Memphis Conference Female Institute, at Jackson, Tenn., preached to a large congregation at Henderson, Tenn., on Sunday, Jan. 26, using as his theme, "Christian Education."

The health of Bishop H. C. Morrison yet lacks much of being robust, and his physicians still insist that he must be careful not to overtax his strength. We trust that as winter speeds away and balmy spring approaches he will recuperate more rapidly.

Bishop James Atkins recently spent several days in Orlando, Fla., where he was the guest of his relatives, Colonel and Mrs. J. T. Watkins. Just prior to going to Florida, the Bishop was in Texas for some time, campaigning for the Southern Methodist University at Dallas.

The Virginia Conference of the M. E. Church, South, raised last year for home and foreign missions $142,000. Of this amount $90,000 was raised through the direct operation of the churches, and the remainder through the women's societies. This showing places the Methodists of the Old Dominion in the lead; and it ought to serve as a rebuke to the Conferences in the Connection that are even failing to meet their very moderate assessments.

Rev. H. M. Ellis, the Field Secretary of the Memphis Tri-State Hospital, spent Sunday, January 19, in Jackson, Tenn., preaching twice and ably presenting the claims of that projected enterprise. The members of the Hayes Street Church subscribed enough to assure them a memorial room in the Hospital at a cost of $1000, and Rev. H. G. Hawkins, the Associate President of the Memphis Conference Female Institute, pledged for himself and that institution $250 for the furnishing of a double room.

The American University of the Methodist Episcopal Church, which is located at Washington City, is reported to have at this time on the campus two magnificent marble buildings, which have been erected at a cost of $500,000. The present endowment is $650,000, and an effort is being made to increase it to at least $1,500,000. This institution has not yet opened for work, but it is claimed that over 1500 students have already applied for admission. It is stated that Chancellor Franklin Hamilton has submitted to the Board of Trustees a plan for such a system of education as "will eliminate the American University from competition with all other universities and give it a special and distinctive sphere of action of the broadest scope."

Rev. J. B. Culpepper, the well-known evangelist, has been elected Field Agent for the Anastasia Assembly at St. Augustine, Fla. This property consists of 141 acres of land (there is a prospect of securing 60 acres more), with a beach-front of three-quarters of a mile. Two artesian wells have been sunk, a contract has been let for a hotel and auditorium to cost $26,000, and it is stated that the city street car line will be extended to the grounds within sixty days. This is a Methodist enterprise, and has been given the sanction of the Florida Conference.

Dr. F. P. Culver, of Fort Worth, Texas, preached the sermon on the occasion of the dedication of our church in Dalhart, Texas, on Sunday, Jan. 26, and filled the same pulpit again at the evening hour. Referring to his discourses, Rev. J. W. Mayne, the pastor, says: "We have heard many great preachers in and out of Texas, and a few of national fame, but we have never heard Dr. Culver's preaching surpassed." This report of the Doctor's pulpit work is in keeping with the reputation that he had in Alabama and East Mississippi before he went West.

The fifteenth annual session of the Atlanta (Ga.) Bible Conference, which was instituted by Dr. L. G. Broughton when pastor of the Baptist Tabernacle in that city, will be held from the 7th to the 16th of March. The following are some of the eminent ministers who have places on the program: Dr. James M. Gray, of Chicago; Dr. J. I. Vance, of Nashville, Tenn.; Dr. W. M. Morrison, of Africa, and Dr. Lacy Moffett, of China. This Conference is interdenominational. Persons desiring further information concerning it should write Rev. John W. Ham, 78 Luckie Street, Atlanta, Ga.

The Cumberland Presbyterian Church is not extinct yet, as is shown by the following dispatch sent out from Nashville, Tenn., on February 2: "The 103rd anniversary of the founding of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church was observed here to-day by the delivery of appropriate sermons in the local churches of that denomination. This Church was started in Dickson County, Tennessee, by three ministers. It had 185,000 members prior to the split caused by the attempt to unite it with the Northern Presbyterian Church, and, according to statistics given by Rev. J. B. Reagin in his anniversary sermon to-day, now has about 100,000 communicants."

A TRIBUTE TO MRS. E. L. McGEHEE.

It was the writer's privilege to know Mrs. E. L. McGehee the last fifteen years of her life, and to know her was to love her. She was the embodiment of refinement, gentleness, sympathy, hospitality, and sweetness of character. It was a blessed privilege to be a guest in her home, the doors of which were always thrown open to her friends, and nothing was too much trouble for their comfort and entertainment. The young people took possession of her little cottage at the Seashore Camp Ground every summer and she bade them welcome to the house and all it contained.

In the fifteen years that I was intimately associated with Mrs. McGehee, I have never heard her speak an unkind word of any one, but rather condone for any and all faults. Neither have I ever heard aught against her, for all who knew her loved her, sought her for counsel and sympathy, and left her cheered by her optimism, for she saw the silver lining to every cloud. The secret of her beautiful life was her crucifixion of self—her life was spent for others. She was of a modest, retiring disposition, seeking no reward for her loving ministrations but the "she hath done what she could" of her Lord. She fell asleep in the arms of Jesus on Jan. 10th, and the last word on her lips was "Heaven."

For a beautiful life spent in the service of Christ, her many friends thank the Heavenly Father, and pray that he may wipe away all tears from the sorrow-stricken husband and sons.

MRS. GEROGE S. BROWN.

BISHOP MURRAH INTERVIEWED.

Bishop William B. Murrah of the Methodist Church was in Memphis yesterday, Feb. 13, en route to his home at Jackson, Miss., after a tour of the mission fields of his Church in China, Japan, and Korea, extending over a period of six months.

Bishop Murrah left this country last July, going by way of San Francisco and Honolulu to Shanghai, China, which is the center of the religious activities of the Methodist Church in the East. He was sent out by the Church on a special inspection trip. He had just returned a short while previously from a general inspection of all of the foreign mission fields of the Church, during which he encircled the globe and visited a score of countries.

The religious situation in Japan, Korea and China is encouraging, says Bishop Murrah. All of these countries are favorably inclined toward Christianity even though they may not actually profess a belief in its teachings. They have associated Christianity with all the advantages that they have gained from western civilization and they have the greatest respect for it.

Japanese Are Not Religious.

The Japanese, he says, are the hardest to win to Christianity on account of their indifference. They are the most polite people in the world, he says, but are not interested in religious matters as much as are the Chinese. They are not tending to return to their old religious faith of Shintoism, however.

The Chinese are in the midst of a great awakening, he says. "Since my visit there a little more than a year before, almost all queues have disappeared," he said.

"What has become of them?" asked the reporter.

"I refuse to be involved in any controversy about women's dress," he said, "but I suspect that they are now serving as borrowed plumage in Europe and America," replied the Bishop.

The Chinese flock to religious meetings so that the buildings are totally inadequate to hold the crowds. On several occasions he spoke through an interpreter to these overflow meetings.

Chinese Have Good Public Schools.

The Chinese believe that Christianity is responsible for the greater part of their awakening and the present administration is very favorable to it, and although the president, Yuan Shai Kai, is not a professed Christian, he is ready to do anything to aid its propagation in the new republic.

The Bishop says that there is evident in all parts of the republic an eagerness on the part of the people to fit themselves for their newly acquired rights of citizenship. The public school movement is one of the most pronounced in the republic. Bishop Murrah was present at an election in China which, he says, is in many respects not different from one in this country. It seems a foregone conclusion that Yuan Shai Kai will be re-elected president, says Bishop Murrah.

In Japan there is much unrest over the high rate of taxation. There is a political conflict between the civil and the military idea throughout the country. The tremendous armament Japan is carrying is too great a burden on the people.

The Korean situation is much improved, according to the Bishop. The Koreans are beginning to recognize what the Japanese have done for them in the way of material development. Railroads are being built everywhere and the country is progressing rapidly. The gospel is being preached with much success in Korea. The people are receptive.

Bishop Murrah spent the Christmas holidays in Manila and afterward traveled over the Philippines. He says that in his opinion the islands are not yet ready for independence. The United States, he says, has incurred obligations there which it cannot lightly shake off. He sailed from Manila to Shanghai and there took a steamer for San Francisco. He was accompanied on the trip by Mrs. Murrah.—Memphis Commercial Appeal.

The new Congressman from Arkansas, Hon. Sam M. Taylor, is a native Mississippian, and was reared near Verona.

New York City contributed more than half of the money collected by the American Red Cross Society for the flood sufferers in the Mississippi Valley last year. The total amount of that city's gifts was $71,600. The Society raised, in all, $125,000.

Prof. Henri Bergson, the professor of philosophy of the College de France, who is now in the United States, was complimented on Feb. 3 by having the honorary degree of Doctor of Letters conferred upon him by the trustees of Columbia University.

The South Carolina Legislature recently, by a vote of 70 to 46, petitioned Congress to take steps to effect the repeal of the Fifteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution, which gives negroes the right to vote.

Postmaster General Hitchcock, in his last annual report, recommended that the first-class letter rate be reduced from two cents per ounce to one cent per ounce. England has such a rate now, and doubtless this country will also soon obtain it.

The school of journalism, which was opened in connection with Columbia College last year, has in its opening class 104 students, 11 of whom are women. This class will be graduated next June and given the degree of Bachelor of Literature in Journalism.

The Merchant of Venice has been barred from all public schools in New York City where children of Jewish parents are in the majority. This action was taken recently by the New York Board of Education, and was in response to the sentiment among the Jews against allowing their children to study Shakespeare's interpretation of the character of the Jew as portrayed in the character, Shylock.

The Webb Bill, embracing practically the same principles as were contained in the Kenyon-Shepard Bill, was passed in the U. S. Congress last week by both Houses. The measure is intended to protect States that have prohibition laws from wholesale dealers in license States, who ship quantities of liquor to illegal dealers in the prohibition States. The bill does not prevent wholesale houses from shipping liquor to the individual consumer.

The Mary Andrews Clark Home, a hotel erected by former United States Senator William A. Clark, in Los Angeles, Cal., at the cost of $250,000,000, to be used as a shelter for working girls, was dedicated on Feb. 8, Senator Clark being present and participating in the ceremonies. The home will be under the management of the Y. W. C. A. and board will be furnished to all girls whose weekly wages range from $5 to $10, at $4 per week.

That New Orleans is not exclusively an American city is attested by the number of foreign voters who have registered here. The tabulation is as follows: Austria, 137; Belgium, 12; Barvaria, 11; Brazil, 4; Canada, 74; Cuba, 20; Denmark, 20; England, 185; France, 421; Greece, 18; Germany, 1079; Holland, 11; Hungary, 22; Ireland, 497; Italy, 676; Jamaica, 8; Mexico, 15; Norway, 31; Nova Scotia, 5; Poland, 7; Portugal, 9; Russia, 126; Roumania, 11; Spain, 55; Scotland, 32; Sweden, 39; Switzerland, 45; Turkey, 20;

Wales, 7; West Indies (other than Cuba and Jamaica), 12; Venezuela, 1; Africa, 1; Morocco, 1; Peru, 1; Argentine, 1; Guatemala, 1; Australia, 1; Honduras, 5; New Zealand, 2; at sea, 3.

A writer in Current Opinion recently stated that the damage done annually in this country by coal smoke amounts to $600,000,000. In order to solve the smoke nuisance, the University of Pennsylvania recently established a laboratory and employed twenty-five expert chemists to study this menace to industrial life. The United States Bureau of Mines is conducting similar experiments, as also is the city of Chicago. It is estimated that in Chicago alone, $50,000,000 worth of damage is done annually by soot and smoke.

The Southern Highway Association is now in session in Asheville, N. C. The most important question before that body is the proposed construction of a trans-continental highway through the South. Such a road would parallel the southern boundary of the United States and extend from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean. The Association purposes to ask Congress to appropriate $25,000,000 toward the enterprise, and then to secure appropriations from each State through which it would pass.

The Hermitage, the historic home of former President Andrew Jackson, which is located at Nashville, Tenn., is figuring in a considerable amount of controversy just now. A Confederate Soldiers' Home is now located on the 400-acre tract that comprises the Jackson homestead. The Ladies' Hermitage Association want 200 acres of it for a Jackson Park. The promoters of the Knapp School of Country Life are asking the Tennessee Legislature to set it aside for the use of that school. What will be done with it remains to be seen.

It is interesting to note the difference between the income of the President of the United States and the President of France. President-elect Wilson will receive $50,000 salary and $25,000 for traveling expenses, making a total of $75,000 annually. President-elect Poincaré will receive $120,000 salary and $120,000 for traveling expenses, making a total of $240,000 annually. Mr. Wilson will retain office for four years, and Mr. Poincaré for seven years. Mr. Wilson will receive a total of $300,000, and Mr. Poincaré a total of $1,680,000.

A small band of G. A. R. men recently adopted resolutions requesting the Confederate soldiers who may participate in the joint reunion of the survivors of the Battle of Gettysburg, which is scheduled to take place on the 50th anniversary of that battle, to desist from wearing the gray uniform of the Confederacy. The spirit of narrowness and bitterness thus manifested by these Northern veterans has been roundly censured by the press of both the North and the South. It certainly would not look like the Confederate veterans were a part of the celebration, unless the gray uniform was in evidence.

THE ORDER OF SERVICE AGAIN.

Mr. Editor: I desire to enter my hearty approval of the article on "The Order of Service," in last week's Advocate, by "A Methodist." It appears to me that our ministry would do well to pay attention to a mild criticism of this kind.

Using that article as a kind of text, I want to say that our preacher observes fairly well the order of service in the public worship, but when he comes to administer the sacraments, or to receive members into the Church, he generally follows his own plan, disregarding altogether the directions of the Discipline.

Every few weeks my attention is called to the way he does things. In celebrating the Lord's Supper, he will omit a large part of the form, and sometimes he will leave out everything, including the invitation, except the prayer of consecration, and I wonder if he does not want to leave that out. After the congregation has been served, he will dismiss them as briefly as possible.

I have seen him baptize a lot of children before he had the prayer, and so butcher the service as to make it a source of pain. One fine Sunday he received some fifteen children into the Church, many of whom had to be baptized, with a hurried and abbreviated form, and, as a matter of course, its effect was lost and a great opportunity passed by.

I am led to believe that he is not the only preacher who does things thus. I believe in the old order—in going by the "book," and walking in the paths that are marked out for us by our "Dear Fathers and Brethren."

ANOTHER METHODIST.

A FURTHER WORD FROM BROTHER BINGHAM.

Dear Brother Meek: You stated in your editorial last week my views more fully than I expressed them, and better than I could have done. I had no thought of making the suggested $50,000 building the home of the Preparatory Department. That structure on the magnificent site facing State Street should be our main college building, and should be located and built with a view to making it the center of the future plans for our wonderful school. As to this, I do not believe there will be any dissenting voice among the Trustees or among Mississippi Methodists. Only the money is needed and surely that can be had.

NEWTON DISTRICT CONFERENCE AND MISSIONARY INSTITUTE.

This meeting will be held at Lake, beginning on Tuesday, April 8, 3 p.m., and closing on Friday following. Thursday, April 10, will be devoted exclusively to a Missionary Institute.

The last District Conference elected First Church, Laurel, as the place for this one; but because of the uncertainty about the time of the completion of the new church there and the consequent embarrassment that might result, the pastor and people at First Church ask that it be put at another place and the pastor and people at Lake gladly take it and cordially invite us.

Let the preachers in charge carefully attend to the election of delegates according to our rule (see Journal of Annual Conference, page 5), that every congregation may be duly represented.

ONE CASE OF THE MANY.

By Rev. H. M. Ellis.

The following incident, which actually occurred in Memphis, was related to me by the policeman himself, and I have merely put it in the present form:

One morning the big, blue-coated policeman on duty at the Union Depot saw a little woman bending over the wee babe in her lap and weeping as if her heart would break. He stopped for a moment to take in the situation and make sure of the need. Then, stepping quietly to her, he gently touched her arm, and, lifting his hat, said:

"Excuse me, madam, but I see you are in great distress, and I would be glad to help you if I could. Is there anything I can do for you?"

She lifted her face to his, the tears streaming down her cheeks, and sobbed:

"Oh! sir, I am just passing through the city on my way home, and must wait till evening for my next train. I don't know a soul here. My baby has been taken violently ill, and is just burning up with fever. I am so afraid he will die before I can get home."

The big officer looked at the little fellow's flushed, drawn face and saw there was no mistake about his being very sick. He thought for a moment of the little tot in his own home, whose laughter was such music to his heart, and whom he so loved to bounce on his knee. Then, as he laid his hand gently on the scorching little brow, he said earnestly:

"If I were you, madam, I'd take the baby to the hospital at once."

"Oh!" she cried, the anguish on her face deepening and the tears gushing forth afresh, "I have no money to pay for hospital treatment. I have barely enough to pay my fare home."

"That will not make any difference, madam," the policeman answered assuringly. "Just take the baby to the Catholic Hospital and tell them your circumstances, and they will not charge you a cent."

"But I'm a Methodist," she said, her face brightening as a new hope came to her. "Why not take my baby to a Methodist hospital?"

For a moment the big officer's glance dropped before her appealing eyes, and he moved from one foot to the other in embarrassment. For once he was ashamed of his Church. It had made no preparation for this emergency of its own member, and he flinched before the enforced comparison. Hesitatingly and sadly he replied:

"I am a Methodist myself, madam, and I am ashamed to tell you that there isn't a Methodist hospital in our city, nor anywhere else in the South, so far as I know." He did not know of our Wesley Memorial Hospital in Atlanta, Ga., and the Homer Toberman Hospital in Los Angeles, Cal., the former with room for about fifty, the latter for sixteen.

The conversation ended by the officer telephoning the hospital of the case. In a short time the ambulance was at the depot and the mother and baby were borne swiftly to where help awaited. Three good Sisters met them at the door, one taking the baby while the others cared for the mother. Soon baby was on a clean, soft bed, in a cozy, white room, and the doctor and nurses were giving him every attention. A telegram was sent to the father explaining the necessary delay, and at night a cot was placed by baby's bed so that mother could lie by her little darling.

Now, do you wonder that when that good Methodist woman in that good Catholic hospital knelt that night by her baby's bed to pray, as was her habit, a new petition, which she had never before dreamed would be a part of her prayer, swelled from her grateful heart and rose from her lips: "God bless the good Catholic people who built this hospital, and those who have been so loving and kind to baby and me!" And it was right for her to pray as she did. She would have been unworthy of the kindness received had she done less.

For days the little life hovered in the balance.

Then treatment and care won. After nearly three weeks, the happy mother, with her weak but restored babe, was able to go home. In a few weeks it was learned that the father and mother and three children had joined the Catholic Church—the Church which went to their relief in the time of their distress.

And this is but one case out of thousands. With more or less variation, such instances are being repeated constantly. Even the pastors of our Methodist Church have, not infrequently, to apply to our friends of the Catholic Church for hospital service for themselves or some loved member of the family, and many times they are unable to make due compensation for the treatment and care.

It is a shame that Southern Methodism has no hospital in all this great section. She may be sure that the Church which reaches forth a helping hand to men in the day of their distress is the Church which will grip their hearts, win their loyalty and receive their personal and financial support. If Methodism allows some other Church to care for her sick, injured, and afflicted, she deserves to lose them.

Hospitals are coming more and more into demand with the wonderful development of medical science and surgical skill. They afford better and safer treatment, and at less expense, than that of the ordinary home. For a Church the hospital is such an expression of sympathy and desire to relieve as nothing else affords. It is a living demonstration of the Christian love of its members and an unanswerable proof of their determination to better the conditions of human life. It affords an influence that is ever widening and impressions that are ever deepening. It is an open-doored invitation to all suffering humanity to come to Christ's people for help.

Let us hasten to wipe out the shame of our long neglect. Let us open in Memphis, Tenn., such an institution of healing as shall offer new hope to the many sufferers of this great section, add new luster to the name and history of Southern Methodism, and bring new joy to the heart of Him who, when on earth, so delighted to heal.

H. M. Ellis, 2086 Union Ave., Memphis, Tenn., is in charge of this enterprise of our Church, and will gladly receive and receipt for any amount you may wish to contribute. He will also receive subscriptions running through two, three, or four years, payments to be made annually or semi-annually, or to suit the convenience of the donor. Send in your contribution or subscription NOW.

MRS. C. H. GIBBS—AN APPRECIATION.

Mrs. Carlotta Hargrove Gibbs was a Christian gentlewoman of the highest type. Born and reared in a Christian home, she accepted the lot of an itinerant's wife with a full consciousness of the duties and responsibilities of the place, going with her saintly husband through fair and stormy weather, to carry joy and sunshine to homes of the rich and poor alike.

After the ascension of her husband, she took special courses in history and science at the University of Chicago and other schools, preparing herself to teach. In 1902 she was elected to a position in Grenada College, and taught with marked success and acceptability until the close of the session of 1910-11, when failing health forced her to resign. She was loved and esteemed by every one connected with the college, more especially by the students, the younger ones finding in her a second mother and the older ones looking upon her as a sister with whom the most delicate confidence would be safe. She gave special attention to the Y. W. C. A. and the religious life of the girls. She was a teacher in the Sunday school, always an active member of the Missionary Society, and, for a time, president of the Conference Society. Everywhere she tried to do her duty, putting first things first, never realizing the tax she was putting upon her physique until it was too late. But as her body grew weaker, her faith grew stronger, and with the light of heaven in her face and the joy of heaven in her heart, she triumphantly bade farewell to her children, and saying, "You have gone with me to the very gates of heaven, but can go no farther with me now," fell on sleep to await the resurrection of the just. Many hearts are sad at her going away.

INSTITUTE DATES FIXED.

Louisiana Conference.

In conference with Dr. and Mrs. Hamill, the following dates are definitely settled for our round of District Sunday School Institutes, Miss Kilpatrick to be with us only ten days or less, because of conflicting appointments at this time:

Rayville, March 18-19; Ruston, March 19-20; Mansfield, March 20-21; Alexandria, March 25-26; Crowley, March 26-27; Hammond, March 27-28; New Orleans, March 28-31.

Because of having to make the round in only two weeks, we have so arranged the program that Mrs. Hamill, together with local workers, has charge the first day, and Dr. Hamill closes out the second, thus running three institutes a week.

Now that our plans are definitely made, let all get ready to meet for some first-class drill work in learning the best there is in this growing religious institution so vital to our American educational system, the Sunday school. The most vital question now before our leaders, both in Church and State, is saving and keeping saved our boys and girls, and as "formation" is better than "reformation," so Christian nurture is better than hard and uncertain campaigns for the winning of the lost and immoral. To do this delicate work of developing the spiritual life of sensitive human souls, our teachers and officers need to make themselves skilled workmen, to do which they need the help of such means as these institutes supply. So now is the time to take your book and note the date in your district and begin to plan to be there. It will take only two or three days and a small expense to get into touch with the best teachers in Sunday school work that our Church can furnish, and the attendance of our pastors, teachers and Sunday school officers will attest their interest in this essential part of the Church's work. Bring your problems and let's solve them together, and if you have suggestions about the program, please favor us by making them at once.

Fraternally,

P. O. LOWREY.

THE FIRST CANDLESTICK.

The first candlestick was a boy. He sat in the corner of a Scotch kitchen holding a piece of fir candle in his hands, from time to time cutting and trimming it to make it burn brightly.

The fir candle was a length of wood cut off a kind of fir tree, which is found embedded in the peat. This kind of candle is still used in some parts of Scotland.

It usually fell to the lot of the "herd-laddies" to act the part of candlestick, but should a beggar ask for a night's lodging, he was expected to relieve the "herd laddie" of his duty. A candlestick is still called, in Aberdeenshire, a "puir man," or "poor man."—The Child's Hour.

SOME WAYS OF HELPING A MOTHER.

Do you ever help mother? How many ways to help her can you think of? Would you like to know some others besides the ways you know, or would you rather not know any more? You may think there are too many already. Some one has written down the following ways to help mother:

1. Keep the caps and hats hung up where they belong, no matter whose cap, or where you find it. Just put it where you know it ought to be.
2. Keep the papers folded right side out and piled nicely together on the library table. It takes mother a good many minutes a day to do just that.
3. Get into the habit of remembering where you see things. This will help not only mother, but everybody in the house. It is such a comfort to the people who lose things or forget where they put them.
4. See how many times a day you can "save steps" for her by running errands.
5. Tell her how nice are the things she does for you, and whisper in her ear sometimes, "I love you."
6. Watch for chances to do things she has spoken about. Don't wait for her to ask you. It is such fun to surprise people.
7. Notice when she is sick or tired or head-achy, and go about the house on tiptoe.
8. Don't tell her you are going to be this kind of a boy or girl—have the fun of seeing her find it out.—Central Christian Advocate.

TITLE DEEDS TO GREAT WEALTH.

"Dominie, ef you hev a leetle time to spare, I wish you'd look over the papers in my stroag box."

The words were almost whispered, for the voice was weak from old age and long illness. Room "F" in the Home for Aged Men, was about to lose the peaceful face that had greeted the minister time and again with a smile of heavenly cheer.

Stephen Holoway had lost almost everything in life except his good name, his memory and his faith in God. His dear ones had died, his money had been lost, his eyesight had failed, and his limbs had long refused to support his trembling frame. Nevertheless, when the minister was in special need of stimulus and inspiration, he was apt to drop in for a few moments at Uncle Stephen's bedside. This low spoken allusion to a "strong box" startled him. It could not be that this venerable saint, so long an object of charity, had been hoarding unsuspected resources! Or was his keen, alert brain at last failing?

Rev. Mr. Alton bent tenderly over his old friend.

"You know I'm rich, dominie," went on the feeble voice.

"Ah!" thought the minister, "his mind has suddenly given away."

"As rich, as rich," continued Uncle Stephen, his tones growing clearer and stronger, "as rich as the Lord Jesus Christ!"

His patient old face was suddenly illumined. Mr. Alton said kindly:

"Uncle Stephen, you can have all of my time that you need. Where is your strong box?"

"Why, there!" replied the invalid, smiling, and pointing to the large leather-bound Bible on the stand. "Please take it and sit down a few minutes. When I was in business years ago, and makin' a heap of money, I hed an iron box fer my vailable dokuments and specie. There wasn't no safe deposit vaults in them days, an' I kep' the box in my bedroom closet, an' I was allus worryin' about it, 'fraid of burglars an' sich, an' scairt of losin' the key. But sence I hed this box what the Lord give me, I ain't hed no trouble with it, and the key is 'faith.' That key is hid deep in my heart where the enemy can't find it. Halle-lujah!"

The minister had seated himself, with the great, time-worn volume on his knees.

"Now," said Uncle Stephen, "we'll look over them dokuments a leetle. I can't see 'em no more with my eyes, but I know 'em by heart. The fust one in the bundle I never git tired thinkin' about. You see, dominie, many years ago I lived under a good King that I didn't love, an' I rebelled agin Him, an' tried to hender His cause an' to hurt His kingdom. I was an orful rebel. Finally I was arrested an' thrown into a dark dungeon, an' while I was there I found out that I was under sentence of death. I wept and repented, but the dungeon was jest as dark as ever, an' death was starin' into my eyes when up rode a messenger from the King, bringing a paper signed an' sealed, an' my name on it. It was my pardon! Jest read it over, will you? It's marked St. John, 3:16."

Mr. Alton read the familiar words: "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him shall not perish."

"Then," went on the invalid, "after I was a free man and had promised to serve the King, he actually adopted me right into his 'own glorious family, an' the paper was drawn up an' made as sure as eternity. I love that paper, too. It's la-beled Romans, 8:15. Please read it."

The minister turned the leaves with a new glory in his soul, and read:

"Ye have received the Spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba, Father."

"Now, those next papers air wonderfully comfortin' to look over," said Uncle Stephen, "the three thet I've tied together, the insurance policies—accident, an' life, an' fire insurances. There's Romans, 8:28."

"And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God," read Mr. Alton.

"That's the accident policy," said Uncle Stephen, with the simple joyousness of a care-free child in his voice. "St. John, 11:26 is the life insurance."

"Whosoever liveth and believeth in Me shall never die." Mr. Alton's own voice had caught the ring of triumph in that of the aged conqueror on the bed.

"Bless the Lord!" cried Uncle Stephen. "Now let me hear the third. It's marked 2 Peter, 3:12, 13—that's the fire insurance."

Somewhat the solemn words had never seemed so real to Mr. Alton before as he read them slowly to his friend:

"Looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of God, wherein the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat. Nevertheless we, according to His promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness."

"I hope I ain't keepin' you too long," said Uncle Stephen, "but I must hev you glance at that will there. You can see my Elder Brother, the King's own Son, died, an' made a will in my favor. Oh, glory to God! Jest think of that, dominie! You kin glance over the items—'My peace I leave with you,' an' 'I will send the Comforter.' Oh, Parson Alton, do you s'pose I was so foolish as to hev all that left to me an' not claim it nor get the good of it? Then there's a deed goes along with the will. You hev it there—John, 14:2."

The minister did not need to turn the leaves. His eyes were full of tears of which he was not ashamed.

"In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you."

"For me! for me! Oh, bless His glorious name forever!" There was an eloquent silence.

"And now," continued Uncle Stephen, "there's a lot of shares in thet blessed box. I'm stockholder in some tremenjous companies. You needn't look up all of them papers to-day. They are all marked: 'partakers of His sufferings,' of 'the heavenly calling,' of 'the divine nature of His holiness,' of the 'inheritance of the saints in light.' Jest lay thet treasure box right over here on the bed beside me."

"Too heavy? No. It's heavy with the eternal weight of glory. Thank you, dominie; thank you kindly. 'Taint much matter about the eyes, is it? nor the poor old bones, nor the lyin' awake of nights. I guess millionaires don't care very much if they hev to be away from hum just over night an' things ain't just as they air to hum. Good-bye, dominie. Come again."

Uncle Stephen sank back in his pillows, weary but radiant, and the minister went down the street singing to himself:

"O child of God! O glory's heir,
How rich a lot is thine!"

Editorial.

AN EDITOR'S EXPERIENCE.

In a recent issue of the Western Methodist, the Editor of that Journal, under the caption, "Editorial Afflictions," writes as follows:

"One of the sorest afflictions that comes upon an editor arises on this wise: Whenever a man or a set of men are put to build up an enterprise, and when they get at white heat about it, that enterprise is for them the one thing to be accomplished. Naturally and properly they want all the help they can get. They particularly want the help of their Conference organ. The editor is in thorough sympathy with them, and desires to help them. But along with their undertaking we have a score or more of other enterprises we are trying to watch and help along. In the nature of things we cannot turn all the powers of the paper into one channel, as the man or set of men in charge of a single enterprise are doing. The man or set of men in their zeal first grow impatient, and then grow suspicious. There will come a letter of bitter complaint that we are neglecting our duty in the premises. No more trying letters ever reach this office.

"Now, it may surprise some brethren to be told that there has been no great enterprise begun anywhere in our five Conferences within the last eight years, not a single one that we can recall, that has not brought us some letter expressing bitter disappointment that we had not stood by the enterprise as had been expected of us. It would be useless to make specifications, but there has been no exception to this rule. Such disappointment has been expressed after the most explicit and repeated efforts on our part to help. In such cases what is a poor editor to do? We know no other way than to go forward without partiality, with such wisdom as God gives us—and take whatever abuse may come. It is part of the price that must be paid for the glory of being an editor."

Our Arkansas confere is by no means alone in this experience. Our various Boards, both Conference and General, as well as committees appointed to do certain things, too often get the idea that they should be allowed to write at will in our Conference organs, and do not like it if an editor does not sidetrack other interests to give them the right of way. In some instances these Boards have their own special organs, and yet they seem to feel that large amounts of space should be at their command in all the other church papers merely for the asking. Apparently it never occurs to them that the average religious journal has to struggle, unaided, for existence, and that in order to hold its subscribers it must have some regard for the quality and variety of the matter which it sets before its readers every week. And frequently, when these zealous workers who are so ready to use the church paper have job work to do, through which they might lend it a helping hand, they turn away from it and have it done elsewhere. It is just such a policy as this that has placed the press of Southern Methodism in its present pitiable plight, both as to the merit of its periodicals and their financial condition.

Of course, it is needful for a church organ to carry announcements and brief exhortations concerning the various phases of our work, but if it is to exert a wholesome influence upon the general public, it must be something more than a sort of Conference or Connectional bulletin board. Certainly a due sense of proportion ought to be observed in the handling of such matters. No board, or secretary, or committee should seek to monopolize things; but, on the contrary, each should recognize that there are other claims and interests that are just as much entitled to a hearing as those which have been committed to its hands.

BISHOP HOSS ASSAILED.

Late information from the Vanderbilt trial is to the effect that in their arguments several of the attorneys for the Trustees of the University took occasion to assail vigorously Bishop E. E. Hoss. It was rumored in advance that this would be done, and some of the friends of the Bishop, knowing the delicate and uncertain state of his health, wrote him when he was in Oklahoma, urging him not to return to Nashville to hear the speeches of the lawyers. But the grandson of John Sevier, who won imperishable distinction in the Battle of King's Mountain, and who was the first Governor of the Volunteer State, was not to be put to flight by a bunch of wordy warriors in Court; so upon the reception of this information, he promptly took the train and was on the scene of action when the tonguesters unloosed their batteries upon him.

Why should Bishop Hoss be assailed above others by the hired representatives of the men who are seeking to wrest from the Church $3,000,000 worth of property? He has not personally a single dollar to gain or lose by this litigation. The stand which he has taken has been wholly in the interest of Southern Methodism. His position is precisely that of an overwhelming majority of his fellow Methodists of the South, as was shown by the vote of the last General Conference, as well as by that of every Annual Conference before which this question has come. If Bishop Hoss had consulted his own personal inclinations and interests he would have let this matter alone, and would thus have escaped the misrepresentation and abuse which have been heaped upon him. But he felt that the welfare of the Church was imperiled, and bravely and unselfishly he went to her rescue. It is because he has stood as a lion in the pathway of these would-be spoliators that they have trained their guns upon him. But they cannot hurt him. He stands to-day one of the foremost figures in world-wide Methodism, the peer of any as a preacher, as a Bishop, as a writer, as a citizen, and as a man, with not a single blot upon his shining record, and a fame that is secure, and which will grow brighter with the passing years. And the greatest chapter in his splendid life history is the heroic and self-sacrificing struggle which he has waged to preserve for the Church this property which she acquired through the influence of the majestic McTyeire. True, he has had, with one exception, the solid backing of his colleagues in the episcopacy, but upon him has fallen the brunt of the fierce battle.

Let Southern Methodists remember that it is for them, and not for himself, that Bishop Hoss has made this fight; that for them he has toiled and suffered, and that the attack of the Nashville lawyers upon him came as a result of his efforts to safeguard their rights. And they should do their utmost to see that the men behind the attorneys who are responsible for this occurrence, no matter how high may be their official position, are dealt with as they deserve to be. The next General Conference should not leave in a place of responsibility a single man who is known to have sympathized with this rebellion against the rightful authority of the Church. Even those about the scene of conflict who have been cowardly silent at such a time should be adjudged as lacking the metal that fits them to be depended upon in the future. More than one Roderick's bugle horn has hung unblown upon the wall or has given forth an uncertain sound, when it ought to have rung clear and true upon this sharply drawn and burning issue.

VETERANS' DAY IN THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

By formal action of the Mississippi Conference the first Sunday in March (the second day of the month) has been designated as the time when every pastor within its bounds is expected to take a collection for the superannuate preachers and the widows and orphans of deceased preachers, for whom it seeks to make some provision. We have in hand an interesting communication from Rev. N. B. Harmon, the Secretary of the Joint Board of Finance, calling attention to this Conference order, which reached us too late for this issue of the Advocate, but which will appear next week. It is to be hoped that every preacher will at once begin to get ready to present this worthy cause forcibly to his congregation on the day specified, and that there will not be a single charge in the Conference that will not make a creditable report to the treasurer who handles this sacred fund. Let every man do his duty, and the outcome will be such as to give gratification to all.

DO NOT MISS IT.

Read the article entitled, "New Thought vs. True Thought," which appears upon the second page of this issue of the Advocate. It is an admirable handling of an interesting subject. Nothing is more absurd than the twaddle we hear about the discovery of new religious truth. We may learn more about the history and geography of the peoples and lands that figure in the Bible, but not a single fact of consequence has been added to the religious teaching of the apostles as it was understood and accepted by our fathers.

STILL NEEDING ASSISTANCE.

Some weeks ago we made an appeal for a young man, the son of a North Mississippi Methodist preacher with a large family and small salary, who is struggling to maintain himself at a university where he has matriculated as a student. That call brought us the meager sum of $17. He now writes that unless he can secure further assistance at once he will have to leave school and seek work. Are there not others who will lend him a helping hand? We shall be glad to answer by private correspondence any inquiries that may be made concerning this young man.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

We extend hearty thanks to the following brethren for clubs of subscribers recently sent in: Rev. A. W. O'Bryant, Taylorville, Miss., 6; Rev. J. L. Lay, Simsboro, La., 13.

Rev. P. H. Howse, of the Seminary (Miss.) charge, reports hopefully of the work in his field. Brother Howse is gifted as a revivalist, and a good measure of success usually attends his labors.

The work is moving on smoothly in the Scotland (Miss.) charge, where Rev. D. L. Sutherland is the appreciated pastor. We are indebted to this stirring worker for a club of 5 subscribers, forwarded on the 7th inst.

From the Courtland (Miss.) charge, Rev. A. S. Raper sends us a club of 5 subscribers. This hustling young itinerant never fails to extend the circulation of the Conference organ where he labors. We highly appreciate his good work in its behalf.

A note from Major R. W. Milisaps states that Bishop Murrah occupied the pulpit of the Capitol Street Church of Jackson, Miss., last Sunday, and preached a fine sermon to a large audience. He also reports the Bishop to be in splendid shape physically.

Rev. and Mrs. R. M. Brown are the happy parents of a bright baby girl, who arrived at the parsonage in Algiers one night last week. Little Miss Brown is in fine condition, and Brother Brown has another reason to thank God for a growing Methodism in Algiers.

The founding of the Daisy Mission, which was undertaken by members of the McDonoghville Church some time ago, has received the unanimous endorsement of the quarterly conference of that charge. The plan to build a "floating church" has also been approved.

In a business letter to this office, Rev. A. W. Turner, the Louisiana Conference Evangelist, who is leading the forces of Methodism in a great revival campaign in Shreveport, La., says: "Our meeting has entered upon its fifth week. We are having some fine services."

The Rayne Memorial congregation tendered its new pastor, Dr. Felix R. Hill, Jr., a reception last Friday evening. Dr. Hill has made a fine impression on the people of the Crescent City, and the church which he is serving has never had brighter prospects than it has at the present time.

We have received copies of the Minutes of the two Mississippi Conferences, which are in their usual good form. We have seen no Annual Conference Year Book which is better arranged and edited than these two journals. Brothers Countiss and Watkins easily rank with the best Secretaries in the Connection.

Mrs. W. Ross Gamble, of Grand Cane, La., who is the secretary of the organization, requests us to state that the De Soto Parish Sunday School Convention will be held at Grand Cane, March 3 and 4. It is hoped that there will be a large attendance of the workers in the Parish and of others who are interested.

Rev. J. Tillery Lewis, of Clarksdale, Miss., writes: "Brother Spragins was with us on the first Sunday in February. Everybody was delighted with our 'new elder.' His two sermons were spiritual and exceedingly helpful. No better man could have been selected to take up Brother Woolard's work and carry it forward."

From a late issue of the Western Methodist, we take the following: "Rev. Daniel M. Geddie, who was recently transferred from the North Mississippi Conference, has met with a cordial reception at Keota, Oklahoma, where he is now pastor. The people are pleased, and there is every indication of a successful year in the charge."

In forwarding a remittance to the Advocate office for some subscribers, Rev. J. D. Wroten, who is attending Millsaps College and also serving the Duck Hill (Miss.) charge, says: "The outlook on the Duck Hill work is encouraging. All is also well at the college, where we are happy over the return of Bishop and Mrs. Murrah."

In sending some subscriptions to the office a few days since, Rev. D. R. McDougal writes optimistically of the work on the Okolona (Miss.) Circuit. He also reports the serious illness of Brother E. W. Cunningham, one of his most worthy and useful members, and requests the readers of the Advocate to pray for his recovery.

Rev. J. V. Bennett, of Monticello, Miss., is continuing his good work for the Advocate, having sent us last week six more names for our subscription files. This makes eight new subscribers and seven renewals that he has forwarded within the past few days. We trust that he will find the Advocate a valuable "assistant pastor" in his field of labor.

Rev. R. P. Neblett, of Houston, Miss., reports the serious illness at that place of Mr. George Van Horn, aged 73, who is one of the most highly esteemed members of his congregation. He also states that his work is moving on well, and that his second quarterly conference, which is to be held on March 10, promises to be an occasion of much interest.

Bishop E. D. Mouzon will preach in the Rayne Memorial Church of New Orleans daily during the week preceding Easter Sunday; and during the same period Dr. J. M. Moore, of Nashville, will deliver a series of sermons in the First Methodist Church. New Orleans Methodists will have the opportunity of hearing some high-class gospel preaching at that time.

The work has opened well on the New Albany Circuit, North Mississippi Conference. The Sunday schools are doing good work, the pastor's salary has been increased, and the outlook in every respect is hopeful. We make grateful acknowledgment of a club of 8 subscribers, lately sent us by Rev. J. A. Goad, the faithful pastor of this growing charge.

In another column appears the statement that Mr. J. A. Stockwell, of Lake Charles, La., has been accepted by the General Board of Missions for service in Africa. Brother Stockwell is known as one of the most solid and most active Methodists of South Louisiana. The Church has secured in him a man of unquestioned piety and large capacity for service.

Rev. J. D. Nesom has had an encouraging beginning on the Gueydan-Abbeville (La.) charge, where he is serving his second year. He has organized a Sunday school at Florence, a new town that is being built four miles south of Gueydan, and preaches there regularly. He has been promised a lot for a new church building, should the new town demand a building.

A gentleman who heard it writes that the speech of the Hon. G. T. Fitzhugh, of Memphis, who closed for the Church in the recent trial of the Vanderbilt lawsuit in Nashville, was masterly and overwhelming. Judge E. C. O'Rear, of Kentucky, is also said to have delivered an argument of wonderful lucidity and strength. Both of these gentlemen are lawyers of the first rank.

The work of our Church is making commendable progress in Bastrop, La., under the efficient leadership of Rev. George Fox. The pastor's salary has been increased over last year, and improvements on the church buildings are being planned at both Bastrop and Collington. A flourishing Sunday school is maintained in Collington, where every child of Methodist parents is enrolled. Brother Fox is making arrangements to entertain the Monroe District Conference this year.

Rev. H. W. Jamieson, junior pastor of the First Church of New Orleans, preached the first sermon that was ever delivered in the Ursuline Mission on last Sunday night, and is conducting a revival at that place this week. The Ursuline Mission is being enterprised by the New Orleans Epworth League Union. A Sunday school has been organized and is doing well; an Epworth League was organized last night, and Brother Jamieson expects to organize a church as soon as possible.

Rev. John W. Ramsey, our pastor at Mendenhall, Miss., states that Rev. Paul D. Hardin, presiding elder of the Jackson District, held his quarterly conference on Wednesday, February 12, his presidency giving great satisfaction. The reports submitted were gratifying and showed the work to be in a healthful condition. The Mendenhall church increased its assessment for the pastor $75 over that of last year. Brother Hardin preached at night, delivering a most forceful and impressive sermon.

Under date of February 14, Rev. W. L. Duren, of Tupelo, Miss., whose father, a citizen of Carroll County, recently underwent surgical treatment for cancer, writes as follows: "My father stood the operation, which was extensive, well, and his case seems to be progressing favorably. We are hopeful of a permanent cure." This will be gratifying news to Brother Duren's many friends in North Mississippi, who have felt keenly for him during the days of solicitude through which he has been passing.

Rev. W. A. Bowlin, whose address is Shannon, Miss., writes as follows: "May I say, through the Advocate that, having been released from the work of the pastorate for this Conference year, I shall give my time to revival work, and that I am open for engagements with any pastor who may desire my assistance? I am now making dates with the brethren as they write me. May this be a year when the spiritual life of our Church shall be greatly quickened and many souls born into the kingdom of our Lord."

Rev. W. A. Mangum, of our Second Church at Baton Rouge, La., writes: "Things have started off nicely with us, and the indications point to a good year. We have already had several additions to our membership, and we are praying for a great harvest of souls. We are also discussing the question of constructing a new house of worship, which we hope we shall be able to do." Brother Mangum is furthermore endeavoring to keep the Advocate in the homes of his people, as is attested by the renewals which he has been sending us.

Dr. J. W. Beeson requests us to announce that the Rev. Mr. Babcock, of Portsmouth, Va., will conduct a ten days' revival meeting for the Meridian Male College and Meridian Woman's College, beginning on March 7. Dr. Beeson extends a cordial invitation to everybody to attend these services, and requests all praying people to remember them in their devotions. Brother Babcock is said to be a minister who is remarkably effective in evangelistic work, and his coming is being looked forward to with anticipations of a season of spiritual refreshing.

From Hattiesburg, Miss., on February 14, Rev. George H. Thompson sent us the following sad announcement: "Annie Elizabeth Galloway, the youngest child of Rev. and Mrs. G. H. Galloway, was buried to-day from their home—the parsonage of our Court Street congregation. She died after a critical illness lasting three weeks. Her remains were laid to rest in the city cemetery here." Brother and Sister Galloway will have the sympathy and prayers of a host of friends in their sore bereavement. We extend to them and all others touched by this sorrow our deepest sympathy.

Rev. V. C. Curtis obliged us a few days since by sending in a club of 5 renewals and one new subscriber. He reports that Rev. W. S. Shipman, the new presiding elder, is "making good in every particular, and that under his leadership the Durant District has a bright prospect. Brother Curtis has been enthusiastically welcomed back to Kosciusko, all denominations and the Jews and outsiders showing pleasure at his return. The Courier, a local paper, compliments highly both Brother Curtis' pulpit and pastoral work, and says that Kosciusko has never had a more popular and useful preacher."

Rev. C. A. Schultz, who is beginning his third year on the Barlow (Miss.) Circuit, finds his people exceedingly kind and attentive. He has appointed a committee to seek to induce the church members to pray for a revival and to engage in personal work among the unsaved. Brother Schultz is also mindful of the interests of the Advocate in his rounds.

Rev. J. D. Simpson, of Pickens, Miss., who is serving with great acceptability one of the choice charges of the North Mississippi Conference, has brought us under obligations to him for 5 renewals and 5 new subscribers. Brother Simpson never fails to look well after the interests of the Conference organ. He thinks it is worth while to circulate it.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Wyatt, of Memphis, Tenn., have recently been spending several days in the Crescent City. They favored our office with a call last Friday afternoon, and it is needless to say that we were delighted to see them. Brother and Sister Wyatt were formerly active members of our church at Shaw, Miss., but for the past five or six years have been residing in the growing metropolis of West Tennessee, where they are connected with the Washington Heights Church. Any congregation may count itself fortunate in being able to include them among its worshipers and workers.

Rev. W. J. Porter, of Blenville, La., sends us a nice list of subscribers from his charge, and closes his good letter as follows: "The Lord bless and use to his glory the laborers in our Advocate office who make and send out into the world at the present time the paper which for more than half a century has blessed the Church and humanity." If our people would pray more for their Conference organ it might have larger success and the circle of its influence might be greatly widened. Particularly does an editor, who is a public target and who has to sit serene amid many exasperations, need to be remembered at the throne of grace.

Our hustling pastor at Coffeeville, Miss., Rev. W. V. Shearer, favored us with a club of 11 subscribers on the 12th inst., for which we heartily thank him. Referring to his work, Brother Shearer says: "We have just closed our first quarterly conference. Every church was represented, though the day was a dreary one. The collections showed a 60 per cent increase over this time last year. We are expecting much to be accomplished here at Coffeeville. Our congregations are constantly growing larger. Brother Tucker presided over the conference with grace and dignity. He is also a fine preacher, and gave us two excellent sermons, which greatly pleased the people."

A Jackson (Miss.) dispatch to the Memphis News-Scimitar on the 14th inst. reads as follows: "A rousing reception was given to Bishop and Mrs. Murrah when they returned to Jackson to-day, after spending several months in the Orient. The entire student body of Millsaps College, of which Bishop Murrah was the first president, was assembled at the station, and the lusty-lunged youngsters, about 300 strong, greeted the distinguished divine with the familiar college yell. President A. F. Watkins and the members of the Faculty, Major R. W. Millsaps, the founder and chief benefactor of the college, and many prominent citizens were also on hand to join in the welcome. Bishop and Mrs. Murrah went direct to the college campus."

During this season of balancing accounts and reporting the results to the public, none of the bank statements that we have seen have so much impressed us as that of the Commercial Savings Bank of Greenville, Miss. This bank opened for business on July 1, 1907, with a capital stock of $31,500, which was later increased to $50,000, where it stands at present. In the statement made to the Auditor of Mississippi on Dec. 18, 1912, we find the total deposits of this bank to be $906,115.28. This is, indeed, a most remarkable showing. This phenomenal success is largely, if not entirely, attributed to the ability and popularity of the young president of this bank, Mr. W. P. Kretschmar, whom we heartily congratulate upon this extraordinary achievement. Mr. Kretschmar is a native of Greenville, having spent his whole life in that community, of which he is one of the leading spirits commercially, socially, and morally. He is an alumnus of the University of Mississippi and an active and loyal Methodist.

Miss Madge Brandon Haughton.

In the closing hours of the dying old year, 1912, the sweet spirit of Madge Brandon Haughton, the idolized daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Haughton, of Prairie, Miss., slipped away from earth to join the ransomed hosts above. Death, which claims all seasons for his own and lays tribute alike upon all ages, never seemed more relentless or cruelly sad than when he entered the charmed circle of this happy home and bore away its fairest and most priceless treasure—beautiful Madge, or Sweet as she was affectionately called by the inner circle of dear ones and friends who knew her best and loved her most. The first bounteous bloom of a radiant young womanhood had not yet faded from her brow; the fair budding hopes of her pure young life had not as yet blossomed into their full fruition, when death claimed her; and she went uncomplainingly, a sweet smile of resignation lighting the lovely brown eyes as they closed upon the scenes of earth. Who can say but in that last fleeting smile was caught the first enraptured glimpse of the glory land, whose opening gates received dear Madge into the white-robed company of those who sing forever around the throne of God. Her own voice, on earth highly cultivated, and which she delighted to use in the sacred hymns of praise, is doubtless now mingling in the triumphant notes with the perfect paeans of those who sing always the glory of our Lord and King. The confident belief that death for her only meant a transition into the fuller, the richer, perfect life of Heaven, alone sustains the bereaved loved ones who sit weeping (but not as those without hope) in the broken circle about the family hearthstone. Through the tear-stained pages from the stricken mother, conveying to me the sad news of their sore bereavement, I caught the gleam of this heavenly hope, and thanked our God, who has fitted up many deathless mansions for his children, that in the mists of human sorrow and tears, he had framed the golden arch of his bow. And I seemed to hear the words of his eternal covenant: "I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live."

So early did Madge give her heart to God in church membership that she could scarcely, if at all, recall the time when she had not felt herself to be "a child of the King." Such a childhood and youth found its full flowering in the sunlit clime of God's presence. Fond mother, grief-stricken loved ones, it was only on the earth side that death lay upon her, like an untimely frost upon the fairest flower of all the field. On the heaven side, by faith we believe that the splendor of our Father's smile has kissed away all the marks of frail mortality; and that Madge now stands a redeemed and glorified saint with the seraph throng on high.
 J. M. WYATT.

Mrs. MARY ANN LYONS (nee Cates) was born April 8, 1823, and died July 16, 1912. She united with the Methodist Church and professed religion at 25 years of age. She was married to William Lyons on Dec. 5, 1839, and ten children were born unto them, of whom four survive her. In 1867 she was left a widow and never married again. In these years of widowhood she passed through many troubles and trials. At times her lot was hard, but God was with her through it all. I was well acquainted with her for more than sixty years and knew her to be a consecrated, consistent member of the Church, and never for a moment did she doubt her Lord. She lived to see all her children join the Church and hear them profess their faith in Christ. The six children who preceded her to the grave were all Christians and it was a source of great joy to her to know that, while she missed them on earth, she would see them again around the throne of God. In her last days she was peaceful and happy. She always had a good home with her children and would live with one after another in succession. She became very feeble in her old age and spent her last hours with her daughter, Mrs. Angeline Roberts. She died as she lived, happy in the love of God, and her children and grandchildren rise up to-day and call her blessed. May God's richest blessings ever rest on her four daughters and all her grandchildren, and may they so live that when the Reaper comes to gather them home, they shall all meet as an unbroken family in heaven.

IRVIN ROBERTS, L. P.

RESOLUTIONS.

(On the Death of Mrs. M. K. Shelby, a member of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist Church at Rosedale, Miss.)

Whereas, our dear friend and sister, Mrs. Mary K. Shelby, has been called to her Heavenly Home, and we realize that our loss is to her the greatest happiness in reunion with her loved ones, be it therefore Resolved: That the Methodist Church, to which she was devoted since the early age of twelve, has lost one of its best members.

That we deeply sympathize with her children in the loss of their precious mother.

"Their embraces will be sweet,
 At the dear Redeemer's feet."

And that these resolutions be published in the New Orleans Christian Advocate and the Rosedale, Bolivar County, Democrat.

TEACHING FEEBLE-MINDED CHILDREN.

One of the most beautiful and interesting spots in America is Farndale—the site of the Stewart Home and School, a private institution for the training and development of feeble-minded children. Five hundred acres of beautiful blue grass and stately forest trees! Could any spot in all the world be better suited for such an institution?

But the most beautiful thing about Farndale is the spirit of love and devotion to duty, and the intelligent labor displayed by the officers, teachers and assistants from the superintendent to the foreman of the farm. Everybody works at Farndale—and it is skilled and professional work of the highest order. Even the games, recreations and amusements are planned and executed with a view to the mental development of the children. The methods of teaching are, of course, quite different from those employed in the ordinary schools, for the problem is a vastly more difficult one. Physical, as well as mental, defects have to be contended with. It is here that manual training is most helpful. The teaching is largely individual in character and realistic, for the crippled mind does not grasp ideas quickly. Patience, born of an intelligent understanding of the child's infirmity, plays an important part in securing the desired results.

An interesting booklet describing the work of the Stewart Home and School may be had by addressing the Superintendent, Dr. John P. Stewart, Box 19, Farndale, Ky.

Hamburg Circuit, Miss. Conf.

Brother Yeager, the newly appointed pastor of the Hamburg Circuit, is already magnifying his office. No interest of the church escapes his vigilant eye. Thoroughness is characteristic of his every effort. He is "diligent in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord." His service in and out of the pulpit is an inspiration. As he walks in the Master's steps, visiting from house to house, sowing the seeds of the kingdom, surely he is making ready for a great harvest. The Advocate will doubtless follow him in his work, making its influence felt in every department of church work.—Chas. W. Scott.

Columbus District, North Miss. Conf.

Dear Dr. Meek: Inclosed I send you my second round of quarterly conference appointments. All is going on well. I have never seen churches so well pleased with their pastors. There is not a discordant note in the district. I never saw such an auspicious beginning of a Conference year. The people at Artesia have purchased a parsonage for $1850 and the Macon Circuit has bought one in Macon for $2000. The church in Starkville has ordered the old parsonage sold and is planning to erect a handsome new one. Longview Circuit has ordered the sale of its parsonage in Starkville, and will build a new one in Longview. Come to our District Conference and we will give you the right-of-way.—J. E. Thomas, P. E.

Brooksville, Miss.

At the session of the North Mississippi Conference in December, the Brooksville Circuit was divided, one church, ex-Prairie, being put on the Macon Circuit, and the remaining two, Brooksville and New Bethel, being formed into the Brooksville charge, with Rev. J. J. Baird as pastor. We have services three Sundays in the month, and New Bethel has services on one Sunday. Brother Baird came promptly to the work and has met every appointment, in spite of the dreadful mud to be encountered in going to his country church. He has already gained the respect and love of his people and almost every branch of church work is improving. The congregations are much larger, the attendance at prayer meeting has more than doubled, the Sunday school has undertaken some special missionary work, and a debt of $100 on the church has been paid since January. With the blessing of God, and under the guidance of this earnest young man, we are expecting a year of great spiritual growth.—A Brooksville Methodist.

Yazoo City, Miss.

The people here gave me a royal reception. The first quarterly conference was largely attended and the new presiding elder showed special gifts for his new work. No mistake was made in his appointment. Some members of the conference took the position that the quarterly conference is not only a business meeting, but a religious meeting as well, and that the spiritual interests of the church should be stressed above the financial. There was no heresy in that. The Church never intended that the quarterly conference should be converted into a mere financial machine.

The pastor's report for the month of January to the Church Conference included the following items: sermons preached, 8; pastoral visits, 81; prayer meetings attended, 6; average attendance at prayer meeting, 45; net gain in membership, 9; funerals conducted, 4; marriages solemnized, 2; other meetings attended, 8. I also attended a citizen's mass meeting and by invitation delivered an address in favor of the construction of a new railroad.—Nolan B. Harmon, P. C.

Taylorville, Miss.

Dear Doctor: I will try in my feeble way to give you an account of my work. We arrived at Taylorville on January 3, and found everything in good shape at the parsonage, which is nicely furnished. In the afternoon a nice load of groceries was sent to the new pastor. And ever since then, provisions have continued to come. One brother brought a wagon load of corn, potatoes, syrup, meat, etc. All that we need is being sent in. I have five appointments and have preached at all of them since I came here. I have received 22 by certificate and have organized one church. Brother Geo. H. Thompson, our presiding elder, was with us Feb. 3 and 4, at which time our first quarterly conference was held. All the churches were represented and made good reports. At some of the churches the stewards have relieved the preacher of collecting anything at all, for which I thank them. We are going to try to have all of our Conference claims paid by the time of the District Conference, provided it is not held too soon. At any rate, we hope to secure them all during the year. This is my first year as a pastor and I desire to carry up everything in full this fall, and everything points that way now.—A. W. O'Bryant, P. C.

RESOLUTIONS OF THANKS.

(Adopted by the District Stewards of the Port Gibson District, at their recent meeting at Harrison, Miss.)

Whereas this Board of District Stewards in its meeting this the 10th day of February, 1913, has had its labors lightened by the bounteous feast prepared for us by the ladies of Harrison; therefore be it resolved, that we extend to them our heart-felt thanks and that we request the Presiding Elder in 1914 to call our meeting in the same place;

That we extend to the Pastor, the Rev. M. F. Adams, our thanks for his courteous attention to our wants, that we request the publication of these resolutions in the New Orleans Christian Advocate and in the Fayette Chronicle, and that the same be spread upon our Minutes.

(Signed) E. J. Bomer, Hugh Jankin.

The Sunday School.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

By Rev. R. A. Maddox.

The Mendenhall Sunday school continues to do things. The "Excelsior" Bible Class was organized Sunday and a report sent to Dr. Bulla. The Teacher Training Class has taken the examination on the first book and all passed.

The Senior Wesley Bible Class of the Mendenhall Sunday school recently had a nice "chicken-pie" supper, given by Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Cross. This class of young men and women is doing things. It has hustling leaders.

The Sunday School Conference recently held at Washington, D. C., was a great success. It seemed to be the opinion of the entire body that we need some changes in our church law governing our Sunday school work and collections. Investigate and see what you think.

Brother Rob't Selby is another presiding elder who is stressing the Sunday school work. He tells his pastors, if they need assistance, to write the Field Secretary at once. We have had letters from the pastors of his district coming to us as a result of his suggestions.

Brothers Superintendent and Pastor, what are you doing to train the young people of your church? Have you an Organized Bible Class, or a Teachers' Training Class? If not, why haven't you? Remember that the Sunday school is the great training school of our Church.

Brother J. M. Morse, of Capitol Street Church, Jackson, turned the 11 o'clock service over to the Men's Bible Class on a recent Sabbath. Brother Morse knows how to get others to work. It has been said of him that he never does anything he can get some one else to do. That is the secret of his success.

We are glad to say that Brother P. D. Hardin, presiding elder of the Jackson District, has gone on record as a Sunday school presiding elder. He is asking carefully about the Sunday school as he goes over his district and is urging the pastors to look well after its interests. Brother Hardin says that if 85 per cent of our converts come from the Sunday school, then it follows that it must be the greatest investment of the Church. He is right. Let us all take notes.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

Begin now to prepare a program for Adult Bible Class Day in our Conference—March 30.

The Livingstone anniversary, to be celebrated in March, is a splendidly educative special day. That great missionary said: "If I be laid on the shelf, let that shelf be Africa. I can not rest whilst souls are being lost. There is all eternity to rest in after life is done."

The late Mikado of Japan took "Enlightenment" for his motto and his successor has taken the wondrous word "Righteousness" for his. Just suppose our own fair land and race should assume this last motto with the intensity of those little brown men who are making the world take notice of them.

Mr. Carnegie suggested as a suitable epitaph for himself, "Here lies a man who knew how to get around him a great many men who were much cleverer than himself." It is mistaken zeal when a leader does all the work himself, instead of training others to take his place when he is gone. Sunday school teachers might learn wisdom by following Mr. Carnegie's example.

If every member of all of our Adult Bible Class clientele of North Mississippi could attend one meeting of the old Water Street Mission in New York, surely their hearts would be warmed to renewed Christian service.

Men of every walk of life return there often and tell the story of their reformation, and they do this so simply and directly that the poor, down-and-out fellow takes heart and starts all over again. As they rise and thank God for being saved for one day, or for ten days, or for a month or ten years, there comes to one a vivid realization of the limitless gratitude we owe our great Heavenly Father, and how rarely we let some one else see and hear and know his goodness is appreciated.

A Fine Report from Lafayette.

The Philathea Class of the Lafayette Methodist Sunday school was organized in January, 1909. Previous to that time it was a Bible Class taught by Mrs. E. R. Kennedy. The class has a membership of 28 and maintains a good average attendance. Besides the regular officers, we have a volunteer committee to meet persons at the door and invite them to visit and join the class; a membership committee to secure new members and urge regular attendance; a relief committee to call on new members of the church, visit and take flowers to the sick and give aid to the needy, and a social committee to provide for the social life of the class. The Treasurer's report for 1912 was as follows: Dues collected, $8.55; contributed to Flood Sufferers, $15; La. Methodist Orphanage, $12.50; Philathea Dues to Word's Forward Movement, $3; Paid for Sunday School Magazines, $7; Box of Clothing sent to Orphanage valued at $34; Missionary Collection, $25; Balance on Deposit Jan. 1, 1913, $23. All this money was donated by the members of the class and was not raised by any special means.

The class motto is "To Help Others," and the members try to live it in their daily lives. With our new President, Mrs. P. C. Bennet, and our beloved and consecrated teacher, Mrs. E. R. Kennedy, we hope to accomplish greater things this year than ever before. RUTH LANE, Press Reporter.

How to Make Better Cough Syrup than You Can Buy

A Family Supply, Saving $2 and Fully Guaranteed.

A full pint of cough syrup—as much as you could buy for $2.50—can easily be made at home. You will find nothing that takes hold of an obstinate cough more quickly, usually ending it inside of 24 hours. Excellent, too, for croup, whooping cough, sore lungs, asthma, hoarseness and other throat troubles.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle, then add the Sugar Syrup. It keeps perfectly. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

This is just laxative enough to help cure a cough. Also stimulates the appetite, which is usually upset by a cough. The taste is pleasant.

The effect of pine and sugar syrup on the inflamed membranes is well known. Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, rich in guaiacol and all the natural healing pine elements. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

The Pinex and Sugar Syrup recipe is now used by thousands of housewives throughout the United States and Canada. The plan has been imitated, but the old successful formula has never been equaled.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

AN INTERESTING SUNDAY AT LAKE CHARLES.

Sunday, February 9, was a day long to be remembered by the Methodists of Lake Charles, La. There were 224 present at the Sunday school, and a large congregation greeted the pastor, Rev. K. W. Dodson, at the morning service. Brother Dodson preached a forceful sermon on Christian Education, using as a text, Proverbs 8:1. After the reception of a number of new members into the Church, a committee that had been appointed to obtain data concerning the prices of a pipe organ and to suggest a plan for securing one, gave a very encouraging report. Because of the assistance given by a similar committee acting for a church in Alexandria, its work was easily done and we hope to have a new organ in the near future.

The Junior Epworth League, under the very able superintendency of Miss Emma Crawford, had a most profitable session. There were more than fifty present.

As usual, the Epworth League service was largely attended. Although the topic for the evening concerned Negro education, a subject that might be considered by some an unattractive one, more than a hundred were present, and the service was characteristically earnest and instructive. Prof. J. S. Jones, a teacher in the Lake Charles colored school, was present and was invited to speak. His address was interesting and helpful. He made a strong appeal to the white race to lend aid to his people, and help them to reach a more comprehensive understanding of Christian principles. Impressive solos were sung by Miss Evelyn Price and Mr. E. H. McGill.

A fitting climax to this discussion of Negro education was the announcement that Mr. John W. Stockwell had been accepted by Bishop Lambuth and the Missionary Board, as a missionary to Africa. Brother Stockwell has been a member of this church since 1904, and has been an officer of the church almost continuously. He is now the president of the Board of Stewards and is the first vice-president of the State Epworth League. He was president of the Lafayette District League organization during its first two years, and has been one of the most consecrated workers in the local chapter of the League. He was notified of his having been accepted last Friday, and will close his business here and go at once to Nashville and enter our Training School. After he has finished there he expects to take special training in London, England, before sailing for Africa.

This day of great things in Lake Charles was brought to a fitting close by an earnest and thoughtful sermon by the pastor.—A Member of the Congregation.

Where Dollars Make Dollars!

An Opportunity to put your Savings to work in the Greatest Real Estate Investment Field in America, and with associates of known Capacity and Responsibility.

Can you spare a dollar a week from your savings? Would you put that dollar to work for you if you absolutely knew it was always safe and always busy earning you more dollars? Do you know that more money is being made by the reputable, high class real estate corporations than any other? Real estate is the basis of all wealth. It is as safe as a government bond. If it is properly operated nothing is more profitable. Listen—Florida is the best field in America today for building up great assets in legitimate real estate operations. I ought to know. I have signed more property contracts and conveyances, possibly, in the last six years than any other man in Florida. I have just retired voluntarily from the executive management of one of the largest and most successful real estate corporations in the South, with assets today of more than a million and a quarter dollars. Why did I retire? To further an ideal. It is my ambition now to build up one of the largest and one of the strongest co-operative real estate corporations in the world and my partners shall be the working people of America, the salary earners, the savings bank depositors—indeed those who have heretofore been denied the privilege, by reason of their limited means, of investing in the great and really safe and sane corporations; and have thus been left as easy victims of the get-rich-quick plunderers and schemers. Stop giving up the wages of your toil to the professional promoters, who offer you worthless oil and mining and new invention stocks. You are working and sacrificing to provide luxuries for those who are unworthy of your confidence. Put your dollars in the safest of all securities—in the operation of a great, nation-wide business that is founded on the very bed-rock of American finances. Put your dollars to work in the same harness with the dollars of some of the best and most practical real estate operators in the country. Your dollars will grow—your profits will astound you.

All I want you to do now is to investigate. That will only cost you a postage stamp. DO NOT SEND ME A DOLLAR UNTIL YOU HAVE DONE THIS. If the opportunity I shall present to you does not appeal to you, you will at least have afforded me the pleasure of placing before you what I regard as one of the most remarkable real estate operating opportunities ever inaugurated in this country. Do not reply unless you are in earnest and you can invest at least one dollar a week. I shall send you satisfying references as to myself and my associates. If you wish to become a partner you must furnish me with the same. JAMES A. HOLLOMON, President, American Securities Company, Jacksonville, Florida.

The Best Bargain You Ever Made

HOW do you measure the value of a bargain? Suppose you bought an engine that did practically all of your hardest work for you—sawing, pumping, grinding, etc.—and that paid for itself in a short time. Would you call that a good bargain?

An I H C engine will do all that, and more. Having paid for itself, it continues to earn its way by working steadily year after year until you, like our Clay County friend who has used an I H C engine for six years, will say, "My I H C engine is the best bargain I ever made."

I H C Oil and Gas Engines

are thoroughly dependable, and unusually durable. The fine-grained, grey cast iron cylinders and pistons are worked together to a perfect fit. The ground piston rings insure maximum power from the explosion. The ignition apparatus can be understood at a glance. The fuel mixer is the most effective and simplest known. Moving parts are perfectly balanced. Bearings are large and carefully fitted.

I H C engines are made in all styles—vertical and horizontal, portable and stationary, air and water-cooled; in sizes from 1 to 50-horse power, to operate on gas, gasoline, naphtha, distillate, kerosene or alcohol. Gasoline and kerosene tractors, 12 to 60-horse power.

The Missionary Voice.

Our Church authorities planned most wisely, a few years ago, when they combined all the missionary literature into one great periodical. It is well arranged, comprehensive, and well edited. It has some of the best brains of the Church at the head of it. Why not every town in Louisiana and Mississippi unite in a Voice crusade? A large number of subscriptions might be obtained in New Orleans, and nothing would increase the missionary spirit more than this.

Missionary Interest in Alabama.

In the year 1912 the Alabama Conference of the Methodist Church paid for missions, home and foreign, $28,797.18. The women, in their work within the bounds of that Conference, paid for the same causes, $30,297.64. The North Alabama Conference paid for home and foreign missions, $23,985.94, and the women of that Conference paid for the same causes, $32,819.13. Southern Methodism raised for missions in Alabama last year the total of $115,899.89.

North Georgia Conference Annual Meeting.

The Annual Meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the North Georgia Conference was held in the First Methodist Church of Atlanta, on Feb. 5-9. Mrs. J. B. Cobb, one of the foremost women of Southern Methodism, attended the gathering. Elaborate plans were made for this convocation—everything pertaining to Methodism receives especial attention in that great Georgia city. One of the interesting features was a great mass meeting for all the children of the city, which was held in Wesley Memorial Church on Sunday, Feb. 9. Another mass meeting was held on Sunday afternoon in the first Methodist Church, for the women. May our own annual meeting that is to be held in Baton Rouge next month be as successful! We are ready to print any notices or plans about this meeting, for the benefit of the delegates.

Your Plans for this Year.

The editress of this column would like to have every auxiliary in Louisiana and Mississippi send to the Press Superintendents their plans and prospects for this year in their society. Suggestions made in this manner would be desirable as aids to each other. Nothing inspires more than to know that great things are possible for our neighbors, and that the work is being undertaken with enthusiasm. This column is especially for the auxiliaries of the patronizing Conferences of the Advocate, and news from the societies in these bounds shall always receive first attention.

The Council for 1913.

The Missionary Council for this year will be held in Birmingham, Ala., April 9-16. Last year it was held in Washington, D. C., and was so far away from this part of the country that many interested could not afford to go unless they were the official delegates. These great meetings never fail to inspire those who attend with enthusiasm for larger spheres of work. Birmingham will rejoice to entertain this convention. The Conference will have large and tedious problems to consider. We hope that its work will mark an epoch in our missionary work. In 1906 the General Conference of our Church was held where this Council will convene this year. Methodism stands for large things in the Iron City. In 1908, before the Home and Foreign Missionary Societies of the Church combined, the Foreign Division held its great annual meeting in the First Methodist Church of our own city of New Orleans. It was held in May. Bishop Alpheus W. Wilson preached a powerful sermon on the Sabbath during the meeting. Those who heard the reports of the various delegates representing the Conferences of Southern Methodism at that time can scarcely forget their wonder at the immense sums of money raised for foreign missions by the North Georgia and South Georgia and Virginia and the Alabama Conferences, and many others. Whoever can will find it most profitable to attend this meeting in Birmingham in April. It should be more interesting than ever as the two forces have just about been resolved into one, and the reports should show a great increase in every way.

Missionary Work in New Orleans.

There is no city in Southern Methodism that presents such problems in missionary work as the Crescent City. It is cosmopolitan in the extreme. People from every country may be found within its bounds. Many thousands can scarcely speak the English language, though the public school is fast changing conditions by enlightening the children for the next generation. The Romanists have a mighty hold upon the populace. They have 150,000 members within the city limits. The combined strength of Protestantism in the city, both white and black and others, numbers about 36,000. It is said that there are at least 100,000 people in New Orleans who are not affiliated with any Church at all and who never hear a sermon. What a great mission field! Yet, it is one of the hardest on the globe. Romanism gives its constituents just enough of the Christianity that it represents for them to repulse a Protestant who would care to help them. Our Mary Werlein Mission, under the leadership of that godly woman, Mrs. Lily Meekins, is possibly doing more than any other mission point in the city. The Methodist ladies of New Orleans help her as they can. This Mission reaches the outcast and helpless and tries to put them on their feet. Our St. Mark's Hall is below Canal Street and is engaged in the hard task of trying to preach Christ to the misled Romanists and others who care to hear of the true Master. St. Mark's Hall tries to do an industrial and social work. It teaches children to sew and cook and to know something about the Bible. The City Board of Missions meets down at the Hall every month, to plan and help those directly engaged in the task. Many of the ladies of the city give some of their time for work at the Hall. Mrs. S. A. Montgomery is the efficient President of the City Board of Missions.

by some two hundred feet, is what is proving to be one of the South's most popular, attractive and exclusive summer resorts—South Carolina Club, a summer club for select Southerners, organized by a party of progressive South Carolinians.

This Club is truly richly favored with those features which go to make an inviting summer place. A cool, bracing climate, unrivaled view of all the high mountains in the Blue Ridge, a tranquil lake hedged by bold mountain streams; cool springs; lovely drive and walkways, rhododendron, oak and chestnut groves, and a commodious and inviting Club House. It is also fortunately located within a few minutes trolley ride from the shopping district and railroad station of Hendersonville.

The management of the South Carolina Club has spared no pains to maintain a select club for Southern families of refinement and culture, and the plan upon which it is operated not only accomplishes this, but reduces the living expenses of members to a minimum. Membership can only be obtained through the purchase of a share of stock, which participates in the earnings of the Club and gives the holder the privilege of all Club benefits, as well as meals at the Club House at a very low rate. Excellent cottage sites are reserved for members, and the erection of the building looked after by the management if so desired. Both the Club House and the cottage enjoy all modern conveniences, electric lights, baths, telephones, etc., while the Club grounds are easily and quickly reached from the railroad station and shopping district of Hendersonville, by trolley.

The Club is not an experiment, but a proven success, demonstrated by the fact that the best families from several Southern States have chosen it as their summer homes since it first opened in 1911, and that new members are expected from practically every part of the South the coming season. Increase Your Yields Per Acre of All Crops—Reduce Your Labor and Producing Cost and Make Bigger Profits This Year by Using

Virginia-Carolina High-Grade Fertilizers

Thousands of farmers learned in 1912 what many, many thousands already knew—that Virginia-Carolina Fertilizers are more than ordinary fertilizers. That at least one-and-a-half bales of cotton to the acre is not impossible, nor 100 bushels of corn per acre so very difficult with up-to-date farming methods, frequent cultivations and working of the crop, and several applications of V.-C. Fertilizers. That with the use of these excellent fertilizers the average yields of Tobacco, Wheat, Oats, Fruit, Rice, Peanuts and Truck can be often easily increased from fifty to a hundred per cent.

There are sound, logical reasons why you should use Virginia-Carolina Fertilizers. The proven experiences of others—more farmers use V.-C. THE PATHWAY TO POWER.

This subject suggests to us the thought that man was created for a purpose; that the possibilities of life are unlimited, and that we can make it worth something. It also presents the thought that we will be held accountable to God for not giving to it its fullest expression in the development of our personality.

The greatest fault of our people today is their unappreciation of life. They consider but little what they can be—that their very being is laden with principles conducive to noble character and that time is affording opportunities for the development of those qualities. Time does not produce life, but it furnishes the occasion, and when not grasped, it passes.

Power is the ability to do things. It may also be termed influence. We shall use it in both these senses. Everyone who reaches a given object must make a way to it. For a man to reach a place in life where his power will be a potent factor in correcting evils, where his influence will lead men into right living, where he will have the ability to do great things for God's kingdom, he must force his way to it. Every man is the architect of his own life.

The way to success is the one that Jesus prepared, leaving us his example. Then, the pathway to power is the Christian life. Christ wished to leave a model for true men—not angels, nor beings destitute of passions and appetites essential to humanity—but men that might develop holiness of character. He was complete, perfect and would have us like himself. The Christian life means the transforming of the whole human nature and the consecration of the faculties to God's cause.

The requirements to be a Christian are the same as those to be a true man. The Christian must love, believe and obey the truth. Whatever keeps a person from doing this is false and has no right to control the mind. It perverts the judgment, misleads the heart, and makes the whole plan and purpose of life a mistake.

The pathway to power is found only in Christ. He said, "I am the way." And again, by his apostle, we are admonished in these words: "Because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that we should follow his steps."

Whenever a man realizes God's purpose in his life and will follow his convictions with determination, this elevated highway looms up and the joy and peace of such a life becomes his own. Do you want to be a traveler on this road? Have you had a vision? The opportunity presents itself to everyone.

There are conditions, but they may be met. Before passing through the needle gates the camel had to be stripped of his load, kneel down and squeeze through into the city. So it is with man. He must be stripped of his great load of sin and humble himself before God before he may enter this religious life. He must come out from the world. He cannot run with the devil all the week, go to church on Sunday and exert an uplifting influence in his community. "Ye cannot serve God and mammon." If he serves God constantly he may expect joy and happiness, for "Blessed are ye when men shall revile you and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely for my sake." He may be surprised to learn that every effort to help others reacts in a greater blessing upon himself and every duty performed makes him a greater man. Does your life abound in happiness? Have you any assurance of an eternal reward? If not, make Jesus Christ a reality in your every-day life.

Many false standards for measuring greatness are observed about us. Some mistake manners or outward appearance for greatness. Veneering is not an unknown characteristic in the moral and religious world, and many try to pass for more than their worth. Policy is commendable when it is founded on manhood, but it will not take its place. Others can see nothing greater than wealth or intellect. These, rightly used, may be valuable, but if made an end in themselves, they cannot be compared to the greatness of heavenly possessions. The only true and uplifting power comes from a life filled with the Spirit of Christ, who becomes the source of every action. Such a person can appreciate the life of the Psalmist and can sing with him, "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want," and can understand the prayer taught the disciples by the Master, "Our Father who art in heaven."

That we all may have the evidence that the Lord is our Shepherd and Father, is the prayer of the writer.

All you need do is send us the coupon, giving us your name and address, and we will mail a dollar box of Bodi-Tone to you, without a penny from you.

If you are tired of continual doctoring and had health, if you are weary of feeling you cannot depend on your body to act right and do its full duty, you need Bodi-Tone right now, and this offer gives you a chance to try it without risking a penny. You need it to seek out your weak spots and make them stronger, to stop the leaks which have been draining your vitality, to make your organs, nerves and muscles capable of giving you the right measure of strength, vigor, energy and full-blooded comfort your body should have. If you want to stop the use of medicine, if you want to quit the doctors, if you want to stop the strain and drain of continual dosing and drugging, send the coupon immediately for a dollar box on trial and tone your body and make it healthy with Bodi-Tone, for healthy bodies need no medicine. You try it at our risk.

Bodi-Tone Does Just As Its Name Means

It cures disease by toning all the body, and we want to show you what it will do for your body. Bodi-Tone is a small, round tablet, that is taken three times every day. Each box contains seventy-five tablets, enough for twenty-five days' use, and we send you the full box on trial so you can try this great remedy and learn what it is, so you can learn how it works in the body, how it cures stubborn diseases by helping nature to tone every organ of the body. Bodi-Tone is a little word, but it means a great deal, everything in health. When all the organs are doing their part, when each is acting in a perfectly natural way, when all the functions are healthy and performed with natural vigor, when the energy, strength and power of resistance to disease are all at a natural point, then the body is in proper tone. When disease has attacked any part, when lack of vitality is found and felt, the tone of the entire physical body should be raised to the highest possible point, to make all the body help to cure and restore. This is the power which underlies all of Bodi-Tone's great work for the sick, this is the power it offers you to help you get new health and strength, new vigor and new vitality.

Not a Patent Medicine

Bodi-Tone is not a patent medicine, for its ingredients are not a secret. It contains Iron Phosphate, Gentian, Lithia, Chinese Rhubarb, Peruvian Bark, Nux Vomica, Oregon Grape Root, Cascara, Capsicum, Sarsaparilla and Golden Seal. Such valuable ingredients guarantee its merit and power.

When you use Bodi-Tone you know just what you are using, know it is pure and safe and know you are taking the right kind of medicine to provide real help for the body. It contains nothing that your own family doctor will not endorse and say is a good thing. It does not depend on killing pain with cocaine, opium, morphine or other dangerous drugs. It does not excite the body with alcohol, but it tones the body and cures its disorders with remedies nature intended to tone and cure the body when that power was given them. Thus, iron gives life and energy to the blood, Sarsaparilla drives out its impurities, Phosphate and Nux Vomica create new nerve energy and force, Lithia aids in the kidneys and dissolves Rheumatic deposits, Gentian does invaluable work for the Stomach and Digestive forces, Chinese Rhubarb and Oregon Grape Root promote vigorous Liver activity, Peruvian Bark raises the tone of the entire system. Golden Seal soothes the inflamed membrane and checks Catarrhal discharges, Cascara gives the Bowels new life in a natural way, and Capsicum makes all more valuable by bettering their quick absorption into the blood. Every one of these ingredients possesses characteristics most valuable in this common-sense plan of toning all the body. Each exerts a special action in some certain organ or function of the body that helps to bring the whole body back to nature and to health.

Natural Curatives To Make Natural Health

Each Bodi-Tone ingredient adds a needed element from nature to the body, for Bodi-Tone is altogether a natural remedy. Each has a certain work to do in the body and does it well, in a natural manner. They are used in Bodi-Tone because of this ability. We claim no credit for discovering these valuable ingredients, each of which has a well-deserved place in established medical science. We claim only the credit for our successful Bodi-Tone formula, which is our own discovery, for the way in which we have selected, proportioned and combined these great natural curatives, and for the health-making work which Bodi-Tone has so well proven its ability to perform in the body. The curative forces which Bodi-Tone so ably uses are the forces which have always existed in nature for the restoration of the body's health. Many are regularly prescribed by good physicians in combination with such drugs as each doctor may favor, for there are wide differences of opinion among doctors of various schools. The exact combination used in Bodi-Tone is what gives it the far-reaching and thorough curative and restorative power that makes possible the remarkable cures experienced by Bodi-Tone users, cures which prove the difference between Bodi-Tone and common remedies, cures which have won the gratitude of thousands.

No One Is Too Old To Use Bodi-Tone

This trial offer is open to all, freely, generously, without any age limit, for we are glad to prove at our own risk how Bodi-Tone acts in ailments of the old as well as the young, to prove what it does for persons suffering from bodily weaknesses and ailments, whether from age or otherwise. Thousands of old men and women have sent for Bodi-Tone on trial, and found it put new flesh on their bones, new vigor in their minds, new vim in their muscles and new vitality into every vital function. If there is anything wrong in any part of your body, if any organ is acting in a way which you realize and know is not right, send for Bodi-Tone on this trial offer and give it a chance to set you right. If you do not feel right, eat right, sleep right, weigh right, work right and think right, now and all the time, put Bodi-Tone in command of your body for twenty-five days. Let it marshal your bodily forces, let it line them up and work them into shape, until all are marching along straight, strong and harmoniously, in perfect time, tune and tone, for that is what Bodi-Tone is for and what it is doing for thousands. If the doctors' prescriptions and ordinary medicinal combinations have failed, let this scientific combination of special remedies show and prove what it can do for you. Its greatest triumphs have been among men and women who had chronic ailments, who had used patent medicines and had doctored with their local doctors and out-of-town specialists, all without lasting benefit. It is because of its great work in these cases that all chronic sufferers and persons with obstinate diseases are invited to try Bodi-Tone at our risk.

Thousands of Cures

of Rheumatism, Stomach Trouble, Kidney Liver and Bladder Ailments, Uric Acid Discharge, Female Troubles, Bowel, Blood and Skin Affections, Dropsy, Piles, Catarrh, Anemia, Sleeplessness, LaGrippe, Pains, General Weakness and Nervous Break-down have fully proven the power and great remedial value of Bodi-Tone in such disorders. Each one got a dollar box on trial, just as we now offer to you in the coupon.

Why keep on suffering from disease, when by filling in your name and address on the trial coupon and mailing it to us, you can get a full twenty-five days' treatment of this great remedy which people everywhere are praising and talking about. It just costs a two-cent stamp, and you don't need to pay a single penny for the medicine unless Bodi-Tone benefits you. You have all to win and nothing to lose, no matter what your ailment may be, by thus trying it.

Catarrh of the Head And Stomach

DALLAS, TEXAS.—For years I was troubled with Catarrh of the Head and Stomach and Rheumatism. I tried most everything, but whatever helped me benefited only for a very little while. I got so bad with my Stomach that I did not think I would ever recover. The doctor was treating me, but did me no good. At this time I saw the Bodi-Tone trial offer and got a box. It did me so much good that I sent for two more. I am 55 years old, a war veteran, but after using the third box I felt fifteen years younger, and I haven't felt better for fifteen years. C. H. SMITH, 2107 San Jacinto Street.

Fine Health All Year

COMANCHE, OKLA.—I have suffered almost all my life with Rheumatism, which bothered me since girlhood. As it became settled in later years it affected my heart, and I would have spells in which I thought I would surely die. I have taken all kinds of medicine and bathed and rubbed with liniments, but nothing that I ever did seemed to do me any good. I saw Bodi-Tone advertised over a year ago and was attracted by its formula, which looked to me like a good medicine, and I sent for a trial box. It worked like magic from the start, and showed me that I had gotten the right medicine at last. I am in fine health now, and feel better than at any time within my recollection. I feel that I owe my life to Bodi-Tone's wonderful formula. I am forty-six years old. MRS. J. B. BOBO.

Permanent Cure At 77

NORTH EASTHAM, MASS.—It is now over a year since I took Bodi-Tone, and I have waited to see if my troubles would return, but as they have not, I feel it my duty to the public to testify what the medicine has done for me. I had Palpitation of the Heart so bad that I could hardly walk, and could never lie on my left side. I had Indigestion so serious that the doctors thought I must die, but since taking Bodi-Tone I am a well man. I can eat anything I want at any time and nothing hurts me. I have had no trouble during the year with either my Heart or my Stomach and sleep well at night, lying on either side. I am seventy-seven years old, and can now do a very good day's work alongside of men of forty, and Bodi-Tone made it possible. WARREN K. SNOW.

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

VOL. 60—No. 9.

"Prove All Things: Hold Fast That Which is Good."

WHOLE No. 2975.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, FEB. 27, 1913

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

Editorial

Faith is to believe what we do not see, and the reward of this faith is to see what we believe.—Augustine.

A New Orleans daily announces that the latest freak of fashion for women is a "decollette shoe." We should think such footwear would be rather uncomfortable during the winter season, but let us not complain, for if we are to have anything at all dressed in decollette style, we think it had better be the feet.

All of the Christian's reward is not reserved for eternity. On the contrary, there are blessed foretastes of it in the present life. The only truly happy hearts on earth are those in which Jesus reigns, and there is no joy known among men like that of leading a lost soul into the kingdom. To be sure, there are some denials involved in Christian discipleship, but the gains even in this present sphere of existence far outweigh the losses. This is only repeating in other language the memorable words of St. Paul: "Godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come."

The Orlando (Fla.) Reporter speaks of the Southern Methodist University at Dallas, Texas, as an institution that may "surpass Vanderbilt University." Where has the Editor of this journal been that he is so benighted as this? Does not he know that some of the great educational luminaries of the land have declared that a Church can build and maintain only "little colleges," and that it takes undenominational and independent boards of trustees to establish and keep up universities? We hope that Brother Sweat, the alert Editor of the Florida Christian Advocate, will make a special trip to Orlando to enlighten this Rip Van Winkle on the tripod. It will never do to let him continue to abide in such dense and dark ignorance.

When a person has completely subordinated self to the service of God and humanity he is not far from a state of Christian perfection. This noblest of human achievements no man can accomplish in his own strength. Only by the assistance of his ascended Lord and the Holy Spirit, whom he has sent forth to represent him in the world, may one hope for such a triumph. It is pitiful to see people affecting great holiness when self is the most outstanding thing in both their conversation and conduct, or indulging in a religious harangue when at its close some personal gain is seen to be what they are after. Human beings are spiritual only in proportion as they have the 'mind that was in Christ Jesus,' whose meat and drink was to do the Father's will, and who lived and died for others. Humility and unselfishness are two of the invariable marks of deep piety.

THE APPRAISEMENT THAT WILL COUNT.

A writer in the Christian Guardian uses as the caption of his article, "Christ's New Yardstick of Greatness." This is the standard by which all must at last be measured, and what a revision of estimates there will be when it is applied! The peasant in that day may tower above the king, and the obscure circuit rider above the ecclesiastical dignitary. The really important question is not what does the world think of us, or what does the Church think of us, but what does He, who can look into the deepest recesses of the heart and who knows every secret thought and purpose, think of us? How dare we affect to be what we are not, when we know that that searching Eye is upon us, and that under its awful scrutiny we shall finally be rightly appraised and classified?

AN EVIL THAT NEEDS CORRECTION.

It is not living alone which is expensive in this day. It also now costs enormously to die. We have scant patience with any of the trusts which seek to extort money unjustly from the people, but of them all we think the union of undertakers with a view to making the tender feeling that the bereaved have for their dead yield them a financial profit, is the most cold-blooded and reprehensible. Think of charging a poor family $5 for hanging a piece of black crepe on a door knob for a few hours! And the law will not now allow a body to be shipped without being embalmed (doubtless a wise regulation), and this costs from $15 to $25; while most of the prices exacted for other things are proportionately exorbitant. Manifestly these abuses call for some wise legislation. In some way these outrages should be stopped at the earliest moment possible.

A HOARY FALLACY.

Fallacies cannot be said, like truth, to be eternal, but some of them are wonderfully long-lived. An illustration of this is seen in the manner in which the utterance of Gamaliel when the Apostles were arraigned before the Jewish Council in Jerusalem, is yet made to do service. Every now and then when some new movement springs up and the wisdom of it is called in question, its adherents are quick to bring into requisition this declaration of the famous old Jewish Rabbi: "For if this counsel or this work be of men, it will come to nought; but if it be of God, ye cannot overthrow it."

The truth is, the Pharisaic philosophy was never given the divine sanction. It is neither true that everything that comes from God invariably triumphs, nor that everything that has an evil origin quickly comes to an end. The Spirit of God frequently moves upon the hearts of men, only to be resisted and defeated in his efforts to save them. And if Satan can thwart the divine purpose with reference to an individual, who will say that he may not sometimes do so with reference to society? Who will say that God's purpose concerning Sodom and Gomorrah, or his will concerning the people living at the time of the flood, was fulfilled? He has read history poorly who does not know that many patriotic and noble undertakings in behalf of suffering humanity failed, and that they who projected them paid the penalty for their high-mindedness and heroism on the scaffold or at the martyr's stake.

Nor is it a fact that evil forces and influences quickly spend their strength and come to nothing. Mohammedanism is centuries old, and yet has vast millions of adherents. Buddhism is older still, and its following is even larger. Several decades have elapsed since the birth of Mormonism, yet we see it growing in our own enlightened land by leaps and bounds. The dramshop is not of God, but it has long existed, and is not fast disappearing. We believe in the final supremacy of righteousness upon the earth, but we fear that many ages will elapse before the arrival of that glad day. But the reign of evil will never come to "nought." Its frightful effects will be eternal. Its myriads of victims will live forever in their awful abode of everlasting death and darkness.

It has never been God's plan to have his followers adopt a policy of non-resistance toward things that they believe to be wrong and complacently wait to see whether they will succeed or fail. This was not Elijah's method in dealing with the priests of Baal. It was not the method of any of the prophets. It was not the method of the chosen twelve. Aside from the Synoptic Gospels, the New Testament is largely controversial. Paul was sorely troubled by false teachers—some even suggest that they constituted his "thorn in the flesh." God's way of combating evil has ever been to use largely human instrumentalities—to operate through men and women who had the clearness of vision to discriminate between the good and bad, and the courage to stand up bravely for what they conceived to be right and against that which they apprehended to be wrong.

Whatever other defense may be put forward in their behalf, it cannot be claimed that there is any "apostolic succession" for dodgers and compromisers. The primitive Christian had convictions that they asserted everywhere and which they stood ready to seal with their own blood. Nowhere do we find them sitting down and saying, "Our religion is of God; men cannot overthrow it; it will prevail; so we need not bother about it." On the contrary, we find them going hither and thither "turning the world upside down." Good men often grow weary of the strife incident to this earthly existence, but for them there is no escape from it. From beginning to end, life is a great battle, in which all who are true and brave must perform their part.

The great secret of success in life is to be ready when your opportunity comes.—Disraeli.

THE MISSION OF WOMAN.

(The following discussion by Dr. Albert Taylor Bledsoe was first prepared and delivered as an Annual Address before the Lee and Jackson Literary Society at the Wesleyan Female Institute at Staunton, Va., on the 14th of June, 1871, and was later arranged for publication in The Southern Review, of which he was the brilliant editor, and appeared in the October number of that famous periodical the same year.)

I.

One of the subjects which now, for the first time in the history of the world, is beginning to attract the attention which its importance demands, is the mission, the education, and the influence of woman. In his "History of Morals," Mr. Lecky devotes the last and best chapter of the work, consisting of more than a hundred pages, to a learned, comprehensive, and eloquent survey of 'the position of woman.' And among the discourses of the celebrated Adolph Monod, there are several on 'the mission' and on 'the life' of woman. We mention these productions only because of all the innumerable discussions of the same subject, they are the only ones to which we shall have occasion to refer.

We have been accustomed to regard the woman's rights movement as too insignificant and too absurd to deserve serious attention. But in some portions of the border States, as well as in the universal North, this movement is assuming proportions, and manifesting a spirit, which inspire some of our most thoughtful minds with no little alarm. They are beginning to fear that, after all, this most absurd movement may gain the ascendancy in this country.

One thing is certain, namely, that nothing is too absurd to fail of success in this 'the most enlightened nation on the face of the globe.' We appeal to facts. We now see recently emancipated slaves—as ignorant as their emancipators are malignant—in our legislative halls, in the highest judicial offices of some of the Southern States, and on boards of trustees as the conservators and guardians of the interests of the higher education. Could anything be more absurd? Or would anything, only a few years ago, have been pronounced more utterly impossible, if any one had been bold enough to predict such a result? In view of such facts, indeed, we are almost inclined to believe, that the more absurd anything is the greater are its chances of success under the radical rule of the present day. * * * Women may never have the right to vote in this country; but whether they have or not, their prospects for the enjoyment of that 'right' are now apparently better than were those of the blacks previous to the late war. Who knows, then, what may happen, or, in the course of time, go down with the sovereign people, composed of all colors, all ages, and both sexes?

If, however, the movement in question should succeed, it would be nothing new under the sun. History would only repeat itself; and, in the light of past facts, we may easily predict the result. The women of Rome, at one period, succeeded in securing all 'their rights,' as they are called, and the effects of their emancipation from the laws of God and nature are recorded in the annals of the Empire.

'A complete revolution,' says Mr. Lecky, 'had thus passed over the constitution of the family. Instead of being constituted on the principle of autocracy, it was constituted on the principle of co-equal partnership. (The very thing now aimed at in this country.) The legal position of the wife had become one of complete independence, while her social position was one of great dignity.' How glorious! But, adds the historian, 'The more conservative spirits were naturally alarmed at the change.' And the effects of the revolution, as they now stand recorded on the page of history, justify their alarm.

'Another and still more important consequence,' says Mr. Lecky, 'resulted from the changed form of marriage.' Being looked upon simply as a civil contract, entered into for the happiness of the contracting parties, its continuance depended on mutual consent. Either party might dissolve it at will, and the dissolution gave both the right to re-marry. There can be no question, that under this system the obligations of marriage were treated with extreme levity. We find Cicero repudiating his wife, Terentia, because he desired a new dowry; Augustus compelling the husband of Livia to repudiate her when she was already pregnant, that he might marry her himself; Cato ceding his wife, with the consent of her father, to his friend Hortensius, and resuming her after his death; Maecenas continually changing his wife; Sempronius Sophus repudiating his wife, because she had once been to the public games without his knowledge; Paulus Aemilius taking the same step without assigning any reason, and defending himself by saying, "My shoes are new and well made, but no one knows where they pinch me." Nor did women show less alacrity in repudiating their husbands. Seneca denounced this evil with especial vehemence, declaring that divorce in Rome no longer brought with it any shame, and that there were women who reckoned their years rather by their husbands than by the Consuls. Christians and Pagans echoed the same complaint. According to Tertullian, "divorce is the fruit of marriage." Murtial speaks of a woman who had already arrived at her tenth husband; Juvenal of a woman who had eight husbands in five years. But the most extraordinary recorded instance of this kind is related by St. Jerome, who assures us that there existed at Rome a wife who was married to her twenty-third husband, she herself being his twenty-first wife.

The evil did not stop here. The family being constituted, not on the principle of autocracy, but on that of a co-equal partnership, it became, instead of a well organized social unit, a two-headed, self-fighting monster. Hence, in the language of Professor Seeley, 'precisely as we think of marriage, the Roman of imperial times thought of celibacy—that is, as the most comfortable but the most expensive condition of life. Marriage with us is a relation for which a man must pay; with the Romans it was an excellent pecuniary investment, but an intolerably disagreeable one.' The marriage relation, in one word, having degenerated into a civil contract for convenience merely, it became so 'intolerably disagreeable' that men shunned it as they would have shunned the plague. And to this cause it is that Professor Seeley ascribes the decline, the fall, and the ruin of Imperial Rome. 'Whatever the remote and ultimate cause may have been,' says he, 'the immediate cause to which the fall of the Empire can be traced is a physical, not a moral decay. In valor, discipline, and science, the Roman armies remained what they had always been, and the peasant emperors of Illyricum were worthy successors of Cincinnatus and Calus Marius. But the problem was, how to replenish the armies. Men were wanted; the empire perished for want of men.' 'A stationary population,' he continues, 'suffers from war, or any other destructive plague, far more, and more permanently, than a progressive one.' Accordingly we are 'told that Julius Caesar, when he attained the supreme power, found an alarming thinness of population. Both he and his successor struggled earnestly against this evil. The grand maxim of Metellus Macedonius, that marriage is a duty which, however painful, every citizen ought manfully to discharge, acquired great importance in the eyes of Augustus. He caused the speech in which it was contained to be read in the Senate. Had he lived in our days, he would have reprinted it with a preface. To admonition he added legislation. The Lex Julia is irrefragable proof of the existence at the beginning of the Imperial time of that very disease which, four centuries after, destroyed the Empire. How alarming the symptoms already were, may be measured by the determined resolution with which Augustus forced his enactment upon the people, in spite of the most strenuous resistance. The enactment consisted of a number of privileges and precedences given to marriage. It was, in fact, a handsome bribe offered by the State to induce the citizens to marry. How strange, according to our notions, the condition of society must have been; how directly opposite from the present one, the view taken by statesmen of the question of population, and how unlike the present one, the view taken by the people in general of marriage, were, may be judged by this law.' That is, the women of Rome, having acquired the independence and the dignity for which so many in this country are now struggling, the marriage relation became so 'intolerably disagreeable,' that neither the laws of the Empire nor the interests of mankind could save the Empire from ruin.

Mr. Lecky arrives at the same conclusion. 'Augustus attempted in vain,' says he, 'to arrest, by laws against celibacy, and by conferring many privileges on the father of three children, a great and general indisposition toward marriage. "If, Romans," said Metellus, in a singularly curious speech, "we could live without wives, we should keep free from that source of trouble; but since nature has ordained that men can neither live sufficiently agreeable with wives, nor at all without them, let us consult the perpetual endurance of our own race rather than our own brief enjoyment."

'In the midst of this torrent of corruption a great change was passing over the legal position of Roman women. They had not at first been in a condition of absolute subjection or subordination to their relations. They arrived, during the Empire, at a point of freedom and dignity which they subsequently lost, and have never altogether regained.' So true is it, that the right constitution of the family, or the marriage relation, lies at the very root of national greatness, power, and glory. The women of Rome, indeed, acquired the rights of men; but the consequence was, that woman, with all her short-lived independence, dignity, and glory, soon sank beneath the ruins of the Empire. She tasted the forbidden fruit, and it proved fatal to the glory for which God had intended her.

'Men were wanting; and the Empire perished for the want of men. The proof of this,' says Prof. Seeley, 'is in the fact that the contest with barbarism was carried on by the help of barbarous soldiers.' The Emperor, Probus, began this system, and under his successors it came more and more into use. As the danger of it could not be mistaken, we must suppose that the necessity of it was still more unmistakable. It must have been because the Empire could not furnish soldiers for its own defense, that it was doomed to the strange expedient of turning its enemies and plunderers into its defenders. Yet on these scarcely disguised enemies it came to depend so exclusively that in the end the Western Empire was destroyed, not by the hostile army, but by its own.' How different had been the result if, instead of aspiring to the independence, and dignity, and the rights of men, the women of Rome had been, as in the days of the glory of the Republic, content to furnish, educate, and train men for the defense of the Empire! Shall we repeat the same stupendous folly? Shall we, in spite of the Word of God and the lessons of experience, run the same race of madness and ruin? Shall we, too, in spite of all our boasted wisdom and high Christian civilization, fall miserable victims to the reforms instigated by the strong-minded women, and supported by the weak-minded men, of this age and nation? We hope not. We do trust that God, in his good providence, has no such awful, no such unutterable calamity, in store for us.

The root of all this mischief is the idea that woman is the equal of man, is cast in the same mold with man, and is appointed to do the same work as man. No greater mistake could be made. 'It would take many Newtons,' said Coleridge, 'to make a Milton.' True; but then it would take as many Miltons to make a Newton. The truth is, that the one could not be made out of the other at all without a very great waste of material. We propose, then, to leave them just as God has made them: the one for science, and for song the other. If Milton had been required to write the Principia, or Newton the Paradise Lost, he would have been ruined—utterly lost to the world. In like manner, if woman were required to do the work of man, or man the work of woman, human affairs would be turned out of their natural channels, and thrown into hopeless confusion. Let man and woman, then, like twin stars, or like the sun and moon, move in their own appointed spheres or orbits; unless the object be, not to preserve the harmony of the world, but to 'uproar the universal peace.'

Does any one ask, whether woman is equal to man? If so, we reply that she is neither equal, nor superior, nor inferior to man. She was made for a different sphere, and, in her own sphere, she is without a peer or rival. 'One star is different from another star in glory'. If any one ask, then, whether Venus is equal, or superior, or inferior to Jupiter, we answer, she is neither. Jupiter is superior to Venus in size and in effulgence; but then Venus, the evening and the morning star, exerts a far more powerful influence over our heart, and feelings, and imagination, than Jupiter. Everything which God has made is beautiful in its own place and season; and hence, it is no part of our aim or philosophy to revise, or to reconstruct, the work of his hands. We would not, for the world, have Venus put in the place of Jupiter, or Jupiter in the place of Venus. Much less would we have woman thrust into man's sphere, or man into woman's sphere. And woe, woe to the people, or nation, or society, by whom they shall be made to exchange places, or to occupy the same sphere. We are, for our part, satisfied with the world as God made it, without feeling the least desire to revise, or correct, the moral code of the universe.

First a strong-minded woman, and then a weak-minded man, wrote a great book, consisting of some six hundred pages or more, to prove that Lord Bacon wrote Shakespeare's plays! Now, the man, or the woman, who cannot see the difference between Shakespeare and Bacon ought to be excused for denying the difference between man and woman, and for joining the woman's rights movement. They have, in our humble opinion, an inherent and inalienable right to make such fools of themselves; that is to say, if nature has not done the business for them. Bacon could no more have written the least of Shakespeare's plays than Shakspeare could have written the "Novum Organum," or "The Advancement of Learning." The attempt of the author in question to show that Bacon was a great poet, is simply ridiculous. He had the reason, but he lacked the rhythm, of the poet. He had the imagination, but he wanted the plastic power and soul of a Shakespeare. In one word, to use the language of Shakespeare, 'he had no music in his soul,' and was, therefore, better fitted for 'stratagems and spoils,' than for the building of 'the lofty rhyme.' His villainous translation of some portions of the Psalms stands in the way of our author's theory; but he apologizes for this on the ground that the 'thoughts were not his own.' True, the thoughts were not his own; they were too grand and beautiful for any uninspired mind; but, then 'the rhythm' was all his own. Let us look at this, then, and see the likeness between Shakespeare and Bacon. A single specimen will suffice; and here it is:

'Ye monsters of the mighty deep,
Your maker's praises spout;
Up from the sound ye codlings peep;
And wag your tails about.'

How like the sublime strains of Othello, or Macbeth, or Lear, or Hamlet! Who, after reading such glorious lines, can doubt that Bacon composed Shakespeare's dramas?

The universe everywhere presents itself to our contemplation under the great law of unity in diversity, or diversity in unity. To select only one out of innumerable examples which might be adduced, if we look at the extremities of the limbs of different animals, we see this wonderful unity in diversity, or diversity in unity. For, as Professor Owen, the greatest of living comparative anatomists, assures us, the hand of man, the hoof of the horse, the paddle of the mole, the fin of the fish, and the wing of the bat, are all constructed on the same archetypal idea, or internal plan. Here, in all these diversified forms, we have a unity of design or plan. The human hand, with its manifold, flexible fingers, and delicate tactual sense—how admirably is it adapted to the uses and purposes of man! We find the same bones, or parts, in the forefoot of the horse; but there they are sheathed in a solid hoof, with which he strikes the hard earth with impunity. In like manner, the same parts, and the same internal plan, exist in the paddle of the mole; but yet, in its external form, it is so modified and adjusted to the little animal's mode of life that it 'may almost be said to swim through the earth.' Again, how admirably is the fin of the fish, with the same internal structure or relation of parts, adapted to its peculiar wants or mode of life! How admirably, in other words, it answers the purpose of an oar, cleaving the waters and directing the course of the fish, as it darts through the element in which it lives! Finally, the wing of the bat, without departing from the same structure of parts, is so formed that the animal beats the air therewith and flies above the earth. One model, and yet how many different modifications, to answer different purposes, or spheres, or modes of life! Innumerable illustrations of the same great law, and the same wonderful adaptation, exist in all departments of nature. In the language of the great comparative anatomist already referred to, we everywhere behold 'the same organ, in different animals, under every variety of form and function.' Moreover, we may add, we everywhere behold 'the same organ' exactly, and wonderfully adapted to the particular function it is required to perform.

But man, who, in this lower world, is the brightest of all God's creatures, is also the brightest manifestation of this great law of the universe. He is one, and yet two. 'God said, Let us make man in our own image, after our own likeness.' 'So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him;' and yet, 'male and female created he them.' Now, it was the mind of man, and not the body, which God created in his own image; and it was this image, this mind, which he created 'male and female.' Hence, when Coleridge says, "there is a sex in our souls," he but echoes the voice of God. In the work of Mrs. Elizabeth Strutt, entitled "The Feminine Soul; its Nature and Attributes," this 'sex in our souls,' is well, is admirably illustrated. In the two celebrated discourses, also, on "The mission of woman," by Adolph Monod, the difference between the male and female soul is unanswerably established by an appeal to both reason and Revelation. The sphere or mission of woman given, as presented in the Word of God, it is easy to see that the nature and attributes of the feminine soul are exactly adapted to the design of the Creator. Or, on the other hand, the nature and attributes of the 'feminine soul' being good, as they are set forth both in the work and the Word of God, it is easy to determine the sphere and mode of life for which she was created. Let not the sphere of woman, then, be confounded with that of man, and let not her soul be unsexed to do the work of man; unless, indeed, it be our object to subvert the order of nature, to 'uproar the universal peace, and pour the sweet milk of concord into hell.' This thing was done in Rome; let it not be done in America.

FAVORS UNDERTAKING SOMETHING WORTH WHILE.

Dear Dr. Meek: I have read Brother Bingham's communication in the Advocate of February 13, suggesting some improvements at Millsaps College, and your editorial on the same subject, and I rise to ask if it would be wise to go before the Methodists of Mississippi with a proposition like that?

I am not the man to suggest what should be done for several reasons—mainly because I have no money to give, and, as I am not conversant with the needs of the College, it might be thought by some very much out of place for me to be suggesting any thing. But I have great interest in the College, and some idea of what we ought to be doing down there, as well as of what we ought to be doing for the Church through the College, and I would like to speak my mind. It strikes me that in these twenty years and more we should have been pressing the demand for a building, or buildings, of such magnitude and architectural design, that, facing any point of the compass, they would be recognized at a glance as Millsaps College; especially by one who was looking for it. Somebody has done the Church and the College an injustice or we are all blind to our interests.

Now, my brother, would it not be an injustice to the College, and a reflection upon its past and present work, and a great hindrance to its future to go before 125,000 Methodists in Mississippi asking for $40,000 or $50,000? Is it not time for us to plan to do something for Christian education in the State worthy of our great Church? We have hurt our cause already by our neglect and littleness, and it is high time we were doing something and getting a proper vision of our relation to the future of Methodism, or our institutions of learning will soon be "facing" the junk pile.

We must remember that this is an age when men of means do not speak of money except in large figures. Small things do not appeal to them, and when we get broad enough to take in something great then these financiers will take notice.

I wonder that good Major Millsaps has not grown discouraged and impatient with us ere this and flung us overboard. Here we have, for these twenty years and more, sat still and let him dare the whole Methodist Church in Mississippi to take all he had by duplicating every dollar that we would raise and we didn't have the grit to do it.

The 125,000 Methodists of the State should have made the Major say long ago: "My brethren, hold on just a bit. Are you going to take it all?" But for these twenty years and more we have heard him begging us to come on and get it. What is the matter with us any way?

Where are the Alumni of the College? It seems to me that in these twenty years and more we have turned out young men enough to pledge $25,000 to be paid in five years. Many of them are rich and in five years many more will be still richer. Then let the rest of us common folks pledge $75,000 in five years. If you will put up a $100,000 building out there, it will not matter which way it faces, the next visitors going out that way, whether looking for the College or not, will see it.

Let the Board of Trustees, the President and Faculty get a vision of a twentieth century obligation and a twentieth century opportunity and then face a twentieth century Methodism, and all take fire for a twentieth century movement for Christian education to the tune of $100,000, and see what will happen.

It is stated that the Methodist Episcopal Church has thirteen houses of worship in process of construction in Chicago.

Rev. R. J. Campbell, of London, the successor of the famous Dr. Joseph Parker, is spending his winter vacation in Spain.

Dr. O. E. Brown, of Vanderbilt University, who had been in the Orient for several months, returned home on the same steamer with Bishop and Mrs. W. B. Murrah.

The State Street Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of Bristol, Va., claims to have the largest organized Bible class of men in the United States, if not the largest in the world. It has a membership of 714.

Bishop and Mrs. F. J. McConnell, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, are among the Americans who are hemmed up in Mexico City. A recent telegram announced that they were safe, but considerable solicitude is felt for them.

The Methodists of Arkansas are bestirring themselves to place Galloway College upon a better financial footing. Rev. W. C. Watson, the Field Agent, who is leading in this movement, recently visited two towns which together contributed $2,000 and promised to do still more.

Bishop W. B. Murrah will preach the Commencement sermon for the Southern University at Greensboro, Ala., on Sunday, June 1. The sermon at the evening hour of the same day will be preached by Bishop J. H. McCoy. This historic institution is the alma mater of both these distinguished ministers.

Dr. T. N. Ivey, who some time ago was operated on in North Carolina for appendicitis, and who has been absent from Nashville for about three months, is reported to be steadily improving. During his absence the Nashville Christian Advocate has been under the direction of Rev. J. S. Chadwick, the Assistant Editor.

Dr. E. G. B. Mann, the versatile editor of the Central Methodist Advocate, recently assisted in a successful revival at Hopkinsville, Ky. At the evening service on February 14, there was a great outpouring of the Holy Spirit, which resulted in fourteen bright conversions. Dr. Mann is in great demand for evangelistic work.

The Mission Board of the South Carolina Conference will seek to raise, above its assessments and all other missionary obligations, $20,000 for the work in Brazil. This conclusion was reached at the Mid-year Meeting of the Board at Columbia, Feb. 12 and 13, after stirring addresses had been delivered by Bishop Lambuth and Dr. E. H. Rawlings.

At the meeting of the Board of Directors of the Galloway Memorial Hospital, in Nashville, Tenn., on Feb. 12, it was announced that the total subscription fund for this enterprise was $178,787. It was estimated that it will require $150,000 to carry forward the work of this enterprise for the ensuing year, and confidence was expressed that the full amount needed could be secured.

The Northwestern Christian Advocate of February 12, stated that Bishop Hoss came to Chicago on the Sunday preceding to preach in the Moody Church of that city, but was physically unable to meet his engagement after his arrival. The Bishop has returned to Battle Creek, Michigan, where he is resting and undergoing treatment. Bishop Denny is with him.

Southern College, at Sutherland, Fla., which was established ten years ago, is reported to own now property valued at $200,000. The president of this institution is Dr. W. L. Clifton, who for a number of years was at the head of Grenada Female College, the North Mississippi Conference school. Dr. Clifton seems to have made a fine impression upon the Florida Methodists.

"Pastor" Russell, who recently brought suit against The Brooklyn Eagle for exposing some of his questionable methods of operation, lost his case, the jury remaining out only a few minutes. Surely it is high time that the secular papers were ceasing to scatter abroad the poisonous teachings of this pulpit mountebank, simply because he furnishes them plate matter free of cost. There are many worthy men among the editors and publishers of our secular weeklies, and they ought to lead in a movement for reform in this direction.

Dr. W. E. Thompson, pastor of the First Methodist Church of Tampa, Fla., who was accused by Mr. L. T. Ward of being largely responsible for the wreckage of the Bank of Collierville, at Collierville, Tenn., after an investigation last week, conducted at his request, was exonerated by the Committee of Inquiry. Mr. Ward, who formerly was a preacher of the Memphis Conference, but who gave up the work of the itinerancy several years ago, has been convicted and sentenced to the penitentiary for a term of three years, the charge against him being the misappropriation of funds.

A POINT OF ORDER, PLEASE.

Dear Mr. Editor: I rise to a point of order, if you please:

The presiding elder is authorized to fix the time for convening his district conference, but it is an unwarranted assumption of authority and a distinct discourtesy to the conference for him to announce beforehand the time for its adjournment. The district conference adjourns at its own pleasure.

Another point, please: The mapped-out program, with chosen subjects assigned to speakers, is an illegality, for the evident reason that it is the assumption by one, or, at best, only a few, of that which, within disciplinary limitations, is the prerogative of the entire body, namely, to shape its own program and determine its own conduct.

As indicated in the Discipline, the district conference is a mid-year conference of inquiry into the needs and conditions of the work, with a view to giving spiritual inspiration for larger service.

And, while on the floor, let me suggest: There is no one in a district whom it better becomes to be a pattern of orderliness and consideration than the presiding elder.

A SWEEPING VICTORY FOR THE CHURCH.

Chancellor Allison, of Nashville, Tenn., read before a large audience last Friday his decision in the Vanderbilt University lawsuit, sustaining the contentions of the Church against the majority of the Trustees at every point. The full text of the Chancellor's decision reached us too late for publication in this issue of the Advocate, but we may let our readers see it next week. The findings of the Court in the opinion handed down may be briefly summarized as follows:

1. That the original charter was granted to representatives of the several Annual Conferences co-operating in the movement to establish a university, and that the Memphis Resolutions are not surplusage, but are a valid and binding part of that instrument.

2. That Vanderbilt University was founded by the Southern Methodist Church, is owned by it, and is now being largely "maintained and patronized by the said Church in the true legal sense."

3. That the corporation brought into existence by the agents of the original patronizing Conferences simply held the title to the University and its property in trust for them.

4. That the Trustees are not members of this corporation, and do not hold, and have never held, the right to elect members of the Board of Trust independent of the Church; but that, on the contrary, that right originally belonged to the patronizing Annual Conferences, and has by them been legally transferred to the General Conference, in which it is now vested. From this it follows that Messrs. N. E. Harris, of Macon, Ga.; A. W. Biggs, of Memphis, Tenn., and A. V. Godbey, of Austin, Texas—the trustees elected by the last General Conference at Asheville—are entitled to their seats.

5. That the College of Bishops constitute a Board of Supervisors of the University, and have the right, jointly with the Board of Trust, to elect officers and professors and to assist in prescribing the plan of government and courses of study.

6. Judge Allison paid Commodore Vanderbilt a beautiful tribute, saying that he did not impose any conditions upon his gifts beneficial to him or his family, nor reserve to himself or descendants any of the rights and privileges of a "founder," nor impose any restrictions whatever tending to personal aggrandizement; that he did not require his name to be chiseled in marble or granite or placed in copper or brass on the door of the University; but that, on the contrary, his liberal donations were apparently wholly unselfish and singularly free from all vanity and desire for vainglory.

The Hon. G. T. Fitzhugh, of Memphis, whose brilliant closing speech for the Church was one of the outstanding events of this memorable trial, in an interview contained in the Nashville Banner of February 23, thus refers to Chancellor Allison's decision and the beneficial effects of it:

"The opinion is a remarkably clear and concise expression of the irresistible conclusions of law and fact. Every contention made by the complainants, every right claimed by the Church, is fully sustained. This decision is far-reaching in its consequences. It means not alone that the great Church which created and founded Vanderbilt University shall not be deprived of the control of its own creation, but it means that all Christian denominations which establish such charities shall not lose all control of them by the mere act of incorporating the same through their agents for the sole purpose of making the charities perpetual and permanent, and to afford the denominations a more convenient method of administering them.

"The decision will give hope and confidence to all Christian denominations, which have founded and now control more than seventy per cent of the higher institutions of learning in our country.

"Moreover, it will deter trustees, who were chosen as agents of such denominations, from yielding to the temptation to deny the source of their own title and seek to get rid of the provisions of charters binding them to the Church, in order to secure the benefits of foundations which exclude denominational control."

Nothing but evangelistic sermons will be expected at the preaching hours.

The following are the committees:—

ADDITIONAL SUBSCRIPTIONS REPORTED.

Since my last report the following subscriptions have been received toward the fund to buy the old Methodist Church property in Mansfield for Mansfield College:

F. T. Whited, Shreveport	$10.00
Dr. W. N. Cunningham	15.00
Miss Pauline G. Randle, Mangham, La.	5.00
Dr. John L. Scales, Shreveport	10.00

Total	$40.00
Amount previously reported	342.00

Grand total	$382.00
Balance needed	618.00

The amount credited to Dr. Cunningham was given to Miss Pauline Randle for another purpose, to which she added the $5 credited to her, but as it was never applied, all parties concerned agreed that this was the best disposition to make of it.

Rev. Paul M. Brown, presiding elder of the Shreveport District, Chairman of the Conference Board of Education, and a member of the Board of Trustees of Mansfield College, realizes the importance of this movement, and has volunteered to solicit subscriptions personally, and I am anxiously awaiting the results of his efforts. I wish a number of other presiding elders and pastors would help, even if they could do no more than to favorably mention the matter before their congregations.

Still hoping and praying that this important effort may not be allowed to fail, I am very truly,
THOMAS H. MORRIS.

WORKERS NEEDED.

Wm. F. Quillian.

Applications are being received every week for the kind of workers that are being prepared for service in the Methodist Training School, Nashville, Tennessee.

Within the past sixty days twelve applications have been received. We are unable to supply the demand. I quote below a letter from one of our strongest pastors which is typical of the applications that are constantly coming in.

"I am writing you to find out what can be done in furnishing us a Missionary or Deaconess for the spring and summer months. We have a fruitful field here, but there is so much the pastor cannot do. There are hundreds of working girls that are being reached by no Church at all. There are many families of working people that are without the Church's influence, and we pastors cannot reach them as we would like. A lady helper could reach the women and children, and through them we could reach the husbands and fathers. The Iron Mountain R. R. Shops are here employing hundreds of men; the Peter's Shoe Factory is here employing hundreds of girls as well as large numbers of men and boys, and if we can get this help for the time above mentioned it will do more than anything else to bring about a better day for our Church in De Soto and to advance the Kingdom in our midst."

The statements in this letter are indicative of the conditions all over our Church. The day is at hand when the work of the most efficient pastor will not and cannot reach all of the people. If he visits the members of his congregation and ministers unto their needs his hands are full.

John Wesley was a man of affairs. By many he was called an innovator. Dr. J. R. Green says, "The least results of the Methodist revival were the Methodists themselves. The noblest results were to remedy guilt, ignorance, physical suffering and the social degradation of the profligate and poor." Wesley organized many friendly Societies, Trades Unions, Co-operative Societies, Anti Slavery Clubs, a Dispensary, Widows' Home and Orphans' Asylum; he established missions to the mines, the factories, the mountains. We need to place the emphasis where Wesley placed it when he said, we need congregations "all at it, at all times, in all places, in all ways." This is the great mission of the modern Training School. These schools must be enlarged because there will be an ever increasing demand for workers. In such an institution the workers are not only trained but sifted so that when they go out they are ready for the most efficient service. There are in America seventy thousand Catholic Sisters. There are only one thousand Deaconesses, of which only one hundred are in the South. We appeal to our pastors to encourage their young men and women to take this course in order that the demands of the Church and the Kingdom may be met. We appeal to our great Church, whose coffers are bursting with wealth, to properly equip this institution that its mission may be fulfilled.

CHURCH EXTENSION NOTICE.

The meeting of the Executive Committee of the Louisiana Conference Board of Church Extension will be held in the Methodist Church in Alexandria on Tuesday, March 18, at 7:30 p. m. All persons who have applications to come before this Committee will please see that they are properly filled out and signed, and sent in time.

THE MESSAGE OF DEUTERONOMY.

(Extract from a sermon recently delivered in the Central M. E. Church, South, of Webb City, Mo., by the pastor, Rev. C. C. Selecman.)

To illustrate how broad and practical are the teachings of Deuteronomy, attention may be called to the fact that Moses takes high ground on many of the very subjects that are uppermost in the teachings of advocates of social welfare to-day. Josiah Strong, Jane Addams, Jacob Riis and others find the roots of all their highest ideals deeply imbedded in the soil of the Mosaic Code. The great statesman, whose ideas of morality have never been outgrown, deals in a practical and direct fashion, not as a theorist, but as a man of affairs, with such questions as Wealth, Poverty, Social Justice, Education, Sanitation, Crime and Disease.

Men of wealth are warned not to forget their God, who brought them out of the bitter experiences of Egypt and gave them their power to acquire wealth. The poor are to be dealt with in sympathy and generosity. For them the gleanings are to be left in the field, in the olive trees and in the vineyards. The widows were shielded from the rapacity of cruel money lenders.

Honesty is demanded in weights and measures. Justice is called for in dealing even with the sojourner, the class usually looked upon by all venders and innkeepers as legitimate prey. Care is taken to prevent the spread of that dread disease, leprosy; and sanitary regulations are elaborated in painful detail. Above all this, a system of religious education for the young is made obligatory, which rendered every home an educational and character building institution. "These words thou shalt teach to thy children, thou shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thy house, and when thou walkest by the way. And thou shalt write them upon the doorposts of thy house, and upon thy gates." Every home an institution for religious education; every child sent out with reverence for God and parents—reverence for law and all holy things, furnished with weapons for moral self defence and for attacking the wrong, gladdened with a sense of personal dignity and nerved by the prospect of future attainment! What greater need has America to-day than a home life like that? Ill fares the nation if this is not the case. Reverence, honesty, charity, justice, sanitation, education—these are some of the nerve centers that must be kept strong if the nation escapes paralysis. But all are grandly summed up in that fine passage that has been called the essence of religion: "And now Israel, what doth Jehovah thy God require of thee, but to fear Jehovah thy God, and walk in all His ways, and to love Him, and to serve Jehovah thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul?"

A PLAN FOR EARLY MISSIONARY COLLECTIONS.

It has been suggested by one of the most successful pastors in the Louisiana Conference that throughout the Conference we use the occasion of the Centennial of the birth of David Livingstone, March 19, which is to be celebrated throughout the Christian world, as an opportunity for practical missionary advancement.

As the date falls on Wednesday, either the previous Sunday, March 16, or the following, which is Easter Sunday, could be set apart for a great missionary rally. An address on Livingstone and his work, and a statement on the needs of Africa as seen by Bishop Lambuth in his recent tour, could be made the basis of a strong appeal to the missionary conscience of the Church. This should be made the occasion for securing our assessments for Home and Foreign Missions in full, at least in those charges where provision has not been made for regular weekly or monthly offerings by an every-member canvass. The inspiration of such an historic occasion, followed by the opportunity for a practical expression of missionary zeal, would be a valuable education in missions.

This plan would also give opportunity for carrying out the wise plan emphasized by Bishop Mouzon at our recent Conference of raising these collections early in the year before any overflow or drouth has cut off the sources from which the money is to come. To get and read such a book as Blaikie's "Personal Life of David Livingstone" (50c), and use it in the preparation of a stirring missionary appeal, will be an inspiration to preacher and people. This appeal can be emphasized by the distribution of Bishop Lambuth's leaflet about his tour, which can be had free.

In case March 23rd, Easter Sunday, is set apart for some other special use, it would be best to adopt the 16th as our Livingstone Centennial, and let it be known that it is to be a great missionary day. On circuits, the time can be extended over the entire month, so as to cover the entire circuit. Even though the collections may have been already provided for at the beginning of the year, I hope that every pastor will observe this great historic occasion with a great rally. I should also be very much obliged to every pastor who will report the results of such a service to the Conference Secretary. Fraternally,

W. WINANS DRAKE,

Conference Missionary Secretary.

THE ADVOCATE 'PHONE USED FOR THE OLD PREACHERS.

My Dear Dr. Meek: May I use the Advocate 'phone to help our old preachers? "Certainly." All right, Doctor; thank you.

Z-R-Z-R-Z-R-Z-R-Z

"Well!"

"Who is that?"

"Smith, First Church, Jackson."

"Doctor, this is Harmon; I just called you up to know if you are going to take the collection for the old preachers THE FIRST SUNDAY IN MARCH."

"Sure! sure! sure!"

"Good! I knew you would. You always do the right thing at the right time and say the right thing at the right time. That is just why the folks and preachers all love you. Good-by!"

Z-R-Z-R-Z-R-Z-R-Z

"All right!"

"Is that Jones of Central Church, Meridian?"

"That's my name; what do you want, Harmon?"

"Jones, on the 48th page of the Conference Minutes you will see that the first Sunday in March is designated as Veterans' Day, when the collection for superannuates should be taken and the money forwarded to S. A. Tomlinson, Gulfport. Are you going to take it?"

"Of course, I am. A man who served four years as presiding elder knows the importance of keeping the Discipline and Conference orders!"

"Good! Your words are words of sobriety and truth!"

Z-R-Z-R-Z-R-Z-R-Z

"Is that Burton, Gulfport?"

"What do you want, Harmon?"

"You owe me a letter about taking that work in your district."

"All right; you will hear from me."

"Be sure to get Tomlinson to help you get the Old Preachers' Fund on the first Sunday in March!"

"This is headquarters for that fund and everything will be O K down here."

"I like that. I want a message like that from every preacher. Good-by."

Z-R-Z-R-Z-R-Z-R-Z

"Is that Ferguson of Philadelphia?"

"Yes."

"Wiley, be sure and take the collection for the old preachers on the first Sunday in March."

"This charge always looks after the orphans and old preachers!"

"Good!"

Z-R-Z-R-Z-R-Z-R-Z

"Is that Herbert Watkins?"

"This is Herbert."

"Watkins, last year, just before the first Sunday in March, you mailed each member of the Jefferson Street Church an envelope in the interest of our old preachers. As I recall, the envelope read: 'Please find enclosed _____ dollars, which is an expression of my love and gratitude for the service rendered the Church by the old preachers.' Are you going to repeat it this year?"

"We'll either do that or something better."

"Now, if every preacher will do just that, we'll report over half the assessment the first quarter."

Well, Dr. Meek, the indication seems to be that all the preachers are going to do the work and take the collection for our Superannuates—THE FIRST SUNDAY IN MARCH!

D. S. HARMON.

HOW TO GET RID OF THEM.

Dear Dr. Meek: Answering a voluminous correspondence on this subject, permit me to say: The first thing to do in ridding a town of blind tigers and bootleggers is to go before the City Council and before the Board of Supervisors at their next meeting, and ask them to make an order on their books, appropriating from their treasuries money not exceeding one-third of the amount obtained in fines from those convicted of violating the liquor laws, to pay the expenses of convicting them. Then the community knows where the money is coming from to defray expenses.

I can then send a detective and the people can secure convictions. It will not do to talk even to two people about raising a subscription. It will be sure to leak.

I will send the names of only such detectives as have signed an agreement with the League to stay sober at all times, and lead a moral life so that their testimony will be worth something before a jury.

There is no reason why the Boards of Supervisors and Town Councils should not make this appropriation. The last Legislature says they may. The League fought hard to get this law. Every legislator who was a servant of the liquor crowd voted against the measure.

The citizens, men and women, should go in a body before unwilling Boards, that are in sympathy with the liquor business, and compel them (morally) to do their duty. This done, the rest is easy.

THE FATE OF THE SAVIOR'S MURDERERS.

Before Jesus was nailed to the cross Judas in despair hanged himself. The year following Calaphas was deposed from his priestly office. Herod, dethroned by Caesar, died in infamy and exile. Pilate, very shortly after the crucifixion, was stripped of his procuratorship and banished from his native land. In misery and gloom he lingered a short time and then put an end to his own life, leaving behind him an execrated name. The house of Annas was destroyed by a mob of Jews, and his son was dragged through the streets, scourged and murdered. Jerusalem, besieged by the Romans, was utterly destroyed. Tens of thousands of its inhabitants were crucified—so many, in fact, that Josephus tells us, the ground about Jerusalem was so thickly studded with crosses that space could not be found in which to erect any more. After the siege, thousands upon thousands of Jews were sold into slavery, the price asked for them being even lower than the miserable pittance Judas received for betraying Jesus. From that time to the present the land of Palestine has been the scene of oppression, famine, war, and rapine. The Jews, scattered through every land, have been a nation of outcasts, persecuted, ostracized, hated, scorned of all men. Truly, truly, the cry, "His blood be on us and on our children," has been answered.

MOTHER'S APRON STRINGS.

By Nixon Waterman.

When I was but a verdant youth,
I thought the truly great
Were those who had attained, in truth,
To man's mature estate.
And none my soul so sadly tried,
Or spoke such bitter things,
As he who said that I was tied
To mother's apron strings.

I loved my mother, yet it seemed
That I must break away
And find the broader world I dreamed
Beyond her presence lay.
But I have sighed and I have cried
O'er all the cruel stings
I would have missed had I been tied
To mother's apron strings.

O happy, trustful girls and boys!
The mother's way is best.
She leads you 'mid the fairest joys,
Through paths of peace and rest.
If you would have the safest guide,
And drink from sweetest springs,
O keep your hearts forever tied
To mother's apron strings.

—A Book of Verse.

A LITTLE MISSIONARY.

"Mother, are you sure God is in the woods, too?" This was a queer question for a Sunday school girl to ask. But, you see, little Janie Cail had been living for two whole weeks in a place where there were no houses, no churches, Sunday schools or day schools; no little girls or boys or women—except her own mother. She saw nothing but their own log-camp in the woods, twenty men, and everywhere—trees, trees. All day long she heard the ringing of the lumberman's axe and the crashing of falling trees or the loud calling of the men at the horses.

It was certainly a queer place for a little girl to live, but when "the boss" of this camp had come to Mrs. Cail and said, "I have hired your husband to come to the lumber-woods for the winter, and now won't you come and cook for us? We will build you a nice, comfortable shack and you can bring your little girl along, it will do her good"—and had offered her such good pay, she just felt she could not afford to refuse the offer. So that is how little eight-year-old Janie came to be spending the winter in the woods.

It was fun, in some ways, living in the woods. Though many of the men were very rough and often swore at the horses and even at each other, they were always kind to the little girl and brought her gum, sheets of lovely white birch bark, and all manner of woodsy things.

It was the second Sunday after they came that Janie had asked, "Is God in the woods, too?" She thought if he was the men must surely have forgotten about it, for she looked into their camp and saw that some were playing cards, a few were lying on their bunks sleeping, and all who were awake were smoking. Every now and then she heard some of the card-playing men swear.

Then a bright thought came into the little curly brown head.

"My, but I'm glad I've learned to print so well. Yes, it will be just the thing to do," she said aloud. So she went back to their own shanty, got out her Bible and some of her nice pieces of birch bark and began to print verses on the bark. She printed, "God is Love," "We Love Him Because He First Loved Us," and many more. She gave them to the men. And that very Sunday little Janie preached twenty sermons—twenty birch-bark sermons. And the men read the sermons and seemed pleased about them. And the next Sunday she did the same, and gave them each a different sermon.

But the next Saturday night two stranger-men came to visit the boss in the camp. They had bottles with them. They treated all the men who would take it to what was in the bottles. The next day five or six men were drunk. That was a terrible Sunday. Janie never forgot it. But in the evening another wise thought came into Janie's head, so she hunted out her very nicest sheet of bark and wrote a letter on it. The letter was to her minister at home. It said:

"Dear Mr. Willson:

Won't you please come and have church in our camp? A lot of the men are drunk to-day and swear terrible. It does not seem a bit like Sunday. The people at home won't get drunk if you leave them for just one Sunday, will they? We need you awful bad. Do come. Yours truly,

JANIE CAIL."

And the minister went. For he read the little girl's letter right out in church. And the people nearly laughed and nearly cried; but wanted their minister to go. And they took up a big collection to buy something that they thought would be nice to go along with Janie's birch-bark sermons.

So the Sunday the minister was there they had preaching in both the morning and the evening, just as they do in real places. And the men were all nice and good that day.

And the next Sunday they had no minister but they had church again—such a queer kind of church:

Some one read "The Lord's My Shepherd" psalm in such a beautiful voice, a choir sang "The Sweet Bye and Bye" in the very nicest way. Then came a lovely solo: "Tell Mother I'll Be There" that made some of the men cry. And then there was more music and at the last the "Our Father" prayer. And the service was all given by little Janie and a big—phonograph, for that was the "something" the people in the church at home had sent to Janie.

So every Sunday after that there was "church." And Sundays got to be quite nice in the lumber-woods—and all because of a little girl.—Marion Wathen, in S. S. Times.

MOTHER—AN APPRECIATION

At 10 o'clock, Monday night, Jan. 27, 1913, the spirit of my precious mother slipped away into the heavenly land. I never knew her to be seriously sick, and when the message came on Thursday, the 23rd, that she was ill, I hurriedly packed my grip and hastened home. Father and mother lived at Houston, Miss., and they were happy and comfortable in their old age, living in their own cozy little home.

When I reached her bedside she was quite sick, but she put her hand up to my face and said: "I'm so glad you came. I know I am very sick. I don't know how this will terminate, but I am ready." The physicians did all they could for her relief, but she gradually grew weaker to the end. When told that her two sons who live far away were coming, she said: "Thank God for that." My brother, Rev. E. S. Lewis, and his wife, of West Point, Miss., arrived a little while ahead of me; then our sister came from Jackson, Miss. Willard and Dixie did not get there until she was gone.

Mother was a great and good woman. She was strong physically, mentally, and spiritually. She was the daughter of a local Methodist preacher (my father also is the son of one), and she grew up to honor God and love the Church. She literally lived for her home and her Church. She was not a demonstrative Christian, but she had strong convictions and a rich experience of grace.

Mother could not tolerate shams, and she was always a model of sincerity and devotion. Her Christian life was so sane, normal and true, that all her children became Christians at an early age, except the writer who was not converted until he was seventeen.

She was a true mother. There was no dancing, no cards, no trashy novels in our home. And what a glorious privilege it was to me to go back home and spend a few days there and be a boy again! Last December I went to see father and mother for a few days, and what a joy it was! Mother was strong and well, and with the exception of deafness, she was in full possession of all her powers.

Can she really be dead? Will I never see her again in the flesh? Oh! mother, mother, may I call you back a moment and speak to you once more? If I have caused you a pain, forgive me. If I added to you burdens, excuse me. Give me your blessing once more.

We buried her beside my brother, who passed away a few years ago. Father is heart-broken, lonely, and sad. For fifty-four years they had walked side by side. On Tuesday night after we had laid her away we gathered in the home, father, four sons and sister, and after reading several Scripture selections, each one prayed that God might comfort and keep us.

Yes, mother is gone, but we know where to find her.

WHY CONTINUE THE LITIGATION?

There is every reason to be gratified at the outcome of the trial of the Vanderbilt lawsuit in the Chancery Court of Davidson County, Tennessee. As is stated elsewhere, Judge Allison upheld the claims of the Church in every particular. His findings were even more favorable than were those of the Vanderbilt Commission, for that body only vested the College of Bishops with visitatorial powers, while the Chancellor held that they are entitled to participate in the active management of the affairs of the institution at all times, according to the specific terms of the Charter. If Judge Allison's decision stands, the Church will have a double grip upon the University that nothing can ever shake loose—one in the hold which her Bishops will have upon it, and the other in that of the Trustees, which she may choose in any manner that she may deem most expedient.

We heartily congratulate all who have contributed to the winning of this splendid victory: the Bishops, who by the instruction of the General Conference, acted for the Church in bringing the suit; the committee who represented them, composed, if we mistake not, of Bishops Candler, Denney, and Murrah; the loyal trustees, who stood up bravely for what they conceived to be right; and the able attorneys—Messrs. Fitzhugh & Biggs, of Memphis, Tenn.; Colonel N. E. Harris, of Macon, Ga.; Judge E. C. O'Rear, of Frankfort, Ky., and Hon. Percy D. Maddin, of Nashville, Tenn.—who so painstakingly prepared the proof in the case, and who so brilliantly argued it in court. But we think there will be no difference of opinion among those who have stood with the Church in this contest, that the one man who is entitled to more credit than any other for what has been accomplished toward saving this magnificent property for Southern Methodism is Bishop E. E. Hoss. From the earliest beginning of the battle up to the present moment, he has stood in the forefront, never once lowering his lance or faltering in the face of the force attacks that have been made upon him. Fortunately, indeed, the Church has been in having so able and resourceful a leader to champion her cause in this perilous hour of her history.

Will the Trustees of the University appeal the case and prolong this litigation? The secular papers state that they probably will. But why should they do so? A majority of them are Methodists who profess to love the Church. As members of the Board of Trust, they ought to be not less representatives of the Church, than of the other parties whom they say they conceive to have rights involved. It is clearly their duty to execute the provisions of the Charter, with justice toward all, and discrimination against none. An unbiased Court of Law has construed that instrument in detail, defining clearly what their obligations are. Why, then, should they reject the Chancellor's decision and set up instead their own opinions, or those of private counsel with partisan leanings? Why not impartially accept the findings of the Court and let the outside parties, of whom so much has been said, do their own fighting if they wish to? Why entail upon their Church, to which they express devotion, and which already has had to expend a large sum of money to maintain what she believes to be her rights, a still heavier expense? These are questions which the Trustees will have to answer at the bar of their own consciences, before that of enlightened public opinion, and when they stand at last before the judgment throne of God.

AN ILLUMINATING DISCUSSION.

A short time since, in looking through a bound volume of The Southern Review, of which Dr. Albert Taylor Bledsoe was the famous editor, we came across a brilliant article from his pen, entitled "The Mission of Woman," about half of which we are publishing in this issue of the Advocate, and the remaining part of which will appear next week. We feel that we are conferring a favor upon our readers in bringing to light again this masterful discussion which is even more pertinent at the present time than when its distinguished author first gave it to the public. We scarcely need to say that anything that emanated from Dr. Bledsoe is well worth careful consideration and study. As a profound thinker, he has had few rivals in the history of the American nation, and as a review editor it is doubtful whether he has ever had an equal in the United States. Many years ago he was the Professor of Mathematics in the University of Mississippi, and had as an assistant the Hon. L. Q. C. Lamar, perhaps the South's foremost citizen since the Civil War, who is known to have regarded Dr. Bledsoe as one of the ablest men with whom he ever came in contact. He was also read and ardently admired by the great Senator J. Z. George of that State, whose extraordinary analytical powers won for him national fame. His "Theodicy" is generally considered the clearest and most convincing exposition of Arminian theology in existence.

It is somewhat disturbing to read this dissertation by this distinguished thinker, student, and writer. One cannot but see that the influences to which he chiefly attributes the ruin of Imperial Rome—the woman's rights movement, and the wide prevalence of divorce and the low birth rate resulting therefrom—are finding an ominous parallel in our own land and age. If these things continue to increase, what the consequences will be God alone can tell. It is positively amazing that so many people should seem to regard this movement, which in reality strikes at the very foundation of our social order, as a matter of comparatively little importance. The truth is, of all the dangers which to-day menace the welfare of Church and State, it is by far the gravest and most insidious.

In the light of history, as it is turned on by Dr. Bledsoe in the course of his discussion, the little top-water philosophers among us who have been pronouncing this woman's rights movement as a "new-coming of the kingdom of God upon earth," and characterizing the opposition to it as an effort "to stop the wheels of progress," ought to apologize to the public for their superficial and misleading splutterings. The fact is, the publication of Dr. Bledsoe's paper, along with such review articles as most of those which are handed out to us in this day, is very much like firing a 13-inch cannon amid a volley of firecrackers. We doubt whether in any other period of American history there have been, in proportion to population, a fewer number of men in our various professions and callings who know how to think deeply. Herein lies our peril, for it is never safe to follow the leadership of persons who cannot see the truly determining forces that operate far down beneath the surface. It is too late for a people to escape ruin when they have been blind to its approach until it has already engulfed them.

KNOWLEDGE HAS ITS PERILS.

There is nothing, except religion, that so enlarges a person's pleasures in life and that so increases his capacity for usefulness as a thorough education, and it should be earnestly striven for by every boy and girl, and by every young man and every young woman, in the land. But, like everything else that generates power and opens the way for larger achievements, knowledge has its perils and temptations, which need to be guarded against. Its value at last depends upon the use to which we put it.

In addressing the students of a Colorado college some time since, Hon. William J. Bryan touched upon this subject in a most suggestive and impressive manner. He said:

"The first temptation is to forget God; the sin of the first pair in the Garden of Eden grew out of a determination to trust the head instead of the heart. They could not see why limitations were placed upon them, and therefore they resolved upon disobedience. The mind must not think of itself too highly; it is not the commander-in-chief of man's destiny. Faith is greater than reason. Pascal truly says that 'the heart has reasons that the reason can not understand, because the heart is of an infinitely higher order.' Learning is good, but remember always that 'the fear of God is the beginning of wisdom.' Religion is the most practical thing with which man has to deal, because it alone gives him a conception of life, and furnishes a foundation upon which a moral code can be built.

"The second temptation is to put selfish interests above the common good—the temptation to regard education as a means of getting ahead of others, rather than as a means of larger service. Let not the training of the mind wean you from sympathy with your fellows. Education will make you stronger; put that larger strength at the service of those who are weaker, and learn a lesson of paramount importance, namely, that life is measured, not by what we get out of the world, but by what we put into the world."

"WHERE VICTORY WILL LIE."

At this time, when some of our military authorities are insisting that for the good of the United States Army the canteen system should be restored, the following editorial in "Forward" may well be read and earnestly reflected upon:

"Germany has forbidden the use of all alcoholic beverages by the cadets of the Imperial Naval School and on board the German war vessels. The reason for all this is given by Emperor William, who himself issued the interdiction. He said: 'In the next war and naval battle * * * victory will lie with the nation that uses the smallest amount of alcohol.'

"This is entirely opposed to the old customs of the Navy. It used to be the practice, indeed, to serve out to each man, at the beginning of a sea fight, a dram of liquor to make him more courageous and steady. It was believed that a glass of grog was the sailor's best friend. In the slang expression, 'Dutch courage,' as applied to liquor, this idea was set forth. But nowadays no naval commander who knows his business wants any of that kind of courage on board. It will not stand against the newer Dutch courage that goes into battle cool and concentrated, able to handle a gun with scientific accuracy, and command every faculty perfectly in the face of danger.

"Alcohol, in this twentieth century, is no longer coupled with victory anywhere along the line. It spells defeat; it stands for failure, complete or partial, wherever it is allowed to enter. Only the ignorant and the mistaken are yet on its side. What Solomon said of it long ago is becoming truer and truer in the light of modern science, 'Whosoever erreth thereby is not wise.' Victory belongs to the clean and the self-controlled; and the young man who fails to understand this is distinctly behind the march of modern progress."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Bishop W. B. Murrah is announced to preach at Parker Memorial Church of New Orleans on next Sunday morning.

Rev. O. W. Bradley, our popular young pastor at Winona, Miss., sent us a few days since an appreciated list of subscribers from his charge. He reports that his work is progressing favorably.

Rev. Julius Caesar Mayphe, a native of Caesarea Philippi, Palestine, preached a very interesting sermon last Sunday night at the Louisiana Avenue Church of New Orleans. His subject was "The 23rd Psalm."

Rev. Walter Jones, the hustling pastor of our church at Carrollton, Miss., is giving a good account of himself in that important field. He is especially encouraged with the work of his Sunday school, which maintains a very profitable teachers' meeting.

On Page 6 of this issue of the Advocate there appears an article entitled "The Advocate 'Phone Used for the Old Preachers," which is erroneously signed "D. S. Harmon." This contribution was written and sent in by Rev. Nolan B. Harmon, Secretary of the Joint Board of Finance of the Mississippi Conference. Our mistake was not discovered until after the first side of the paper had been printed.

At the first quarterly conference of the McDonoghville Church, held last week, the pastor, Rev. A. J. Gearheard, reported that all his official members and 50 per cent of the families of that congregation are subscribers to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Rev. A. H. Parker, of Greenwood, La., has ample reason to rejoice: He moved to Greenwood last December and found it necessary to move into a rented house. At his first quarterly conference, which was held recently, he reported a new parsonage bought and paid for.

Epworth Church of New Orleans observed last Sunday as Decision Day in the Sunday school. As a result, about thirty children announced their acceptance of Christ. Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., the pastor, states that about fifteen of that number will be received into the Church.

Rev. W. C. Lester, of Isola, Miss., in a letter which brought us a number of names for our subscription files, says: "Things are moving on nicely here. I have a fine and loyal people." There are few pastors who more completely win the hearts of their parishioners than does Brother Lester.

As soon as a church organization is effected at the Ursuline Mission of this city, which is being promoted by the New Orleans Epworth League Union, under the leadership of Rev. H. W. Jamieson, the name of the mission will be changed to St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

"Our financial condition is better now than at this time last year, congregations are large, and I am pleased with the outlook for a good year's work." Such are the words with which Rev. R. O. Brown, pastor of our church at Holly Springs, Miss., closed a letter which was recently received at this office.

Among the many lists of subscribers sent in last week we take pleasure in mentioning the following: From Wall Hill, Miss., by Rev. W. W. Bruner, 5; from South McComb, by Rev. J. C. Ellis, 5; from Mendenhall, Miss., by Rev. John W. Ramsey, 5; from Sallis, Miss., by Rev. W. F. Rogers, 5; and from Bienville, La., by Rev. W. J. Porter, 5.

Oxford, Miss., has recently had a successful revival, in which the pastor, Rev. W. W. Mitchell, was assisted by Rev. R. A. Clark of Memphis. We have in hand an interesting account of this gracious meeting from the pen of Mrs. Fount Callo-way, which reached us too late for this issue of the Advocate, but which will appear next week.

We are glad to report that Rev. J. B. Randolph, who was detained from his pastoral duties for a long time on account of sickness, is now able to meet all the demands made upon him. His new church at Como, Miss., will soon be completed, and, when furnished, will cost about $15,000. His congregation is getting ready to entertain the Sardis District Conference.

Rev. Louis Hoffpauir, the young and energetic pastor of the Evangeline Mission, Louisiana Conference, has met with much encouragement in that field. He is planning to erect a new church in Ville Platte, the parish seat, where a lot for that purpose was secured by Rev. A. W. Turner during the time of his pastorate at Opelousas.

Rev. J. W. Faulk, who was assigned to the Sibley (La.) Circuit at the last Conference, has made a good beginning. He is preaching to large congregations, and, among other things accomplished, has secured a number of subscriptions to the Advocate. The stewards of the Sibley charge are planning to take good care of their pastor, having placed the assessment for pastoral support at $700.

Rev. B. P. Jaco, the resourceful presiding elder of the Winona (Miss.) District, seems never to be fully satisfied with results. In a letter to the Editor last week he said: "Although this district stands at the front in finances, there has been a substantial increase in the assessments." He is making thorough preparation for the Winona District Conference, which will be held in Belzoni on May 15-18.

Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Cochran, of Meridian, Miss., were appreciated callers at our sanctum last Monday. They are interested and active workers in our Central Church of that city, and spoke in high terms of their new pastor, Rev. J. R. Jones. Sister Cochran has been in New Orleans for about two months, undergoing treatment at the hands of a specialist, but expects to return to Meridian with Brother Cochran the last of this week.

Rev. H. N. McKibben, of Waynesville, Miss., writes: "I am well into my second year on this charge. I was given a most cordial reception upon my return from Conference. Our people are few in numbers, but are loyal, generous, and appreciative. Our work was much hindered by the overflow last year, and we are again suffering from similar conditions, though as yet not to so large an extent. We hope to be able to dedicate our new church at Fittler's in a few weeks."

Brother John P. Rembert, of Longview, Texas, renews his subscription, and says: "I have been reading the Advocate for 36 years (it was the first paper that came into my family), and it is my judgment that it was never better than it is now. I lived in Mississippi until last September when I came here. The Texas Advocate is good, but the New Orleans is like a letter from home." We are pleased to have this transplanted Mississippian continue to be one of our readers.

Rev. J. T. Abney, of the Morton and Pelahatchie charge (Miss. Conference) has been delightfully received. The ladies have expended $50 in supplying additional furniture for the parsonage. Congregations on the work are large, but there is need of some new houses of worship, to secure which, plans are already being formed. Brother Abney is pressing the claims of the Advocate upon the attention of his people, and has recently favored us with three renewals and four new subscriptions.

Rev. W. J. Wood, of Sweetman, Miss., informs us of the illness of his wife, who he says has not been able to sit up a whole day since the family moved to that place. We are sorry that Sister Wood has been so long afflicted, and pray that God may grant her a speedy recovery. Brother Wood, notwithstanding his hindrances, has been able to do some effective work for the Master on the Mar's Hill charge. He has not missed an appointment since Conference, and has secured some subscriptions for the Advocate.

Sister Mason, one of the staunch supporters of Methodism in Benoit, Miss., and a constant reader of the Advocate, speaks in terms of appreciation of the work of her pastor, Rev. E. M. Shaw. We regret very much to know that Sister Mason has been detained at home by illness in her family and the overflow which has submerged a large part of the Mississippi Delta. We hope that with the approach of the balmy days of spring, health may come to her indisposed loved ones, and that the disturbing waters will become only a disagreeable memory.

President J. R. Countiss, of Grenada College, in writing a personal note to the Editor, adds the following statement, which will be read with interest: "All is going well with our school. We have an enrollment more than 25 per cent in excess of that of last year, and the indications are that from a business standpoint we will have the best session the institution has ever had." This is indeed gratifying news. We heartily congratulate Brother Countiss upon the remarkable success that is attending his administration. He has long since shown himself to be the right man in the right place.

We acknowledge the reception of a club of six subscribers sent in by Rev. B. W. Lewis, our pastor on the Summit and East McComb charge, Mississippi Conference. He states that the people have received him kindly, and that they have taken hold of the work with a gratifying determination to succeed. His East McComb members have already "pounded" him once, and have announced that they will do so again, while the congregation at Summit has brought him under obligations for many kindnesses. Even while he was writing he was interrupted to receive a nice ham which had been sent to the parsonage. Happy pastor!

Mr. Francois A. Daniels, aged 81 years and 11 months, a native of Paris, France, and a resident of Algiers, La., for 70 years, died at his late residence in Algiers last Saturday. He was one of the oldest Methodists of New Orleans, a charter member of the Algiers Church, a constant reader of the Advocate since its first number, and a Christian gentleman of unquestioned integrity. He leaves to mourn his death an aged wife, Mrs. Mary Liddy Daniels, and three sons, all of whom are active members of the Methodist Church. His death is a distinct loss to the Algiers Church, and the Advocate feels that it, too, has been bereaved in the death of this lifetime reader.

Rev. J. A. Poe is doing good work on the Guntown (Miss.) charge, which does not at all surprise those who know him. The following extract from a letter, bearing the date of Feb. 17, shows that he is laying out a large amount of service for himself this year and that he is keeping busy: "Inclosed find a check for $8. I expect to send more names every month this year, if it is possible. I want the Advocate in all the homes of my people, for it is better than I have ever known it to be. We will soon move into our new brick church at Saitillo. We are planning to remodel every church on the charge this year. We have received twelve into the Church since Conference."

Brother F. A. Howell is not only one of the most honored members of the Holmes County, Camp of the U. C. V., but is also one of the most faithful workers in our church at Durant, Miss. Brother Howell is nearly 73 years of age; has been a lifetime reader of the Advocate, and on Feb. 13 mailed to this office a check for $16.25 to pay for a list of subscriptions that he sent in. The worth of such a man to a community and a church is beyond estimation.

Remember that the Louisiana Anti-Saloon League will hold an important meeting at the City Hall in Alexandria on March 4 and 5. The first session will be held on Tuesday evening, the 4th, at 7:30 p.m. All temperance workers are not only invited, but are urged to attend.

A letter just received from Rev. W. W. Woolard, of Columbus, Miss., states that Mrs. W. L. Lipscomb of that city has been critically ill for ten days, and that little hope of her recovery is entertained. This information will be received with great regret throughout North Mississippi, where this noble woman is widely known, loved, and honored.

Our long-time friend, Rev. J. M. Wyatt, of Ackerman, Miss., brought us under renewed obligation to him for a fine club of subscribers a few days since. He circulates the Advocate largely in every field to which he is assigned. Brother Wyatt was instrumental in building a superb brick church at Ackerman last year, and all the interests of the Kingdom are going steadily forward under his wise and energetic leadership.

Rev. W. H. Coleman, the capable presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, writes as follows: "The outlook for the work of the Church in this section is most encouraging. We need to make progress along many lines, but we have an excellent body of pastors and laymen who are responsive, and with their co-operation and the blessings of Him 'whose we are and whom we serve,' we expect to see things go steadily forward."

A note from Rev. D. L. Cogdell, of Shelby, Miss., states that the health of both him and Sister Cogdell has somewhat improved, though neither of them is entirely well. We trust that both of them may continue to gain in physical vigor, and that, with returning spring, all traces of their maladies may disappear. The North Mississippi Conference has never had in it any choicer spirits than this noble veteran (who has now put off the active harness) and his beloved helpmeet.

To Miss Belle M. Roberts we are indebted for a club of eight subscribers from Rayne, La. Referring to the status of our church work in that goodly town, Miss Roberts says: "Brother John Sholars is delighted with his charge here. The Leagues, both Senior and Junior, are prospering, and bid fair to become the banner chapters in the Lafayette District. The men of this place take an active interest in Christian work, and our church is well organized and wide awake."

Mrs. H. Whitehead, the wife of the Publisher of the Alabama Christian Advocate, and two of her daughters have been spending some time with relatives and friends in New Orleans. We regret to be informed that since coming to this city one of the Misses Whitehead has found it necessary to undergo an operation at the Presbyterian Hospital, but we are glad to know that she stood the ordeal well, and that it is thought that she will speedily recover. Sister Whitehead and daughters, as well as Brother Whitehead, have many friends in the Crescent City, where they lived for a number of years.

The Advocate received the following unsigned communication last week, which contains an interesting item of news: "Rev. J. B. Williams, the popular pastor of the M. E. Church, South, at Clinton, La., and Mrs. Lilia Carl Cameron were married on Feb. 15 at the home of the bride in Homer, La., Rev. J. T. Warlick officiating. Brother Williams and his good Christian wife are known and loved throughout North Louisiana. We consider the people of Clinton very highly favored in having among them these consecrated servants of God." The Advocate congratulates Brother and Sister Williams, and wishes for them many happy years together, with the blessings of plenty and unlimited opportunities for doing good.

Rev. W. B. Jones, of Lumberton, Miss., seldom fails to give a good account of himself. The following extract from a business communication to this office containing eight subscriptions to the Advocate and a check for $14.25, speaks for itself: "I am glad to say that we have been most cordially received in this very delightful charge, and are pleasantly situated. The work of the Church is going along nicely. Congregations are good, and the prayer meeting is fine; nine members have been received since Conference. The Conference collections, amounting to $639, are already practically in sight, and the full amount of the Conference Claimants' Fund, $123, has been sent to the Treasurer. Brother Huntley, the new presiding elder, has just been with us in our first quarterly conference and rendered good service. He formerly served as pastor here for seven years, and the people were delighted to have him in their midst again."

Mrs. CATHERINE AMANDA HICKS was born in Kemper County, Miss., in 1846. She moved to Jasper County after reaching womanhood. She was married to Peter Hicks on Jan. 12, 1879. To them two children were born, both of whom survive her. Her husband preceded her to the grave several years. Surrounded by loved ones, her pure spirit took its flight to the God who gave it on Jan. 18, 1913. She united with the M. E. Church, South, in early life, and for many years lived a consecrated life. We miss her inspiring presence and gentle voice, and mourn her absence, but we rejoice in the beauty of her life as we knew it. For some months she patiently awaited the summons of death, suffering untold agony, but no pain disturbed her last repose, nor disquieted her serene courage as she approached the portals of death. With her, death was only the entrance to the realm of eternal day.

D. E. VICKERS, P. C.

Taylor, Miss., mourns the loss of Mrs. Sallie Williams, who was born near here Sept. 3, 1841. On Jan. 31, 1913, she was relieved of her afflictions and given rest. She was a friend to man, and a pillar in her church. No Methodist was ever truer, and no heart more free. Her home was a house of prayer. Her seat in the church, which was always occupied, is vacant now. She was in charge of a very interesting Sunday school class, and as long as she was able, her class never lacked a teacher. But we know that since she was faithful here she is happy up yonder. She lived her "three score years and ten," and now she has gone to glory to live throughout eternity. Let the bereaved ones who are left here remember that dying is but going home. You and I will, sooner or later, have to answer the same call. Then we shall meet her and enjoy her presence more than we did, or could have done here. Weep no more for her, for we could not call her back if we would. Let us not desire to have her back, but be prepared to meet her in heaven.

RUTHERFORD B. BURKS, P. C.

Mrs. LUCY E. PRESTRIDGE, widow of the late George W. Prestridge, was born Nov. 23, 1844. Her death occurred at Monterey, Miss., Dec. 8, 1912. She was the mother of five children, three of whom are left to mourn her death. The three remaining daughters, whose lives attest the Christian influence of their mother, are Mrs. Mollie Kirkpatrick, of Madison Station; Mrs. J. J. Briggs, of Biloxi; and Mrs. B. P. Hilton, of Touchstone. Mrs. Prestridge was a consistent member of the Methodist Church at Rexford, Miss., and until the infirmities of age prevented, she was always present at public worship. Her influence, like that of her lamented husband, is as a sweet-smelling savor to the friends and loved ones in that community. After the death of her beloved husband, which occurred Dec. 18, 1909, her mind and heart hungered more than ever for the home land. During her last illness she talked of the loved ones gone on before, and assured her friends that she was only waiting for the final call. She was buried at Florence, Miss., on Dec. 9, 1912. Rev. J. S. Purcell conducted the obsequies. MRS. J. S. PURCELL, Rolling Fork, Miss.

Mrs. BETTIE FOSTER LEWIS was born June 22, 1838, in Fayette County, Ala. At an early age she professed religion and joined the Church. On Jan. 13, 1859, she was married to J.

Asbury Lewis, and they moved to Chickasaw County, Miss., and settled on a farm in the southwestern part of the county. There their children grew to manhood and womanhood. She was the mother of five sons; one preceded her to the better world only a few years ago. Five children mourn her going, of whom Revs. T. W. and E. S. Lewis are Methodist preachers, and Hon. W. N. and Dixie Lewis, and Mrs. Nannie Whitson, her daughter, are active church workers. These children are living monuments to the noble character of a devoted mother who breathed into their souls the spirit and principles of the Christian religion which she embodied in her character. The nation honors the home builder, and from the true home come the men and women of worth. Always cheerful and deeply interested in the work and welfare of her church, she was a great inspiration to her pastor. After being confined to her bed only a few days, she passed peacefully to her reward on the evening of January 27. The funeral service was conducted from the Methodist Church the following afternoon.

R. P. NEBLETT.

In her fifty-fourth year, Mrs. V. H. RUSSELL (nee Susan Jones), beloved by all who knew her, passed tranquilly away in her home at Daniel, Miss., after a life both happy and complete. She was born March 28, 1859, and her death came Jan. 29, 1913. On Dec. 18, 1879, she was happily married to Mr. V. H. Russell, and for thirty-three happy years they walked side by side. Of this happy union of hearts and lives, twelve children were born, ten of whom are still living and were present at the bedside during her last hours on earth. She had been a member of the Methodist Church since early childhood, and proved to be always faithful and consistent. Possessed of a very quiet and retiring disposition, she was not so demonstrative in her religious work, yet her life in every detail showed plainly on what side she stood. Her sweet Christian spirit was a guiding light to all those with whom she came in contact. She had an abiding faith in humanity, and her constant desire seemed to be to do something good for everybody. During her last illness, which was a long and severe one, she seemed especially close to her Heavenly Father, and her spirit was angelic, even though her body still remained on earth. In times of her greatest suffering she never murmured nor complained, but was completely submissive to God's will. She sang so much while confined to her sick-room, and her singing was so sweet and impressive that it seemed as if she had begun her heavenly music on earth. As a wife, she proved to be most congenial and helpful, and was a willing sharer of the joys and burdens of life. She was the very embodiment of a perfect mother. She was patient, tender, loving and true. Her unlimited devotion to her children was most beautiful, and her gentle spirit inspired the most devoted love for her in her children. She was a sweet-spirited and guiding influence in her home at all times, and 'twas a constant joy to her friends to visit the home in which she lived. She was universally loved for her true and beautiful life. Not only the sorrowing family, but the entire community will feel her loss. Friends and loved ones did all in their power to brighten her last days, for they realized that too much could not be done for one so worthy as she. We shall miss her—yea, more than words can express—yet her memory and influence will abide in our hearts forever. To the broken-hearted father and children, our deepest sympathy goes out. Weep not, dear ones, for she has gone to make brighter the way for you. Strive to emulate her Christian virtues so that when your earthly life is ended, you may meet her in that beautiful realm above. May God comfort and sustain the sorrowing ones.

Tidings From the Field

Varnado (Mt. Herman Charge), La.
Dear Dr. Meek: We arrived in Varnado, La., on the Mt. Herman Charge, Jan. 2. We were given a cordial reception. I have gone to each appointment on the charge and have found many good people. On the night of January 28, we were heavily stormed. After investigating the results, we found our pantry filled with good things to eat, including Methodist chicken, too. We are looking forward to a visit from our presiding elder in March. I shall not forget the Advocate. I expect to send a list of subscribers soon.—H. C. Murphy.

Mathiston, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: The people have been very kind and cordial to the "new preacher." The weather has been somewhat disagreeable, but so far I have not failed to be at every appointment. If our Government can deliver the mail in bad weather, surely the pastors of our Church can carry the gospel. We began to secure subscriptions for a new church building on Monday last, and now have in sight about $800, and by God's help we are going to have a home of our own here before long. The Presbyterians, as well as the Baptists, have been and are most generous, and have opened their doors to us whenever we desired to use their buildings. We appreciate this very much, but still have the opinion that "There's no place like home." Pray for us.—R. W. Lovett.

Waynesboro, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: On Feb. 8 and 9 we had with us our new presiding elder, Rev. J. T. Leggett. He preached a soul-stirring sermon at Fedora at 11 a.m. on Saturday to an appreciative people. His subject was that one which is loved by all Christian people, "Prayer." The attendance upon the quarterly conference was very good. The collections for the first quarter were fairly good, considering existing circumstances. We went from Fedora to Big Rock and stayed over night with Brother J. P. Evans. Brother Leggett preached another soul-thrilling sermon to the people of Big Rock Church at 11 a.m., using as his subject, "The Church." I have never heard a clearer discourse on this subject than he gave us at that time. His two sermons were clear, forceful and orthodox. Both pastor and people on the Waynesboro Circuit esteem their new presiding elder very highly. We are looking forward to and expecting a good year in the work of building up the Lord's kingdom in these parts. I am going to put forth an effort to secure a list of subscribers to the Christian Advocate as soon as possible, for its weekly visit to any home is a benediction.—Hilary Westbrook, P. C.

Chunkey, Miss.

Chunkey has just witnessed the greatest revival meeting in the history of our Church here. Those acquainted with the spiritual condition of this place in the past know that no place was more in need of an awakening. Our pastor, Rev. J. E. Williams, upon entering this field, recognized that need and secured Rev. D. E. Kelley to assist him in a series of meetings. The meeting began on Feb. 5, and large numbers in Chunkey and from the surrounding country heard the evangelist, first through curiosity, and then with enthusiastic interest. More than 500 heard him on Sunday, Feb. 9, and in spite of the heavy rains and biting cold weather, the congregations were large during the entire meeting, which lasted twelve days. On Sunday, Feb. 16, it was estimated that fully 1000 people were present at both the morning and afternoon services, many coming from other cities. Chunkey is one of the best towns in the State for its church people, irrespective of church affiliations, to stand together. The Baptist people were especially active, for which we are thankful. As a result of the meeting, 13 were received into the Church. All were delighted with the sermons of Brother Kelly, and are thankful to Brother Williams for securing him.—W. J. J. Ross.

Olive Branch, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: We met with a hearty reception by the people of this charge when we came in December; and their continued hospitality assures us that they have our temporal welfare on their hearts. We are not among strangers, having served an adjoining charge in 1903-'04. Since then seven of the families we served on the Pleasant Hill charge and a number of other former friends and acquaintances have moved within the bounds of our present charge. Two of our stewards here were stewards of ours at Lewisburg. We have a live and loyal church membership. Our Sunday school and Epworth League here and the Sunday school at Mineral Wells are all doing as fine work as any, and probably better than any, we have ever had. The reason is, we have more old people, than are usually found in a community to lead the younger. The Sunday school and Epworth League here each has an enrollment of about one hundred. It is a spiritual feast and an inspiration to the pastor to attend the devotional meetings of the League and see how the young people are being developed in Christian character and leadership. The County Agricultural High School is located here; which, with its student body and Christian faculty, adds greatly to the size and interest of all of our congregations. On Wednesday, Feb. 12, we dined with fourteen ladies and nine gentlemen of our representative people at the parsonage. And a select crowd it was. They brought with them such things to eat as a whole boiled ham, baked chickens, cakes, pies, canned goods of different kinds, etc. Of course, the preacher and his family enjoyed the feast with them, and, upon "the fragments that remained," we are still feasting. This dining was planned and executed by the members of our Woman's Missionary Society for the purpose of investigating the needs of the parsonage in the way of repairs and furniture. And it worked well, for the men made a good contribution in money, with a promise of more to follow for this purpose. They also started a movement to purchase a furnace for heating our church here, one of the men heading the subscription with $50. So, you perceive, the outlook is good, and we are encouraged. We expect to send you a good club of subscribers for the Advocate soon.—T. H. Porter.

WHY HAIR TURNS WHITE.

The color of the hair is due to iron, which is picked up by the cells of the hair follicle in the little factory in the skin where hairs are made. As one gets older, the little cells which work at manufacturing hairs grow weary, and they will not take up as much iron as they once did.—From "Nature and Science" in March St. Nicholas.

NEARLY SMOTHERED
Chandler, N. C.—Mrs. Augusta Lomax, of this place, writes: "I had smothering spells every day, so bad that I expected death at any time. I could not sit up in bed. I suffered from womanly troubles. My nerves were unstrung. I had almost given up all hope of ever being better. I tried Cardui, and it did me more good than anything I had ever taken. I am better now than I ever expected to be." Thousands of ladies have written similar letters, telling of the merits of Cardui. It relieved their headache, backache and misery, just as it will relieve yours, if you will let it try.

The Sunday School.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

By Rev. B. F. Lewis.

The Sunday school at Crystal Springs has begun systematic grading and organization. The work will be pushed to completion as rapidly as conditions will permit. At present only the Beginners and Primary Departments will be organized and graded; the remainder of the school remaining as it is.

The recent Annual Meeting of the Chairmen and Field Secretaries of the Sunday school boards of our Church, held in the Mount Vernon Place Church, Washington, D. C., was the best, most helpful, and will be the most far-reaching of any that these workers have yet held. The subjects discussed, difficulties solved and suggestions made will be felt throughout the entire Church.

Quite recently a most interesting and profitable Cradle Roll service was conducted in the Columbia Sunday school. Miss Daisy Magee is Elementary Superintendent, and Mrs. C. E. Carpenter is Cradle Roll Superintendent. The following is an extract from the program:

"While the Cradle Roll Superintendent places the letters of the babies' names on the scroll, the teachers and children of the Elementary Division will recite verses from the Bible corresponding with the baby's name."

Then comes a beautiful song rendered by the Division, "A Welcome to Babies."

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

Rev. T. H. Morris, our pastor at Mansfield, is looking for some schools of equal strength with which to engage in a contest for getting new members. Any school in the Conference of equal grade is invited to enter this contest.

Some of our Sunday school growth in New Orleans is seen in the increase of the attendance at First Church of more than 33 per cent within the last twelve months, and at Parker Memorial, where there have not been less than 220 present since the new year came in.

The school at De Ridder, under the pastorate of Rev. J. F. Foster, has grown until it is taxing the capacity of the present building, and under the leadership of the energetic superintendent, Mr. J. D. Robertson, who is also president of the Police Jury of the new Beauregard Parish, of which De Ridder is the parish site, the erection of a new and enlarged building is being contemplated.

The Adult Bible Class of the First Church, New Orleans, of which Mr. J. K. Mann is the teacher and Mr. W. P. Beall is the president, has for its motto, "To teach one his work." This is the same sentiment as was on the front page of the Jewish Torah—the law—which was, "It is better to do than to know." Knowledge is only valuable as it aids in the development of character, and character is measured only by what it does.

Rev. W. D. Kleinsmidt is using the collection barrels, advertised by the Publishing House, for raising the missionary money in his Sunday school at Jena. The barrels will be opened on Easter Sunday and the money will go on the regular assessment. He hopes to have the missionary collections in full by that time. Others have suggested the "mille-pennies" device for the same purpose, the device, with its contents, to be turned over to the object for which the money was raised. These devices all appeal to the child's sense of sight and may be used as a savings bank as well, and their use will be educative in effect.

Mr. A. F. Godat, one of our Parker Memorial teachers, is delivering a course of weekly lectures on Bible characters to the members of the Y. M. C. A. in New Orleans. We recently had the pleasure of hearing one of these lectures on David.

SUNDAY SCHOOL PROGRAM FOR 1913.

North Mississippi Conference.

To have the Standard of Excellence reached or approximated in every Sunday school.

To have an organized Adult Class in every Sunday school.

To celebrate March 30th, Adult Bible Class Day, with enthusiasm and profit.

To organize a Teen Age Class and help save the boys and girls of our Methodist families.

To register all such classes with Dr. Bulla, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

To have eight Sunday school journeys through the eight districts planned by the presiding elder of each district.

To have a Teacher-training Class in every school.

To observe Children's Day enthusiastically in every school.

To double Cradle Rolls and Home Departments, as well as Graded Schools.

To use our own splendid literature; to study more, pray more and help more in the work.

The Field Secretary is, as ever, ready and willing to give attention to any and every call and to visit every possible school in the Conference. She is anxious to get in personal touch with teachers and superintendents, as well as pastors, and will appreciate statistics, plans and incidents relative to this department of church progress and usefulness.

All the world likes to celebrate special days; indeed no great movement has ever won prominence or place in the hearts of a people unless the real heart-throb of that movement has found its rhythmic and colorful expression in days, gala or quietly worshipful. Politically, socially and spiritually, we have had a calendar well red-lettered with special days, but as organizations increase extra festivals have to be added. The Sunday school work has grown so large and possesses such varied interests, that all the enthusiasm of each class cannot find expression in one day, as in earlier times. Now each wing of this world movement needs a day to offer its particular incense to the loving Christ who has overlooked so many mistakes and consecrated and multiplied even the most imperfect efforts.

The North Mississippi Conference Sunday School Board, realizing this need in the rapidly increasing number of Adult Bible Classes within our borders, has been the pioneer along this line and has selected March 30th, the fourth Sunday in that early spring month, as the day when every such class, large or small, women or men, shall do its utmost best to have a full class present, an organized and helpful program, a short but clear class history read, and the first step taken toward the second pioneer step of this Board—an Adult Bible Class Federation for the North Mississippi Conference Classes.

Drs. Chappell and Bulla are in full accord with this plan, and will do all they can to help make this day such a day that every other Conference in Southern Methodism will adopt it next year.

Begin now to increase membership, select speakers, and utilize the ability of every class member to help fix this day in Christian annals and in Sunday school progress. The purpose of this day is not only to augment and increase Adult Bible Class methods and plans, but by a generous collection to assist the Sunday School Board. They have made strenuous effort to promote Sunday school efficiency along all lines, and to give skilled help to every place in need, depending alone on the Children's Day collections for financial support, and though this fund was increased largely last year, it is inadequate to meet all the demands, and the strong men and women of the Conference are now asked to aid in promoting this greatest and most fruitful department of church usefulness.

THINKS THERE IS NOT LESS SPIRITUALITY.

Dear Brother Meek: In my rounds of pastoral visitation I come across various kinds of people, some pretty good and some not so good. We frequently meet the chronic pessimist who declares that the world is growing worse; that the people are not, really like they used to be, and that we do not have the old time revivals as we used to do, and so on. But there is one thing I discover: people's hearts are ready and open for the word of God. Men need the comfort of the Bible in the varied conditions of life, and when this is given, there is a great response. As education advances men become more intelligent, and as men become more intelligent, they are less inclined to give way to their feelings. In the greater intelligence the mind takes on more of the thought element than it does of the emotional element and this continual cry we hear so much, that we have less spirituality than formerly, is only a liver-complaint strain that we ought to leave off.

We cannot rule out the emotional entirely, but we must not depend upon it altogether in our estimates of our religious condition and progress. I am constrained to write because I hear so much about the world growing less spiritual. E. C. NEWBERN, Ebenezer, Miss.

BUENA VISTA, MISS.

Dear Dr. Meek: I am at home again and though I still suffer with rheumatism, I am very much better than I was when I went to Hot Springs. My stay of five weeks there has been a great benefit to me. I have not done much pastoral work since I came home. I have been staying close to the fire during this bad weather. These good people here are kind to me. They want me to take care of myself, and they are taking care of us. After I came from Hot Springs the people of Buena Vista contributed $12 to help pay my expenses while away, and would not allow it to be reported as quarterage. Last Friday the people of McCondy gave the parsonage a pounding. They gave at most every good thing mentionable from a package of soda up to large hams. There was plenty of fruit, jelly, sugar, coffee, meal, molasses, and other things, and also some cash. It all came in a mighty good time, for the presiding elder came in just after the pound party had ended to hold our first quarterly meeting, and this fine pounding enabled us to give him plenty to eat. We had a good quarterly meeting, and the stewards made a good report, although they have been without a preacher almost the entire first quarter. We enjoyed Brother Bell's stay with us from Friday evening to Sunday evening. He preached some fine sermons on Saturday, Saturday night, and Sunday at Buena Vista, and another one at Egypt Sunday night. We all love Brother Bell. The stewards raised the assessment for the preacher's salary $57.50 over last year. These good people know how to take care of a preacher's family, and they certainly do it. I have one member who gave my wife a whole dressed hog for a Christmas present. Since it would require much writing on my part to send all these folks a card of thanks, I take this method of thanking them all through the columns of the dear Advocate. Dear old Grandma Valliant died while I was away. She was a saintly woman, and has been a faithful member of the Methodist Church almost all of her life. We extend sympathy to the bereaved. I will send a list of subscribers to the Advocate soon.

T. J. DURRETT.

SIMSPORT AND EVERGREEN, LA.

The quarterly conference of the Simsport-Evergreen charge was held on Feb. 3. Rev. H. W. May, the presiding elder, being present. There was a good attendance of official members and encouraging reports were heard. We have a good Sunday school in Marksville, which is superintended by Prof. Barham. Our pastor, Brother W. B. Perritt, when in town, always attends Sunday school. This is as it should be. This writer believes that the pastor's motto should be in regard to the Sunday school, "Come," and not "Go." Example is better than precept. The preaching services on last Sunday were largely attended, and Brother Perritt preached helpful sermons, the morning sermon on "Co-operation" being especially strong. As Christians we should hold up our pastor's hands in every possible way.

Cora, Ky.—Mrs. Iva Moore, of this place, says: "I was so weak, I could hardly walk. I tried Cardui, and was greatly relieved. It is a splendid tonic. I have recommended Cardui to many friends, who tried it with good results." Testimony like this comes unsolicited, from thousands of earnest women, who have been benefited by the timely use of that successful tonic medicine, Cardui. Purely vegetable, mild, but reliable, Cardui well merits its high place in the esteem of those who have tried it. It relieves women's pains, and strengthens weak women. It is certainly worth a trial. What'll Stop Sour Stomach?

They Act Quick and Relief Is Almost Immediate.

There are some things so exactly right that to mention them brings calm and repose. And to use Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets gives the stomach just that kind of lift that makes you check up one hundred per cent to the good. Particularly is this true with those who suffer with sour stomach. You feel so mean that you actually hate yourself. And yet in a few minutes these tablets sweeten the stomach, arrest unnatural fermentation, start a powerful digestive action and prevent the formation of gas.

They are composed of only such digestants as are approved by the very best of physicians.

Real, live, progressive people want to be around where the activities of life embrace whatever circumstances dictate. If a house party serves a Welsh rarebit go to it. It isn't the easiest thing in the world to digest, 'tis true, but what of it? Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will take care of you, keep your stomach in control and your dreams won't see an army of hobgoblins playing hobs with your nerves. Many physicians regularly prescribe Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets for the stomach disorders of patients who are ill with some constitutional malady. They do so for the reason that these tablets are not a patent medicine and their composition is known and recognized as the most approved and most powerful of all digestants.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are sold and recommended by all druggists at 50c a box.

All communications for this department should be sent to the Editor at the address given above.

At Centerville, Miss.

There seems to be some little difficulty in getting our address changed; perhaps the uncertainty of it has caused the dearth in communications for this column. We are sure it is an oversight on the part of those in authority, or perhaps we did not announce the change in an official manner. It will be attended to immediately, but, in the meantime, we are in Centerville, Miss., anxious to hear from any one who has something of interest for our column. Just here we should like to say a few words about this place and people. Having been reared in New Orleans we came here with "fear and trembling," but our fears were soon dispelled by the cordial greeting of this cultured, Christian community. The spirit of unity which exists here is one of the most beautiful we have seen manifested anywhere. "How good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!" We want you to know something of the eagerness with which they contribute articles for this column, and it isn't confined to the one denomination. "Whatever their hands find to do they do with all their might."

Sisters, in Louisiana, don't forget that we are always eager to hear from you. We have changed our place of abode, but not our "feelings." There will always be a strong love in our heart for our native State and its workers, but the Master's work is dear to us wherever we are placed. Let us "wait upon the Lord," then shall he "renew our strength," and our work will grow and prosper beyond our greatest expectations.

North Mississippi Notes.

The Young Woman's Society of Water Valley has made a brave start for the New Year. At the February meeting 15 were present, 3 new members were added, and dues amounting to $1.80 were collected. A free will offering for local work was made amounting to $7.50.

The Society at Okolona is planning for extensive work in the near future. The Press Superintendent sends the following account for the January meeting: "The Ladies Missionary Society was royally entertained by Mrs. Abner Cox and Mrs. H. Gilde-well on Monday, the 13th inst. Plans were discussed for the annual bazaar. After this, a two-course luncheon was faultlessly served. One and all voted this to be a most charming entertainment." They are planning to give a large social reception to bring the church members closer together. Each one has pledged to contribute an article or articles to the value of $1.00 towards the bazaar, which will be held in the fall.

Through a letter from a former most efficient officer of the Conference Home Mission Society, Mrs. Vance of Batesville, we learn that the two societies there have united. They also correlated the Junior League and Junior Missionary Society, with forty members, leaving it in charge of J. T. Lockhart. They, furthermore, correlated the Senior League and the Young People's Society, with twenty-four members, with Mrs. Nina Pol-lard in charge. A good start!

Patriotism Growing in China.

A frequent argument against the continuance of the republic in China has been that the Chinese in general have known nothing of patriotism, as the West understands it. Every sign, therefore, of devotion to country is the more noteworthy. Such significance has a mass meeting of the Protestant Churches of Peking, held the middle of June at the church of the Methodist Mission, to promote the patriotic contribution scheme in the churches. This scheme, reported in the news dispatches of late, seeks to rouse the citizens of China to raise such funds by their free gift, that the republic will be relieved from making the proposed huge foreign loans. Three Christian men, all of the name of Wang, and all high in office, were the speakers. One was the head of the Board of Justice; another, C. T. Wang, was the acting head of the Board of Public Works; the third, who holds a high place in the Board of War, made the basis of his appeal that, as Christ died for the world the Chinese should be willing to sacrifice their money for their country. Miss Miner, who reports that the meeting was one of great interest, notes the response of the girls connected with Peking College of which she is the head. Her last Christmas gift to them, which she had suggested they might give to Red Cross work, they were disposed to donate rather to the cause of republicanism. As the republic was not then established, the $30 (Mexican) went back into the collection box, but now has come out with enough added to it to make $127 (Mexican), the gift of the girls and two graduate teachers to the patriotic contribution scheme. — Missionary Herald.

OPIUM OUT: WHISKEY IN.

The Chinese Students' Journal of Shanghai mentions the fact that a large foreign distillery at Chaokow is now turning out 600 piculs of whiskey a day. Opium out; alcohol in! Those students must have a high appreciation of Christian civilization. There is a grim determination to stamp out the curse of opium. The effort has been accompanied with financial ruin, and in case of disobedience, with executions. But just when the curse of opium, forced upon China by Christian England, is being destroyed, Christian America is going over with a distillery. Consistency! But it may be that distillery is not American. Heaven grant it.—Central Christian Advocate.

MINISTERS AS MASTERS OF TIME.

"This one thing I do," said Paul; and, humanly speaking, that was the supreme reason for his marvelous success. Concentration is the main essential in ministerial achievement. Many a minister has started out well who has soon fallen into the temptation to waste himself upon trifles. Suitable preaching is impossible except as days and nights are given to study, preparation and prayer. Rev. Dr. W. J. Dawson, referring recently to perhaps the greatest preacher of the century, Rev. Dr. Alexander Mac-laren, of Manchester, England, said: "He was rarely seen on a platform; he never sat on a committee; he scarcely ever spoke on politics, but always brought Jesus to the people. He concentrated all his energy on one purpose."—Zion's Herald.

AMORY, MISS.

Dear Bro. Meek: Our work moves on smoothly. Rev. J. B. Stone and Rev. K. M. Harrison have both been quite feeble this winter. Brother Stone has not been able to attend Church in about three months. This is a great loss to the pastor and the congregation who always feel a spiritual uplift from his presence; and he never fails to be at the morning service, if able to come. Brother Harrison is always at the morning service, having missed only two services. I think, since my pastorate here. He has kept well enough to preach on fifth Sundays all along. This is his day. He also preached two Sundays for the pastor about the time our Annual Conference met—one while it was in session and one the Sunday after—but he has not been so well of late. These two superannuates are among the best men I have ever known.

AN ARTICLE OF VALUE FREE.

Readers of this paper who are troubled with burns, bruises, boils, carbuncles, old sores, ulcers, felons, poisonous bites or from skin diseases of any nature, will welcome the following news. Dr. W. F. Gray & Co., 806 Gray Building, Nashville, Tenn., manufacturers of the celebrated Gray's Ointment, will be pleased to send a free sample of this preparation to anyone who will write, in order that those suffering may test personally and without cost the great value of the ointment in relieving such troubles. Mr. G. S. Byrd of Williamsburg, Ky., says this of Gray's Ointment: "My wife suffered for more than three years with chronic sores on her lower limbs. She tried a number of doctors without benefit. One advised scraping the bone as the only cure. We purchased and used one box of Gray's Ointment and the one box cured the sores entirely." This is strong evidence, but more convincing proof is an actual trial, so send for free sample. Regular size 25c at druggists or by mail from the above company.

MAKING THINGS HUM.

My Dear Brother Meek: The stirring sub-bishop of the Durant district has secured Bishop Morrison to hold his district conference, May 14-16. He is wisely urging that we get all of our missionary money in hand by the middle of April. An active, faithful co-operation upon the part of every pastor and his flock will bring gratifying results. In this I hope that we shall endeavor to please both the Great Head of the Church and the earnest presiding elder. Brother Shipman is making a fine impression on the good people in the territory under his supervision.

IN LOVING MEMORY OF DR. J. P. WATKINS.

Dr. John Pickett Watkins, one of the best known young college men in the South, died at the home of his mother, Mrs. Sophia Watkins, near Jonestown, Miss., on Dec. 18, 1911, of malarial complications after a short and painful illness, which he bore with heroic patience and Christian fortitude. As his mother knelt beside his bed, he said, "Mother, do you realize that your boy has been near death's door?" "Yes, my son; if God should call you, are you ready?" was her answer. "I have nothing to fear or regret," he replied; "I have lived a pure, clean life, and never did anything I was ashamed to tell you; it was you who helped me to gain this victory and faith in God; the Lord may spare me yet, but if it is his will, I am prepared to go." Again the portals of heaven opened and a sweet voice said, "Come," and our loved one quietly passed into the arms of his blessed Savior. "He hath gone in the spring-time of life from the loved ones, who loved him too well." Like a dream of the night his sweet spirit hath flown from this world of unrest to repose on the bosom of God.

Flowers far more exquisite than were ever blown, and hands more deft than mine to weave them are needed to do justice to him whose memory I here commemorate.

Death had no terrors for him. He was firm in that faith which is founded on the "Rock of Ages," and believed with the poet who said,

"Death is but an angel who to man at last his freedom brings,
And the grave is but a nest in which the soul shall find its wings."

Dr. Watkins was a most loving and dutiful son. His devotion to his brother, Willie, and sister, Jessie, was true, loyal and faithful, and they in return were ever ready to lend helping hands and advice. He graduated from the University of Mississippi in 1909, and from the Medical Department of Vanderbilt in June, 1911. The students at Oxford of those years will readily recall a youth of sixteen summers at the opening of the term of 1903 whose bright eyes attracted their attention, while his gentle manners won their hearts. Many will remember his splendid intellect—they readily conceded him to be the leading spirit of the band among whom he was almost an idol. His retiring nature, chivalric sense of honor, calm, deliberate judgment, high-souled integrity of purpose, boundless ambition and devotion as a friend, all these rise fresh before the minds of all who knew him in college, where he wielded a mighty influence. The builder of a character so strong, he commanded the profound respect and admiration of all with whom he came in contact. Dr. William Krauss of Memphis, with whom Dr. Watkins was associated during vacations, wrote to his mother: "Your son's demise was a personal loss to me. I assure you that he was a young man of unusual worth."

Dr. Watkins held three diplomas to practice medicine (from Mississippi, Tennessee, and Arkansas) when the "reaper, death, came" and crushed these ambitions and hopes. Why should we weep? We know that he is at rest to-night, but his absence has left a vacancy in lives and homes which eternity alone can fill. His remains were brought to Byhalia, near the old home, and interred in the family burial ground. Funeral services were conducted by the Rev. G. W. Burks at the home of his aunt, Mrs. S. J. Anderson, and his grandmother, Mrs. M. H. Watkins. Many relatives and friends were present. The many handsome and beautiful floral designs, coming as tokens of esteem and respect, which covered his casket and grave were an evidence of the high esteem in which he was held by those who knew him.

The same Hand of love that led him is leading us, too; so let us make this a time of consecration. Then we will emulate that love, charity and sympathy he so beautifully displayed. That God be graciously near the bereaved ones, and help all to look forward with imperishable hope and bright anticipations to a happy reunion in some fairer clime where changes never come, is the earnest wish and prayer of a loving cousin.

NOXUBEE COUNTY METHODISM.

The only thing held against Macon Station as a delightful charge has been that it is in one extreme corner of the North Mississippi Conference with only one preacher located there, and hence a pastor was denied the pleasures of ministerial fellowship. This objection was relieved at the last Conference and the true place of Macon as an important Methodist center was recognized by the placing of two more Methodist preachers here.

Macon Circuit was created. The wisdom of such a course has already become manifest in the facts that the Circuit has already received the preacher with enthusiasm, made him an assessment of more than $800, and purchased a splendid parsonage in one of the best neighborhoods in town. It will be a splendid charge with three churches, all located on the new Noxubee County "Perfect Highways." Nabors is doing well.

Furthermore, we have our own Noxubee County son, the Rev. N. G. Augustus, living on his Prairie farm four miles from Macon. Amid the associations of his childhood home, surrounded by scenes of precious memory, waited upon by the negroes once owned by his father, he is at his best.

Nick is a great preacher. Twice he has occupied my pulpit since Conference, and both times one of the most intelligent congregations in Mississippi pronounced his sermon "great." Of the last one, Hon. Henry A. Minor, a gifted young attorney of this place and editor of "the Macon Beacon," under the caption, "Magnificent Sermon," wrote as follows:

"One of the ablest and most scholarly sermons ever heard in Macon was preached last Sunday at the Methodist church by Rev. N. G. Augustus. The subject of the discourse was 'The Bible.' The manifold supreme excellencies of the wonderful book were touched upon—its literary perfection, the breadth and depth of its philosophy, its dominating influence in the creation and maturing of the civilization of the present day, and the many ways in which it surpassed all other books, including its translation into five hundred tongues. Aside from its religious nature, the sermon was an intellectual effort that gave great pleasure and instruction to all who heard it."

The above appreciation is not overstated. Augustus is a great reader, a profound thinker, and the most discriminating judge of literature of my acquaintance. JOHN C. PARK.

Where Dollars Make Dollars!

An Opportunity to put your Savings to work in the Greatest Real Estate Investment Field in America, and with associates of known Capacity and Responsibility.

Can you spare a dollar a week from your savings? Would you put that dollar to work for you if you absolutely knew it was always safe and always busy earning you more dollars? Do you know that more money is being made by the reputable, high class real estate corporations than any other? Real estate is the basis of all wealth. It is as safe as a government bond. If it is properly operated nothing is more profitable. Listen—Florida is the best field in America today for building up great assets in legitimate real estate operations. I ought to know. I have signed more property contracts and conveyances, possibly, in the last six years than any other man in Florida. I have just retired voluntarily from the executive management of one of the largest and most successful real estate corporations in the South, with assets today of more than a million and a quarter dollars. Why did I retire? To further an ideal. It is my ambition now to build up one of the largest and one of the strongest co-operative real estate corporations in the world and my partners shall be the working people of America, the salary earners, the savings bank depositors—indeed those who have heretofore been denied the privilege, by reason of their limited means, of investing in the great and really safe and sane corporations; and have thus been left as easy victims of the get-rich-quick plunderers and schemers. Stop giving up the wages of your toil to the professional promoters, who offer you worthless oil and mining and new invention stocks. You are working and sacrificing to provide luxuries for those who are unworthy of your confidence. Put your dollars in the safest of all securities—in the operation of a great, nation-wide business that is founded on the very bed-rock of American finances. Put your dollars to work in the same harness with the dollars of some of the best and most practical real estate operators in the country. Your dollars will grow—your profits will astonish you.

All I want you to do now is to investigate. That will only cost you a postage stamp. DO NOT SEND ME A DOLLAR UNTIL YOU HAVE DONE THIS. If the opportunity I shall present to you does not appeal to you, you will at least have afforded me the pleasure of placing before you what I regard as one of the most remarkable real estate operating opportunities ever inaugurated in this country. Do not reply unless you are in earnest and you can invest at least one dollar a week. I shall send you satisfying references as to myself and my associates. If you wish to become a partner you must furnish me with the same. JAMES A. HOLLOMON, President, American Securities Company, Jacksonville, Florida.

LAYMEN'S MISSIONARY MOVEMENT. VIRGINIA DID IT.

By C. F. Reid.

What did Virginia do?

1. Last year the Virginia Conference raised a surplus for foreign missions over and above its assessment of $38,329.
2. It increased its gifts to foreign missions over the preceding year $5,000.
3. In five years it has increased its gifts for all missions from $75,000 to $147,649.
4. It has won the leadership of the Church in the per capita gift for missions, averaging $1.24 per member for the entire Conference.
5. It has aroused such a spirit of liberality that its active ministry is better paid, and from having to scale the apportionments to the worn-out preachers five per cent, they are now able to give them a bonus of twenty-five per cent.
6. It has fostered revival conditions so that last year there was a net gain of over 2,000 members.

Who did it?

1. A Conference Board of Missions that had faith.
2. Conference Missionary Secretaries that had ability and devotion.
3. Presiding Elders ready to actively co-operate.
4. Lay leaders who were leaders in deed, as well as in name.
5. A host of pastors who accept the great commission as significant and binding.
6. A willing people needing only to be shown.

How did they do it?

1. By having a Conference Board of Missions wise enough to see that what is everybody's business, is nobody's business, and therefore willing to select a Conference Missionary Secretary from among the most capable men of the Conference, pay him a good salary, and then take the time to plan with him a thorough campaign of the Conference.
2. By setting before the Conference a worthy objective to strive for, and then sowing the Conference down with literature bearing upon that objective.
3. By relieving the Sunday schools from paying the assessment and putting before the children some definite attractive special.
4. By asking districts and churches to assume specials over and above the assessment.
5. By seeking and encouraging the active co-operation of the Conference, District, and Charge Lay Leaders.
6. By increasing each year the amount of the Conference objective until they were ready to ask the privilege of assuming the responsibility of one entire mission field.

Is there any good and sufficient reason why every Conference in our connection should not, in proportion, approximate the same results and then go beyond them, as the Virginia Conference expects to do? Of course, we shall all be able to plead peculiar situations, such as educational problems, orphanage problems and other pet Conference enterprises, but has not Virginia all these?

The real difficulty is not that there are other plans afoot. It is in the profounder fact that the faithful few are doing the work and carrying the burdens of the many, and that the few who are working and paying are for the most part doing so in a spasmodic, planless way that would bankrupt any business enterprise in the land.

It has been frequently stated during the last few years that only one out of six of our members is having any worthy share in the on-going work of the Church. This means that the other five are simply idlers in God's Kingdom.

The secret of advance, then, is not so much to induce those who are already working and paying to do more, as it is to transfer the do-nothings into the ranks of those who serve and sacrifice.

When it comes to the matter of material resources, in the light of what we are now doing for the enlarging of God's Kingdom, we are disgracefully rich. Estimates based on United States Statistics indicate that last year there was poured into the lap of Southern Methodists as incomes not less than five hundred million dollars. Could we have secured God's tenth of this vast sum to carry on his work, we should have had fifty million dollars. This would have paid all our preachers comfortable salaries, built all the churches and parsonages we could have conveniently enterprised in one year, splendidly equipped all our schools, endowed our benevolent institutions, and doubled our missionary forces at home and abroad. But, by enormous pulling and tugging, we were only able to secure for all these purposes less than $13,000,000, all but a few hundred thousand of which we spent at home, that is on ourselves. And yet, we complain of spiritual leanness. May it not be as truly said of us as God said to his people of old, "Ye are cursed with a curse, for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation?"

Two fundamental principles of the Laymen's

Missionary Movement are:

1. That no man can grow spiritually who is an idler in God's Kingdom.
2. That all money which belongs to God and is not applied to his service is a curse rather than a blessing to him who withholds it.

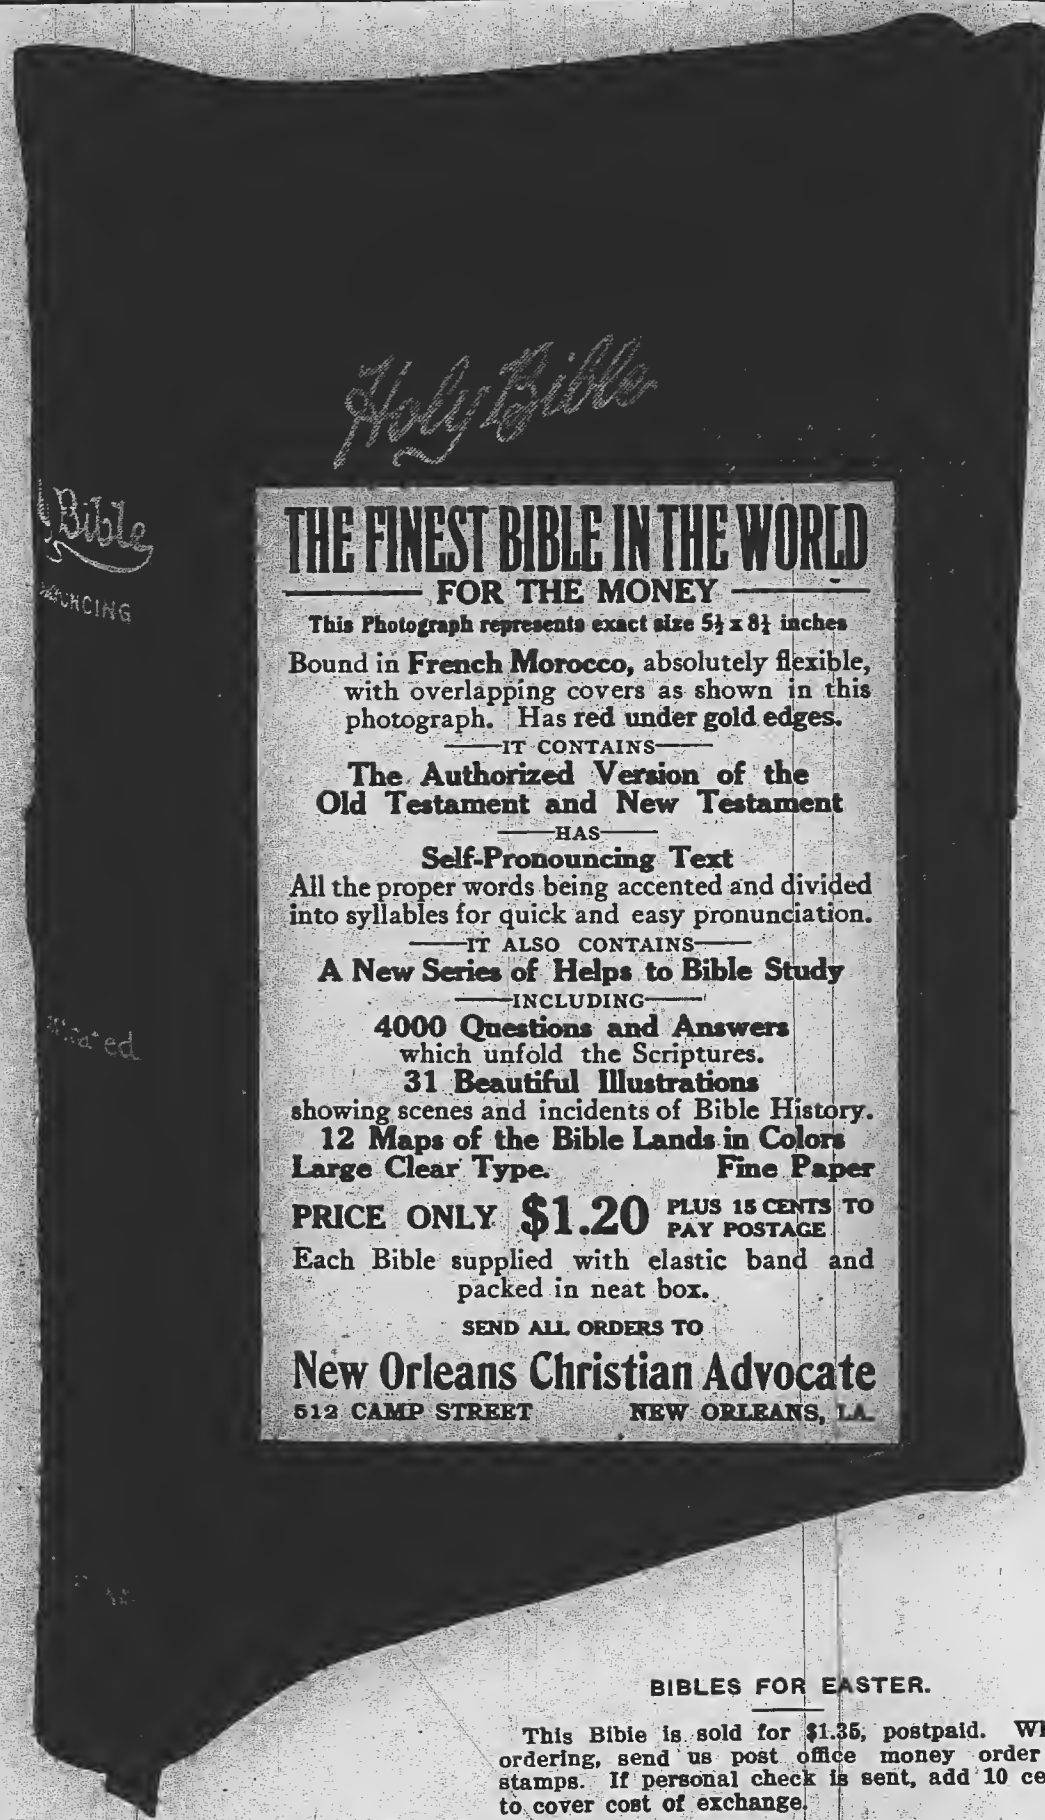

It, therefore, seeks through the Missionary Committee to enlist every one who claims Christ as his Savior in active Christian service and through the Every-member Canvass and the weekly offering to make the resources of the Church available for the extension of the Kingdom. Is not this objective worthy of the active co-operation of all our preachers and the prayerful attention of our laymen?

SOME OLD RIDDLES.

Why is a farmer like a fowl? Because he likes a full crop.

Why is the wind like fashion? Because it regulates the vane.

Why is a hatter the most respectable of tradesmen? Because he serves the heads of a nation

SECTARIANISM LARGELY RESPONSIBLE FOR THEM.

Dr. Mark A. Matthews, who has built up in Seattle the largest Presbyterian church in the United States, if not in the world, and who is the present Moderator of the General Assembly of his denomination, is quoted as saying: 'If the Churches would do their duty there would be little need of outside religious and charitable organization.' In this view we are disposed to concur. Sectarianism is, in our opinion, responsible for the existence of most of the organizations of this character, the people of the various denominations finding it necessary to sink their differences out of sight and come together to perform some needed service. If the Churches in our towns and cities could have united in their operations, instead of each acting independently, we might have had the various club houses (with their splendid equipment) that exist in them, erected and maintained under Christian auspices. This would have greatly strengthened the Churches and would have safeguarded them against influences that are to-day pronouncedly adverse to their interests. We thoroughly believe in a wholesome denominationalism, but sectarianism has long been, and still is, one of the most serious hindrances to the extension of the Master's kingdom.

YET PLAYING AT THE TASK.

Sometimes when we compare what the Churches now give to missions with what they formerly gave we are disposed to felicitate ourselves upon their increased liberality, but there is another angle of vision which brings to us anything but a feeling of exultation. It is when we look at our contributions to give the gospel to the heathen in comparison with what we contribute to other things and with what we throw away upon needless or harmful self-indulgences. Doctor M. A. Matthews, in a missionary sermon to his congregation in Seattle on Feb. 23, touched upon this subject in a most impressive manner, giving some figures which he said had been recently and carefully compiled from government statistics. After stating that the American people paid last year for foreign missions the sum of $12,000,000, Dr. Matthews proclaimed some of their other expenditures to be as follows:

"Chewing gum, $13,000,000; millinery, $90,000,000; tea and coffee, $100,000,000; confectioneries, $200,000,000; for the maintenance of home churches, $250,000,000; automobiles and their upkeep, $500,000,000; jewelry, $300,000,000." The expenditures for tobacco and liquors were not given, but the cost of the former is known to reach up into the hundreds of millions, while that of the latter is vastly beyond the billion mark.

The fact is, we are only playing at the task of executing the 'great commission' given to us by the Master. Our churches are trifling with it, and the outside population in Christian lands, who have been the rich beneficiaries of the gospel, are doing next to nothing to aid in its achievement. Meanwhile, doors are swinging wide open in pagan countries as never before, and inspiring opportunities are daily passing that may never return. May God have mercy upon us, and help us to do something more in keeping with our resources and the sublime possibilities which challenge us! How shall we escape condemnation, if we continue to dally with duty and recklessly to throw away our Lord's substance?

AN INJUSTICE TO MISSISSIPPI.

In the Wesleyan Christian Advocate of February 21, Mr. J. F. Jacobs, the well-known advertising agent, has an article, entitled "The Progress of the Religious Press," which, though it contains some interesting information concerning the gain in circulation of the periodicals of the various religious denominations since 1897, is liable to mislead the public in some respects. Mr. Jacobs, among other things, says:

"A careful comparison by States indicates that in each of the Southern States there has been a decided increase in circulation of the religious publications with the exception of one State. The increase is as follows:

	Per cent.
Alabama	42
Arkansas	65
Florida	221
Georgia	24
Kentucky	33
Louisiana	93
Mississippi (minus)	2
North Carolina	97
South Carolina	55
Tennessee	210
Texas	2
Virginia	95
West Virginia	43

"These wide variations are due to the fact that in many denominations, especially the weaker ones, the entire religious literature of the denominations is issued in a single State. Tennessee especially is the home of large publishing interests of several important denominations, in consequence of which a very large proportion of the religious literature of the South is published in Tennessee."

As will be noticed by the careful reader, there is an apparent conflict in the statements made by Mr. Jacobs above and below his table of percentages. It is not true that there has been a decrease of 2 per cent in the circulation of religious publications in Mississippi, but only such a decrease in the circulation of those "issued within that State." This, of course, was what the writer meant, but both his first statement and subsequent explanation are so obscure that they are liable to be misunderstood, and in consequence do the people of the Magnolia State a grave injustice.

If we mistake not, the only two church papers published in Mississippi are The Baptist Record, at Jackson, and The Mississippi Baptist, at Newton. All the other Churches in that commonwealth have their official organs printed in some other State. The New Orleans Christian Advocate is the official organ of the two Mississippi Annual Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and about two-thirds of its circulation is within their bounds. We dare say that if the figures were available they would show that Mississippi has not failed to keep step with her sister States of the South in the extent to which her citizens read the current religious publications. It only seems so, because she has been generous enough to give her patronage and support to religious journals issued elsewhere. We feel that this statement is due the people of Mississippi, than whom there are none better to be found on the surface of the habitable globe.

HIGHLY COMMENDABLE, IF TRUE.

There are rumors afloat that some of the Vanderbilt Trustees who have stood with the majority of the Board up to the present time, believing that a legal interpretation of the Charter by some properly constituted tribunal was a necessity, now that the Court has spoken, are in favor of accepting its findings, without appealing the case and litigating any further. If these reports are true, such a spirit is certainly most commendable, and it attests an underlying feeling of loyalty to the Church such as many feared did not exist. While we are more confident at present than we have ever been that the ownership and control of this institution by the Church will be upheld by the law, we think that such a way of settling this regrettable controversy would be the happiest termination of it conceivable. It would, in our judgment, go further toward wiping out all hard feelings, healing all breaches, and ushering in an era of peace and good will than anything else that could possibly happen. For these reasons, if any such disposition is manifested by the majority of the Trustees, we hope that those who represent the Church in this contest will respond to it in a manner equally as pacific and generous.

As we understand it, it is not the purpose of the Church, if her right to control Vanderbilt University is recognized, to be rash and revolutionary in handling its affairs. Her conservatism was shown at Asheville, when, after electing three Trustees to join the issue and settle the principles involved, she made provision to continue the present method of constituting these agents, by having the Board of Trust to elect them, subject to confirmation by the General Board of Education. Few have fought harder than we have to uphold the claims of the Church in this struggle, and we have done so conscientiously, believing with all our heart in the justice and righteousness of our cause; but no one would more gladly welcome the adjustment of our differences upon proper grounds and the cessation of strife than would we. The prolongation of this litigation may cost thousands of dollars, keep the affairs of the University in a perturbed state for years, and leave wounds that can never be healed. Before the gentlemen of the opposition there now stands an opportunity largely to obviate this, such as they can never expect to have again; and we earnestly hope that for the good of both the Church and the University they may conclude to avail themselves of it.

THE MISSION OF WOMAN.

(The following discussion by Dr. Albert Taylor Bledsoe was first prepared and delivered as an Annual Address before the Lee and Jackson Literary Society at the Wesleyan Female Institute at Staunton, Va., on the 14th of June, 1871, and was later arranged for publication in The Southern Review, of which he was the brilliant editor, and appeared in the October number of that famous periodical the same year.)

II.

'After the revival of letters', says Miss More, 'the controversy about the quality of the sexes was agitated with greater warmth than wisdom. The process was instituted and carried on (precisely as it is at the present day) with that sort of acrimony which always raises a suspicion of the justice of any cause.' No wonder this war of words was carried on with such acrimony and bitterness; for, as Miss More says, it was urged then, as it is in our day, by 'women vain of their wit.' The beauties took no part in the contest. 'There is', says Miss More, 'a singular difference between a woman vain of her wit and a woman proud of her beauty.' The beauty, though anxiously alive to her own fame, is indifferent about the beauty of other women. Provided she is sure of your admiration, she does not insist on your thinking that there is another handsome woman in the world. The wit, more liberal at least in her vanity, is jealous for her whole sex, and contends for the equality of their pretensions, in which she feels her own involved. The beauty vindicates her own rights; the wit, the rights of women. The beauty fights for herself; the wit for a party. The beauty would be a single queen for life; the wit would abrogate the Salique law of intellect, and enthrone a whole sex of queens.'

Now, for our own part, we infinitely prefer the silent queen of beauty to the wrangling queen of wit. The queen of beauty, seeing man at her feet, is content to reign over his heart, his house, and his home. But the queen of wit, seeing nobody subject to her dominion, denounces all men—the ungallant wretches!—as tyrants, and seems determined to put them under her feet, even as Jezebel did Ahab.

'A woman,' said Miss Olive Logan, 'has a right to vote, and to hold a seat in Congress, because she is as good as a negro.' We think, for our part, that a woman, especially if she is not a strong-minded one, is far better than a negro; and that, therefore, she had far better eschew the dust and dirt, the fray and fury, of a contest with negroes for a seat in Congress, or in the places of political power and profit. We think she is better than a negro, or a white man either; and had, therefore, better keep within the high and holy sphere for which both nature and the God of nature intended her.

It may be deemed a want of gallantry in us, but still we must insist on 'the Salique law of the intellect.' For, in fact, the sun shines not more clearly in the heavens than this law does in the Word of God, as well as in his works. 'The man,' says St. Paul, 'is the head of the woman.' The family, as organized by Christ, is constituted on the principle of autocracy, and not on the principle of equality in power and dominion between man and wife. The family, as organized by Christ is a social unit, a harmonious whole, with one head, and not a two-headed, discordant, self-fighting monster. 'Husbands, love your wives,' is the word of divine wisdom, in which is so tenderly summed up all the obligations of the husband. 'Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ loved the Church,' 'therefore, as the Church is subject unto Christ, so let the wives be subject to their own husbands in everything.' Again writes St. Paul to the Ephesians, 'Wives, submit yourselves unto your husbands as unto the Lord; for the husband is the head of the wife, even as Christ is the head of the Church.' As in writing to the Corinthians he said, 'the head of the woman is the man,' so here he specially applies this doctrine to the marriage relation, saying, 'the husband is the head of the wife.' St. Peter expresses the same thing: 'Likewise ye wives, be in subjection to your own husbands, that, if any obey not the word, they also may, without the word, be won by the conversation of the wives, while they behold your chaste conversation coupled with fear.' . . . 'Whose adorning let it not be that outward adorning of plaiting the hair, and of wearing of gold, or of putting on of apparel. But let it be the hidden man of the heart, in that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price. For after this manner in the old time, the holy women also, who trusted in God, adorned themselves, being in subjection to their own husbands.'

Ah! ye strong-minded women, how ye must hate these words—'being in subjection unto their husbands!' Have you no husbands, because you hate these words? Or do you hate these words, because you have no husbands? Have you no husbands because the old-fashioned forms require you 'to love, honor and obey,' or because nobody has asked you? Be this as it may, it is certain that many now-a-days are willing enough to promise to love and honor, but not to obey, in order to tie the matrimonial knot. They take their stand against that word obey, as if it were a degradation of their sex. They know neither the word nor the spirit of the great Teacher, who says: 'Ye know that the princes of the Gentiles exercise dominion over them, and they that be great exercise authority upon them. But it shall not be so among you: but whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister; and whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant: even as the Son of Man came not to be ministered to, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many.' If any woman is, then, offended by the leading idea of the present paper, this is because she is animated by the spirit of the world, and not by the spirit of Christ. It is because the love of power and the lust of dominion, rather than the sublime meekness and humility of the Lamb of God, rules in her wretched, restless heart. It is, in other words, because that which is most hateful in man—the domineering pride of a wicked heart—reigns over and obscures in her that which is most lovely in woman—a meek and quiet spirit.' The first caused Lucifer 'to fall like fire from heaven'; the last alone can raise 'a mortal to the skies.' We seek, then, not to degrade, but to elevate woman, when we say it is her mission 'not to be ministered unto, but to minister.' This was the mission of Christ himself. Though it reduced him, physically, to the form of a servant, it raised him, spiritually, to the highest and holiest sphere in the universe. Hence, when he brought his 'first begotten into the world,' he said, 'let all the angels of God worship him.' For even when exalted above 'all principalities, and powers, and dominions,' he was not so far in the eyes of the everlasting Father, or so much an object of worship to all his angels, as when he took upon himself the form of a servant, and rendered forever illustrious and beautiful the path which he has prescribed for woman. Do we, then, seek to degrade woman merely because we wish to see her tread in his footsteps, and become more and more assimilated to his character, who was 'the fairest among ten thousand, and altogether lovely?' On the contrary, it is just because we wish to see her become more and more an object of worship to all true men, that we so earnestly contend that the Christian religion has rightly defined her mission, and marked out the sphere of her real glory. As every one knows, indeed, it is one of the distinctive peculiarities of this religion, that, from a heast of burden, it raises woman to her rightful position in human society, and crowns her as the queen of the world. Go to, then, all ye vain babblers, all ye infidel reformers, and, above all, all ye unwomanly women, who would degrade her from her lofty position, and reduce her to the level of unwashed demagogues and negroes! Go to, all ye mean seducers of the sex, who, in guise more loathsome than the toad in Milton, sitting 'squat by the ear of Eve,' would persuade women to forget her grateful allegiance to the Son of Man! Go to, we say, and cease, with your foul breath, to blast the happiness of woman and lay her glory in the dust!

Woman is sometimes contemptuously called the inferior animal. 'What,' several ladies once asked us, 'do you think of that sentiment?' 'We think it perfectly just,' was the reply. 'What!' they exclaimed, 'do you, with all your pretended gallantry and admiration of the sex, call woman the inferior animal?' 'Yes,' we fearlessly replied, 'that is precisely our opinion of the sex,—inferior animals, but superior beings.' In brute force, in all that constitutes the mere animal frame and nature, women are inferior to men; but in purity of mind, in refinement of sentiment, in all that most nearly assimilates our race to the good angels above, they are superior to men.

Mr. Darwin, in his 'Descent of Man,' has proved at least one thing, namely, that man is actually an animal. No one, after reading his very learned work, can doubt that man is really an animal, or deny that the proud biped eats, and drinks, and sleeps like his four-footed brethren that perish. But, after all, we are inclined to think that we are, in nature and in kind, a little better than habboons. Many of our strong-minded women do, we are aware, differ from us respecting Mr. Darwin's great discovery of the essential identity of nature between men and monkeys. Hence, rather than quarrel with them, or with women of any description, we are willing to admit that they are superior animals, and also to allow them to choose the species of beasts with which it is proper to classify them. * * *

There are, we are sorry to say, some of the sweetest, and most intelligent, and most lovely young ladies in our land who seem favorably inclined towards the woman's rights movement. We would do anything to save them (except marry a strong-minded woman); and, if we were a widower, we fear we might be induced to do even that, in order to rescue the beautiful creatures from their perilous condition; for, indeed, widowers do so many strange and unaccountable things that no man can say what he would not do if he were deprived of his 'better half.' But, if we know ourself, we would never marry a strong-minded woman. In this respect we feel as if we were like the old Romans, who, after the women had acquired 'all their rights,' absolutely refused to marry them; consequently, as Professor Seeley says, 'the Empire perished for the want of men.' It is, however, a hardly supposable case that any really beautiful and lovely woman will, in her right mind, actually join the ranks of the woman's rights movement; for whatever her nascent inclination, or premonitory symptoms, matrimony will be apt to arrest her in her career, and cure her of the incipient disease.

The first symptom of the disorder is, perhaps, the determination never, in case of matrimony, to use the word obey. This symptom is a dangerous one, and requires heroic treatment—such as that which Bishop Hobart is said to have administered to a young lady in New York. This young lady, so the story goes, vowed that if she were to get married a hundred times, she would never once promise to obey her husband. Accordingly, when the Bishop, who had been called in to marry her, came to the words, 'love, and honor, and obey,' she held down her head meekly and remained silent, hoping he would attribute her silence to her modesty, and so pass on. The good Bishop, always stern and inflexible in the discharge of his official duties, repeated the words; but still no response. A third time he pronounced the words, and with a still firmer voice. But the bride, still adhering to her vow, refused to repeat the promise. She only blushed the more beautifully, and arrayed herself more radiantly in the charms of maiden modesty. But it was all lost on the Bishop. He deliberately closed his prayer-book, and, turning away from her, said: 'Madam, when you are ready to get married, I will marry you.' At these words the blooming bride started up, and wild with terror, exclaimed: 'Love, honor and obey—love, honor, and obey—love honor and OBEY. The treatment is what the doctors call 'heroic', but the cure was perfect.

We cannot deny, however, that although woman is the 'superior being,' she is the 'weaker vessel,' for such is the express declaration of the Word of God. She is evidently the 'weaker vessel.' The frailer form, the more delicate organs, the more sensitive and timid nature—all proclaim her 'the weaker vessel.' Above all, the ease with which the balance of her judgment is disturbed by the impulses of kindness or of cruelty, show that she is 'the weaker vessel.' While man, during the Civil War, displayed his strength by the greatness and the heroism of his deeds, woman betrayed her weakness by the violence of her sentiments. She would have raised the black flag, and caused it to wave in all the darkness of desolation over the heads of her enemies, even while she was the ministering angel of mercy to her friends. It is the weakness of human nature, and especially in the female sex, that it is always prone to rush into extremes of both hate and love.

But, on the other hand, it must be conceded that woman is weaker than man only in regard to the mission, or the work, of man. For her own sphere, or mission, she is endowed with far greater strength than man. In strength of passive will, in the courage and fortitude to endure, to bear the ills that flesh is heir to, she is far, very far, superior to man. In force of aggressive will, in the sublime capacity to do and to dare, she is comparatively weak; but in the meek, Christ-like capacity to suffer and to bear, she is superior to man. She is more like the Lamb of God—a willing sacrifice for the good of man; and this is her glory. In this respect, as well as in many others, she is most admirably adapted to the sphere of private life, and, above all, to the home circle. This, it is true, is a narrow sphere; but it is, nevertheless, a high and holy one—the very highest and holiest upon earth. Of all the institutions of society, that which is the most important to its order and happiness is the constitution of the family, and its government. Over this government woman is, in a special manner, called to preside. From the center of the home circle—nay, from innumerable centers of such circles—woman sends forth an influence, either for good or for evil, in comparison with which the influence of heroes, and legislators, and statesmen, sink into insignificance. She does not occupy the throne, it is true; but yet, behind the throne, she wields a power greater than the throne itself, and without which the throne itself must crumble into dust and ashes. The glory of this nation, and the glory of all nations, depends upon the ministry of woman—on the influence of wives, and daughters, and sisters, and mothers.

'As a general rule,' says a celebrated historian, 'superior men are the children of their mother.' Infancy is the decisive moment in education. In the earliest years is formed the strong bias which gives shape to the entire life. But these years belong to the mother. Paganism took them from her and gave them to the State; but Christ took them from the State and gave them back to the mother. They are too delicate and important for the State, or for strangers, to meddle with, and they are too exacting for the father. For the training of the young, aptness, time, opportunity, patience, longsuffering, and self-sacrifice, are wanting to all persons, except to the mother. She alone is fit for the work which God, in his providence, has appointed her to do.

Consider, for example, the man whose strong heart and unconquerable courage now braves alike the wrath of a prince and the fury of the people, and who seems determined to justify the proud maxim: 'Man can do what he will.' You ascribe, perhaps, the glory of the man to the energy of his nature. But know that, in his childhood, he appeared so irresolute, and so vacillating in his character, that every one said, 'He will never make a man.' He will, on the contrary, always be a reed shaken of the wind. But a woman has made him a man, and that woman is the same who brought him into the world. She alone has never despaired of him. Sustained by love, and guided by instinct, she alone has discovered, beneath all his weakness, the hidden germs of greatness, which, by her tender, her humble, her patient and persevering labors, she has developed into his present glorious manhood. The child was not, and never could have been, the father of the man, but for the constancy and the care of the woman. She is, indeed, the mother of the man as well as of the child. She has divined everything, conceived everything, planned everything, and watched over the operation and development of everything. By trials and conflicts, wisely graduated to his growing strength, she has developed the hidden germs of virtue in his soul, until, by degrees, the weakness of the child has passed away, and 'Nature herself can stand up and say to the world, this is a man.' Such is the work, the mission, the glory of woman.

But the strong-minded women of the North, in great and increasing multitudes, desire a different glory from this. They covet the power of the hustings, and places in Congress. They would fain enter the lists with pot-house politicians, and become the rivals of negroes. Let them, O fair daughters of the South, pursue their own course! But if they will unsex their souls, let them, at the same time, lay aside their 'modest apparel.' Let them cut their hair short, and their petticoats, too, and enter, a la Bloomer, the ring of political prize-fighters. If, indeed, we were the most deadly enemies of the North, we could wish no greater calamity to befall them than the success, the triumph of such a movement. Make their women the equals of their men and the rivals of their negroes, reduce marriage to a civil contract between co-equal partners, for the supposed convenience and happiness of the parties, and you cause the history of Imperial Rome to repeat itself in this country.

Behold the awful vision, even as it now passes before our eyes. The word of God is despised, and the laws of nature are trampled under foot. The spirit of infidelity grows rank and rabid, even among women, as it has always grown among female reformers. The marriage tie is treated with levity, if not with contempt, and divorces are the order of the time. One husband, as at Rome, has his twenty-first wife, and this twenty-first wife has her twenty-third husband! Finally, the marriage relation becomes, as it did at Rome, so 'intolerably disagreeable' that men would as soon marry the plague as a member of the once fair sex. Woman is no longer sacred in the eyes of man. Indeed, the women have become disgusting to men, and the men disgusting animals. All are brawling politicians. The weaker vessel goes down before the stronger, and both are buried beneath the ruins of their country.

Such is, inevitably, the awful doom of the North, if the spirit of infidel reform, which, in proud contempt of the word and the providence of God, has inaugurated the woman's rights movement, should prevail and gain the ascendancy. The fruit may be pleasant to the eye, and seem greatly to be desired to make one wise; and the wily tempter may whisper, in the day that thou eat thereof thou shalt become as men; but if woman heeds the fatal lie, the luscious golden fruit will turn to ashes on her lips, and she will awake from her dream of dominion only to discover that all her glory has departed.

Our Southern women have, thank God! shown, as yet, but little taste for such forbidden fruit. It seems neither pleasant to their eyes nor tempting to their hearts. On the contrary, they still so live, and so act, in their own hallowed sphere, that they are sacred in our eyes, and an inspiration in our hearts. Hence it is that we still glory in our mothers, and in the men whom they have reared as the ornaments of the human race—in our Washingtons, and Lees, and Stonewall Jacksons, and Sidney Johnstons, and Polks, and Ellises, and the whole illustrious host of heroes and martyrs, who, in chariots and whirlwinds of fire, have ascended from earth to heaven.

Be this your glory, then, O ye blessed and beautiful women of the South!—not that you can vote, or beat a negro for Congress, but that you can point to your sons as your jewels, and as the ornaments of the human race. Be this your glory, not that you are 'the head,' but that you are 'the glory' of the man. Be this your glory, not that you can equal man in the might and the majesty of his intellectual dominion, but that you can surpass him in the sublime mission of mercy to a fallen world. Be this your glory, not that you can harangue a mob, or thunder in the Senate, but that you can wear 'the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which, in the sight of God, is of great price.' Be this your glory, not that you conquer and subjugate man to your will, but that you can soften and subdue his rugged nature, and win him to virtue and to God by the indescribable charm of your Christian meekness and kind offices. Be this your glory, not that you can equal, or eclipse, the garish effulgence of man, but that, with all your timid and retiring graces, you can adorn the shades of private life, and enchant the home circle with the sweet radiance of loveliness and beauty. Be this your glory, in short, not that you can imitate a Washington, or a Lee, or a Jackson, but that you can rear, and train, and educate, and mold the future Washingtons, and Lees, and Jacksons of the South, to protect and preserve the sacred rights of woman as well as of man.

THE FULL TEXT OF JUDGE ALLISON'S DECISION IN THE VANDERBILT CASE.

State of Tennessee, on the Relation of A. W. Wilson and others, composing the College of Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and others, Complainants, vs. The Board of Trustees of Vanderbilt University and others, Defendants. In the Chancery Court at Nashville, Davidson County, Tenn.

Conclusions of the Court.

* First—That the charter in question, granted by the Chancery Court at Nashville, under the then existing law, recites on its face that the persons making the application did so as "representatives of the Memphis Conference" and "of the Tennessee Conference" and "of the North Mississippi Conference" and "of the White River Conference" and "of the North Alabama Conference" and of "the Alabama Conference" and "of the Mississippi Conference" and "of the Louisiana Conference" and "of the Little Rock Conference * * * of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South."

Second—That the charter then recites that said persons pray to be incorporated by the name of the Central University of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, * * * the objects of the plan of said university being fully set forth in resolutions passed by the delegates of said Conferences, at the convention of the same held in the City of Memphis, January, 1872, and which resolutions are in words and figures as follows:

The Memphis Resolutions.

"1. Resolved by the Convention, That measures be adopted looking to the establishment as speedily as practicable of an institution of learning of the highest order and upon the surest basis, where the youth of the Church and country may prosecute theological, literary, scientific and professional studies to an extent as great and in manner as thorough as their wants demand.

"2. That this institution shall be called the Central University of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

"3. That it shall consist at present of five schools or departments—viz: (1) a theological school for the training of our young preachers, who, on application for admission, shall present a recommendation from a Quarterly or Annual Conference, and shall have attained a standard of education equal to that required for admission on trial into an Annual Conference; and instruction to them shall be free both in the theological and the literary and scientific departments; (2) a literary and scientific school; (3) a normal school; (4) a law school; (5) a medical school.

"4. That the sum of one million dollars is necessary in order to realize fully the object desired, and not less than five hundred thousand dollars must be secured as a condition precedent in the opening of any department of the university.

"5. That the location of the university shall be left to the decision of the College of Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

The Incorporators.

"6. That the carrying out of the whole scheme is hereby committed to the following persons, viz: William C. Johnson, Robert J. Morgan, Smith W. Warren, Milton Brown, Alexander L. Kelley, Edward H. East, Robert A. Young, Landon C. Garland, Philip Tuggle, John M. Steel, James H. McFerrin, Christopher D. Oliver, William Dickson, Edward W. Worth, William M. Bryce, William L. C. Hunt, Thomas Christian, James S. Borden, William H. Foster, Andrew Hunter, James L. De Yampert, and David T. Reynolds, who shall take immediate steps for securing a suitable charter and incorporation, and shall be a Board of Trust, with power to solicit and invest funds, appoint an agent or agents, and do whatever else is necessary for the extension of this scheme.

"7. That seven of the Board of Trust at any meeting regularly called shall constitute a quorum.

"8. That provisions be made in the charter for giving a fair representation in the management of the university to any Annual Conference hereafter co-operating with us.

"9. That the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, be and hereby are requested to act as a Board of Supervision of the university or any of its departments, and jointly with the Board of Trust to elect officers and professors, and prescribe the course of study and the plan of government."

Meaning of Resolutions.

From these resolutions alone may the objects and purposes of the corporation be known and understood.

On the subject of by-laws the charter provides that "by-laws may be made, not inconsistent with the laws of the land or this charter, or the resolutions of the convention at Memphis, as set out herein, which resolutions are hereby adopted (by the court) as a part of this charter, but shall make all by-laws necessary and proper to carry out the objects of the said resolutions."

Resolutions Not Surplusage.

Third—That the Memphis resolutions as embodied in the charter are not surplusage; that, in fact and in law, there would be no intelligible, valid charter if these resolutions were eliminated; that is, with these resolutions eliminated you would have a charter of a name, with power of succession in the name, and power to have a seal, to sue and be sued, etc., and power to "solicit and receive subscriptions, donations, legacies and devices, hold real estate and personal property, receive the same by contract, gift, will or devise, and shall hold the same for the purpose of said corporation with all the lawful conditions imposed by the donor."

Take out the Memphis resolutions and there is no "purpose" or object declared and set out in the charter.

School Founded by Church.

Fourth—That "the Central University of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South," now Vanderbilt University, was established or founded by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, acting by and through some of its Annual Conferences, and that said university has been patronized and maintained from the time of its establishment by said Church, in the true sense, meaning and spirit of an act passed by the General Assembly of Tennessee in January, 1895, being Chapter 6 of said acts.

Resolutions Part of Charter.

Fifth—That, the articles of foundation of said university are set forth and contained in the pleadings in this cause and are called and designated therein the "Memphis Resolutions," which resolutions were properly embodied in and became the life, substance and meaning of the charter of "the Central University of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South," which resolutions, or articles of foundation, were not eliminated, nor changed in substance and meaning, by the change of the name of said university to its present name—that is, Vanderbilt University.

Rights of Trustees.

Sixth—That the corporation brought into existence and organized by the agents or representatives of said Annual Conferences, simply holds the title to the university and its property, in trust for the members of the corporation, and also, for the purpose of more conveniently carrying into effect the objects of the founders as set forth in the Memphis resolutions, or articles of foundation, the carrying into effect of a part of these objects, was by the terms of the resolutions or articles of foundation, imposed by those Annual Conferences upon a Board of Trustees, which the Conferences themselves created, prescribing the number of such Trustees to constitute a quorum.

Seventh—That, the Board of Trustees, thus created, were never, and are not now, members of the corporation, and therefore do not possess, and have never possessed, the right and power to elect persons to fill vacancies on the Board of Trustees.

Power of Conferences.

Eighth—That the Annual Conferences, having founded the university for the Church, and created or brought into existence the Board of Trustees, the right to fill vacancies in the creature was vested alone in the creator, that is the Annual Conferences. These Annual Conferences, having by appropriate action transferred their right, in this respect, to the General Conference, and the General Conference in the exercise of that right having elected Messrs. N. E. Harris of Georgia, A. W. Biggs of Tennessee, and V. A. Godbey of Texas, Trustees, to fill vacancies in 1910, they are entitled to seats on the Board.

Ninth—That, under the ninth section of the articles of foundation—Memphis Resolutions—the College of Bishops is given the powers of a "Board of Supervision of the university or any of its departments" and "requested" to exercise that power, and also "jointly with the Board of Trust to elect officers and professors and prescribe the course of study and the plan of government." The College of Bishops is entitled to exercise the power and rights thus conferred.

The uninterrupted progress, usefulness and signal success of the university, under the management of trustees heretofore either elected or confirmed by the Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, together with the officials of the university named by the Board of Trust, is common knowledge and undisputed history. Why, under like management and conditions may it not continue to prosper and grow in usefulness?

Magnanimity of Vanderbilt.

The court is not unmindful of conditions existing in the South, especially in the State of Tennessee, at the time Cornelius Vanderbilt, the first, came forward with genuine unselfish magnanimity and held out a helping hand to a lately vanquished and then impoverished people and endowed the university with great liberality, which endowment he thereafter more than doubled, making his gifts more than one million dollars.

Mr. Vanderbilt did not impose any conditions on his gifts beneficial to himself or his descendants, nor reserve to himself or descendants any of the rights and privileges of a "founder," nor impose any conditions whatever tending to personal aggrandizement.

He did not require that his name be chiseled in marble or granite or placed in copper or brass over the door of the university; nor require sums equal to his charity to be raised before his donations were available; nor require the Church or community to enter into contract to keep the university—his monument—in good repair and a "going concern;" nor call it a "foundation" and then impose conditions which would enable him, or the trustees, he or his family might name, to have his peculiar views on religion, politics, finance and economics taught in the institution; nor did he impose conditions excluding religious societies from a share in his bounty, or church influences from sharing in the control, guidance and government of the university. In his liberal donations to the university he seems to have been wholly unselfish and singularly free from all vanity and all desire for vain glory.

A True Philanthropist.

He did not endow the university because of any belief on his part that he owed restitution to the government or to any community or class, and that it would, therefore, be disgraceful to him, if he died rich; nor were there any statute laws on the books, nor any cases pending in the courts, which threatened his fortune and the source of his income.

In all of the respects before mentioned, Cornelius Vanderbilt, the first, stands up and out as a modern philanthropist in a distinguished class, which he himself created, himself being its sole member, excepting only those of his descendants—who, since his death, have contributed so liberally to the upbuilding and support of the university without imposing any condition or attempting in any way to control the university or its affairs and management.

The court is unwilling to leave unexpressed the hope which it so sincerely indulges that some one or more of the descendants of Cornelius Vanderbilt will yet consent to become a member or members of the Board of Trust of the University, to the end that they may have that which has heretofore been tendered them, viz: a voice in accomplishing the purposes and objects had in view by their distinguished ancestor.

CHURCH EXTENSION NOTICE.

The meeting of the Executive Committee of the Louisiana Conference Board of Church Extension will be held in the Methodist Church in Alexandria on Wednesday, March 19, at 7:30 p.m. All persons who have applications to come before this Committee will please see that they are properly filled out and signed, and sent in time.

J. D. HARPER,
President of the Board.

Zachary, La.

"AN ESSAY ON BAPTISM."

This is the title of a pamphlet, just off the press, from the pen of Rev. John D. Ellis, of the Mississippi Conference. It numbers fifteen pages, is neatly printed, and presents a most attractive appearance. The controverted theme under discussion is handled in an able, clear, and most convincing manner. The spirit of the writer is admirable in every respect, and he has rendered the Church a valuable service in preparing and publishing this interesting and impressive essay. Our pastors would do well to scatter it generally through their charges. Write the author for the terms upon which it may be had. His address is Oakley, Miss.

WHEN JACKSON DINED.

While the dinner hour still clings to the noon-time among country people, it has advanced in the cities until now it occurs any time between noon and midnight. And that reminds us, says the Montgomery (Ala.) Advertiser, of one of the many stories about Col. Davy Crockett. While he was a member of Congress and was at his home in Tennessee, some one asked him about the dinner hour in Washington. He said the common people ate dinner at twelve, the next above them at one, the merchants at two, the Representatives at three, the Senators at four, members of the Cabinet at five, and the Vice-President at six. "But when does the President dine?" "What! Old Hickory?" said Crockett, anxious to fix a time that would suit his idea of Jackson's greatness. "Well, he don't eat till next day!"—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

Church News

In reviewing Dr. G. C. Rankin's book, "The Story of My Life," the St. Louis Christian Advocate calls him "the Ralph Connor of the South."

Rev. J. A. Batchelor, who is leading the movement to raise $100,000 to be used to aid in erecting a $50,000 Pioneer Memorial Southern Methodist Church in Oakland, Cal., and for our Church plant in San Francisco, is reported to be succeeding well in his efforts.

The Fleming H. Revell Company has just brought out a new book, entitled "Religious Unrest and Its Remedy," by Rev. James A. Anderson, D. D., LL. D. The volume is composed of a series of articles which, in the main, formerly appeared in the Western Methodist.

By order of Bishop H. C. Morrison, Rev. R. A. Clark, pastor of the Second Methodist Church of Memphis, and Rev. H. O. Hofstead, pastor of the First Methodist Church of Jackson, Tenn., will exchange places. Brother Clark's new appointment is one of the very best in the Memphis Conference.

Dr. W. W. Pinson, the Chief Missionary Secretary of the M. E. Church, South, who has been in the Orient for several months, is returning home by the eastward route. He is expected to sail for the United States from England the last of March or first of April. Mrs. Pinson is with him.

The Salvation Army is planning to establish in the United States two memorial schools in honor of the late General William Booth, the founder of that organization. One of them, to be located in Chicago, will cost $250,000, and the other, which will cost $300,000, will be located in New York. Of the $550,000 needed for these two institutions, $100,000 has already been raised.

There are reported to be 17,000,000 Mohammedans in Russia, 10,000 converts having been won to Islam within the past ten years. There is also going up in St. Petersburg a Mohammedan mosque which is to cost $3,000,000. Such activity upon the part of the devotees of a false faith should be a rebuke to every non-missionary church and church member in the land.

Mr. Slias McBee, who for many years was the Editor of The Churchman (New York), has announced that he will begin the issuance of a new publication, to be known as "The Constructive Quarterly." He proclaims it to be his purpose to furnish through this periodical an impartial forum in which "the leaders in scholarship and action of all nations and Churches may address the world without sectarian animus." This is undoubtedly a daring editorial venture, and the experiment will be watched with interest.

The Memphis Commercial Appeal states that there is dissatisfaction with Dr. R. H. Mahon's report to Bishop Morrison, exonerating Dr. W. E. Thompson, of Tampa, Fla., from all the rumors afloat concerning his alleged connection with the Collerville (Tenn.) Bank failure, and that Bishop Morrison has appointed a Committee of Investigation to look more fully into the matter. Among those who have insisted upon a more thorough inquiry into the affair is Mr. T. B. King, the well-known Methodist layman of the Bluff City.

The Presbyterians, the Disciples of Christ, and the Methodist workers at Nanking, China, are to join forces for the training of a Chinese ministry. The men whom they train will be the representatives of these three denominations as they preach the gospel among the 100,000,000 people in four Provinces. It is expected that within the next ten years they will be able to send from this school 400 preachers equipped to carry their own people the gospel message. Each co-operating denomination is given an opportunity to teach its doctrines and discipline to its own students by means of electives in the course.

Rev. T. Y. Ramsey, formerly of the North Mississippi, but now of the White River Conference, who is stationed at Batesville, Ark., has a $40,000 church in process of erection at that place.

Henderson-Brown College, at Arkadelphia, Ark., reports an enrollment of 220 students, about equally divided between the two sexes. It owns property valued at $100,000, and is one of our three leading educational institutions in Arkansas, the other two being Galloway and Hendrix Colleges.

Recent tests by French naval experts indicate that the waves in wireless telegraphy travel at the rate of nearly 200,000 miles per second.

The United States passed the Pension Bill in 25 minutes, which carried an appropriation of $180,000,000, the largest amount ever appropriated for that purpose. It seems as if the aged Northern soldiers keep getting more helpless and numerous all the time.

Dr. Harriet E. Clark, a suffragette, in a speech before a Massachusetts Legislative Committee, declared that if the Bay State does not grant the ballot to women, all the women of that State will depart to another State where such a privilege will be accorded them (Utah, perhaps).

Mr. William Howard Taft, ex-President of the United States, is now the Professor of International Law in Yale University at a salary of $5,000 per year. Hon. Howard Jones is the football coach of the same school at a salary of $4,000 per year. After all, if money is the standard by which a man is to be judged, what is the use of being an ex-President?

The American Red Cross Society proposes to erect a monument in Washington, D. C., to "the loyal women of the Civil War," which will cost $700,000, the United States Government to pay $400,000 of that amount. Who were the "loyal" women of the Civil War? Certainly the women of the South, who sacrificed for their homes and loved ones, were "loyal," and if the Government is to pay $400,000 on that monument, it should contain the words, "Both North and South."

A Commission appointed to select two Tennesseans whose statues should be placed in Statuary Hall of the Capitol at Washington, named Andrew Jackson, formerly President of the United States and the hero of the Battle of New Orleans, and John Sevier, the picturesque character of Tennessee pioneer days, and one of the idols of the masses of that commonwealth. To Bishop E. E. Hoss is largely due the credit of having "Jack" Sevier's name recommended.

Berlin, Germany, is the third great city to station polyglot policemen on the chief street corners in the business centers, Dresden and Leipzig being the other two. Twelve of the best linguists of the Berlin police force have been ordered to master the English language, and a badge will be furnished them consisting of two crossed flags, the English and the American. Hereafter, an American may never get lost in Berlin.

The will of the late Robert P. Doremus, a business man of New York City, was recently probated and it was found that his entire fortune of between $3,000,000 and $5,000,000 had been left to Washington and Lee University of Virginia. The only provision in the will concerning the fortune was that the income from it should be set aside for the use of his father and mother and wife during their lives, after which it should pass to the University as an endowment.

Last year the Charity Organization Society of New Orleans gave a sympathetic hearing to the claims of 4,787 poor families. Mr. Charles H. Patterson, the superintendent of that organization, is opposed to unorganized charity work. He believes that no applicant should be helped until after his claims have been thoroughly investigated. He claims that drink, in most instances, is responsible for the poverty and distress of the helpless families of the Crescent City.

Survivors of Wheeler's Confederate Cavalry have started a fund for the erection of an equestrian statue to General "Joe" Wheeler in the hall of the Georgia Capitol in Atlanta. General Wheeler was born in Augusta, Ga., but spent most of his life in Alabama, from which State he was elected to Congress nine times. He was first a soldier under the Stars and Stripes; then he served his State during the Civil War, and lastly, he added to his fame under the flag of the Union during the war with Spain.

Prof. Leonard P. Ayres, of the Russell Sage Foundation, in a recent report on American text books, severely criticized the present-day spelling books. In commending Professor Ayres' report, Dr. P. P. Claxton, United States Commissioner of Education, cited an instance where he examined 2,000 business letters and failed to find a single one of the 289 words that were recently given out in a National spelling test. There is a growing opinion that our public schools are teaching too much that does not concern the pupil in later life.

The National Child Labor Committee will hold its next meeting in Jacksonville, Fla., March 13-16. This Committee was organized in 1904, and a resident of Montgomery, Ala., is credited with being the leading spirit in its organization. Since 1904 it has effected the passage of laws in 39 States improving child labor conditions, and at present bills are pending before 32 State Legislatures, dealing with such questions as hours of labor, age limit for employment, minimum wage for minors, and the pensioning of dependent mothers with children.

THE CROSS ROADS.

By F. C. Whelan in the New Orleans Item

An old man at the cross-roads,
On a stone by the village street;
He was weary and worn and travel-stained
And faint from the dust and heat.
And his gray head drooped as he sat there
With hunger and travel spent.
While the noon-day throng went hurrying by
On their homeward journey bent.
And I passed by with the others
In that heedless current caught
That recked not cares for the stranger poor,
Nor the homeless wanderer's lot.

But the picture left its image;
I could not drive it away.
And I thought of One who would surely have praised

Had He been in the crowd that day:
How his eye sought out the outcast.
Who was barred from his fellow's door,
How he gave his hand to the woman shamed,
And bade her sin no more.
I saw Him kneel by the leper,
As he shuddered and cried, "Unclean!"
And health and joy and manhood came
At the touch of the Nazarene.

They are sitting there at the cross-roads,
Wearied and faint—alone,
There are many bowed with a sinner's shame
Or a shame that is not their own.
It may be a friendless orphan,
Or a slave in the thrall of drink—
Your path may lead to a happy home,
And his to the river's brink.
The wretched, the weak, the burdened,
The pilgrim with way-worn feet—
They are sitting there as the old man sat
At the place where the cross-roads meet.

Oh! linger a bit at the wayside,
And let your heart be heard,
As it bids you pause by your brother-man
And give him a cheerful word;
For the life that loves is lovely
And the soul that gives expands,
And the heart that warms to a brother's need
Is like the Son of Man's.
And the meed will be quite royal,
When he says to you and me,
"Inasmuch as ye did for the least of these,
Ye have done it unto me."

CONCERNING THE DURANT DISTRICT.

Dear Doctor Meek: I count myself fortunate in having secured a promise from Bishop H. C. Morrison to hold our District Conference, which will convene in Sidon at 2:30 p. m., May 14. All the pastors in the Durant District are hard at work, and seem to be hopeful and cheerful. How this is possible when some of them have received less than $2.50 per month up to date, is a question that only a Methodist preacher can answer. May the good Lord help the people to help the preachers! Some of them need it badly. We extend to you, Doctor, an invitation to attend our District Conference, which will be held in the home town of Brother H. C. Morehead.

Cordially, W. S. SHIPMAN.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY COUNCIL.

The third Annual Meeting of the Woman's Missionary Council will be held in the First Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Birmingham, Alabama, April 9-16, 1913.

Entertainment will be provided by the Birmingham auxiliaries for the members of the Executive Committee, ministers, missionaries, deaconesses, and speakers in attendance.

Those delegates desiring entertainment should write at once to Mrs. H. J. Salter, 516 Cotton Avenue, Birmingham, Alabama. For delegates who prefer self-entertainment, and for visitors, a list of hotels and boarding houses, with their distances from the church and rates of the same will be published, and the Committee on Arrangements will be glad to give assistance in securing comfortable accommodations during the meeting. All who expect to attend should send their names to Mrs. H. J. Salter. As the probable attendance will not guarantee reduced railroad rates, it will be best for groups of persons coming from the same or contiguous territory to secure party tickets. Miss BELLE H. BENNETT, Pres.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SISTERHOOD.

During the annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Mississippi Conference in 1912, in the Capitol Street Church of Jackson, at the close of an afternoon session the ministers' wives present, in response to the request of Mrs. B. F. Lewis, met in the auditorium of the church. The object of the meeting, as stated by Mrs. Lewis, was to form an organization to promote better acquaintance, closer companionship, and greater helpfulness among the preachers' wives of the Mississippi Conference. The idea met with an immediate response from all present, who entered at once into an organization. The name chosen was, "The Mississippi Conference Sisterhood." No dues are required. The membership is open to the wives of all ministers in the Mississippi Conference, and to the widows of deceased members of the Conference. The next regular meeting will be held in Hattiesburg, during the annual meeting of the Missionary Society in 1913. During the year informal meetings will be held wherever two or three members are gathered together. The roll of members is growing, and yet there are others who may wish to join the Sisterhood. Come with us and we will do you good. Send your name to the undersigned at Port Gibson. Miss. Mrs. T. B. HOLLOMAN, Sec.

A NOTE FROM MEMPHIS.

Dear Brother Meek: I enjoy the weekly visits of the Advocate very much. It always brings me messages of cheer, and I read its pages with much pleasure.

I do hope that Mississippi Methodism will rally to the call and build an adequate dormitory at Millsaps College. In my humble judgment, the need for the Christian College will increase as the years go by.

My own work enjoys a measure of prosperity. Since Conference—three months—I have received 91 into the Church, 9 of these on profession of faith. Our morning congregations literally pack the church, and at night the congregations fill the church about three-fourths full. Last Sunday we had over 700 present at Sunday school. Brother J. R. Pepper is the superintendent, and he is assisted by a faithful and efficient band of helpers. Since my pastorate began here, 656 have been received into the Church. Dr. L. C. Branscomb, of Birmingham, Ala., is coming in April to assist me in a series of special revival services. Last year we raised nearly $26,000 for all purposes. With a membership of 1676, scattered all over the city, I have plenty to do. Miss Cornelia Godbey is our deaconess. She is a woman of rare tact, and is doing a splendid work. Cordially,

"FUEL FOR MISSIONARY FIRES."

To the Pastors of the Mississippi Conference:

Dear Brethren: I am mailing to every pastor this week samples of the latest and best missionary leaflets issued by our General Secretaries at Nashville, and I feel sure that they will be read with interest. It is hoped and expected that copies of these and other missionary leaflets will be placed in every Methodist home in the near future, for we must sow down every charge in our Conference with missionary literature, if we are to make any advance over past years. Beyond question, ignorance is the chief source of indifference toward and prejudice against missions. Our missionary campaign should be first of all, a campaign of education. Let us "turn on the light." Will not each pastor write me at an early date what special leaflets he desires for circulation among his flock, and also the quantity desired of each kind, so that they may be sent promptly? Or, if any brother prefers, said leaflets may be ordered direct from Dr. C. F. Reid, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn. Let us not neglect this. Yours fraternally,

M. M. BLACK,
Conf. Missionary Sec'y.

Laurel, Miss.

THE NEW PRESIDENT'S HUMOR.

One of the Stories Woodrow Wilson Likes.

Woodrow Wilson, our new President, says W. S. McAdoo in the March "Century," has a child's delight in repetition of jokes, an unwearied pleasure in reciting over and over again his favorite nonsense-verses and limericks, in reading over and over again particular essays of "Mr. Dooley," and in telling over and over again certain anecdotes which have pleased him, especially if they are darkey stories. And the stories which specially delight him are those that reveal the real personality of the Negro, his naivete and disinclination to admit that he doesn't understand "big words," as for instance, the story of the Richmond cab-driver. A man got in a cab at the Richmond railway station and said:

"Drive me to a haberdasher's."

"Yaas, suh," said the driver, who whipped up his horse, and drove a block; then, leaning over to address his passenger, said, "Scuse me, Boss, but whar d' you say you want go?"

"To a haberdasher's."

"Yaas, suh, yaas, suh." After another block, there was the same performance: "Scuse me, Boss, but whar d' you say you want go?"

"To a haberdasher's," was the somewhat impatient reply.

Then came the final appeal:

"Now, look a-here, Boss, I be'n drivin' in dis town twenty year, an I ain't never give nobody away yit. Now you jes tell dis Nigger whar 't is you want go."

THE LITTLE GENTLEMAN.

I knew him for a gentleman
By signs that never fail;
His coat was rough and rather worn,
His cheeks were thin and pale;
A lad who had his way to make
With little time for play;
I knew him for a gentleman
By certain signs to-day.

He met his mother on the street,
Off came his little cap;
My door was shut, he waited there
Until I heard his rap.
He took the bundle from my hand,
And when I dropped the pen,
He sprang to pick it up for me;
This gentleman of ten.

He does not push or crowd along,
His voice is gently pitched,
He does not fling his books about,
As if he was bewitched.
He stands aside to let you pass,
He always shuts the door.
He runs on errands willingly
To forge or mill or store.

He thinks of you before himself;
He serves you if he can,
For in whatever company
The manners make the man.
At ten or forty 'tis the same,
The manner tells the tale,
And I discern the gentleman
By signs that never fail.

LIKE MOST QUARRELS.

Ina came in from the country on her fifth birthday to visit her Cousin May. At night they were put to bed early. An hour passed, when heart-breaking sobs were heard from the children's room.

"What is the matter, children?" asked May's mother, entering the dark room.

From under the bedclothes Ina sobbed out, "May won't give me any of her peanuts."

"But May has no peanuts," replied her aunt.

"I know that," sobbed Ina, "but she said if she did have peanuts she wouldn't give me any."—New York Christian Advocate.

MOTHER'S LESSON.

By Gertrude M. Neil.

"All done, mother," called Gladys.

"Are you sure the table is properly set this time, dear?" called mother from up-stairs, where she was making the beds.

"Yes, and the dishes are ready to wash," called Gladys, "and I am going out to skip until you are ready to do my hair for school."

Mrs. Beard sighed and wondered if Gladys had done her work properly. That was one fault of this little girl. She could do things well when she tried, but she did not always try. Mrs. Beard was not a scolding mother—she would not be so unladylike as to scold—but she had often talked to Gladys about her fault, and the little girl would promise to do better. Then perhaps for a time or two the knives, forks and spoons would be put nicely in their places on the table, and the dishes to wash would be piled in neat piles. Then she would become careless again, and you would almost think the things had been thrown on the table.

Mrs. Beard finished her beds and went down-stairs. "Oh, such an untidy table and such poorly-scrapped dishes!" Mrs. Beard said to herself, "I dislike to do it, but I think I must," and she called Gladys in to be made ready for school.

Gladys wore her hair like so many little girls do nowadays, cut in Dutch style, with a large bow tying back the front. Mrs. Beard always tied such pretty bows, and Gladys always felt that her hair was as neatly and nicely combed as could be. She did not look in the glass this morning, but after her mother had finished her hair and buttoned up her dress she put on her jacket and off she went.

She came home at noon nearly crying. "Oh! mother," she said, "what was the matter with you this morning? My hair all came down, and at recess the boys were laughing, and one of the girls told me my dress was all buttoned in the wrong buttonholes. She fixed it for me, but we could not fix my hair, and just look at it!"

"I guess I must have been in a hurry to do something else this morning," answered Mrs. Beard. Gladys thought her mother did not seem to feel much concerned about it.

The table was set carelessly again, and again the little girl's hair came down, and one of the little girls asked her who combed her hair, saying that it did not look like it always had, the bow was all one-sided.

"Mother, look at my hair again. Why didn't you do it as you always have?"

"Oh, I guess I hurried it again, Gladys."

Next morning Gladys went to put on a fresh pair of stockings. Instead of finding them neatly darned, the hole she had made in the knee was all puckered into a bunch and looked very badly.

"Mother, look at my stocking. What made you darn it like that?"

"I seem to be getting very careless about what I do for you, don't I, Gladys?" answered the mother, and went on about her work.

That night, when Gladys went to bed, she found her bed made so carelessly that she hardly knew how to get into it. What has come over mother, wondered Gladys.

The next morning she looked in the glass before going to school, and saw what a loose, untidy-looking bow her mother had tied on her hair, and the tears began to come. Mother was in the dining-room, and Gladys went in to ask her why she did her hair so untidily; but she did not ask, for she suddenly seemed to know. Mother was brushing the crumbs off the table and re-arranging the knives and forks, doing over again the things Gladys had done.

The little girl did not say a word, but went off to school, and all the morning she could not attend to her school work for thinking. These were her thoughts: "What a selfish girl I have been! Mother always has done things well for me, and I have hardly ever done them well for her! It isn't a bit fair to let people do things right for you and you not do them right for them. Mother has such a lot to do, too, and even if she did let my hair go untidy these two days, it was so I would see things right. She doesn't scold or whip like other mothers do, and she is just the best mother in the world, and I love her so, and I am going to try so hard to do things well."

You know what happens when little girls or anyone else try real hard to do things, don't you? They always succeed, and so did Gladys.—Christian Guardian.

TREES THAT WHISTLE MUSIC.

Poets have told how the wind made music in the trees, and recently returned visitors from the West Indies have adduced facts to show that the poetic fancy is actually a thing of undisputed fact in Barbadoes. It is the musical or whistling tree, having a peculiar shaped leaf and pods, with a split-open edge. The wind passing through these sends out the sounds which give the tree its peculiar name.

In Barbadoes there is a valley filled with the trees, and when the trade winds blow across the island a constant, moaning, deep-toned whistle is heard from it.

A species of acacia, which grows very abundantly in the Soudan, is also called the whistling tree by the natives. Its shoots are frequently, by the agency of the larvae of insects, distorted in shape and swollen into a globular bladder from one to two inches in diameter. After the insect

Editorial.

THE BIBLE IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

The following from a recent issue of the Shreveport (La.) Journal is so well expressed and so apposite to the times that we gladly give it a place in our columns:

"At a recent meeting of the Caddo Parish School Board a resolution was introduced by Mr. McKennon of the Fourth Ward (Shreveport) providing for the opening of the daily school sessions with short devotional exercises, and was permitted to lie over until the March meeting of the board for final action. We can see no possible objection to the adoption of such a resolution, but, on the contrary, there are many reasons why the practice of opening school sessions with devotional exercises should be reinstated in the public schools of Caddo Parish. We are getting too far away from the 'good old-time religion,' the sort that took hold of the boys and girls and kept them in the straight path when they grew to be men and women. As the resolution sets forth, 'the children in our public schools are at the most impressionable age for retaining good or evil,' and, surely, no one will contend that children should receive any but good impressions. In omitting the devotional exercises in the schools, the authorities are taking from them something that is good, something that will make them better men and women. Can the nation, the state or the parish afford to do this? As a matter of course, the exercises should be without reference to any denomination, for all are represented in the public schools. But the exercises should be of a character to inspire the school children to nobler and better lives and implant within their hearts a love and reverence for their Creator."

We sincerely hope that when the School Board of Caddo Parish meets this month that Mr. McKennon's resolution will be adopted. Since it does not at all contemplate bringing to bear upon the children any direct sectarian or denominational influence, we do not believe that any valid objection can be urged against it. The inculcation of sound moral principles is an essential part of any worthy and complete system of instruction. The State cannot afford to be indifferent to this feature in the training of its youth, for the only sure foundation upon which it can rest is the integrity and uprightness of its citizenship. Is the Bible, at this time when it is showing its mighty power in renovating and remaking the decadent pagan civilization of the Old World, to have a ban put upon it in our enlightened land? Woe be unto us if this is done! We have no State Church, but ours, in its framework, is a Christian nation. Our courts have held that the fundamental principles of Christianity are a part of the common law of the land. The Chief Executive of the Republic, the Governors of our States, and all our other officials who are sworn into office at all, assume their obligations with the hand resting upon this marvelous and time-honored volume.

We would fetter no man's conscience, but we cannot concede that all the religious faiths of mankind stand upon a common footing in the United States. We want no persecution of any kind, and we would leave every individual, so long as he keeps within the bounds of decency and the common instincts of humanity, the legal right to worship as he pleases, either in private or in temples of his own rearing; but, at the same time, we insist that our Government in its public functions should continue to give proper recognition to the Christian religion, upon the principles of which it is founded, as it has done in the past. If we yield to the demand to exclude the Bible from our public schools, why may not our citizens of unchristian faiths, with an equal show of logic, insist that we shall also shut it out of our courts, banish the chaplains from our Army, Navy, and prisons, and erase the name of Christ from our currency and public buildings? Do they not contribute to the support of these institutions and agencies as well as to the public schools of the country?

As the various peoples of earth continue to crowd to our shores, we are going sooner or later to have to take a firm stand against the encroachments of heathenism and unbelief; and there will never be a better time to do this than the present; and there is no better place to set up resolutely the banner of catholic Christianity than in our houses of public instruction. Unless this is done, it is to be feared that while we are trying to Christianize other nations, our own will become paganized. Indeed, is not this process already going on? The best available statistics show that the gain of all the Churches in the United States last year was only about 1.7 per cent, while the average annual gain in our population is about 3 per cent? Is it a matter of no concern to our municipal, county, state, and national authorities, that our population seems to be becoming less Christian? Are they so blind that they cannot see what must be the inevitable result of such a trend?

John Fiske, the eminent historian, fixes as 'the critical period of American history' the time that intervened between the framing of the Articles of the Old Confederation and the formulation and adoption of the present Federal Constitution. But, even at the risk of being called a pessimist, we do not hesitate to say that, in our humble opinion, we are just beginning to enter upon the really 'critical period of American history.' And, in our judgment, the future of our Republic will be determined chiefly by the extent to which we remain true to God and the cardinal teachings of his Divine Revelation. To teach merely the heads of the millions of our youth and leave them without moral instruction and ideals, is 'like putting out the eyes of a Samson and entwining his arms around the pillars of the national fabric,' that he may pull it down and himself perish in the awful wreck.

BIGOTRY-DECYING BIGOTS.

The bigotry with which some men write and speak against bigotry out-bigots the bigots immeasurably. With a cocksureness born of a shallowness which fails to discern fundamental distinctions of tremendous importance in their practical outcome, they decry bitterly all who, appreciating the significance of teachings and tendencies, stand steadily for that which history and experience confirm as making for the visible and invisible coming of the kingdom of God among men. So sure are they, that they are the men and that wisdom is bound up in them, that they disdain argument or any candid search for the truth in any matter, even though those whom they assail as bigots stand ready with evidence of every kind to demonstrate the correctness of their position. It is the custom, we have further observed, of these bigotry-decrying bigots to sublimate all truth to a nebulous star-dust, emanating chiefly from themselves; and they only ask that men bask with approval in the light of it. Then, to their thought, the kingdom of God has come—Bishops, Bible, creeds, or churches to the contrary notwithstanding.

From such arrogance, blindness, and bigotry may the good Lord deliver us, and help us ever to "contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints," as ministers under vows, and as faithful followers of Jesus Christ.

BISHOP MURRAH IN NEW ORLEANS.

Bishop Murrah spent last Saturday and Sunday in New Orleans, and was given an enthusiastic greeting by his many friends in the Crescent City. He is well known here both by Methodists and the general public, and is highly esteemed and honored as a man and as a minister. He occupied the pulpit of the Parker Memorial Church on the Sabbath at 11 o'clock, delivering a masterful sermon to a magnificent audience. His text was John vi, 68, 69, and we do not think that we have ever heard him expound the Word when he was more deeply spiritual and impressive. We were pleased to see the Bishop looking so ruddy and strong. This doubtless will enable him to make his influence vigorously felt in our church work in this section for a season; and we notice that the brethren are already beginning to press him into service. Bishop Murrah speaks hopefully of the outlook for our work in the Orient, despite the unsettled condition of things there. He visited Baron Yun in prison while in Korea, and had an interesting interview with him. He says that the missionaries believe thoroughly that he is innocent of any wrong-doing, and hold him in the very highest regard.

ARE YOU PROPERLY REPRESENTING HIM?

It is stated that intoxicants in China are called the "Jesus Poison." What an outrageous shame that the nations that are called Christian should so act in their commercial dealings as thus to bring reproach upon the holy name of our Lord! It is a tremendous truth that unsaved people, whether in a foreign land or at home, largely form their conceptions of Christ by the spirit and conduct of his professed disciples. Are you showing the Master to the world as he was and is, or are you reflecting a distorted image of him?

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The losses by fire recently sustained at Millsaps College have been adjusted: $13,000 will be paid for the damage done the building, and $677 for the destruction of the furniture.

The prospects for a good year on the Houma Mission, Louisiana Conference, were never brighter. A Men's Bible Class was recently organized in Houma, and the attendance has already reached a total of 27.

Bishop H. C. Morrison will preside over the Durant District Conference, which will convene at Sidon, Miss., on May 14. See the announcement of the presiding elder, Rev. W. S. Shipman, which appears on another page.

Upon his arrival at Pott's Camp, Miss., his new field of labor, Rev. J. G. Johnson found a warm welcome and a full pantry awaiting him. The work has started well, and he hopes to accomplish much for the Master during the year.

Rev. W. H. Long, who came to the Louisiana Conference last year from Texas, has been cordially received by the people of the Eunice charge. He is a man of capacity and has made a fine beginning for a good year's work.

Rev. J. D. Harper, of Zachary, La., requests us to state that the meeting of the Executive Committee of the Louisiana Conference Board of Church Extension will be held Wednesday, March 19, instead of Tuesday, the 18th, as was previously announced.

The congregation at Lake Arthur, La., was never more delighted with a preacher and his wife than it is with Rev. and Mrs. H. N. Brown. Brother Brown has a habit of doing good work wherever he goes, and his favorable showing at Lake Arthur is not an unusual thing.

Rev. J. Ivy Hoffpauir, the senior pastor in the Lafayette District, has been most heartily received by his home congregation at Indian Bayou, La. Brother Hoffpauir was raised near Indian Bayou, and nearly half the people of that church know him as "Uncle Ivy."

The preachers of the Columbus District, North Mississippi Conference, had a very interesting and profitable meeting at Artesia a few days ago. Rev. J. E. Thomas, the capable presiding elder, occupied the chair, and a number of helpful discussions took place. The preaching was done by Rev. J. C. Park, of Macon, and Rev. W. J. Burt, of Mayhew.

The Woman's Council, which will be held at Birmingham, Ala., April 9-16, will issue a daily paper giving full reports of its proceedings. It is hoped that thousands of the women of the Church will subscribe for it and read it. The price is 25 cents. Now is the time to send in subscriptions.

Rev. J. W. Ramsey writes that Bishop W. B. Murrah will dedicate our church at Mendenhall, Miss., Sunday, April 13, at the morning hour, and that at night he will tell of his travels and work in the Orient.

The Commencement sermon of Whitworth College will be preached on May 18 by Dr. H. M. Du Bose of Atlanta, Ga. We are grateful to Dr. I. W. Cooper for a cordial invitation to be present, which we shall certainly accept, Providence permitting.

Rev. J. C. Price is pleased with the progress of his work at Lisbon, La. He has been presenting the claims of the Conference organ in his rounds, and our subscription files show that his efforts have not been in vain. May the Lord continue to bless him, and crown his labors with an increasing measure of success.

There is not a more difficult situation to handle in the Louisiana Conference than our work at Jennings, but Rev. L. N. Hoffpauir has things well in hand and the outlook is now more encouraging than at any former period. The estimate for pastoral support has been doubled, and the congregations are growing at every service.

Bishop J. H. McCoy will dedicate our church at Calhoun City, Miss., on Sunday, March 23. A rare treat is in store for the people of that growing community. We congratulate Pastor Gault upon having wiped out the debt upon this house of worship, so that it can be set apart for religious use, in accordance with the provisions in our Book of Discipline.

Rev. J. C. McElroy, who has entered upon his fourth year on the State Springs (Miss.) charge, reports activity and a hopeful outlook in his field. We are indebted to him for five subscriptions to the Advocate, sent in a few days ago. There are few better attestations of a preacher's efficiency than the fact that the people insist upon keeping him as long as the law of the Church allows.

The Jackson (Miss.) correspondent of the Times-Democrat, writing under date of the 3d inst., says: "The Building Committee of the First Methodist Church of this city has entered into a contract with Mr. I. C. Garber for the construction of the Galloway Memorial Church, on the site of the old church, and work will be begun as soon as the material can be placed on the ground."

The Methodists of Leland, Miss., are fortunate in having as their pastor Rev. L. W. Cain, who is a workman that needeth not to be ashamed. Brother Cain also ministers to our flock at Hollandale, Miss. We are indebted to him both for some generous words of appreciation of the Advocate and for some substantial work done in its behalf. We shall not soon forget his kindness.

In a letter received a few days since, Rev. R. A. Ellis, an honored veteran of the North Mississippi Conference, who resides at Yazoo City, stated that, aside from the trouble given him by his eyes, his health is fairly good. He cannot, however, read as much as he formerly did, which to him is a great privation. We formed for Brother Ellis a high regard in the opening days of our ministry, which has grown with the passing years.

Writing from Luling, La., Brother R. W. Freeman states that for the first time in a life of over three score and ten years he is without ample church privileges, and that in his present situation he finds the Nashville and New Orleans Christian Advocates specially enjoyable and helpful. He is highly elated over Judge Allison's decision in the Vanderbilt case, having been praying daily for many months for the success of the Church in that contest.

Rev. Martin Hebert has but two regular appointments in connection with his French Mission work. He will devote most of his time to evangelistic work among the French-speaking people of South Louisiana. More than a year ago he organized a church in Mermenau, about six miles from Jennings, La., and a new church building is now almost completed at that place. When finished, it will be the first Protestant church structure in that community.

We make grateful acknowledgment of the reception of a club of subscribers recently sent us from West Point, Miss., by our worthy pastor at that place, Rev. E. S. Lewis. Referring to affairs in his choice charge, Brother Lewis says: "My work here is moving steadily onward. There have been 14 additions to the Church since the Annual Conference. We had 278 present at Sunday school a few Sabbaths ago. Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick was with us, and did us fine service."

The Annual Meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Louisiana Conference, which will be held in Baton Rouge, March 11-13, promises to be an occasion of much interest. The Conference sermon will be preached by the Rev. W. W. Drake on Tuesday evening, March 11. Mrs. A. L. Marshall, the Editor-Secretary of The Missionary Voice, is expected to be present and participate in the exercises. It is hoped that a large number of the Louisiana pastors will find it possible to attend.

We are indebted to the following brethren, to whom acknowledgment has not been made elsewhere, for subscriptions sent in since the last issue of the Advocate: Rev. H. P. Lewis, Jr., Carriere, Miss., 8; Rev. J. M. Wyatt, Asherman, Miss., 8; Rev. J. B. Randolph, Como, Miss., 17; Rev. D. L. Griffin, Ringgold, La., 6; Rev. M. L. Burton, Gulfport, Miss., 10; Rev. J. D. Simpson, Pickens, Miss., 3; Rev. W. A. Clark, West, Miss., 3; Miss Belle M. Roberts (from Lake Arthur, La.), 9; Rev. T. E. Yancey, Smithville, Miss., 6.

Rev. W. W. Perry, our pastor at Haynesville, La., sends us the following good news from his wide-awake charge: "We had a fine day at Athens last Sunday (the 23d ult.), a large congregation greeting me at each service. On Saturday, Feb. 22, I was pounded by the members of the Haynesville congregation, who brought to the parsonage quite an array of serviceable things. We are very grateful for these tokens of appreciation. Our new church here is taking on quite a nice appearance as the carpenters proceed with its construction. It will be a beauty when completed."

Rev. A. G. Hall, who was transferred from the North Mississippi to the Texas Conference last fall, and was stationed at Nash, writes encouragingly of his work. He states that he has a delightful people to serve; that valuable improvements have been made upon the parsonage; that the pastor's salary has been raised; that one Sunday school and one prayer meeting have been organized; that the circulation of their Conference organ has been nearly doubled, and that about one-half of his Conference collections are in hand. We are pleased to know that Brother Hall is giving such a good account of himself in the Lone Star State.

As will be seen elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate, Rev. H. S. Spragins has announced that the Greenville District Conference will be held at Cleveland, Miss., May 22-25. With so capable a presiding elder to plan for it, with so admirable a meeting place, and with Bishop W. B. Murrah to preside, we dare say that this gathering will be a memorable one. We thank Brother Spragins for an invitation to be present, and we sincerely hope that circumstances may be such as to permit us to be on hand.

Rev. A. Inman Townsley, of Rayville, La., has issued a neat folder announcing a series of sermons that he will deliver upon the general theme, "His Last Week." The first was preached on Feb. 23, and the series will end on Easter Sunday. Brother Townsley requests us to state that the Monroe District Sunday School Institute will be held at Rayville, March 18 and 19, with such specialists on hand as Dr. and Mrs. H. M. Hamill, Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick, and Rev. P. O. Lowrey; and that all delegates will be gladly entertained.

That prince of good fellows and most efficient pastor, Rev. W. W. Holmes, finds things much to his liking at Ruston, La. He says: "I am delighted with my charge. Our church here is easily one of the leading churches of the State. The average attendance of our Sunday school is running above 350. Our congregations tax the seating capacity of the church. An audience of 600 looks good to me." In the midst of his manifold labors, Brother Holmes is mindful of the interests of the Advocate, for which we are most grateful to him.

In a note concerning other matters, Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, of Starkville, Miss., makes the following reference to his work: "We are having magnificent congregations here, and a finer opportunity to do good a preacher could not ask. I preached at the A. and M. College last Sunday. At our first quarterly conference Mr. D. A. Saunders, Dr. J. W. Eckford, and Mr. W. W. Magruder were appointed a committee to sell the old parsonage and arrange for a new one." We know this flock, having once served it, and we almost envy Brother Lipscomb his present field of labor.

In a personal note to the Editor, Dr. E. B. Partin, of Chunky, Miss., adds the following statement concerning the work of that charge, in which he is a useful and honored layman: "We are well pleased with our pastor, Rev. J. E. Williams, and it seems that the new arrangement of putting Chunky with Hickory is working all right. We have just been blessed with one of the best revivals ever held here. It did more for our town than anything else could possibly have done. In these services Brother Williams, who is himself an excellent preacher and revivalist, had the able assistance of Rev. D. E. Kelley.

From a recent issue of the St. Louis Christian Advocate, we take the following: "Dr. Theo. Copeland is back from Troy, Mo., where he has been holding a great meeting. The town was stirred from center to circumference, souls were saved, and the church was built up. Dr. Copeland has been called back to preach in Troy on the evening of Feb. 27." It will be remembered that this was the meeting that Brother Copeland was engaged in when the pastor, Rev. Charles Lynch, was so suddenly stricken down by death. We are pleased to note that it proved to be a gracious season of refreshing.

We learn with much gratification that the physicians at Battle Creek, Mich., think favorably of Bishop Hoss's case and hold out hope of his complete recovery. We are informed that the Bishop expects to attend the connectional meetings at Dallas, Tex., and that he hopes to be able to take his full quota of Conferences when the new assignment of work is made to our chief pastors. We sincerely trust, however, that his colleagues will insist upon his not attempting to do too much until all traces of his illness have disappeared. He has always been too willing a toiler for his own physical good.

We were delighted last Thursday morning to have as a caller at our sanctum Mr. Read P. Dunn, of Greenville, Miss. He and his attractive bride, after some time spent in Florida, were making their way toward the Queen City of the Mississippi Delta, where they are to reside, though they still expected to tarry a bit with relatives in Louisiana before completing the final stage of their homeward journey. Having formerly been the pastor of this choice young man, we feel a deep interest in all that concerns him. He is the efficient superintendent of our Sunday school at Greenville, and has had all his life a most enviable reputation.

In forwarding us a nice list of subscribers, Miss Belle M. Roberts says: "I organized a Senior Epworth League at Port Barre, La., last Sunday afternoon (Feb. 23), with fifteen charter members. The people there are doing things. They appointed committees the Sunday that I was with them to arrange for building a Methodist church, work upon which will be started soon. The Sunday school is a union one, and has some very fine people in it. A collection of over $10 was taken and given to the preacher, who is well liked and is doing a good work." Miss Roberts has also recently visited Lake Charles in the interest of the Advocate, and reports that Rev. K. W. Dodson is having a most successful pastorate in that progressive city.

We are indebted to the brilliant young pastor of our church at Tunica, Miss., Rev. L. P. Wasson, for the following items of interest concerning the progress of our church work at that place: "Bro. Honnoll laid the sure foundation of faith and confidence in the Church and ministry in the hearts of the people here, and on that foundation the work has gone steadily forward. The old parsonage debt has been paid and the parsonage has been made thoroughly comfortable in every respect. The people all but overwhelm us with their continued kindness. Our Sunday congregations are excellent, the Sunday school has an average of more than 75, and the prayer meetings are an inspiration. We were loath to give Brother Woolard up, but Brother Spragins has already completely won the hearts of the people. His visit to us in January was most helpful. We received 5 members into the Church the day he was with us."

One of the most progressive churches in this section is the First Methodist Church of Corinth, Miss. Particularly is its Sunday school up-to-date and resourceful in effective methods. The latest event of interest in Corinth religious circles was a banquet given by the Young Men's Bible Class and the men of this congregation in honor of the boys who will be the men of to-morrow, which took place at the Waldron Hotel on the evening of Feb. 26. The printed invitations issued were specially designed for the occasion and were most appropriate and beautiful, the outer covering bearing the significant words, "The Oaks" and "The Acorns," with a colored circle enclosing the first letter of the name of the hotel intervening. Mr. Geo. A. Hazard was chairman of the meeting, and Mr. R. M. Weaver was toastmaster. Among those on the program were the following Methodist ministers: Rev. J. H. Mitchell, Rev. J. S. Duke, Rev. C. A. Northington, and Rev. J. H. Felts.

Mrs. W. L. Lipscomb, of Columbus, Miss., who has been so critically ill, is reported to be much better, and it is now thought that she may recover. This will be gratifying news to her many friends and admirers. We have never known a woman who wielded a wider influence for good than Sister Lipscomb. She gave to the ministry of the Church three of her sons—Revs. G. H., E. W., and T. H. Lipscomb (the first two having already passed to their reward); to the foreign field, she gave one of her daughters, Mrs. Lula Lipscomb Waters (also deceased); and she is also the mother of Mrs. Mary L. Hargrove, the brilliant teacher of the Bible in the Scarritt Training School at Kansas City. Two other sons—Prof. Dabney Lipscomb, of the Mississippi Industrial Institute and College, and Dr. J. W. Lipscomb, of Columbus—are active and useful workers in the Church. Behind Sister Lipscomb a shining record stretches back across the years, but brighter still is the way that stretches out before her.

Obituaries.

Little LUCILE ROLLINS was born Dec. 4, 1910, and died Jan. 14, 1913. She was a beautiful child. As we looked into her bright, black eyes that sparkled with a light that was not of this earth, and as we saw the smiles play over her face, we were unable to know that she was too pure for earth. She has gone to join loved ones that had gone on before. Lucile left a devoted mother, two little brothers, grandparents and other relatives to mourn her going. She will now know no temptation and her little eyes will not be wet with sorrow's tears. May our hearts cease to throb on account of the little vacant chair, and may we brush aside our tears as we look across into the beautiful harbor where she is safely anchored, watching and waiting for us.

GRANDMA AND AUNTIE.

On Monday night, January 6, 1913, the Auburn community, was made sad by the death of JAMES SHORT WELLS, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Wells, who was born September 21, 1885. He united with the Mount Olive Church in July, 1909. On November 17, 1909, he was happily married to Miss Darnis Wrotain, who with one child, a mother, three brothers, three sisters, and a host of relatives and friends, mourns his departure. It was sad to see Short die, but it is a consolation to know that he is at rest. He was a sufferer for eighteen months before his death, but never murmured. He bore it all with patience, and often said he was only waiting for the Master's call. Consciousness never left him. All was done that loving hands could do. He knew he was about to die and called the family to his bedside. He made several requests, one of which was that his younger brother join some Church, and another was that his little boy should never play base ball. He wanted all of them to meet him in heaven. He told his Uncle Erastus, six months ago, that he wanted to be buried at Old Adams. I would offer this one consolation: There is One above who can heal all wounds.

AUNT RHODIE.

Mrs. R. S. KIRK, (nee Dillingham) of Amory, Miss., died Feb. 13, 1913, in a hospital in St. Louis, after undergoing an operation. Some time last summer she underwent a serious operation, but its effects were not lasting. She was born near Aberdeen, Miss., April 23, 1861, and was married to Dr. R. S. Kirk, Dec. 22, 1891. She professed faith in Christ and joined the M. E. Church, South, in the year 1882. She was the mother of seven children, one of whom preceded her to the spirit world. Three sons and three daughters and her husband remain to mourn her death. Mrs. Kirk, for the past few years, had been a great sufferer. The writer had known her for more than a year. She was so cheerful and hopeful that those who visited her were led instinctively to feel that she was no ordinary woman. Her resignation was seemingly perfect. Her faith in God was child-like and pure. I always felt better religiously when I left her bedside. She loved her Church intensely and was a devoted wife and mother. She was a member of the Eastern Star. The funeral service was conducted from her home in Amory, on Feb. 14. One of our best women has gone to her heavenly home, to await the coming of her loved ones and friends. May the tender mercies of our Father in Heaven abide with the bereaved family.

W. M. YOUNG, P. C.

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION.

Whereas, God, in his love and wisdom, hath deemed it well to claim from the Ruleville Home Mission Society one of its most loved and most consecrated members, Mrs. ALICE DAVIS BOYETTE, therefore be it resolved:

First, That we bow in trustful submission to his will, remembering that "all things work together for good to them that love the Lord."

Second, That we extend our sympathy to the bereaved husband, sister, and brothers, and commend them to the love of Him who can and will be their comforter in this season of affliction.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, and that they be published in the Ruleville Record and the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

(Signed): Mrs. A. J. Weissinger, Mrs. A. L. Pentecost, Mrs. W. D. McCollough, Committee.

IN MEMORIAM.

(Action of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Seashore Camp Ground concerning the death of Mrs. E. L. McGehee.)

One of the dearest friends one can have is that person who is, indeed, a sister—especially so, when that sister's life is one of true womanhood. Great was our sense of loss and grief when we learned of the departure of our dear sister, Mrs. McGehee, who was loved by all. She had what some would call personal magnetism; it was her vital touch with and communion with her Lord that gave her that Christlikeness. She was a veritable touch-stone, or magnet that drew all to her. Oh! let us, dear sisters, follow Christ as did our departed loved one. Sister McGehee was a true friend, a wise and safe counselor, and always ready to do more than her part in any church work. She shone brightly in the home life—there she was a queen—and all delighted to do her homage. We sympathize deeply with the family in this sore trial, and pray that the blessings of our God may be upon them. May we all so live as to meet her again in Heaven.

Committee: Mrs. F. G. Hocutt; Mrs. W. H. Van Hook, Mrs. Gayden Davis.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

We, the undersigned committee, appointed by the Woman's Home Mission Society to prepare resolutions expressive of our loss and grief, occasioned by the death of Mrs. MARY HAMILTON, which occurred Jan. 11, 1913, do hereby submit the following:

Whereas, our Heavenly Father, who doeth all things well, has called from this "land of suffering" to the "land of joy," our friend and co-worker, Mrs. Mary L. Hamilton, therefore be it resolved:

1. That in the death of Mrs. Hamilton, our Woman's Home Mission Society has lost one of its most useful members, one who had its success ever on her heart, and who willingly responded to its every call.

2. That we deeply deplore her death and shall ever miss her ever-willing service in aid of all our plans, but rejoice in having known one who by her self-sacrificing nature and consistent Christian character endeared herself to all who knew her.

3. That we tender to her husband and children our sincere sympathy in their bereavement, and invoke for them the consolation that can only come from God.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, to our local paper, and to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication, and that the secretary be instructed to place the same upon our Society records.

(Signed): Mrs. J. A. Perry, Mrs. B. T. Jones, Mrs. J. T. McClure, Mrs. J. D. Newsom, Committee.

A SELECT SUMMER CLUB.

Located high up in the Blue Ridge mountains of North Carolina, one mile west of the picturesque town of Hendersonville, and overlooking that city by some two hundred feet, is what is proving to be one of the South's most popular, attractive and exclusive summer resorts—South Carolina Club, a summer club for select Southerners, organized by a party of progressive South Carolinians.

This Club is truly richly favored with those features which go to make an inviting summer place. A cool, bracing climate, unrivaled view of all the high mountains in the Blue Ridge, a tranquil lake bed fed by bold mountain streams; cool springs; lovely drive and walkways, rhododendron, oak and chestnut groves, and a commodious and inviting Club House. It is also fortunately located within a few minutes trolley ride from the shopping district and railroad station of Hendersonville.

The management of the South Carolina Club has spared no pains to maintain a select club for Southern families of refinement and culture, and the plan upon which it is operated not only accomplishes this, but reduces the living expenses of members to a minimum. Membership can only be obtained through the purchase of a share of stock, which participates in the earnings of the Club and gives the holder the privilege of all Club benefits, as well as meals at the Club House at a very low rate. Excellent cottage sites are reserved for members, and the erection of the building looked after by the management if so desired. Both the Club House and the cottage enjoy all modern conveniences, electric lights, baths, telephones, etc., while the Club grounds are easily and quickly reached from the railroad station and shopping district of Hendersonville, by trolley.

The Club is not an experiment, but a proven success, demonstrated by the fact that the best families from several Southern States have chosen it as their summer homes since it first opened in 1911, and that new members are expected from practically every part of the South the coming season. Tidings From the Field

Rolling Fork, Miss.

The year's work on the Rolling Fork charge has begun well, and we are hopeful of doing a large service for the Master here. A most kindly and cordial welcome was given us upon our arrival. We found many substantial evidences of the thoughtfulness of the people in the parsonage pantry, and almost daily some one reminds us that the pastor's needs are not forgotten. Cary and Grace, with Rolling Fork, compose the charge; and while there is not a large membership, it is of a splendid quality. The church attendance is very good and we are praying that this year may mean much for the Master's cause in this locality. We have a typical Delta people, large-hearted, generous, and hospitable. May the risen Savior, indeed and in truth, be the risen Lord of their lives. The interests of the Advocate will not be forgotten.—J. S. Purcell, P. C.

Baconton, Ga.

Dear Dr. Meek: On the night of Feb. 20, led by our pastor here, Brother Olin, the good people of this place gave us a fine pounding. Groceries of nearly all kinds, and quite a nice purse were given us. Just think of it—a Mississippi preacher receiving a fine Georgia pounding. Well, it really happened! They were a jolly set. How thankful we are for these expressions of confidence and love. I would like to say, also, that some of our friends from Mississippi have remembered us with gifts, ranging from $2.00 to $5.00 each. All these things help us to bear our enforced retirement more resignedly. I am glad to say that my health is slowly improving, and I trust to be able to do some work during the summer months. This is a fine country and these Georgia Methodists do things. We are all eager for the Advocate's visit. It helps us. You are giving us a great paper.—J. E. Sampley.

St. Helena (La.) Circuit.

Our first quarterly conference was held at Day's Church, Saturday and Sunday, Feb. 22 and 23. Brother Coleman, our new presiding elder, delivered three very forceful sermons—two at Day's and one at Greensburg—and by his preaching and brotherliness has won a warm place already in our hearts. The dignity of his new office sets well upon his shoulders, and we predict for him wonderful success. After the 11 o'clock service on Saturday, dinner was served on the ground; then followed a social hour, which was greatly enjoyed by all. At 2 o'clock we met in the quarterly conference, which proved to be one of the most spiritual, uplifting and helpful that it has been my pleasure to attend in quite a while. Our people made a good showing. Everything starts off with the prospects bright for a good year. I have been greeted by good audiences, and very cordially received at every point. Substantial tokens of appreciation continue to arrive at the parsonage in the shape of fresh meat, potatoes, syrup, and other good things to eat too numerous to mention. St. Helena is a "mighty" good place, and if you ever come and once partake of the unlimited hospitality of its people, you will want to come again.—H. Brooks Perritt, P. C.

Calhoun City, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: I believe that you and your readers would like to know how the work is progressing on the Calhoun City Circuit. I have never served a more loyal people in my life. They believe in doing things. I have been here only seven or eight weeks, but we have paid off a Church debt at Calhoun City which was about four years old, and Bishop J. H. McCoy has promised to come and dedicate it for us the fourth Sunday in March. We invite all former pastors to come and be with us in this great service. It will be worth any man's time and money to come and hear Bishop McCoy on this occasion, who is not only a great preacher, but a man "in whose heart the Spirit of the Lord is." We are hoping and praying for a great day. Come and be with us. Everything points to a great year in the charge. The pastor's salary has been raised above any assessment in its history. We are going to build a nice seven-room parsonage here at Calhoun City, and will begin work on it in a very few days. Our Sunday schools and prayer meetings are taking on new life. The attendance at prayer meeting ranges around a hundred. We have a great deal of work to do, having six churches to serve, but by God's grace we are going to do it. I think we have the right man in the right place for an elder. Brother Bell has been with us and left us spiritual food for some time to come. His sermons were thoughtful. Yours in His name.—J. E. Gault, P. C.

Hickory, Miss.

On the evening of Feb. 16, we closed what was considered by many who attended, the best revival meeting ever held in the town of Chunky, Miss. This meeting was begun on Wednesday night, Feb. 5. Our beloved evangelist, Brother D. E. Kelly, was with us from the beginning, and it was soon evident that a revival was coming. His preaching was attended with the power of the Holy Spirit, and conviction came to the people. We had large congregations at every service, notwithstanding the fact that we had much rain and the coldest weather of the season. The last day of the meeting was the best. The preaching was really great and the Spirit of God wrought mightily in the hearts of the people. There must have been a hundred people who gave testimony to having received a great blessing during this meeting. We received ten members into the Methodist Church, and some will join other Churches of the town. Our people, besides making a contribution to Brother Kelly, paid the pastor's salary almost up to date. Many people pledged themselves to live better lives and to be more loyal church members. We are having good congregations at all the appointments on the Hickory charge, especially at Hickory, where we have in many respects a very choice flock. I ask the readers of the Advocate to pray for us.—J. E. Williams, Pastor.

Homer, La.

Dear Mr. Editor: Notwithstanding the many rainy Sundays since our new pastor, Brother T. J. Warlick, came to Homer, his congregations have increased steadily, and he is growing in favor with our people. His sermons are all laden with the gospel of our Lord and his sacrifice for sinful men. Our prayer meetings are growing in interest and numbers. The Sunday school, Leagues, Missionary Society and all the other organizations of the church are doing well. Brother Warlick has been busy visiting and getting acquainted, and the better our people come to know him, both as a preacher and a man, the better they seem to like him in both respects. T. J. OTTS. Feb. 26.

Prevents Nose Rot in Sheep and Murrain in Cattle

I have given your remedy to my stock for three years, and have found it to be excellent for all kinds of diseases, and an especially effective cure and preventative of Murrain in cattle. At one time my neighborhood was infected with this disease, and many cattle died near me, while my cattle never had the least symptom of it. Your remedy is also a boon in raising sheep. I have a herd of seventy-five to one hundred that always have access to it, and none of them ever had nose rot, so common among sheep.

DREAD OF AN OPERATION.

N. Manchester, Ind.—Mrs. Eva Bashore, of this place, says: "I suffered female misery of every description. Two doctors attended me, and advised an operation. I lost weight until I weighed only ninety pounds. I dreaded an operation, and, instead, began to take Cardui. In a short time I gained 25 pounds, and feel as well as I ever did. Cardui, I am sure, saved my life." Cardui is to-day used in thousands of homes, where it relieves pain and brings back strength and ambition. Sunday School

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

By Rev. R. A. Maddox.

The Field Secretary recently organized a Teacher-training Class in the Louin Sunday school. We only have a few Methodists at Louin, but they are loyal and are doing all they can. We are looking for great things from the Church at Louin.

The time of the Field Secretary is taken up to the 1st of May at the following points: Foxworth, Harperville, Chunky, Hickory, Lena and Newton. Please let the country pastors begin now to arrange for the dates for May and June so that we will not lose any time.

Why don't you hurry and get that Teacher-training Class and the Wesley Bible Class organized? If you don't know how, write to the Field Secretary, or to Dr. Chas Bulla about the Bible Class and Dr. H. M. Hamill about the Teacher-training Class, both of Nashville, Tenn.

At Philadelphia, Miss., we found what lacked but one and one-half points of being a model Sunday school. The organized Bible Classes for the Senior, Intermediate and Adult Department will be put in within the next few days, and the Home Department placed on a working basis. Things have to be up-to-date where Wiley Ferguson and Prof. McLondon are.

We note that Rev. T. W. Adams, the presiding elder of the Port Gibson District, has announced a Sunday school institute to be held in connection with the District Conference at Centerville on April 16-18. Let the Sunday school workers in that District take advantage of this opportunity to arouse interest in this great work of the Church. Send as a delegate to the Conference the best Sunday school man you have in each church.

The Field Secretary recently visited the Sunday school at Union, Miss., and organized the Senior Department into a Wesley Bible Class, an Adult Department, and a Teacher-training Class of twenty members. Union Sunday school now has three organized Bible Classes. Why can't some others have at least one? Union is a place where the people are wide awake in matters that concern the Church, and they are going to do great things. And why not, with such leaders as Rev. C. C. Evans, the pastor, and Prof. Neff, the leader of the Teacher-training Class, and Mr. Lamar Williams, the superintendent of the Sunday school? Keep your eye on Union, and see something done.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

Amiel says, "The religion of a child depends on what its mother and father are, not on what they say."

There are now twelve publications issued which are devoted chiefly to organized Adult work.

Sixty-one States and Provinces report 33,758 organized classes, representing more than 40 denominations; 12,808 of these classes have been organized since the San Francisco Convention.

A busy pastor of a large charge not only teaches an Adult class when the teacher is absent, but takes his teen age boys on a "hike" every Saturday, and on nearly every Sunday prepares and delivers a ten-minute sermon to the children at the close of Sunday school. These sermons are largely illustrative, and teach the lesson in a vivid way to many a grown-up as well to the children.

Mr. Lewis (West Point) has organized a fine Boys' League, under the competent directorship of Miss Katharine Clisby. All the other departments in the Sunday school are well organized and equipped, and the whole atmosphere of the church and Sunday school is redolent of enthusiasm, good work, progress, and a broad and helpful fellowship. Mr. Lewis is a very busy pastor, but he sees the fruits of his labor manifest every day to an extent that is given to but few.

Cold Coming? Go To Your Doctor

You may cough tomorrow! Better be prepared for it when it comes. Ask your doctor about keeping Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house. Then when the hard cold or cough first appears you have a doctor's medicine at hand. Your doctor's approval of its use will certainly set all doubt at rest. Do as he says.

Rev. E. S. Lewis, of West Point, certainly has a great Sunday school. It has almost been doubled since the beginning of his pastorate. Mrs. Clisby's great Adult class held its anniversary on Feb. 9. It has grown so much it must needs occupy the old Y. M. C. A. room, which was beautifully decorated for the occasion. A handsome new piano, lately purchased by the class, was used, and the new president, Mr. Cottrell, who is also the mayor of the town, presided. Dr. Abbott read the history of the class, which clearly indicated the great and lasting work done for years by Mrs. Clisby, who has now about 125 pupils enrolled in one of the greatest mixed classes of our State. This class looks after its members carefully and lends a helping hand to every good cause. It has one Chinese member, who is much interested and contributes cheerfully to every demand. The work of this class for next year will be deeper and broader than ever before.

Catarrh

The accompanying illustration shows how Dr. Blosser's Catarrh Remedy reaches all parts of the head, nose, throat and lungs that become affected by catarrh.

This remedy is composed of herbs, leaves, flowers and berries (containing no tobacco or habit-forming drugs) which are smoked in a small clean pipe or made into a cigarette tube. The medicated fumes are inhaled in a perfectly natural way.

A five day's free trial of the remedy, a small pipe and also an illustrated booklet explaining catarrh will be mailed upon request. Simply write a postal card or letter to DR. J. W. BLOSSER, 244 Wake St., ATLANTA, GA.

CHURCH EXTENSION NOTICE.

As has previously been announced, the Executive Committee meeting of the Mississippi Conference Board of Church Extension will be held in Laurel on March 18. The meeting will be at 2 p. m.

If brethren who desire to attend this meeting will write Dr. Weems to that effect, letting him know when they expect to arrive, he will provide entertainment for them.

A GROWING CHURCH AND SUNDAY SCHOOL.

One of the liveliest churches in Mississippi is the Capitol Street Church, of Jackson, of which Rev. J. M. Morse is the beloved pastor. The congregations are large and every department is well organized and at work. There have been 50 accessions since Conference, several having joined at prayer meeting. These mid-week services are conducted by the laymen, and sometimes as many as 250 are present. Mr. I. C. Enochs, who is one of the most enterprising business men in the State and who is widely known for his good works, is the superintendent of the Sunday school. The Men's Bible Class has a membership of more than 60; its teacher is Rev. O. H. Wingfield; the president is Mr. M. S. Enoch, and the secretary is Mr. H. E. Crook. This class recently took charge of the 11 o'clock Sunday service and conducted it in a manner that was highly profitable and inspirational. We give above a picture of this class, known as "Class A."

THIS WILL INTEREST MANY.

F. W. Parkhurst, the Boston publisher, says that if anyone afflicted with rheumatism in any form, neuralgia or kidney trouble, will send their address to him at 701 Carney Building, Boston, Mass., he will direct them to a perfect cure. He has nothing to sell or give; only tells you how he was cured after years of search for relief. Hundreds have tested it with success.

COULD NOT WRITE.

Versailles, Ky.—Mrs. Elisha Green, of this place, says, "I could not write all the different pains I had, when I first tried Cardui. I could scarcely walk. Now I am able to run the sewing machine and do my work; and my neighbors tell me the medicine must be good, for I look so much better." Cardui is a specific, pain-relieving, tonic remedy, for women. In the past 50 years, it has been found to relieve women's unnecessary pains, and female misery, for which over a million suffering women have successfully used it. Try Cardui for your troubles. SECRET SERVICE.

Volunteers for missionary work are in constant demand. Men and women filled with the Spirit, qualified for service, are as difficult to find as the means to sustain the work. There are many, however, who have given their hearts to the Master and are eager to engage in the work, yet are, for special reasons, prevented from so doing. To some it is a severe cross not to be able to take up their chosen work, and it is difficult for them to recognize God's will in choosing for them a different sphere. It has been said that if God should send two angels to earth, the one to rule a nation and the other to sweep the streets of a city, they would feel no inclination to change places. Missionaries are needed; yes, indeed! All cannot go to the front, some must stay behind and "sweep the streets of the city." We need leaders from our missionary societies, study classes, and quiet workers in every department of the Church. Isn't it glory enough to work for the Master, whether the world ever knows it or not? We are too prone to let our "left hand know what our right hand doeth." It is time to call a halt. Secret service is the highest test of loyalty and fidelity; and let us always remember that "Thy Father which seeth in secret, himself shall reward thee openly."

BISHOP LAMBUTH AND AFRICA.

Much has been written in all of our church papers since Bishop Lambuth returned from Africa, and a more thrilling story than that which he tells of his travels through that region cannot be found either in the pages of fact or of fiction. His words have been read by thousands upon thousands, and hearts have been set afire with love and enthusiasm for this wonderful work which our Church is projecting. Let us see what the Presbyterians have to say in their "Missionary Survey": "Bishop Lambuth and his associate, Professor Gilbert, a colored teacher in Palme College, Augusta, Ga., first visited our mission at Luebo and Ibanch. Some of our native evangelists volunteered to go with them on their eight-hundred mile journey of exploration, and when they open their mission, their first helpers will be some Presbyterian elders furnished them by the church at Luebo. They will also make use to some extent of the 'Lapsley' in their transport work, and other features of co-operative work will be developed as the work progresses. We have been so long and so closely associated with the Methodist Board located here in Nashville, and especially Bishop Lambuth, who was for many years the principal Foreign Secretary of the Board, that we count it a pleasure and a privilege to be associated with them in this way in our African work. These two Southern Churches, the Presbyterian and the Methodist are the ones that best understand the negro character and how to deal with it, and are, therefore, best fitted for the work of evangelizing the African in his native home. In all this we have a beautiful illustration of the real unity of the Church which exists, notwithstanding its divisions by denominational lines, a unity which would not be promoted, but probably hindered and interfered with, by any effort at the organic union of the two denominations."

INSTALLATION SERVICE AT DURANT, MISS.

The Woman's Missionary Society met at the residence of the newly-elected president, Mrs. G. S. Beall, Jr., on Thursday afternoon, February 6, to install their new officers. The pastor, Rev. C. P. Moss, conducted the installation services in a beautiful and impressive manner. The duet, "Face to Face," was sweetly sung by Mesdames Weatherby and Odom, after which dues were collected, committees appointed, and a general discussion of the coming year's work was held. All business being disposed of, delicious refreshments were served by the charming hostess. Much interest was manifest at this meeting and we are hoping for a good year. MISS CECILE RAMSEY, Press Supt.

ENCOURAGING NEWS FROM MR. YUN.

We are glad to learn that Mrs. Hardie, wife of Dr. R. A. Hardie, of Seoul, has been permitted to visit Baron T. H. Yun in prison, and to deliver to him letters and photographs sent to him by his daughter, who is in school in Millersburg, Ky. Free conversation on any subject was allowed, except on the charges against Mr. Yun. Mr. Yun is reported as having gained some flesh and as being in very good health, with the exception of extreme nervousness. Dr. Hardie writes: "Those in the best position to judge are more encouraged because of the consideration the presiding judge shows for prisoners."

Put the Load Where It Belongs

If you are to make the most of your time and opportunities, you must have efficient tools to work with. You have enough hard, tiresome work without wasting your time and energy in such jobs as wood-sawing, water-pumping, grindstone-turning, and the like. Use an IHC engine to furnish power for such work. In far less time, and with practically no effort on your part, the wood is sawed, the stock watered, the tools sharpened, all at one-tenth the expense of hand work. Put the load where it belongs. Buy and use an

7. On the third night there will be (1) A program on the Teen Age department, and the social life of the Sunday school, by the District chairman of this department; (2) An address by Dr. Hamill, on "Making the Sunday School Go;" and (3) A closing farewell service on the future outlook of our work, by the Field Secretary.

We hope by this program to learn the most possible about the well organized Sunday school, and to plan District Institutes in the various parts of the several districts through a more perfectly organized District Sunday School Conference. Dr. and Mrs. Hamill are to have all the time they can use and the rest of us are to take what is left. Pastors and superintendents should begin at once to name their delegations. The local pastors will look after your entertainment, provided you notify them in time. It is suggested that we are now getting Dr. and Mrs. Hamill at their best. They have for many years been gathering up wisdom, and it is our privilege to share it with them. See that your workers do not miss this opportunity.

A REVIVAL AT OXFORD, MISS.

Dear Dr. Meek: I write to tell you of our good meeting just closed at this place. Our pastor, Rev. W. W. Mitchell, had planned and prayed for a revival among his people for some months, and at our Annual Conference in December arranged with that splendid pastor and preacher, Rev. Robert A. Clark, of Second Church, Memphis, Tenn., to aid him. So, on Feb. 12, the services began, and, notwithstanding the winter season, we had ideal spring weather throughout the ten days.

Brother Clark came to us filled with the Spirit and got hold of the hearts of his hearers at once. He preached twice daily, the auditorium being packed at the evening services. His messages were so tender, so persuasive, so freighted with love, and yet so logical and convincing that the most obstinate listener could not withstand his appeals. Only those who absented themselves from the services were not graciously blessed and benefited. I have had the privilege of being in several revival meetings in our church here, but I think the impressions made at this time upon our church members, old and young, will be more lasting and bear more abundant fruit for the Master's garner than any I have heretofore attended. A subdued and harmonious feeling now pervades the church circle where before an independent and indifferent atmosphere was most perceptible.

A number of persons were converted to Christ and joined the Church, among whom were some of our most prominent citizens, as well as young people and children. Quite a number from the other churches co-operated with us in the meeting and expressed themselves as being wonderfully helped and strengthened. Indeed, on every hand could be heard expressions of brighter hopes, increased faith and stronger determination to live for God and right.

Brother Clark left us on Saturday morning, Feb. 22, returning to his individual field of labor, rejoicing that his earnest efforts had not been in vain in the Lord. The good wishes and prayers of the people of Oxford will ever follow him. May he live long to unfurl valiantly the banner of the true and living God.

Our pastor closed the meeting yesterday (Feb. 23), preaching a most helpful sermon to a packed house and receiving about ten persons into the Church on profession of faith and a number by letter.

I write this, knowing that it will make the hearts of our former pastors who have labored so earnestly among us glad, as no doubt some of the good seed they planted while here are now springing up. 'Paul plants, Appollus waters, and God gives the increase.' Bless his holy name.

MRS. FOUNT CALLAWAY.

COLFAX, LA.

I desire to say a few words through the Advocate concerning my work. This is my second year here. Our first quarterly conference for the current year was held at Colfax last Saturday and Sunday. Rev. H. W. May, our presiding elder, was present and seemed to be perfectly familiar with the interests of the Church. He rendered four stirring sermons, which were well received. Brother May was very attentive in looking after all the interests of the Church. He rendered most excellent service and endeared himself to the people of Colfax. He has made a fine beginning. An encouraging outlook for this charge was manifest at the quarterly conference when the president and members of the Woman's Home Mission Society of Colfax were present at the business session, and presented a strong paper and resolutions, asking for the indorsement and co-operation of the official board and others in the building of a modern church edifice. The paper and resolutions were unanimously endorsed. The presiding elder urged the immediate launching of the new church enterprise. As a result the work has already been begun through committees who are raising money. This seems to be an opportune time for this undertaking: our little chapel is no longer adequate to do the work that should be done; if we are to hold our own, we must build. So, Doctor, we hope in the near future to be able to report the new church enterprise progressing nicely. Upon the whole, the outlook for a good year's work on the charge is encouraging. We are praying and working to the end, that we may honor and glorify God. Oh! yes, I must mention the W. H. M. S. hat has just been organized at Atlanta, one of my churches.

E. L. CARGILL, P. C.

A SUMMARY OF HIS WORK.

During the last twenty-three years I have been engaged in non-sectarian missionary work, and an itemized record of my work from April 20, 1890, to Feb. 22, 1913, shows the following statistics:

I have distributed within the city of New Orleans and the adjacent country 2,014,000 American-Italian tracts; 50,000 lesson cards for children; 20,000 religious papers; 10,000 pamphlets and 2300 Bibles and Testaments. I have given hundreds of men free beds; have made thousands of visits to the homes of the poor, and have distributed large quantities of medicine, groceries, coal, wood, and bedding. I have made many visits to the jails and hospitals, and have tried to accomplish much good. Pray for me, that I may glorify the Master in this work.

You need it to seek out your weak spots and make them stronger, to stop the leaks which have been draining your vitality, to make your organs, nerves and muscles capable of giving you the right measure of strength, vigor, energy and full-blooded comfort your body should have. You try it at our risk.

Bodi-Tone Does Just As Its Name Means

It cures disease by toning all the body, and we want to show you what it will do for your body. Bodi-Tone is a small, round tablet, that is taken three times every day. Each box contains seventy-five tablets, enough for twenty-five days' use, and we send you the full box on trial so you can try this great remedy and learn what it is, so you can learn how it works in the body, how it cures stubborn diseases by helping nature to tone every organ of the body. Tone is a little word, but it means a great deal, everything in health. When all the organs are doing their part, when each is acting in a perfectly natural way, when all the functions are healthy and performed with natural vigor, when the energy, strength and power of resistance to disease are all at a natural point, then the body is in proper tone. When disease has attacked any part, when lack of vitality is found and felt, the tone of the entire physical body should be raised to the highest possible point, to make all the body help to cure and restore. This is the power which underlies all of Bodi-Tone's great work for the sick, this is the power it offers you to help you get new health and strength, new vigor and new vitality.

Not a Patent Medicine

Bodi-Tone is not a patent medicine, for its ingredients are not a secret. It contains Iron Phosphate, Gentian, Lithia, Chinese Khatbarb, Peruvian Bark, Nux Vomica, Oregon Grape Root, Cascara, Capsicum, Sarsaparilla and Golden Seal. Such valuable ingredients guarantee its merit and power.

When you use Bodi-Tone you know just what you are using, know it is pure and safe and know you are taking the right kind of medicine to provide real help for the body. It contains nothing that your own family doctor will not endorse and say is a good thing. It does not depend on killing pain with cocaine, opium, morphine or other dangerous drugs. It does not excite the body with alcohol, but it tones the body and cures its disorders with remedies nature intended to tone and cure the body when that power was given them. Thus, Iron gives life and energy to the blood, Sarsaparilla drives out its impurities, Phosphate and Nux Vomica create new nerve energy and dissolve Rheumatic acids in the kidneys and dissolves Rheumatic deposits, Gentian does invaluable work for the Stomach and Digestive forces, Chinese Khatbarb and Oregon Grape Root promote vigorous Liver activity, Peruvian Bark raises the tone of the entire system. Golden Seal soothes the inflamed membrane and checks Catarrhal discharges, Cascara gives the Bowels new life in a natural way, and Capsicum makes all more valuable by bettering their quick absorption into the blood. Every one of these ingredients possesses characteristics most valuable in this common-sense plan of toning all the body. Each exerts a special action in some certain organ or function of the body that helps to bring the whole body back to nature and to health.

Natural Curatives To Make Natural Health

Each Bodi-Tone ingredient adds a needed element from nature to the body, for Bodi-Tone is altogether a natural remedy. Each has a certain work to do in the body and does it well, in a natural manner. They are used in Bodi-Tone because of this ability. We claim no credit for discovering these valuable ingredients, each of which has a well-deserved place in established medical science. We claim only the credit for our successful Bodi-Tone formula, which is our own discovery, for the way in which we have selected, proportioned and combined these great natural curatives, and for the health-making work which Bodi-Tone has so well proven its ability to perform in the body. The curative forces which Bodi-Tone so ably uses are the forces which have always existed in nature for the restoration of the body's health. Many are regularly prescribed by good physicians in combination with such drugs as each doctor may favor, for there are wide differences of opinion among doctors of various schools. The exact combination used in Bodi-Tone is what gives it the far-reaching and thorough curative and restorative power that makes possible the remarkable cures experienced by Bodi-Tone users. cures which prove the difference between Bodi-Tone and common remedies, cures which have won the gratitude of thousands.

No One Is Too Old To Use Bodi-Tone

This trial offer is open to all, freely, generously, without any age limit, for we are glad to prove at our own risk how Bodi-Tone acts in ailments of the old as well as the young, to prove what it does for persons suffering from bodily weaknesses and ailments, whether from age or otherwise. Thousands of old men and women have sent for Bodi-Tone on trial, and found it put new flesh on their bones, new vigor in their minds, new vim in their muscles and new vitality into every vital function. If there is anything wrong in any part of your body, if any organ is acting in a way which you realize and know is not right, send for Bodi-Tone on this trial offer and give it a chance to set you right. If you do not feel right, eat right, sleep right, weigh right, work right and think right, now and all the time, put Bodi-Tone in command of your body for twenty-five days. Let it marshal your bodily forces, let it line them up and work them into shape, until all are marching along straight, strong and harmoniously, in perfect time, tune and tone, for that is what Bodi-Tone is for and what it is doing for thousands. If the doctors' prescriptions and ordinary medicinal combinations have failed, let this scientific combination of special remedies show and prove what it can do for you. Its greatest triumphs have been among men and women who had chronic ailments, who had used patent medicines and had doctored with their local doctors and out-of-town specialists, all without lasting benefit. It is because of its great work in these cases that all chronic sufferers and persons with obstinate diseases are invited to try Bodi-Tone at our risk.

Thousands of Cures

of Rheumatism, Stomach Trouble, Kidney Liver and Bladder Ailments, Uric Acid Diseases, Female Troubles, Bowel, Blood and Skin Affections, Dropsy, Piles, Catarrh, Anaemia, Sleeplessness, LaGrippe, Pains, General Weakness and Nervous Breakdown have fully proven the power and great remedial value of Bodi-Tone in such disorders. Each one got a dollar box on trial, just as we now offer to you in the coupon.

Why keep on suffering from disease, when by filling in your name and address on the trial coupon and mailing it to us, you can get a full twenty-five days' treatment of this great remedy which people everywhere are praising and talking about. It just costs a two-cent stamp, and you don't need to pay a single penny for the medicine unless Bodi-Tone benefits you. You have all to win and nothing to lose, no matter what your ailment may be, by thus trying it.

Catarrh of the Head And Stomach

DALLAS, TEXAS.—For years I was troubled with Catarrh of the Head and Stomach and Rheumatism. I tried most everything, but whatever helped me benefited only for a very little while. I got so bad with my Stomach that I did not think I would ever recover. The doctor was treating me, but did me no good. At this time I saw the Bodi-Tone trial offer and got a box. It did me so much good that I sent for two more. I am 65 years old, a war veteran, but after using the third box I felt fifteen years younger, and I haven't felt better for fifteen years. C. H. SMITH, 2107 San Jacinto Street.

Fine Health All Year

COMANCHE, OKLA.—I have suffered almost all my life with Rheumatism, which bothered me since girlhood. As it became settled in later years it affected my heart, and I would have spells in which I thought I would surely die. I have taken all kinds of medicine and bathed and rubbed with liniments, but nothing that I ever did seemed to do me any good. I saw Bodi-Tone advertised over a year ago and was attracted by its formula, which looked to me like a good medicine, and I sent for a trial box. It worked like magic from the start, and showed me that I had gotten the right medicine at last. I am in fine health now, and feel better than at any time within my recollection. I feel that I owe my life to Bodi-Tone's wonderful formula. I am forty-six years old. MRS. J. B. BOBO.

Permanent Cure At 77

NORTH EASTHAM, MASS.—It is now over a year since I took Bodi-Tone, and I have waited to see if my troubles would return, but as they have not, I feel it my duty to the public to testify what the medicine has done for me. I had Palpitation of the Heart so bad that I could hardly walk, and could never lie on my left side. I had indigestion so serious that the doctors thought I must die, but since taking Bodi-Tone I am a well man. I can eat anything I want at any time and nothing hurts me. I have had no trouble during the year with either my Heart or my Stomach and sleep well at night, lying on either side. SOME WORDS OF DISSENT.

We print elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate the principal part of an article by Dr. J. L. Weber, of Memphis, Tenn., upon the question of ministerial supply, which recently appeared in the Commercial Appeal. With most of what Dr. Weber said on this interesting subject we are in hearty accord. Indeed, it is because of our general approval of his observations that we have reproduced nearly the whole of his discussion of this pertinent theme. But to the following excerpt from his contribution, which we purposely detached from the main body of it, we cannot by any means give our full approval:

"Nor need there be any sympathy wasted over the bright young men kept out of the ministry on account of credal demands. We Methodists glory in our intellectual freedom. We think and let think. We follow the example of our great leader, John Wesley, who numbered among his warmest friends a Unitarian preacher and a Catholic priest. Of course, we have our Bible, and our thought centers upon that. We can't see all of its great truths in exactly the same light, nor can we agree in assigning their relative values; but we do not quarrel over our differences in opinion. Our religion is that of faith in a person—Jesus Christ, the God Man. Every man who loves him and looks to him as Savior is welcome among us. Other things are of minor importance."

We agree with the writer in his statement that 'no sympathy need be wasted over the bright young men kept out of the ministry by credal demands.' In our judgment, the number of such men is insignificantly small, and the loss is inconsiderable, for the reason that if they are without clear and deep-rooted convictions as to the essential truths of Christianity they would be of little service in the ministry even if they should enter it. Intellectuality lacks much of being the only, or the chief, qualification for success upon the part of a clergyman. He must have a strong and unwavering faith in the fundamental teachings of the Divine Revelation if he is to exert a really uplifting influence and achieve anything worth while. Without this, no matter what may be his other gifts and acquirements, he is lamentably lacking in equipment for the responsible duties of his high calling.

Appearing in the connection in which it does (though he perhaps did not intend for it to be so construed), this statement of Dr. Weber is, we think, calculated to give a wrong impression as to what the Methodist Church expects and requires of her ministers. She is, indeed, fraternal and tolerant and gives her good wishes to all the Evangelical Christian Churches; but it is not true that the sum total of her "religion is faith in a person—Jesus Christ, the God Man." To be sure, He is the great central figure around which her theology clusters; but she firmly adheres not only to the tremendous fact of the Incarnation, but also to its great co-ordinate doctrines, such as the Trinity, the Fall of the Race in Adam, and the Inspiration of the Scriptures. And no man has any rightful place in the ministry of the Methodist Church who does not believe in her Twenty-five Articles of Faith, as interpreted and expounded in her standard doctrinal works. So true is this, that she impose upon every preacher to whom she gives full ordination a binding obligation 'to banish and drive away all erroneous and strange doctrines contrary to God's Word,' and to 'disseminate, publicly or privately, doctrines contrary to her Articles of Religion,' is an offense for which she prescribes a severe penalty. A Unitarian or a Roman Catholic would find it utterly impossible, without self-stultification, to enter the Methodist itinerancy, and it is difficult to see how either of them, with any degree of consistency, could even assume the obligations of private membership in our denomination.

We do not believe that more young men would be brought into the ministerial ranks of the Churches by liberalizing their creeds, as was suggested in the editorial in the Commercial Appeal which called forth Dr. Weber's article. There is little to attract in a nebulous theology. If the truths of religion are regarded as hazy and uncertain, people who are honest and in earnest do not want to waste their time in trying to propagate them. The proof of this is seen in the pitiable plight of Unitarianism and Universalism in the United States. It is the Church that comes with a clear and definite message in which she firmly believes, to which the people rally. And these are also the Churches that have their pulpits filled with men of zeal and power. The only effective cure for a dearth of ministers is an outpouring of the Holy Spirit. He only can issue a call which men will hear, and fasten upon them convictions which they cannot shake off, and which they dare not disregard.

MAKE YOUR PASTOR AND HIS FAMILY COMFORTABLE.

Some weeks ago Dr. George P. Eckman, the brilliant editor of the New York Christian Advocate, wrote quite a suggestive editorial under the caption, "An Uncomfortable Hen Cannot Lay Eggs," which he said was suggested to him by reading a poultry journal. The thought that he developed from it was that a pastor cannot do his best work unless he is made free from annoying cares by being properly provided for and envied. This is a most important truth, and one which the people in our various pastoral charges need to recognize to a far greater extent than they seem to do. The Apostles in the early days of the Christian Church found it necessary to shift to other shoulders the multiplying secular duties to which their growing work gave rise, that they might devote themselves with greater efficiency to the spiritual ministries of their office. In this modern time this secular burden has been re-imposed upon our preachers to a larger degree than is perhaps good either for them or for the Master's cause. The members of a church have no more important duty to perform than of keeping their pastor so circumstanced in every way that he can give them the very best service of which he is capable.

Two things are necessary to make a preacher comfortable. First, his salary should be adequate to support him, and enough of it should be paid either monthly or quarterly to meet his current expenses. Few ministers have any collateral upon which they can borrow money, and it is humiliating to them to have to ask for credit when they have no security to give. When face to face with such necessities and perplexities, the worried prophet of the Lord is in no mental condition to measure up to the magnitude of his tremendous responsibilities.

The second thing necessary to make a preacher comfortable is to see that he is properly housed. Every charge should provide a good parsonage in a desirable locality, and see that it is well furnished and kept. An unattractive home for the minister's family is a reflection upon the community. We have been in some towns where the parsonage might readily have been located by picking out about the poorest house in them. And there are some manses, even in well-to-do charges, that are wretchedly furnished, not having even the essentials for decent and proper living. It should be remembered in all such cases that the greatest sufferer from such inexcusable neglect is the self-denying and self-sacrificing minister's wife, who has given up all prospect of having a home of her own to endure the hardships and privations of an unsettled life.

The ladies of every charge should count it their special privilege to make the mistress of the manse as thoroughly comfortable in her dwelling-place as they themselves are in theirs. They should delight to paint the walls, to curtain the windows, to stretch coverings upon the floor, and to install all needed articles of furniture. Has not the Master said that those who honor his representatives, honor him, and that they shall not go unrewarded? We never pass a Sister of Charity that we do not lift high our hat, but we lift it higher still when we stand in the presence of the women of the Methodist itinerancy. The world owes them a debt that it can never pay. Brothers and Sisters of the laity, do you appreciate and honor them? Then show it by fixing up the parsonage. Make the home of your pastor and his wife bright, beautiful, and comfortable, if you want them to give you in loving service the best that is in them.

The Pittsburgh Christian Advocate says: "Cardinal Gibbons urges that all worldly amusements be banished from the lives of professing Christians for the forty days of Lent. This being the case, Lent should be twelve months long!" Aye, more—it should be "life-long." Sam Jones said that once he was perplexed to know the meaning of Lent, but that observation led him to the conclusion that its true import was that the Devil had 'Lent' his servants to the Lord for a brief season.

THE SUPPLY OF PREACHERS.

(The following is the principal part of a letter addressed to the Editor of the Memphis Commercial Appeal and printed in a recent issue of that paper. Dr. Weber is the pastor of the Madison Heights M. E. Church, South, of that city.)

I hope you will allow me the use of some of your space to make some comments on your recent editorial on the decrease in ministerial supply. You write strongly on the facts in your possession. Those facts, however, do not represent the real state of the case. They come from the records of the theological seminaries, but the fact is that the theological seminaries do not supply the country with its preachers. * * *

However, I have no indictment to make against these training schools for the ministry. Many of them are serving their purpose and there is a distinct place for them in the world's work. When they fill that place and do that work, no wail of despair comes from that quarter.

My purpose in writing is to call attention to the fact that there are theological schools with pupils and that there are church organizations not at all embarrassed with the question of ministerial supply. Of course, so long as man is human and consequently limited, there will be concern as to the quality of that supply. Those in authority will ever exert themselves to secure a better prepared ministry.

This is what I want to bring into prominence: Those church organizations that are reaching the people and are in reality taking the gospel message to them have no difficulty in finding men to take the message. The great wall that comes so frequently before the public, comes from quarters where there is stagnation; but the great Churches that are close to the people are growing themselves, and as they grow, they develop their own preachers.

The despairing element make too much noise for the size of their crowd. People who are conscious of failure very easily come to the conclusion that all is failure and that hope has taken her flight.

Let me speak for my own Church, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. In 1889 we had four churches in Memphis, with about 1,100 members. To-day we have fourteen organized churches, with three more in process of organization, and a membership approaching 7,000. Our Church here is alive and enthusiastic and is planning for greater efforts than ever before.

This is in a large measure true of the whole Church. We have now 2,000,000 members and are increasing at the rate of 50,000 to 100,000 every year. We have no trouble in supplying our pulpits and the quality of the supply is constantly on the up grade. Our theological school at Vanderbilt University, in spite of the fact that we have recently opened new schools for the training of preachers in both North Carolina and Texas, is having the largest attendance in its history. We are not suffering from a dearth of ministerial supply. We are doing things, and expect to do more and better things.

Now, about the empty pews. Isn't that complaint being overworked? There are churches that have congregations and then there are some that don't. The church that has something definite that it can offer to the people usually has people in attendance upon its message. The minister who does not know what he believes and is lacking in enthusiasm will in drawing power equal an iceberg; but no man with a message of saving power glowingly delivered will lack people to hear him. This age cares little for the hair-splitting theologian, with his fine-spun theories, but it will pay heed to the prophet of the Mighty God.

The question of support need cause no worry. The man of God is provided for even in these latter days. I hope the day will never come when the ministry can be classed as one of the well-paid professions. The man attracted to its sacred work by reason of its pecuniary rewards is not wanted, and the man driven from its glorious service because he fears starvation is no loss. No man truly devoted to the ministry of Jesus Christ has ever yet been allowed to starve. God's ravens are not dead.

Just one thing more. Let me impress this fact upon my readers: The Church of God is the only sure and growing institution on earth to-day. It is all that has come out of the dim past and survived all the changes of time. It has withstood treachery within and foes without. In spite of the predictions of hostile critics, every year sees an increased number of those who see God in Jesus Christ.

Some organizations have risen and disappeared; some systems of theology have come and gone; but that organization and that system of teaching which exalts Jesus Christ as supreme grows and will continue to grow. Whenever he is lost sight of or given a second place in life or thought, then the organization, even though calling itself a Church, has no place on earth, and will have a dearth in its ministerial supply and finally will wither and die. He is life, and faith in him gives life that glories in enthusiastic service.

JOHN LANGDON WEBER.

THE PLACE OF INTERCESSION IN MISSIONARY ENTERPRISE.

By Rev. M. M. Black.

In our day the Christian Church is confronted with the greatest opportunity for missionary enterprise ever known in the history of the gospel, and the open doors in Asia, in Latin America, and in the Dark Continent are a mighty challenge to our faith and liberality. Notwithstanding the numerous and pathetic appeals that are coming from every foreign field for reinforcements, sad to say, our great Church with her nearly 2,000,000 members is not keeping pace with the needs of the hour, or with the advance being made by sister Churches. In order to evangelize the 40,000,000 people in heathen lands allotted to us as our share, we should have 1,600 missionaries in the field, which would be one to every 25,000 of the people to be reached. At present, however, our total missionary force numbers 258 (with 96 wives of missionaries in addition), or but one missionary to every 155,000 souls.

It is a startling fact that the present yearly average contribution of Southern Methodists for the world's evangelization is only about 47 cents per capita—less than a penny a week. During the last ten years the gifts of the Southern Presbyterians to missions have increased from 75 cents to $1.70 per member. Last year the Mississippi Conference, which now has 55,667 members, raised for Domestic Missions $9,602.83 on an assessment of $13.20; and only $3,785.94 on an assessment of $12.10 for Foreign Missions. To be content with such a heavy shortage in our missionary collections would be just cause for reproach.

In this hour of marvelous opportunity and of crisis, the greatest need of the Church is the spirit of intercession. More imperative even than the call for increased offerings and for additional workers is the call to supplication, to fervent, unceasing prayer that there may come to the whole Church and to every individual member a clear vision of the world's supreme need and a deepening sense of responsibility for the evangelization of the whole world. It is a lamentable fact that only one out of every six of our members has any worthy share in the extension of the Master's kingdom, the other five being simply idlers. Is it not our duty as pastors and lay leaders to pray earnestly that the great cause of missions may so grip the hearts and consciences of our laymen as to bring them to realize that this is the supreme business of the Church? Is prayer for missions usual with pastors and presiding elders in leading public worship? If not, why not? At our Annual Conferences there is always prayer that God may guide the Bishop and his cabinet in making the appointments, but do we not often forget to include missions in the scope of our prayers? Is it not true that comparatively few in our Church pray regularly and fervently for our missionaries and for the various mission fields of our Church?

In the time of our Lord this saying was current among the Jews: "He prays not at all in whose prayers there is no mention of the kingdom of heaven." This proverb embodies a profound spiritual truth, and is in line with the teaching of our Lord, who has taught us to pray, "Thy kingdom come."

Says that eminent missionary leader, Mr. J. Campbell White: "Prayer is the first and chief method of solving the missionary problem. Among all the methods that have been devised none is more practical, more fruitful than this. If we could get a definite group of people at home into the habit of supporting by prayer each missionary in the thick of the fight, by this simple method alone the efficiency of the present missionary force would probably be doubled without adding a single new missionary."

Again, Mr. John R. Mott, the distinguished leader of the Student Volunteer Movement, rightly says: "The supreme question of missions is how to multiply the number of Christians, who, with truthful lives and clear unshaken faith in the character and ability of God, will, individually, or collectively, or co-operatively as a Church, wield the force of prayer for the conversion and transformation of men, for the inauguration and energizing of spiritual movements, and for the breaking down of all that exalts itself against Christ and his purposes."

How few of us realize the superlative value and importance of intercession in winning the world to Christ. It is highly significant that the modern missionary movement began with the Haystack prayer meeting at Williams College in 1806. The Student Volunteer Movement grew out of the earnest intercession, first on the part of a small group of individuals, and then of a Conference assembled at Northfield in 1886. The Laymen's Missionary Movement, which is doing so much to enlist the co-operation of the men of the Church in missions, was born in a prayer meeting in the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church in New York City, on Nov. 15, 1906, the hundredth anniversary of the Haystack prayer meeting.

Many an emergency in missionary enterprise has been successfully met by means of intercession. Mr. John R. Mott relates the following incident which occurred in the experience of Dr. Gulick and his wife, who were missionaries in Japan. Feeling the need of a building for the Christian Association in Kioto, they wrote an appeal on the subject to the "Evangelist," and continued to pray that the $2,000 needed might be forthcoming. One day a man in Buffalo read the article, and was angered by it. He threw the paper down, but through some impulse picked it up, and put it away. At last, not being able to banish the appeal from his mind, he wrote to the office of the "Evangelist" to ascertain whether the $2,000 had been received. On learning that the amount needed had not been subscribed, he then wrote that he would give four instalments of $500 each that the building might be erected. The spontaneous missionary offering of $50,000 for Soochow University made at the Missionary Conference in New Orleans in 1901 as the climax to the masterly address by our lamented Bishop Galloway was in large measure the fruit of intercession. How great is the need of prayer at the present hour for the development of greater liberality to missions among our membership! Despite the cry of hard times, church people find plenty of money for the things they like, for shows and public entertainments, for tobacco and chewing gum, for luxuries and follies of various kinds. Let earnest prayer be made that the needs of the Master's kingdom shall be so impressed upon our laymen that they may give as the Lord hath prospered them.

No wonder the gospel is making such marvelous progress in Korea, when we think of the prayerfulness and simple faith of the Korean converts. One of our missionaries mentions that they think nothing of spending all day or all night in prayer. During some revival meetings in Songdo a few winters ago it was a common thing for Christians to go out on the hills after the evening meeting, and kneel on the frozen ground, while they cried to God for the outpouring of the Holy Spirit. In an address at Yale some time ago Prof. George Adam Smith pointed out the fact that intercessory prayer is the hardest kind of work; for it calls for detachment from self, and that is always hard. It calls for deep earnestness. It makes demands upon our time, and people in this age are so very busy that prayer has become "the deeply buried talent."

One of the most impressive incidents recorded in the Old Testament is that of the battle of Israel with the Amalekites, during which the hands of Moses were lifted in intercession. As he grew weary and lowered his arms, Amalek prevailed, but when his hands were upheld by Aaron and Hurr, then Israel prevailed. What a true picture this is of the blessedness and power of intercession in the battles that are being fought for the spiritual conquest of the world. Rightly has it been said that "the great battle of Jesus was not won at Calvary, but in the garden of prayer." Let us not forget that prayer is the mightiest agency we can employ in the extension of the Master's kingdom. Will not every pastor and layman in the Mississippi Conference unite in praying daily for a gracious revival in every charge this centenary year of our Conference, for full collections, for an advance in missionary interest and offerings along the whole line, and finally for the energizing presence and guidance of the Holy Spirit in our missionary campaign? May the Lord pour upon us all the "spirit of grace and supplication."

DR. BLEDSOE ON WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

By Rev. H. Walter Featherstun, D.D.

Dr. Bledsoe, whose article, reprinted in the Advocate, warns against the calamities incident to woman suffrage, was a great and learned man, as all of us concede; but he was not infallible, as many of us well know; and nothing he ever wrote misses the mark more widely than does this college address, reprinted after the lapse of more than forty years. In brief, the argument is that Rome fell because her women were emancipated from the old order of male autocracy to one where she held "coequal partnership" with her husband; therefore, woman suffrage in America to-day would be a woful menace.

In the first place, in early Rome woman was absolutely a slave. Gibbon says: "He (the husband) bought his bride of her parents. * * * She acquired and inherited for the sole profit of her lord; * * * clearly was woman defined not as a person, but as a thing (in law a chattel). * * * Women were condemned to the perpetual tutelage (tyranny) of parents (fathers), husbands, or guardians; a sex created to please and obey was never supposed to have attained the age of reason and experience." (Decline and Fall, Vol. iv, pp. 357-366.)

Mommsen says: "From the earliest period the wife was regarded as a piece of property, destitute of legal rights, and absolutely under the control of the father of the household." (History of Rome, 1, 90.)

America never saw an African slavery more abject. Later she was emancipated from this abject slavery and became, though in a far less degree, what she has been for centuries in every Christian home. Now it is argued in the article under review that the passage of Roman womanhood from this primitive slavery to hold "coequal partnership" with her husband brought about the fall of the Roman Empire. Gibbon, who was learned in all Roman matters, and was, as all know, a real historian, testifies otherwise. Some one else has truly said: "The long and distant wars made it more and more impossible for the (Roman) soldier to be a good citizen. * * * The freedom and licentiousness of camp-life, the sweets of pillage and rapine, ever grew more pleasant to the Italian burgess and colonist; thus indolence, inaptitude and spendthrift habits aided the greedy designs of the capitalists," and so brought it about that corruption grew until the downfall came. (See Columbian Encyc., Art. Rome.)

In the second place, there never was in Rome, the empire or republic, any sort of woman suffrage. Rome never got far enough from savagery for that.

The women of later Rome so fearfully described by Tertullian, and Murtial, and Juvenal, were not suffragists—not even "suffragettes." They were utterly illiterate. In the Rome of that day, an educated woman was ranked as most disreputable. These, the leading society belles of Rome, were pagans, consistent worshipers of Venus, who sneered at chastity as a weakness, who attended regularly the shows where human blood flowed freely from gladiatorial swords, and human bones were crushed by the lions in the arena, and all as an entertainment for these Roman belles. They were ignorant, brutal, unchaste creatures—and yet with all their brazen tyranny of passion, they were nothing more than petted, pampered slaves, first to one rich Roman, and then to another.

Now, because these pagan followers of Venus in ancient Rome, these bedizzened bawds as coarse and cruel as they were ignorant and unchaste, were a part of the corrupting influences that brought Rome to her fall, must we be warned that woman suffrage in Christian America to-day is a menace, and that the modest request of hundreds of the best women in Southern Methodism for laity rights is a step in that direction? This is the logic of this argument. Surely the opposing brethren are driven to fearful straits!

Let it be said with tremendous emphasis:

1. Woman suffrage has never brought about, or fostered, or helped forward easy divorce, or divorce of any other sort. I challenge proof, to the contrary of this statement.

2. Nor is race suicide chargeable as a possible result of woman suffrage. Everybody ought to know that the creatures who figure in divorce courts and dodge motherhood are the so-called "society belles," who are bent on "having a good time," utterly caring not a flip for suffrage, or for humanity, or the Bible, or God.

3. There is not a scintilla of evidence that the suffragists of America are any less lady-like, or womanly in any sense or degree, than are those who do not seek it.

4. While the women who are asking laity rights in our Church may generally believe in woman suffrage, their pleas for laity rights is not a plea for civil suffrage; and, if granted, will in no wise affect the question of civil suffrage, which is rapidly coming, all regardless of what our Church does in the laity rights matter.

5. There are no truer Christians, no lovelier women, no gentler nor more womanly than those asking for laity rights in our Church.

MILLSAPS' OPPORTUNITY.

By Mr. J. D. Barbee.

The destruction by fire of Founder's Hall at Millsaps College presents an opportunity to Mississippi Methodism for a forward movement, involving plans for an orderly and systematic scheme of artistic development, which it cannot be doubted will be promptly siezed and ardently prosecuted. Recent utterances of Mr. J. R. Bingham, the Editor of this Advocate, and Rev. W. S. Lagrone indicate that our leaders are awake to this opportunity and the pressing needs of the institution. My own view is that a great administration building should be erected on the site recently occupied by Founder's Hall. No half-way measures should be adopted. Millsaps College is no longer an experiment, but one of the recognized institutions of the South, and its Board of Trustees should adopt definite plans for buildings and grounds with a view to permanency and the glory which beckons to it from the future.

The question of the money with which to accomplish this end is one which I think should not trouble us. I like Brother Lagrone's appeal to the alumni of the College. And it suggested to my thoughts the possibility of organizing an Alumni Association embracing all the Methodists in Mississippi as associate members who would be willing to pledge a small annual contribution for a term of years for the purpose of building suitable structures. Even should such a plan prove unworkable, I think we may well emulate the example of our Roman Catholic friends by adopting a large plan and working slowly but surely towards its accomplishment. Twenty-five or even fifty years is not a long time in the life of a people, and Millsaps College should live while the planet lasts. The main thing, as I view it, is to adopt a large and comprehensive building plan and then let Bishop Murrah, the accomplished President of the Board, place the matter upon the hearts of the Methodists of the State and lead them in its glorious fulfillment.

Another thing of which I would like to speak while I am about it is this: During my membership on the Board of Trust of Millsaps College the thing which has impressed me more than any other is the wonderful sagacity and ability displayed by our illustrious founder in the management of the finances of the institution. His fixed resolution never to allow the College to contract debts is most wise and commendable. While he lives no change in this policy is likely to occur. But accumulating years admonish us that we cannot always have his firm hand upon the helm; therefore it occurs to me as wise that the Annual Conferences should take steps to so amend the charter of the institution as to embed firmly in its provisions Major Millsaps' wise policy which is commended by more than twenty years of success. I think it would be gratifying to him to know that this child of his affections could never by any possibility wreck itself by becoming involved in debt, that graveyard of so many similar institutions in our Southland.

Greenville, Miss.

THE KIND OF REVIVAL NEEDED.

A preacher was praying, "O Lord, send us an old-fashioned revival." "Amen," responded a brother. "Send us," continued the preacher, "a revival that will help us to love one another." "Amen," shouted the same brother. "O Lord," continued the preacher, "send us a debt-paying revival." That settled his "Amens."—Rev. Robert Stephens.

Church News

The name of the Philadelphia Methodist (Northern Methodist) has been changed to The Methodist Times.

Rev. A. J. Meaders, of Martin, Tenn., Secretary of the Memphis Conference, has lately been visiting relatives at Clarksdale, Miss.

Fifty years ago we had in Little Rock, Ark., but one church and one weak mission, with 247 members. To-day we have in that city ten thriving churches, with a total membership of nearly 4,000.

Dr. F. J. Prettyman, of the Baltimore Conference of the M. E. Church, South, has been elected Chaplain of the United States Senate. He is an able minister, and will discharge worthily the duties of that responsible office.

Dr. J. C. Morris is expected to assist Dr. T. E. Sharp, the pastor of St. John's Church of Memphis, Tenn., in a meeting in the near future. Dr. Morris some years ago served the First Methodist Church of that city with great acceptability, and has in Memphis many friends and admirers.

The Western Methodist of Feb. 27 states that Bishop E. R. Hendrix had a narrow escape recently while on his way from Mexico City to El Paso. His train was attacked by rebels, and for a time the passengers were in considerable danger. The news which has come to our Mission Board, that all our American workers in Mexico are safe, is cause for profound gratitude to God.

The late Dr. Young J. Allen, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, who so distinguished himself as a missionary, also performed a vast amount of literary work. Besides uncounted editorials, he is said to have written, compiled, or translated nearly 250 volumes in the Chinese language. To him also belongs the distinction of having established the first newspaper of a modern type that made its appearance in China.

Of the Negroes of the United States it is estimated that about 61 per cent are Baptists. The Methodists claim among them only 13 per cent. Manifestly, immersion is tremendously popular with the colored contingent of our population. And, incidentally it may be remarked that these figures show where a very large part of the strength in the Southern States of which some of our white Baptist brethren are so much given to boasting lies.

To the Midland Methodist (Nashville, Tenn.) we are indebted for the following statistics: "We have thirteen active and one superannuate in the College of Bishops. Those in the active service get $480 per annum. The superannuate receives $2400 a year. Eight widows of Bishops are living, and they get annually $1000 each. The amount necessary to support all the claimants upon this fund is $72,800 per annum. The yearly assessment levied upon the Church for this purpose is $90,000."

The Waukegan (Illinois) Daily Sun, of Feb. 3, stated that two of the daughters of "the former conductor of Dr. Alexander Dowie's white-robed choir" were on the day preceding received into the Zion Methodist Church of that city. The Doctor's son, Gladstone Dowie, it will be remembered, some time ago applied for admission into the ministry of the Protestant Episcopal Church. More and more as the years pass this once noisy sect seems to be disintegrating and weakening in its influence.

Goucher College, formerly The Woman's College, of Baltimore, Md., is reported to be in such sore financial straits that it will require the raising of $1,000,000 by April 5 to save it for the Methodist Episcopal Church. Of this amount Baltimore has pledged $700,000, and the Northern Methodists throughout the United States are being appealed to for the other $300,000. We hope that the amount needed will be promptly secured, since the loss of this splendid institution would be a calamity to our sister Church.

Bishop J. W. Lambuth, upon the invitation of the Methodist pastors of Richmond, Va., visited that city on Feb. 19, and gave a thrilling account of his journey through Africa to a large and appreciative audience. He stated that he had secured $15,000 of the $20,000 necessary for the equipment of our mission in the Dark Continent, and that he had engaged as the first four missionaries a teacher and translator, an evangelist, a carpenter and blacksmith, and a physician. The Bishop himself expects to return to Africa in December.

Dr. George P. Eckman, Editor of the New York Christian Advocate, will preach the Commencement Sermon of Trinity College, at Durham, N. C., on Tuesday morning, June 3; Dr. C. C. Woods, the Associate Editor of the St. Louis Christian Advocate, will deliver the Alumni Address at the annual Alumni dinner on the afternoon of the same day; and the Commencement Address will be delivered on Wednesday morning, June 4, by Rear Admiral Robert E. Peary, the famous discoverer of the North Pole, who is also the author of a number of books of merit and a forceful and impressive speaker.

Dr. James Cannon, Superintendent of the Southern Methodist Assembly at Waynesville, N. C., spent Sunday, Feb. 23, in Raleigh, N. C., preaching at Central Church in the morning and at Edenton Street at the evening hour. The Raleigh Christian Advocate rightly says: "Dr. Cannon is one of the strong men of our Church, and is doing a great work in connection with the Assembly." Methodism owes Dr. Cannon much for the great fight he has made in Virginia to prevent the alienation of Randolph-Macon College from the Church. One never has any trouble in finding out where he stands on any pending issue.

The three Methodist bodies of New Zealand—the Primitive Methodists, the Wesleyans, and the Bible Christians—have united, forming a denomination which numbers about 100,000, and which will be called the Methodist Church of the Dominion of New Zealand. It is stated that the greatest problem that confronts the new Church is that of giving the Gospel to the scattered settlers in the outlying districts, and that for this purpose "saddle-bag missionaries" will be sent out. If the saddle-bag preachers do in New Zealand what they did in the early days of the United States, some brilliant church history will soon be made in that country.

ARE YOU GETTING READY FOR THEM?

To the Louisiana Pastors.

Dear Brother: I drop you this note by way of exhortation. Our District Sunday School Institutes are almost here, and it is time that our plans were taking definite shape. We have an unusually good opportunity before us, and we must not let it slip. A new Sunday school, as well as a new common school era, is upon us, and its movements are so rapid that we must be ever active to keep abreast of the times. As the church's leader, the pastor who handles the situation successfully must know how to operate each of these departments of Sunday school activity, and with the many other things that he needs to know, this is sometimes no easy task. Have you the latest knowledge of the Missionary, the Adult, Teacher Training, the Home, the Elementary, or the Advanced departments? Could you, with freedom, discuss the Graded Literature, Decision Day, the Boy Problem, and the Value and Workings of the Adult Class? To effectively lead the modern

Sunday school, these things must be familiar to you.

Quite a number of the pastors of other Churches have had theological school training in Sunday school work, and if we are to successfully meet them in pastoral rivalry we must in some way supply this lack in our own training. These Institutes afford us the opportunity to get together and go over the whole question and learn the latest there is to know. Dr. and Mrs. Hamill rank with the best Sunday school workers of their day, and when just in their prime they come to bring us their best. The fact that a meeting is held in each district makes it easy to attend. Will any of our pastors let this opportunity pass unused? We feel that they surely will not; but we must wait and see. Will all have interest enough in their workers to have them out in numbers? We must judge by the results. We continue to exhort. To-day is the day to work up the delegation and to send in their names to the local pastor where the institute for your district is to be held. Delays are dangerous. By all means do it now!

With a great deal of pleasure, we anticipate meeting you at one of these Institutes, where we may learn more of the things necessary to the establishment of our Master's kingdom.

Fraternally yours,

P. O. LOWREY, Field Sec'y.

THE BOARD MEETINGS IN DALLAS.

Bulletin Number 4.

A splendid committee of Dallas Preachers and Laymen is holding weekly meetings to make plans for the Board Meetings in Dallas this Spring. They realize that they have a big job on their hands and for that reason started early and are keeping busy so that every detail will be worked out before the time arrives. That this will prove a great occasion, no one familiar with the deliberations of the committee to date has any doubt. Liberal railroad rates have been assured and a list of hotels and boarding houses is being prepared that good entertainment at reasonable prices may be provided for all who come.

The General Epworth League Board, while small in numbers, is ambitious to stand right on the front line, and plans are being made on a scale that make one not inoculated with their peculiar brand of enthusiasm almost gasp. But Gus Thomasson is a member of this Board and lives in Dallas, and he says his Board must out-shine all the rest. The young people of the city and vicinity are considerably stirred and every one of them is right in line for an occasion that will not soon be forgotten. They talk of a mass meeting at the Coliseum on Sunday afternoon, May 4th, that will fill every seat, and a banquet on the Monday night following with plates for more than one thousand Leaguers, with all the Bishops present, and such an assemblage of the youth and beauty of Texas Methodism as will be an inspiration to all who are fortunate enough to be there. The cheerful optimism and buoyant enthusiasm of this host of Epworth Leaguers insures a robust type of Methodism in these parts in years to come. Our hats are off to the Epworth Leaguers!

A FREE SPRINKLE.

Send your name and address, and a 2-cent postage stamp, to Rev. Jno. D. Ellis, Jackson, Miss., and he will mail to you Circuit Rider's unanswerable "Essay on Baptism," just from the press, and which was written for free distribution. Dr. Meek, Editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, says: "I was very much pleased with the Essay. It is fresh, suggestive and striking, and ought to do great good." It is the very thing to place in the hands of any church member for quick reading, and will convince anybody that the Scriptures call sprinkling baptism. Order quickly, before they are all given away.

A METHODIST.

Secular News and Comment

By Rev. A. J. Gearheard.

Mr. Lloyd-George, the great English Commoner, who will visit the United States next summer, is announced to speak in Boston, New York, Pittsburgh, and Chicago.

A committee representing the Association of Life Insurance Presidents recently reported that 630,000 of the 1,500,000 deaths that occur annually in the United States are due to preventable diseases.

Los Angeles, Cal., is to have a cotton factory which will cost $1,000,000, and which will employ 3600 workers. The Los Angeles cotton factory will have to pay freight on almost all the cotton it will use, and yet probably it will make money. It is passing strange that Southern capitalists do not build more such factories in the South.

It cost $73,000 to inaugurate Woodrow Wilson President of the United States. Of this amount $14,000 deficit remains to be paid out of an $88,000 guarantee fund which was secured in Washington. The Joint Congressional Inaugural Committee spent about $25,000, which amount was paid by the Government, and the receipts from other sources were $34,000.

During the decade from 1900 to 1910, the number of horses in the United States increased from 13,000,000 to 21,000,000, while the average value increased from $42 per head to $96 per head. During the same period the mule population doubled. The above facts do not seem to indicate that the automobile is taking the place of the horse in our country at a very rapid rate.

Colonel Roosevelt recently branded as false the report that he would make public a letter from the Emperor of Japan asking him to intervene in the war between Russia and Japan. By this announcement the Seer of Sagamore Hill consigns a great deal of late editorial effort on the part of his critics to the scrap heap of wasted energy. Mr. Roosevelt is too sane and sagacious a diplomat to permit himself to commit such a breach of international etiquette as this.

The Jewish Forward, the official organ of the Brotherhood of Tailors, published in New York City, recently printed an editorial urging the striking garment workers to return to their work and ignore the advice of the walking delegates of their Union. The editorial produced a storm of disapproval, and as a result a mob attacked the Forward's office and nearly demolished it. To use violence against those who express views contrary to their own seems to be characteristic of the leaders of too many strikes.

Before his retirement from the office of Postmaster General, Mr. Frank H. Hitchcock issued the following order concerning the parcels post department of the postal service: "On and after July 1, 1913, parcels post packages may be sent C.O.D., on condition that the sender pays the postage and adds 10 cents in parcel postage stamps as a fee for the collection. No package will be accepted that is valued at more than $100, and the Government will not be responsible for lost packages to more than the amount of $50."

That the State of Mississippi is the mother of Senators is attested by the following statement, which we clip from a secular paper: "In addition to Senators John Sharp Williams and James K. Vardaman, the Mississippi contingent in the Senate is Senator Geo. E. Chamberlain, of Oregon, and Senator Francis G. Newlands, of Nevada, who were born near Natchez, Miss.; Senator Key Pittman of Nevada, a native of Vicksburg, Miss.; Senator James P. Clarke of Arkansas, a native of Yazoo City, Miss.; and Senator Thomas P. Gore of Oklahoma, who was born in Webster County, Miss."

The subject of increasing the salary of district judges is being agitated in Texas. It is also being considered in some parts of Louisiana, where the salary of that officer is but $3000 per year. The Shreveport (La.) Journal, in commenting on the question, says that because of the small salary, the best lawyers will not release a much more remunerative practice for the small income of the Bench, and that good lawyers are only secured as judges when they sacrifice the money feature for the sake of the honor attached to the office. The Journal suggests $5000 as the proper salary for a district judge.

During last year 139 persons lost their lives in the United States in railroad wrecks, and 231 were killed by automobiles on the streets of New York City alone. It is estimated that not less than a billion people rode on the trains at different times. This is a remarkably good showing in favor of the men who run the trains and maintain the tracks and rolling stock of the railroad companies; and, at the same time, an indication that those who have money enough to own automobiles are not always the proper persons in whose hands to trust the safety of public highways.

The Louisiana Superintendent of Education, Mr. T. H. Harris, has expressed the opinion that a parish school board has no right to change the curriculum by permitting prayer and Scripture reading to be a part of the daily exercises in the public schools. If a school teacher desires to begin his day's work by reading from the Bible and offering a prayer, and his patrons do not object thereto, we cannot see that he needs any law or even the consent of a higher school authority so to do. Certainly his action would come no nearer to a violation of public school ethics than does the fact that certain parish superintendents declare Good Friday a holiday in deference to the religious scruples of Roman Catholic teachers and patrons.

The names of the members of President Wilson's Cabinet were made public on March 4, and are as follows: Secretary of State, William Jennings Bryan, of Nebraska; Secretary of Treasury, William G. McAdoo, of New York; Secretary of War, Lindley M. Garrison, of New Jersey; Attorney General, James McReynolds, of Tennessee; Postmaster General, Representative Albert Burleson, of Texas; Secretary of Navy, Josephus Daniels, of North Carolina; Secretary of Interior, Franklin K. Lane, of California; Secretary of Agriculture, David F. Houston, of Missouri; Secretary of Commerce, Representative William C. Redfield, of New York; Secretary of Labor; Representative William B. Wilson, of Pennsylvania. It is interesting to note the qualifications of each of these men. Half of them are Southerners, and all of them have been admitted to the bar as lawyers, except the last three; of these one is a college professor, another a miner, and the third a manufacturer. Of the lawyers, Mr. Bryan and Mr. Daniels have been engaged chiefly in newspaper work in the capacity of editors, and Mr. McAdoo was better known as a railroad man and builder than as a lawyer.

ONLY COMMON PEOPLE.

The tradition of blue blood dies hard, even on democratic soil and in a democratic age. It is hard to realize that beneath kingly robes or president's garments there dwells nothing but common man. And it is still harder to realize that under the uncouth garb of the unlettered immigrant, there breathes a humanity which is of equal value in the Father's sight to ours. We have the same joys and the same trials; we have the same warm love and the same hot hate; the same sins and the same sorrows; and to all the same gospel comes with the same mighty uplift, and the same glorious revelation. One humanity, one Redeemer, one final home.—The Christian Guardian.

A PATHETIC STORY.

"My Father Was a Good Man, But Whiskey Did It."

I was sitting at my breakfast table one Sabbath morning, when I was called to my door by the ringing of the bell. There stood a boy about fourteen years of age, poorly clad, but tidied up as best he could.

He was leaning on crutches; one leg off at the knee. In a voice trembling with emotion, and tears coursing down his cheeks, he said: "Mr. Hoagland, I am Freddie Brown. I have come to see if you will go to the jail and talk and pray with my father. He is to be hanged tomorrow for the murder of my mother. My father was a good man, but whiskey did it. I have three little sisters younger than myself. We are very poor and have no friends. We live in a dark and dingy room. I do the best I can to support my sisters by selling papers, blacking boots, and odd jobs; but, Mr. Hoagland, we are awfully poor. Will you come and be with us when father's body is brought home? The Governor says we may have his body after he is hung."

I was deeply moved to pity. I promised, and made haste to the jail, where I found the father.

He acknowledged that he must have killed his wife, for the circumstances pointed that way, but he had not the slightest remembrance of the deed. He said he was crazed with drink or he never would have committed the crime.

He said: "My wife was a good and faithful mother to my little children. Never did I dream that my hand could be guilty of such a crime." The man could bravely face the penalty of the law for his deed, but he broke down and cried as if his heart would break when he thought of leaving his children in a destitute and friendless condition. I read and prayed with him and left him to his fate.

The next morning I made my way to the miserable quarters of the children. I found three little girls upon a bed of straw in a corner of the room. They were beautiful girls had they had proper care. They were expecting the body of their dead father, and between their cries and sobs they would say, "Papa was good, but whiskey did it."

In a little while two strong officers came bearing the body of the dead father in a rude pine box. They set it down on two old rickety stools. The cries of the children were so heartrending that the officers could not endure it and made haste out of the room.

In a moment the manly boy nerved himself, and said: "Come, sisters, kiss papa's face before it is cold." They gathered about his face and smoothed it down with kisses, and between their sobs cried out: "Papa was good, but whiskey did it."

I raised my heart to God and said: "O God, did I fight to save a country that would derive a revenue from a traffic that would make one scene like this possible?"—Youth's Outlook.

THE TALLY.

By Richard Lord.

It isn't the job we intend to do
Or the labor we've just begun
That puts us right on the ledger sheet;
It's the work we have really done.

Our credit is built upon things we do,
Our debit on things we shirk,
The man who totals the biggest plus
Is the man who completes his work.

Good intentions do not pay bills;
It's easy enough to plan,
To wish is the play of an office boy;
To do is the job of a man.

NINETY-ONE BEAUTIFUL YEARS.

By Mrs. Robert Kemp.

Boydston, Va., March 21, 1822—Gulfport, Miss., Jan. 28, 1913: between these two dates Mary Elizabeth Moss, wife of H. A. Walker, lived ninety-one beautiful years. She was a devoted member of the Methodist Church. From our hearts we send up praise, glory and honor to our God, because we have seen what he can do with a life perfectly consecrated to him. We only saw the closing years, but from the last we know the rest. In youth must have been laid a firm foundation, upon which trials and temptations patiently borne year after year, built up so beautiful and strong a character. No neglected duties or falls on account of temptation remained unrepented of to mar the symmetry of the finished structure of that life into which went the labor of three score years and ten. Twenty more were added, to polish and glorify it. We who saw and knew what such a Christian meant to the world were blessed indeed.

For two months she was confined to her bed. "Home, home," was a word frequently on her lips, and so constantly was she rejoicing in the prospect of soon being there, that there was no time to complain of her present suffering. She loved to see her friends, but was too weak to do more than look her love, press the hand, and say, "God bless you." These had always been her words of parting when in health, and spoken by Grandma Walker, they were a blessing indeed, for we knew she walked and talked with God.

Had any one asked if she gave to missions, it would have been a distinct shock. It is absolutely unthinkable, that such a Christian could be indifferent to this great work. No greater argument as to duty along this line can be given than the large place it held in the life of such a saint, and the continued help she gave the cause, both at home and abroad. In 1878, when the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society was organized, she was living in a rural community, or doubtless she would have been a charter member. She joined the Society at the first opportunity; she was ready for all local work, and when it was decided that the old log church that she loved so well must give way to a better building, she worked faithfully for the new; and McGowan Chapel was built largely through her efforts.

She came to Gulfport at the age of seventy-eight, when most women would have thought it too late to take up new work; but wherever there was work to do for the Master, she could not be idle. She soon became a spiritual power in the church, an inspiration to the Woman's Missionary Society, an example to be emulated by all. She was the first life member made by the Foreign Society. When in her early eighties she had a fall which necessitated the use of crutches for life, it seemed that surely her time to rest had come. But she wanted no rest as long as there was a chance to do any thing for her Master. She attended the meetings when she could, and when she could not her first words, on her daughter's return, were, "Tell me all about the meeting." She was interested in the slightest detail, ready still to do her part at home if she could. A few months ago, when we began our new church in Gulfport, she immediately began knitting mats to contribute to the fund the ladies were raising. She left three dollars she had made as her contribution—more would have followed.

The last few years she sat on her porch with a kind word for all who passed, most of whom would stop for a minute with dear Grandma. She said this was her last chance to influence souls for her Master, and many a seed that she dropped may bring forth a harvest. The postman was her friend, and stopped on his round to go in and shake the kind hand and look once more on the face that always gave him a smile. Her life was all love; she gave it freely and received freely in return—not only from her own family, but the community; for she helped every life she touched. We breathed a pure atmosphere in her presence. I do not suppose that any one could have told Grandma Walker any of the ugly gossip of the day. At her memorial service ministers of different denominations told of what a blessing she had been to them in their work. To her they went to talk of the deep things of God that they might give it out to their people. The Episcopal minister, who had known her longer than the others, said that first he visited her occasionally but he needed her counsel more and more, until it became his habit to go every Monday to tell her what had taken place in the City Preacher's Meeting that morning, in which she was much interested, and to get fresh inspiration for his work.

I believe she was the happiest person I ever knew. Once she said to me, "I know no shadow of trouble; everybody is good to me; every day is a happy day. My heart is full of praises to God." She radiated joy and peace. Her face was singularly free from wrinkles; her complexion was clear; her mind was bright—interested in the welfare of the town, and her hearing was good. She was not only a pleasant companion, but good to look upon. It is a common saying when the good pass over the river that "Heaven is richer, but that earth is poorer." Some how I can not feel that earth is poorer, we do not say this when the seed are in the ground, but feel it is already richer because of the harvest to be brought forth. She sowed so many good seed—in the morning, at noon, and at eve—that the harvest she reaped herself is only a small part of that yet to come. It will go on multiplying through the years, ending only in eternity.

Neither can I say that her last years were "going down the hill." She seemed to be going higher, higher, each day, and brighter and brighter around her became the radiance of her Savior's presence, until she was lost to us in the bosom of her God.

Her two grandchildren took the precious body back to her old home and friends, and laid it to rest in the cemetery back of McGowan Chapel. They made her grave on the site of the old log church in which she was converted. Here the Savior took her hand and led her safely through sunshine and shadow; through the desert and by the river side, "mid scenes of gloom," and where the flowers bloomed, till she reached her home in the Paradise of God.

Gulfport, Miss.

WHY NOT SEND THE PASTORS?

Dear Dr. Meek: Our second great Missionary Conference will be held at Waynesville, North Carolina, in June. Please permit me to make a suggestion and ask the prayerful consideration of it by our laymen, and especially by our presiding elders.

Why cannot every pastor in our patronizing Conferences go to this meeting? There is one way in which this can be done, and only one, viz: let each pastoral charge send its pastor, paying at least his traveling expenses. This isn't too much to ask of them, and if properly brought to their attention, I do not believe many of them would object to doing it. It would be only a small sum for each church, and only a few cents for each member; but it would mean a new lease on life to many a pastor, and a new era in many a church.

If the Laymen's Movement is to be emphasized, who needs to go more than the pastor? In spite of all that has been said about this being a "Laymen's Movement," its success or failure is in the hands of the pastor. Of all men, his presence at this Conference is needed. But many of these pastors cannot go without help, and those who need help most, also need this meeting most.

There is not a single great Baptist gathering in the Southern States to which scores of Baptist churches do not send their pastors, meeting all their expenses. These men, filled with intelligent enthusiasm, return to their charges and lead their people to larger achievements.

Let me lay this on the minds and hearts of our laymen and presiding elders, who have peculiar opportunities for getting this matter before our people.

B. F. LEWIS.

KEEP THE FIFTH SUNDAY IN JUNE OPEN.

In view of the importance of the General Missionary Conference set for June 25-29, the presiding elders and pastors are respectfully requested to make no special appointments in their districts or charges for the fifth Sunday in June. The great Missionary Conference will be held on the Southern Assembly Grounds on that Sunday. Leave your people free to attend without conflict with other appointments at home. Please do not set church dedications or district conferences or quarterly conferences for that time, if it can possibly be avoided.

Signed: W. R. Lambuth, Chairman Program Committee; Ed F. Cook, Chairman Steering Committee; C. F. Reid, Secretary.

HOW WESLEY AND ASBURY PASSED AWAY.

Last Sunday was the 122d anniversary of the death of Mr. Wesley. He died at a quarter before 10 o'clock on Wednesday morning, March 2d, 1791, and a week later was buried at City Road Chapel, early in the morning, to avoid the throngs.

The closing scene was never to be forgotten by those who were present. Joseph Bradford was praying, and the room was filled with sorrowing friends, and while the words of the prayer, "Lift up your heads, ye gates, and be ye lift up, ye everlasting doors, and the King of glory shall come in," were upon the lips of the preacher, the soul of this beloved pastor of thousands passed into the beyond.

Toward the very end of the month, twenty-five years later, upon the wide American continent, on Sunday, Bishop Asbury fell on sleep, after hearing an exposition of the 21st Chapter of Revelation, by John Wesley Bond, his traveling companion. Like Wesley, he, too, ceased at once to work and to live. But their work still survives in thousands of toilers who follow along after them.

Editorial.

WHAT THE "REAL" HISTORIANS REALLY SAY.

Elsewhere in this issue Dr. H. Walter Featherstun undertakes to reply to the discussion of Dr. Bledsoe, which has recently been published in the Advocate. That address was not, as Dr. Featherstun's language would seem to imply, wholly, or chiefly, a warning against woman suffrage, but a masterful dissertation on "The Mission of Woman" as fixed by the Creator and a clear setting forth of what must inevitably result as the consequence of a departure therefrom. We are not surprised that our good friend who has been so far afield of this question should feel the overwhelming force of Dr. Bledsoe's great argument and seek to set up some sort of a defense for his erroneous teaching and example; but his effort in this direction will avail him little with informed people, or with persons who have access to the authorities on the points at issue. As expositors of Roman history and interpreters of its philosophy, we have on one side Dr. Albert Taylor Bledsoe, who as a student and thinker has never had a superior (if an equal) in the Methodist Episcopal Church South; Mr. Lecky, who as an accomplished and reliable historian has been given universal recognition in the world of letters, and Prof. J. R. Seeley, the brilliant author of "Ecce Homo," "Imperial Rome," and many other learned volumes; while on the other side stands Dr. Featherstun, who says, in effect, that these gentlemen are entirely wrong in their observations and conclusions. Let it be remembered that, writing at a much later time than Gibbon, Dr. Bledsoe, Mr. Lecky, and Prof. Seeley were quite as familiar with his works as is Dr. Featherstun, who tells us that these writers missed the facts spread upon the pages of this "real historian" and went wildly astray.

But the truth is, that neither Gibbon nor Mommsen (whose great work is comparatively recent) furnishes the least ground for the impassioned statements of Dr. Featherstun as to the legal and intellectual status of Roman women in imperial times. The former does, indeed, say that 'woman was regarded as a thing and not a person' (though on this point he is expressly, and evidently designedly, contradicted by Mommsen, a better authority on Roman institutions); but he (Gibbon) in making that statement was avowedly referring to woman's condition in the early days of the nation. Roman history up to the time of the fall of the Empire to which Dr. Bledsoe refers covered approximately a period of a thousand years; and of woman's status in later times, Gibbon, along with the others, gives a vastly different picture from that painted for us by Dr. Featherstun. He says (Vol. 5, page 52): "After the Punic triumphs the Roman matrons aspired to the common benefits of a free and opulent republic. . . . They declined the solemnities of the old nuptials . . . and substituted the liberal and definite terms of a marriage contract. Of their private fortunes they communicated the use and secured the property. The estate of a wife could neither be alienated nor mortgaged by a profligate husband." He further says (Vol. v, page 55): "When the Roman matrons became the equal and voluntary companions of their lords, a new jurisprudence was introduced, that marriage, like other partnerships, might be dissolved by the abdication of one of the associates. (Observe that the wife had equal power with the husband to secure a divorce.) In three centuries of prosperity and corruption this principle was enlarged to frequent practice and pernicious abuse." And he also states that when pressed by Augustus to marry, the men of Rome replied "that the prevailing institutions were the least favorable to males." Do not these statements sustain Dr. Bledsoe in every essential particular?

But let us hear Mommsen, who is conceded to be the greatest authority on the Roman government, customs, and laws. Referring to woman in the earlier periods of Roman history, he says (Vol. 1, 63): "Woman did not, indeed, occupy a position inferior to man in the acquiring of property and money; on the contrary, the daughter inherited an equal share with her brother, and the mother an equal share with her children. . . . Within the house woman was not servant, but mistress, exempted from grinding corn, cooking, and menial tasks. . . . They were not things, but persons." Where, here, is the parallel to African slavery in its most abject form? Would it not be interesting to know why Dr. Featherstun did not see these statements when he was writing his article? Even the power of parents, of which our brother seeks to make so much, applied to sons to almost as great an extent as it did to daughters. On this point Mommsen says: "It was easier under the old Roman law for a slave to secure release from his Master than a son from his father."

But none of this is really germane to this discussion. It is with woman's condition in times far subsequent to this that we are at present concerned. And Mommsen, in touching upon this question, in several places explicitly states (for the want of space we cannot quote his exact words) that parental control became relaxed; that, with the freer mingling of the sexes, unchastity and celibacy rapidly grew more common; that divorce and childlessness increased alarmingly; that the women shook off their fathers and husbands as administrators of their property and hired private managers; and that their holdings became so large as to call for special legislation.

But the Doctor declares that they were not "suffragettes." There was no such thing as general suffrage in Imperial Rome, either for males or females; but Mommsen says: "They (the women) also acted as politicians—appeared at party conferences, and took part with their money and their intrigues in the wild coterie-proceedings of the times." He states that statues were erected in their honor in the provinces; that Cato complained that they ruled the world; and he calls them "female statesmen" and speaks of the "unnatural world in which the sexes seemed as though they wished to change parts." It strikes us that these women came about as near being suffragettes as was possible in that age of the world's history.

Nor were the Roman women of that period as ignorant as Dr. Featherstun says they were. Mommsen says (Vol. iv, 605): "The female world took a lively part in literary pursuits: the ladies did not confine themselves to dancing and music, but by their spirit and wit ruled the conversation and talked excellently concerning Greek and Latin literature. . . . Rhythms became more and more fashionable among the children of both sexes." Neither were they "all pagan followers of Venus," as our friend, in his vehemence, asserts. Smith & Cheetham's "Dictionary of Christian Antiquities," a most scholarly and dependable work, sets forth the fact that many of them were members of the Christian Church, attended upon its ordinances in gorgeous attire, and were sometimes even "permitted to perform religious rites." In other words, the masculine women of that age not only contributed to the wrecking of the State, but for a time corrupted and well-nigh ruined the Christian Church.

The space is not at our disposal to make a full reply to the latter part of Dr. Featherstun's article, which is little else than an expression of his opinions. He affirms that there is no connection between woman suffrage and the increase of divorce. Mrs. Townsend, the brilliant North Carolina authoress, in her recent paper on woman suffrage in the Methodist Review, differs radically from him on this point. The woman's rights movement (of which the suffrage feature is the last flower and fruit) and easy divorce certainly marched hand in hand in Imperial Rome; they have come together and are growing together in our own land; and in Norway, a woman suffrage country, we are told that "the divorce rate has quintupled within the past few years." If our friend cannot see that whatever takes woman out of her God-given sphere and constitutes her less a home-maker (which the ballot and what would come with it would undoubtedly do) must have a prejudicial effect upon marriage, domestic happiness, and the bearing and rearing of children, no proof, however clear, would convince him.

The Doctor denounces the women of Rome and sneers at them in comparison with those of America. But let it be remembered that the Roman matrons, too, were famed for their chastity until they were corrupted by a too promiscuous mingling of the sexes, such as is now being proposed in this country. If our women throw off home restraints and follow in their footsteps in this respect, there is no guarantee that they can escape any more than did those of the once proud "mistress of the world."

THE NEW FEDERAL ADMINISTRATION.

Amid simple, yet imposing ceremonies, and in the presence of one of the largest crowds ever assembled at Washington, Woodrow Wilson, on the fourth of March, took the oath of office as the twenty-eighth President of the United States. Though his inaugural address could scarcely be called a great utterance, it was clear, to the point, and there rang through it a commendable note of earnestness. To us, what was most striking in it was the evident opinion of our new Chief Executive that the securing of social justice for every citizen beneath the flag is at present the most imperative duty of the Government. This means doubtless that he thinks that the legislation of the future should concern itself more with the immediate condition of the people than with academic principles and abstract questions of property. Necessarily this would make our government more paternalistic. This seems to be the tendency in all enlightened lands.

We are pleased with Mr. Wilson's Cabinet, which unquestionably is an able one. Under the new administration the three leading offices are filled by Presbyterian elders—the Presidency, the Vice Presidency, and the Secretaryship of State. Let us, therefore, hope, in spite of the fact that Mr. Tumulty is among its counselors and that Congress has been called to meet on the 1st of April (All Fools' Day), that it is predestined to be one of the most harmonious and serviceable in the history of the nation.

SHE DESERVES IT.

The following dispatch was sent from Starkville, Miss., on March 1:

"Application was made to-day to the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission for a medal for Georgia Caldwell, a negro cook, in recognition of her brave act in saving the life of Headden, the four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Reynolds, one of the most prominent families in the county. The child was playing near an old, unused cistern covered with boards, when some of the rotten covering gave way, precipitating him into the water five feet deep, below the opening. The woman, hearing the splash, rushed to the spot, and, getting another negro woman nearby to hold her fast by the feet, she plunged in head first and seized the drowning boy."

At this time, when the crimes of colored people are so paraded in the public press, it is well to call attention to such incidents as this. Nor are they as rare as some may suppose. In the section of New Orleans in which we live, within the past two years two small children have been killed by a street car, and in each instance a colored nurse, though not on the track, sacrificed her life in an effort to save the child. The fidelity of negro servants to their masters and mistresses during the stormy days of the Civil War has long been much extolled, and rightly so. Nor has this spirit of loyalty and faithfulness to those for whom they work by any means ceased to exist among the colored people of the South during the nearly fifty years of their freedom. The truth is, the black race, like every other, has in it both the good and the bad. To condemn sweepingly all who belong to it because of the crimes of some of its members is both illogical and unjust. With the tide of immigration from the Old World beginning to turn toward this section, we may ere long be made to realize, more fully than we do at present, that there are things vastly worse than a large negro tenant population.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

An Epworth League was organized at the McDonoghville Church of New Orleans last week, with 23 charter members.

Bishop W. P. Thirkield, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, occupied the pulpit of the Parker Memorial Church of this city last Sunday, and preached an eloquent and uplifting sermon.

A revival meeting is now in progress at the First Methodist Church of this city. Brothers Moore and Jamieson are doing the preaching this week, but will be re-enforced by Dr. J. M. Moore, of Nashville, next week.

Rev. D. L. Griffin began a revival meeting at Ringgold, La., on Sunday, March 2, being assisted by Dr. A. C. Holder, of Shreveport, La. What the results of these services have been, we are not informed at this writing.

Though he has many things to keep him busy, Rev. E. J. Cunningham, our gifted young pastor at Myrtle, Miss., is ever mindful of the interests of the Advocate. He serves a good people, who hold him in high esteem and delight to wait upon his ministry.

Mrs. S. Fannie Clark, of Okolona, who is one of Mississippi's most brilliant women, in a letter to our office pays the following compliment to her.

pastor, Rev. J. H. Holder: "Brother Holder is pure gold. He is a fine preacher, and has religion."

Senator James P. Clarke, of Arkansas, who has recently been elected President Pro Tem. of the United States Senate, as is stated elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate, was born in Mississippi.

Rev. H. G. Hawkins, the Associate President of the Memphis Conference Female Institute, at Jackson, Tenn., recently visited his mother, Mrs. M. E. Hawkins, at Hattiesburg, Miss. He was due to return to Jackson last Tuesday.

Rev. J. J. Baird, of Brooksville, Miss., states that the work in his charge is progressing nicely, and that the prospects are most encouraging. We heartily appreciate the effort he is making to circulate the Advocate among his worthy parishioners.

Rev. G. H. Galloway, the pastor of our Court Street Church of Hattiesburg, Miss., in a brief business note to the Advocate office, adds: "The work here seems to be prospering. I have never served a kindlier people. I am hoping for great things."

We make grateful acknowledgment to Rev. T. H. Dorsey, of Water Valley, Miss., for a club of 7 subscribers, forwarded on the 4th inst. Brother Dorsey is having a fruitful pastorate in his present field, and his services are highly appreciated by the people.

We regret to be informed that Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick, of Corinth, Miss., the accomplished Sunday School Field Secretary of the North Mississippi Conference, has been confined to her room for ten days with a severely sprained wrist. We trust that she will be able to be out again at an early date.

Bishop W. B. Murrah was scheduled to preach last Sunday morning for the congregation of our First Church at Jackson, Miss., who are now worshipping in Epworth Hall, while their new church (Galloway Memorial) is being erected. The Bishop's home people always hear him gladly.

Miss Mollie Higginbotham, of Mer Rouge, La., has brought us under obligations for a list of twelve subscribers from the choice community in which she lives. It is her habit to render us such a service every year, and she is esteemed by the force in our office as one of the Advocate's best friends.

Dr. A. F. Watkins preached to a large congregation at the Capitol Street Methodist Church in Jackson, Miss., at 11 a.m. on Sunday, March 2, and Rev. Paul D. Hardin, the presiding elder of the Jackson District, occupied the same pulpit at the evening hour, delivering a most impressive sermon.

Dr. F. S. Parker, Secretary of the General Epworth League Board and the Editor of the Epworth Era, came to New Orleans last Tuesday, and at 8 p.m. officiated at the marriage of one of his nieces, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Parker. Dr. Parker honored our sanctum with a much appreciated call.

Miss Belle Roberts reports the organization of an Intermediate Epworth League at St. Martinville, La., on March 2, with 14 charter members. She also states that our pastor at that place, Rev. W. V. Falcon, is quite active in the Master's service, and that the indications point to a successful year in that pleasant charge.

Mrs. A. R. Marshall, one of the Secretaries of the General Board of Missions and one of the editors of the Missionary Voice, spent last Tuesday in New Orleans, and visited the Mary Werlein Mission and St. Mark's Hall. She was on her way to Baton Rouge to attend the annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Louisiana Conference.

Rev. J. M. Morse, the pastor of our Capitol Street Church of Jackson, Miss., is making a vigorous campaign to extend the circulation of the Advocate among his people. Though he serves a high-steeple church, Brother Morse does not count it beneath his dignity to take subscriptions to a church paper. The truth is, he is in every respect one of the liveliest pastors of our acquaintance.

Rev. J. E. Stebbens, who is attending the University of Mississippi, and at the same time serving the Abbeville charge, remembered us a few days since with a club of nine subscribers. We are pleased to know both that he is making good progress in his studies, and that his work is moving on well. We predict a career of growing usefulness for this studious and industrious young minister.

Rev. C. C. Griffin reports progress on the Shiloh (Miss.) charge. The people are remembering the parsonage with good things, and the outlook for a gracious year is most encouraging. Rev. D. E. Kelley has been engaged to conduct this year the camp meeting that is held annually within the bounds of this work. Brother Griffin favored us on the 4th inst. with a club of 6 subscribers.

Revival services are being conducted in Crowley, La., in which the pastor, Rev. C. D. Atkinson, is being assisted by Evangelist D. B. Strouse, of Salem, Va. Mr. Strouse has also been engaged to conduct a union meeting in Jennings, La.

From several sources we learn that the First Methodist Church of Columbus, Miss., is enjoying great prosperity under the pastorate of Rev. W. W. Woollard. The congregations are reported to be larger than they have been for several years.

Dr. F. R. Hill, Jr., now conducts the Sunday evening service at the Rayne Memorial Church of New Orleans at 5 o'clock, instead of 7:30 o'clock. The congregations have nearly doubled in size since the change was made. The Rayne Memorial people are looking forward with pleasant anticipation to the coming of Bishop Mouzon, who will begin a week's revival meeting there next Sunday morning.

Rev. H. W. Ledbetter, of West Monroe, La., is rejoicing over the prospect of having a new parsonage in the near future. The plans have been drawn by a competent architect, good material has been secured, and the work is already going forward, under the direction of capable workmen. The new house will stand on the old site, and will cost between $2000 and $2500. It is thought that it will be ready for occupancy by May 1.

Dr. J. M. Henry spent a part of last week in Alexandria, La., where he attended a meeting of the presiding elders of the Louisiana Conference, the meeting of the Louisiana Conference Board of Missions, and the State Anti-Saloon League Convention. He reports that Methodism is making fine headway in every district in the State, and that he was never associated with a more hopeful band of presiding elders than those now serving as "beloveds" in Louisiana.

Since the last issue of the Advocate, the following brethren, to whom acknowledgment has not been made elsewhere, have sent us two or more subscribers: Rev. W. B. Hogg, Fernwood, Miss., 6; Rev. W. M. Sullivan, Moss Point, Miss., 5; Rev. W. W. Hopper, Woodville, Miss., 6; Rev. O. W. Bradley, Winona, Miss., 3; Rev. V. C. Curtis, Kosciusko, Miss., 5; Rev. C. F. Staples, Ida, La., 5; Rev. S. L. Pope, Itta Bena, Miss., 5; Rev. T. L. Oakes, Poplar Creek, Miss., 10.

Mrs. C. L. Graham, of Coldwater, Miss., in renewing her subscription to the Advocate, which she says she could not very well do without, makes the following reference to her pastor and his work: "Brother W. H. Mounser is in high favor with his people. The Sunday school, prayer meeting, and Epworth League are all flourishing." Sister Graham is a daughter of the late Captain Boyd, of Coldwater, who was a Methodist of the best type and a citizen without reproach.

Through the courtesy of the Publishers, Smith & Lamar, Nashville, Tenn., we have before us a copy of the pamphlet, "The Things Methodists Believe," by T. H. Lipscomb, B.D. These excellent discussions first appeared in the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and it affords us genuine pleasure to bear testimony to their value. Our preachers would do well to circulate this pamphlet extensively among their people. It will tend to strengthen and establish them in the faith, a work that urgently needs to be done in this day.

We take off our hat to Rev. W. L. Duren, our brilliant pastor at Tupelo, Miss., for a list of 27 subscriptions and a check to correspond, with which he recently favored us. Brother Duren is in his fourth year in his present charge, which many consider the most desirable in the North Mississippi Conference, and his work there has been accorded universal commendation. Our beloved Bishop Galloway was wont to say: "Duren never fails to make good." He is a growing man, of whom we may expect much in the coming years.

Rev. G. W. Eicheberger, Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of Mississippi, writes as follows: "Ex-Governor R. B. Glenn, of North Carolina, has been engaged by our prohibition leaders to speak in Mississippi for three weeks, beginning Sunday, March 30. He will give us four Sundays and five other nights each week; and there is a possibility that we may be able to hold him a few days longer than the time announced. His lecture on 'The Great National Issue' is said by many to be the greatest temperance utterance since the days of John B. Gough."

Rev. R. P. Neblett, the pastor, gives us the following items from Houston, Miss.: "Brother Bell has recently held our second quarterly conference. Everything is moving on splendidly. Mr. George Van Horn, one of our best men (who is 73 years old) has been confined to his room for about two months, but I am pleased to state that he is now some better. Also one of our officials, Brother H. C. Brevard, is quite sick; I ask that prayer be made for the recovery of these substantial men. Rev. J. A. Bowen is to be with us in a meeting after the third Sunday in this month."

Rev. T. D. Lipscomb, of Donaldsonville, La., writes as follows: "I believe that the work here is progressing. The Woman's Missionary Society is planning to make some improvements on the parsonage. This Society has received several new members this year, and gives promise of increasing usefulness. The Woman's Society at Vacherie has also taken on new life."

We are pleased to be informed that our church at Lafayette, La., where Rev. H. N. Harrison is the faithful pastor, is prospering greatly. The congregations are fine and there is much spiritual interest. A Sunday school and Epworth League annex will be built at once. The Woman's Missionary Society has lately doubled in membership, and at a recent meeting $25 in dues was collected.

The Committee appointed by Bishop Morrison to inquire into the rumors concerning Dr. W. E. Thompson's alleged connection with the failure of the Collierville (Tenn.) bank, which consisted of Dr. R. H. Mahon, Rev. Cleanth Brooks, and Rev. J. W. Blackard, reported no trial necessary. The accusations against Dr. Thompson, it will be remembered, were made by Mr. L. T. Ward, the defaulting cashier of the bank, who has been sentenced to the penitentiary for a term of three years.

From Homewood, Miss., Rev. B. F. Ormond writes: "The people of this excellent country charge have received us with open homes - and hearts. Our first quarterly conference was held on February 23. Dr. Featherston was on hand, and preached an excellent sermon and handled well the business of the occasion. The outlook for the year is bright, though we are in the boll-weevil district." Brother Ormond has our thanks for a club of subscribers sent in on March 5.

Rev. M. M. Black, who is serving our Kingston Church, at Laurel, Miss., gives the following interesting account of the progress of his work: "Things are moving on encouragingly. I am having fine congregations every Sunday (a marked improvement in the attendance upon public worship has been noticeable for the past four or five months). Fourteen members have been received this year. We have two splendid Epworth Leagues in operation. I am serving a generous-hearted and appreciative people, to whom we are grateful for many acts of kindness."

Rev. H. B. Vandenburg is much pleased with the Glenmora (La.) charge. He has been delightfully received, and has been generously "pounded" by the ladies of Glenmora and Long Leaf. Rev. H. W. May, the presiding elder of the Alexandria District, was with him on March 1 and 2, preaching with great acceptability, and rendering excellent service in other ways. Brother Vandenburg says: "We have two large saw mills near us on the Iron Mountain Railroad, and another, which will be larger still, is in process of construction. The door of opportunity is open wide in this section, and our presiding elder is preparing to occupy the territory."

Rev. W. W. Perry, of Haynesville, La., has sent us 8 additional subscriptions, making 21 that he has forwarded since Conference. Nor is this all - listen to what he says: "I feel that the good work is just begun." We assure Brother Perry of our hearty appreciation of the valuable service which he is rendering the Conference organ, and we pray that it may prove a weekly blessing to every home into which he has been instrumental in sending it. If we had such a patronage from every charge in our territory, it would enable us greatly to improve the Advocate, and we do not doubt that Methodism would boom in Louisiana and Mississippi as never before.

Rev. C. A. Northington thus reports from the Corinth Circuit, where he is accomplishing much for the Master: "Up to the present, this has been in many respects a pleasant year. We have our new church painted, and have spent some $20 on the parsonage. The people did not forget the pastor's family Christmas. We had many good things to eat, turkey included. The prospects for a revival throughout the charge are good. Our people who read the Advocate compliment it very highly, and, of course, they have sent in their renewals." Brother Northington's letter brought us 22 subscriptions, two of which were new. May the Lord abundantly bless him and his worthy flock.

Rev. A. H. Williams, of Black Hawk, Miss., has favored us with a list of 9 subscriptions from that historic charge. The names upon it look quite familiar to the Editor, who was reared in that neighborhood, and who still calls it home. Never shall we cease to love and keep in remembrance these friends whom we have known from boyhood. We have been much grieved lately to see that the Grim Reaper has been at work among them, having claimed Mrs. W. K. Turner, a true and noble woman, and Dr. J. T. Buck, a worthy and highly respected citizen. We extend to the sorrowing loved ones our deepest sympathy. We have in hand brief memoirs of these deceased ones by the pastor, which will appear at an early date.

The subject of this sketch, JAS. W. COOK, was born May 3, 1851. He was a member of the Methodist Church at Bethlehem, Miss., for more than forty years, and was a consecrated Christian man. He left us for his home in heaven, Feb. 9, 1913, after a few hours' illness with congestion of the brain. He was twice married. His first marriage was to Miss Sallie Borden on Nov. 11, 1874. To them one son was born, John Edward Cook, who still lives near the old home. The mother died Feb. 1, 1877. Brother Cook was married again on Dec. 4, 1884, to Miss Rebecca J. Norsworthy, who still survives him. May the God of Love comfort and console his loved ones until they meet him where parting is no more.

J. G. JOHNSON, Pastor.

On Dec. 22, 1912, we laid to rest all that was mortal of Mr. ALLEN RANDLE in the old family burial ground. Truly, a good man has gone from among us. Mr. Randle was born May 11, 1848. He joined the M. E. Church, South, in his young manhood, and the Church had no member who was more faithful in attending upon its ordinances or more generous in supporting its institutions. Brother Randle was also a Mason, and was buried with Masonic honors. No worthier brother ever wore the emblem of innocence or the badge of a Mason. He was married in April, 1893, to Miss Moore, who passed to her heavenly reward on Nov. 23, 1899. They had only journeyed together in this world a short while, when she left him to go and await his coming to their home in the skies. Brother Randle spent the latter part of his life in the home of his brother, Mr. W. K. Randle, who was as faithful to him as a brother could be. We all miss him and weep at his going, but our loss is his eternal gain. We look forward to the time when we shall see him, with others, on that beautiful shore. May the family from which our honored brother has departed be an unbroken one in the Father's house on high! To Brother W. K. Randle, the only one left of twelve children, our hearts go out in tenderest sympathy. May our Heavenly Father sustain him with his own power!

J. H. INGRAM.

FRANCIS A. DANIELS.

It has pleased Almighty God to take from our midst that gentle and princely man, Francis A. Daniels, who was one of the oldest and most devoted members of our church. He was interested in the cause of Christianity, and was sensible of his own obligation to uphold the principles of Methodism by thought, word, and action. He was always ready to give good advice to the youth of our church. He was a devoted husband, a lenient father, and a man whose Christian life had been an example for those whom God placed under his care, who are today such followers of his example as to be a credit and honor to him. He was a man whose private life, always gentle and kind, was of the highest order and endeared him to all who knew him. Faithful at all times in the discharge of his duty, he has stood as an example to others, one whose influence was for the best. His constant attendance upon the services of his church and his earnest prayers have impressed all who have heard him with his sincerity, and his devotion remains as a sweet memory to the entire congregation. The Algiers Church has suffered the loss of an energetic member, and after all the years of his service, his loss will be keenly felt. We trust that our remembrance of God's goodness in giving him a long and useful life, which was prolonged to the allotted time of man, will, in a measure, assuage the grief that fills our hearts; therefore, be it

Resolved by the Algiers Church, That a copy of the above expression of grief be forwarded to the family of the deceased, and that a copy be forwarded to both the New Orleans Christian Advocate and the Algiers Herald.

A BRIEF TRIBUTE.

The death of Sister J. A. Lewis, of Houston, Miss., which sad event occurred recently, removed from the world one of the purest and best women I have ever known. Sister Lewis was the queen of one of the sweetest homes I have ever been in. She was the sister of four preachers, the mother of two preachers and a preacher's wife. Her surviving children are, Rev. T. W. Lewis, of Memphis, Tenn.; Rev. E. S. Lewis, of West Point, Miss.; Mrs. F. A. Whitson, of Jackson, Miss.; Dixie Lewis, of Chattanooga, Tenn., and Willard Lewis, of Oklahoma. It was my privilege to be the pastor of this godly woman for four years. She was, indeed, a mother to me, and at all times it was a real pleasure to be in her home. No pastor ever had a more kindly helper in his work, or a truer friend, or a more thoughtful adviser. My visits to that home are still fresh in my memory and will ever be. Her home was a place of prayer, and a home of love and sympathy. The world is sadder since she left; but heaven is more real and richer. One of the dearest friends I ever had is gone, but we know where she is, and will see her again. To all the members of her family, and to Brother Lewis, in particular, earth will never be the same, but heaven will always be nearer. God bless Brother Lewis and all the members of her family. I sorrow with you, but we will sorrow no more in that land where she has gone.

J. W. RAPER.

Mrs. Elizabeth Moss Walker.

Whereas, In the providence of God, Grandmother Walker has been called from the walks of life, to the realities of eternity, and whereas, during her long life of nearly ninety-one years she revered and honored God, and, whereas, by faith she became in early life a professed Christian, giving her influence, time and talent to the upbuilding of the cause of her Savior, whom she loved, laboring faithfully in all the departments of the Church and Christian life, and, whereas, in the last years of her life she has waited patiently for her release, by Him who promised that He would prepare a place for her and return and receive her unto Himself, therefore, be it resolved by the Woman's Missionary Society of the First Methodist Church of Gulfport, Miss.:

First. That while we have lost a useful member we rejoice in the fact that our loss is her gain; and while we are poorer in spiritual council and encouragement, we are richer in that steadfast, simple, child-like faith which preserved her blameless unto the coming of her Lord.

Second. That we express to the family our sympathy in the separation from one who to them was so devoted, and who at their hands received gentle kindness, and we rejoice with them in the consciousness of the fact, that her going was but the garnering of a ripened sheaf for the sky.

Third. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our minutes, one sent to the family, and one sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Tidings From the Field

Smithville Charge (North Miss.).

Dear Dr. Meek: On Feb. 22 and 23 we had with us our new presiding elder, Rev. J. W. Bell. He preached two soul-stirring sermons at Antioch. At 11 a.m. on Saturday his subject was "The Church," and on Sunday at 11 a.m. his theme was, "What the Cross Means to Us." Both the pastor and people on the Smithville Circuit esteem their new presiding elder very highly. Our efficient pastor, Rev. A. S. Brisco, has entered heartily upon his work and preaches to the delight of his congregations, visits his people, and looks after every interest of the Church. We are predicting for him a good year. We are in need of and are praying for a revival in this charge. Our Sunday school is growing in interest. Pray for us. Success to the Advocate, for its weekly visits are a benediction to my home.—Miss Martha Rye.

Topisaw Circuit, Miss. Conf.

Dear Advocate: On the 1st and 2nd of March our first quarterly meeting was held at Holmesville, with our highly esteemed presiding elder, Rev. Robt. Selby, presiding. He is an excellent presiding officer. He caused every official to feel "at home" during the whole of the quarterly meeting service and some live questions were discussed freely. Deep interest and enthusiasm were manifested by all present, and the prevalent opinion after adjournment was that this quarterly meeting was an unusually good one, viewed from any standpoint. There were nineteen officials present, beside our efficient church lay leader, and it was decided to have a meeting of all the officials of the charge on Saturday, March 22, to further the interests of the work. Let those who read these lines pray earnestly for the success of this proposed meeting. Our presiding elder preached a very helpful sermon on Saturday on "Righteousness," his text being Matt. 5:6; and on Sunday he preached an interesting sermon on "The Call to Preach and the Duties Incident to the Ministry." This sermon, connected with other incidents of the two days' services, caused this preacher (if I may be pardoned for calling myself a preacher) to see his inefficiency as never before, and to feel his utter dependence upon God if he ever succeeds as a soul-winner. At the same time, there came a divine conviction that God would help me, if I would help myself, which resulted in a glorious inspiration to press on, fight the good fight, and finally gain the victory. Amen. On the morning of the 2nd, we received the sad news that Brother Rankin Elzey, a member of the Holmesville church, had passed away. Brother Selby, assisted by the pastor, conducted the funeral the same afternoon, after which he was laid away in the presence of a multitude of sorrowing relatives and friends. We hope to be able to furnish a fitting obituary for your columns later, for he was a father in Israel indeed.—J. A. WELLS, P. C.

A NOTE FROM BROTHER LEWIS.

Dear Brother Meek: Mrs. Lewis and I have been both quite sick since Conference, but we are about well again. Quite a number of our friends and brethren came to see us while we were confined to our room and bed. Among the preachers who were kind enough to visit and pray with and for us was our presiding elder, Rev. Paul D Hardin.

By the way, Brother Hardin has made a fine impression on our people. He is a busy man. He looks after every interest of the Church within the bounds of his district.

Mrs. Lewis and I were invited out to the Old Ladies' Home in West Jackson a few days ago, where we held a sweet service. I preached to the good sisters for the first time since Conference. We have visited the home quite often during the last three years. Most of the good women are in good health and spirits. One sister, a Mrs. Jones, is quite sick. She is 87 years of age. She is well cared for in the home.

Brother R. Bradley, who was superannuated at our last Conference, is living here in Jackson. He is a grand old man, and is quite active for one of his age. He has been a member of our Conference forty-three years. He has two sons who are doing excellent work in the North Mississippi Conference. Fraternally,

H. P. LEWIS.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

(Adopted by the Epworth League of the Sixth Street M. E. Church, South, of Laurel, Miss.)

Whereas, it has pleased our Heavenly Father to call to the higher life our beloved co-worker, Miss Annie Davis, therefore be it resolved:

1. That in her death our Epworth League and Sunday school have lost one of their most worthy and devoted members—she was loyal and faithful to every good work her hands found to do; her interest in the League work seemed supreme, and being gentle and patient under great affliction and pain, she has left a sweet and holy impression on our hearts which time can never efface.

2. That we extend to the bereaved family our deepest sympathy in this sore trial, and commend them to the One who alone can heal their broken hearts.

3. That these resolutions be spread on the minutes, published in the local papers and sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate and the Epworth Era.

Signed: Mrs. Eula Bell, Miss Eva Holmes, Miss Mamie Walker, Committee.

ANIMALS HATE SOLITUDE.

In all the animal world there is no voluntary recluse or hermit. No animal, whether wild or domestic, ever likes to be alone for very long at a time. Even the birds, of all kinds and species, hate solitude. Parrots, particularly, and all gregarious birds of the tropics, begin to moan and pine away if kept in solitary captivity.—From Ellen Velvin's "Curious Friendships Among Animals" in March St. Nicholas.

Our dead are with the undying Love, and moving on with him. Our business is to mourn no more, but to love them as if we saw them, and to live for them and with them in spirit, and to wait in work for the hour when they will welcome us into a reunited life. This is part of our faith.—Stopford Brooks.

Every soul on its way to Eternity has its appointed times and seasons for good, which, if they be allowed to pass away, shall never return again.—Kebble.

ASSISTANCE URGENTLY NEEDED.

Ville Platte, La., the county seat of Evangeline Parish, a growing town of about 1500 inhabitants, is very much in need of a church building. We have a high school here with thirteen teachers, and an enrollment of over 400 pupils. Just think of that, and no other Protestant organization in the town but our own, and only one Methodist church in the whole parish!

Brethren, now is the time for us to take hold. Our lot here is beautifully located, and we are praying and planning for a church building, which we hope may be erected soon. Our members are few in number, but are very much interested in the matter. The Catholics are contributing liberally, and are giving us all the assistance and encouragement possible. We have a nice little sum subscribed, but not a sufficient amount to build, and we appeal to the Methodists of Louisiana to assist us in this noble work.

Brethren, we are in need here, and that right now, while all are interested. We shall greatly appreciate anything that you can do for us. Send your contribution to L. Hoffpauir, Gold Dust, La.

L. HOFFPAUIR, P. C.

THE ELECT.

"Elect, according to the foreknowledge of God the Father, through sanctification of the Spirit unto obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ"—(1st Peter 1:2). When any eligible person is solicited to be a candidate for any office, he must yield to the request of his friends to be a candidate for such office, and then be elected through due process of law. This is the way that one attains to the honor and emoluments of an elective office.

God in his wisdom and mercy, foreordained before the foundation of the world that every soul that should attain to his heavenly Kingdom must have a desire to flee the wrath to come and to be saved from his sins and experience the sanctifying and purifying influence of his Holy Spirit. Hence, the elect are those who are willing to give up every thing in order that they may enjoy the rights and privileges of the heavenly Kingdom, being desirous to be conformed to the image of his dear Son, and having their hearts purified by the faith that is in him. "And there shall in no wise enter into it anything that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination, or maketh a lie; but they which are written in the Lamb's book of life." (Rev. 21:2).

RESOLUTIONS

(In appreciation of Mrs. M. S. GOLDEN, a member of the Woman's Missionary Society, at Taylorsville, Miss.)

Whereas It has pleased Almighty God in his infinite love and wisdom to take from our midst a loving wife, an affectionate mother and our friend, and since it brings sadness to our hearts to know that she will be with us no more, we feel that her pure and noble life, brighter in the sadness of her departure, richly merits the following resolutions:

1. That we tender our heartfelt sympathy to the bereft home circle, praying that the stricken husband and children may accept this grief and find comfort in the Heavenly Father's abiding love; and that the life that this precious sister lived may be a spiritualizing influence as the years come and go, until her loved ones here shall awake in His likeness.

2. That in her death we, as a Missionary Society, have sustained a great loss, in that she was a ready and willing helper, and a sympathetic friend.

3. That our Church has lost one of its most faithful members, one who never wavered in her course, but who always pressed onward and upward. We feel sure that the memory of her Christian life will linger long with us.

4. That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of our Society, published in the Christian Advocate and Taylorsville Signal, and that copies be sent to the bereaved family.

Most Certainly—Go To Your Doctor

And why not? Yet some people act as if a medicine could take the place of a doctor! The best medicine in the world cannot do this. Have a family doctor, consult him frequently. If we did not believe doctors endorsed Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for coughs and colds, we would not offer it to you.

Buy an Engine with Reserve Power

FARM power needs are seldom the same for any two days together. You never can tell when extra work is going to come up, or extra power will be needed. For this reason it is best to buy an engine a little larger than you ordinarily need. The engine with ten to twenty per cent of reserve power will often save enough to pay for itself just by its capacity for carrying you through emergencies.

I H C Oil and Gas Engines

are large for their rated capacity. They are designed to run at the lowest possible speed to develop their power because that increases the durability of the engine. A speed changing mechanism enables you to vary the speed at will. Any I H C engine will develop from ten to twenty per cent more than its rated horse power. You can use it to run your feed grinder, pump, grindstone, repair shop tools, cream separator or any farm machine to which power can be applied.

I H C engines are made in all approved styles, vertical, horizontal, stationary, portable, skidded, air cooled and water cooled, and in 1 to 50-horse power sizes. They operate on gas, gasoline, kerosene, naphtha, distillate or alcohol. I H C tractors are built in sizes from 12 to 60-horse power. See the I H C local dealer. Utterly Wretched Nervous Prostration Long Endured Before Remedy was Found.

Miss Minerva Reminger, Upper Bern, Pa., writes: "For several years I had nervous prostration, and was utterly wretched. I lived on bread and beef tea because my stomach would not retain anything else. I took many remedies, but obtained no relief until I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, when I began to gain at once. Am now cured." Pure, rich blood makes good, strong nerves, and this is why Hood's Sarsaparilla, which purifies and enriches the blood, cures so many nervous diseases. This Will Stop Your Cough in a Hurry

Save $2 by Making This Cough Syrup at Home.

This recipe makes a pint of better cough syrup than you could buy ready made for $2.50. A few doses usually conquer the most obstinate cough—stops even whooping cough quickly. Simple as it is, no better remedy can be had at any price.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with 1/2 pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle; then add the Sugar Syrup. It has a pleasant taste and lasts a family a long time. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

You can feel this take hold of a cough in a way that means business. Has a good tonic effect, braces up the appetite, and is slightly laxative, too, which is helpful. A handy remedy for hoarseness, croup, bronchitis, asthma and all throat and lung troubles.

The effect of pine on the membranes is well known. Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norwegian white pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and all the natural healing pine elements. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

This Pinex and Sugar Syrup recipe has attained great popularity throughout the United States and Canada. It has often been imitated, though never successfully.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Mission Study Class at Rayne Memorial Church, New Orleans.

Our Louisiana Press Superintendent says the women in her State simply won't tell her their secrets; so it is impossible for her to report work done by them. We just "happened" to learn of a very delightful meeting held at Rayne Memorial parsonage quite recently; and we cannot refrain from "telling it out," for there are some helpful as well as clever suggestions in it. This meeting was the finale of the study of "Mormonism," a book recommended by the Home Department, and taken up by a large number of societies. The first chapter was impressed upon the audience by means of a United States map, upon which was pinned pieces of paper extending from Vermont to Utah, showing the birthplace and growth of Mormonism down to the present day. The chapter on "Organization and Methods" was given in rhyme, and is so original and clever that we repeat it here, knowing that it will be enjoyed by all who have studied this most interesting of books:

As we study this religion, so vile,
One of the first thoughts to consider
Worth while
Is how this sect so strong came to be;
For the reasons, we'll search chapter three.

Organization and method then is my theme;
Their importance 'tis seen is very supreme,
The revelations to Prophet Joseph Smith are law;
But could God reveal himself to this man of flaw?

Of the priesthood there are two great divisions;
One for spiritual, the other temporal decisions.
Their system is absolutely so complete,
It has accomplished the wonderful feat

Of every member having some office to fulfill,
And they are ever alert Mormonism to instill.
Now, if every church member of to-day
Had some active part to play,
Would not the millenium be quite near,
And would we have Mormonism to fear?

Missionaries are sent far and wide,
Trying always in Gentile homes to abide.
As to the methods they employ
It is ever something to decoy.

They allure the people of simple mind
To believe this religion the only kind,
The pleasures of this world to attain
With nothing to lose and all to gain.

If Mormons are ever true to their tithes,
No account is taken, then, of their lives;
But in heaven, as God's they shall reign,
No matter if others by them are slain.

The Mormons do not settle here and there,
But the church buys a promising tract somewhere,
And each must buy in the stated tract,
Which admits no Gentile. It is a fact.

Settling in large numbers in any State,
'Tis seen in politics, their power is great.

'Tis true, the man of Mormon selection
Is ever sure of his election.
We are told at this very hour
Six of the States are in Mormon power.

They are not the farmers they are lauded to be;
If you leave the well-beaten paths,
You'll see
The farms and orchards to weeds have grown,
And nowhere is thrift and energy shown.

As to the business concerns of the day
The same subtle influence is ever at play.

Woe to the man who with Mormons compete,
For his labors are sure to meet with defeat.

The Mormons from every viewpoint,
'tis seen,
A menace to our fair land have been;
How to better our country's condition
Is left to the work of our "Home Mission."

There were other interesting features, but space does not permit us to dwell upon them. A most charming social hour closed the meeting.

Mississippi Conference Notes.

An especially good number of "The Monthly Bulletin," published by the united societies of the North Mississippi Conference, of which Mrs. A. C. Yeager is Press Superintendent, has just reached us. The little sheet is brim full of good suggestions, and ought to prove a help to those societies which it serves, and be a bond of mutual interest for them.

Splendid reports come to the Press Superintendent from the Natchez Young People's Society, of which Miss Margaret L. Guice is Press Superintendent. It would be disappointing to those who have known Miss Guice's mother and her long and efficient service in the missionary work in this Conference, if the daughter failed to live up to the beautiful example which has been set for her. We should like to hear regularly from all the Y. P. Societies.

We are in receipt of a copy of the Shubuta Year Book, which is, indeed, an index to the splendid work being done by the auxiliary there. They are to study "China's New Day" and "Mormonism, the Islam of America," this year. A detailed account of the first meeting, which was live, wide-awake, and interesting from start to finish, was also received; but lack of space prevents our publishing it in full. Mrs. Annie Hand and Mrs. B. F. Jones are the consecrated President and Press Superintendent of the Shubuta Society.

The Council Hymn.

The hymn to be known as the Council Hymn this year is "Faith of Our Fathers, living still" (No. 415 of the Hymnal.) Other hymns which the members of the Council are especially requested to learn are Nos. 407, 408 and 646.

Good News.

The Missionary Bulletin suggests that every auxiliary open its next meeting with "Praise God from whom all blessings flow." It should, indeed,

Are you a woman, suffering from some of the troubles to which a woman is peculiarly liable? If so, why not try Cardui, the woman's tonic? You can rely on Cardui. It is purely vegetable, perfectly harmless, and acts gently but surely, without bad after-effects. 'Twill help you. Ask your druggist.

Everybody Pleased

WITH THE

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE PIANO CLUB

Music Teachers, Farmers, Preachers, Lawyers, Doctors, Merchants, Mechanics, Bankers, Manufacturers, Professors, Clerks, Stenographers---members of every conceivable occupation express their appreciation and unqualified approval in the strongest possible terms.

There has not yet occurred a single discordant note in the great chorus of praise of the Club and its superb instruments.

Why? Read the answer in the following letters, selected at random from the Club's correspondence.

From a Music Teacher.

"I have had my Ludden & Bates piano since last September, and would not part with it for anything like the amount I paid for it, unless I could get another one exactly like it."

From a Minister.

"The piano arrived in good time and in first class condition and we find that it measures up in every particular to what you claimed for it. We are delighted with it and take pride in showing it. The first comment after a test is, 'Oh, hasn't it a sweet tone,' and the next is, 'What did it cost?' and then, 'Where did you get it?'"

"The wonder is how a piano of its appearance and tone can be sold on the terms on which you offer it. The Club plan is a blessing to the poor man who must buy and would not otherwise be able."

On receipt of our letter thanking him for his endorsement this minister replied as follows: "You are certainly welcome to my testimonial, but if it had not been true you could not have pumped it out of me with a high-power engine. All that I say is true and more. We would not think of trading it off or back, no, not for four hundred dollars, except to make the same trade again."

From a Merchant.

"After carefully investigating the catalogues of other music houses I am of the opinion that the Club plan has given us a much better piano than I could have bought elsewhere for the same money. We are very much pleased with the self-player piano."

From another Minister.

"We are delighted with our piano in every way. The case is beautiful and the tone and action superior to many of far greater cost. I want to thank you also for the courtesy and fairness shown. It is a delight to deal with a firm with such a sense of fairness."

From an Experienced Musician.

"In 1877 I bought my first Ludden & Bates piano, although it has had a hard road these thirty-five years, it is still a good old piano, has never been tuned but three times. I couldn't begin to enumerate the profit and pleasure it has given me. My second Ludden & Bates piano promises to be what the first claim for it. I have used it one month and must say it is remarkable how so good an instrument can be purchased at such a low price. I am now planning to buy a Ludden & Bates player-piano for my little grandson; the second purchase was for my little granddaughter. I do not derogate any other make of pianos, but I do speak in the highest praise of the Ludden & Bates and the Club Managers."

From a Farmer and His Wife.

"We have had the Ludden & Bates piano almost a year and would not take twice the amount of money that we paid for it. If we were to want to buy a dozen more we would buy a Ludden & Bates piano every time."

From a Physician.

"The Ludden & Bates Cabinet Grand Upright piano which I bought through the Club more than six months ago has been a source of great pleasure to my whole family. I am well pleased with the Club plan and think that the tone and workmanship of this piano cannot be surpassed. I was in touch with several piano concerns before buying and decided to join the Club. I shall never regret it. I congratulate you upon being able to sell so fine an instrument on such reasonable terms."

From a Salesman's Wife.

"The piano is a treasure. Everyone remarks on its sweetness of tone and it has been so much pleasure to our family. The Club places the piano in so many homes that otherwise would have to wait an indefinite time to buy. Please accept our sincere thanks for your courteous treatment."

From a Banker.

"The piano received O. K. and am delighted with it."

From a Mechanic.

"Enclosed you will find Post Office Money Order for $10 part payment on piano. The more we play our piano and call our friends in to see it, and hear them play it the better we like it. We are more than delighted with it."

From a Teacher.

"I have been using the Ludden & Bates piano almost a year and I am more than pleased with it. Its tone is the sweetest. It has not yet needed tuning and has been used daily for ten months. I certainly appreciate the Club's plan of selling."

From a Business Man.

"I had quite a job when I announced myself in the market for a piano, but I walked over all of the inducements and joined the Club. I know that I could not have been suited better for the Club is all and more than you claim for it."

From a School Trustee.

"The piano obtained through the Club is being used in the Musical Department of the School here and all are highly pleased with it. We feel that we saved from $75 to $125 by purchasing through the Club."

From a Doctor's Wife.

"The piano reached me safely last Monday and I am highly pleased with it. The case is beautiful and the tone so mellow and sweet. Everyone who has seen it likes it."

From a Farmer's Wife.

"I am perfectly delighted with my piano. I think the Club plan a capital idea."

From a School Teacher.

"I have received the piano and am well pleased with it. Everyone that sees it says it is a beauty. The Club plan is fine."

From a Little Girl.

"I have had my piano nearly a year and I have learned to play. It has a very sweet tone and is admired by all. I think every girl who wants a piano can join the Club and make the payments and never miss it. I appreciate what you have done for me and hope that 1913 will be a prosperous year for you."

From a College Professor.

"It is a pleasure for me to state that the beautiful Ludden & Bates Upright piano has, after a thorough test, proved more than satisfactory. The beauty both in design and finish can only be surpassed by its pure, rich tone. It is a piano for the best and most discriminating musicians."

From a Church Official.

"I will say that the Church is pleased with the Club plan. The piano is first-class in material, workmanship and construction—fine tone, clear, soft and musical. It is an extra fine instrument for the price. The plan of payment is good, sound and satisfactory."

From a Postmaster.

"The piano arrived in perfect condition and is a beautiful instrument. The tone is full and sweet. It is satisfactory in every particular. I heartily recommend the Club's method of buying a piano."

From a Stenographer.

"I have received my piano and I am certainly pleased with it in every respect."

Everybody Pleased.

If space permitted we could publish more than twenty times this number of commendatory letters from Club members. Where everybody is pleased there must be some unusual cause. The Club's Catalogue explains the reason.

The Club provides five beautiful styles to select from, including a Parlor Grand, three Cabinet Grand Uprights, and a Self-player piano.

Editorial

It is to be feared that in some cases optimists are merely persons who do not care much what happens.

Many good things have been said in advocacy of the circulation of church periodicals, but we have seen nothing better than the following, which is credited to Pope Pius: "A religious paper is a perpetual mission."

The great need of the Christian world to-day is not more voluble talkers to tell others how to do things, but more real workers who, without saying much, teach by a shining example. In other words, we need less religious "babbling," but more religious "doing."

Two church papers in the Far West—The Pacific Christian and the Pacific Presbyterian, both issued at San Francisco—have suspended publication for the lack of funds within the last fifteen months. Our paper, the Pacific Methodist Advocate, though it has a constituency only about one-fourth as large as was that of either of the defunct journals, reports a deficit of only $500 for the three years of the present quadrennium, and there is hope of wiping that out by the time the next General Conference meets. This does not indicate that the suffix, "South," to the name of our Church is such a tremendous handicap as some of the brethren out that way fancy it to be.

The Northwestern Christian Advocate states that within the past two years Mrs. E. H. Harri-man has received 6,000 letters asking for amounts of money aggregating $267,000,000, and that other American millionaires are similarly annoyed. And in this connection, our bright contemporary, propounds the pertinent question, "Are we a nation of beggars?" Undeniably the case against us is a pretty strong one, and we ought to be ashamed of it. We confess that we never read of a Methodist church appealing to Mr. Andrew Carnegie (whose attitude toward orthodox Christianity is none too friendly, to say the least of it) for assistance in procuring a pipe organ or for any similar cause, that we are not deeply humiliated. Churches, as well as individuals, should have some self-respect.

SOME EASTER REFLECTIONS.

Easter is a time for memory, but not for tears. It has to do with a tomb, but it is an empty one. It is related to death, but it shows us that great enemy vanquished and stripped of his spoils. It brings into view the weeping and despairing disciples, but their mourning is soon turned into joy and unwavering confidence takes the place of heart-breaking despondency. That was the grandest day in human history when Jesus arose from the dead and appeared again to his scattered followers, unharmed and unchanged by the cross and the grave. The nativity marked the beginning of his great mission on earth; in the crucifixion we see him dying to achieve the stupendous task that brought him from the sky; but in his resurrection we behold him as the victorious Christ, with every foe subjugated, his lordship over all established, his mediatorial work finished, and the time for his re-ascension to the Father near at hand.

But the resurrection of Jesus did not concern himself alone. So vitally is the human race related to him, that the destiny of all its millions was involved when his pierced body lay cold and lifeless in the new-made tomb. The splendid triumph that he won over the Grim Monster was in part won for us. Our future is inseparably linked with his: because he lives, we shall live also; because he arose from the dead, we also shall rise. He was the 'first fruits' of the countless multitudes who sleep beneath the sod; the mighty harvest from that sad planting which has reached around the globe will in God's good time follow.

At this Easter-tide, instinctively our thoughts turn to the precious loved ones who have gone from us. Though they no longer sit with us in the family circle and their familiar voices are heard no more, they seem scarcely less real to us than when they walked in physical form amongst us. The spots where their bodies repose are to us sacred, and to them we love to repair and meditate, to kindle anew the fires of affection and to incite afresh aspirations for the true and the good. But Easter comes with the sweet message that if those whom we so sorely miss fell asleep in Jesus, they may one day be ours again; that death and the grave shall be made to give back their victims; and that there will be a glorious reunion of all God's children beneath the cloudless skies of the Eternal City. Hence, the anniversary of our Lord's resurrection should be an occasion for tender and hallowed memories, for holy joys, and for blessed anticipations. Profoundly eloquent in its significance is the Easter vision of a vacant tomb and an opening sky.

In the risen Christ, as he is described by the Evangelists, we catch a glimpse of our own future possibilities. His body after his emergence from the tomb was a type, a pattern, of that which will ultimately be given to every Christian. In rapturous language Paul tries to impart to us some conception of this coming transformation. He says: "It (soma) is sown in corruption, it is raised in incorruption; it is sown in dishonor, it is raised in glory; it is sown in weakness, it is raised in power; it is sown a natural body, it is raised a spiritual body." And again he writes: "For our citizenship is in heaven; from whence we also look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his own glorious body"—like that body that shone with the radiance of the sun upon Hermon's height—like that body that shook off the chains of gravity upon the slopes of Olivet, and rose in silent majesty above the stars—like that body whose effulgence so overcame St. John upon the Isle of Patmos, that he fell prostrate upon the ground. Into something like that, will these feeble and decaying physical frames of ours be transformed by the mighty power of God.

And if such, in Christ, is to be the marvelous future of the physical man, who can tell what is to be the future of the human spirit, made in the 'image and likeness of God?' Jesus has promised that the faithful shall share with him his glory in eternity, but who can here form any true idea of that glory? St. John despaired of it, when he wrote: "Beloved, now we are the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when He shall appear, we shall be like Him; for we shall see Him as He is."

"Earth sings her parables of loss and gain
In boldest speech;
Yet heights sublime which spirits shall attain
She cannot reach.
Aerial whispers float o'er land and sea:
'It doth not yet appear what we shall be.'

"Her royal purples and her crowns of gold,
Her white attire,
The sceptred lilies which her summers hold,
With flames afire—
All fail to show the glory we shall see;
'It doth not yet appear what we shall be.'

"Triumphant guesses from the seer and sage
Through shadows dart;
And tender meanings on the poet's page
Console the heart:
Oh, songs prophetic! though so sweet are ye,
'It doth not yet appear what we shall be.'

THE CHURCH'S TRUE MISSION.

When Dr. Shailer Matthews was first elected to the presidency of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, we confess that we were not specially pleased, having for years been accustomed to regard him as rather latitudinarian in his views and teachings. But we have seen nothing anywhere that more fully commands our hearty endorsement than the following utterance which is credited to him:

"You cannot save the world by going into anti-tuberculosis societies. The needs of the age are not to be met by the mere practicing of good Samaritanism. Christ is a great Recreator, not a reformer. The Church is not the jack of all reforms. The Church has a function, and the first item in it is to convict the world of sin."

As we see it, one of the gravest perils that to-day menaces the Church is that insidious form of materialism which tends so to fasten her eyes upon the bodies of men and the things of time as to make her forget her duty to their deathless souls and lose sight of the larger issues of eternity. The glory of the Christian Church is that it is her prerogative to come to sin-cursed and suffering human spirits exercising an unearthly power to uplift and save them, such as no other agency beneath the stars can wield. It is a terrible apostasy for her to turn aside from her true mission to take up any other kind of work, however commendable it might be for other organizations. To be sure, she should lend a helping hand to all benevolent causes, but their promotion is not her first and chiefest task.

THE ELOQUENCE OF SILENCE.

By Rev. R. H. Harper.

There is a story of a country in the old world where a deadly plague was raging, known as the Red Death. The ruler of that ill-fated country and all his court retired to a sequestered castle, and there determined to lock themselves in from the plague, and laugh in the face of death. So they shut the gates, and welded the bolts from within. And they feasted and they revelled, while the kingdom without groaned in its anguish, and the whole land became one mighty sepulcher. One night, during a gay masquerade, a strange figure appeared among the revelers. It was clad from head to foot in the habiliments of the grave, the type of the pestilence walking in darkness without. And the prince cried to his courtiers to seize him and unmask him, that he might know who should hang from the battlements at sunrise. But all shrank back, and the prince himself pursued. At length the gaunt figure turned upon the pursuer, and in that instant the prince Prospero fell dead at his feet. It was the Masque of the Red Death. And then and there was acknowledged the presence of the plague. It had come like a thief in the night. And all died in the stately halls of their revel. The wine ran out on the richly inlaid floors. The instruments were hushed. And at last the light of the golden censers went out, and Death and Silence reigned supreme.

There is another story of a beautiful garden which the Lord planted eastward in Eden. But ere long the man and woman placed there sinned, and were cast out of the garden. And at the east end were placed cherubim, with flaming swords, to guard the entrance thereof, lest man should return.

In these two stories, "The Masque of the Red Death", and the story of a lost Paradise, are expressed the world-old tragedy of man. "The days of our years are threescore years and ten; and if by reason of strength they be fourscore years, yet is their strength labor and sorrow; for it is soon cut off, and we fly away." And men have looked into the open grave, and found in death a mournful emblem of sin. As death destroys the physical nature, sin blights the finest sensibilities of man's spiritual nature, and destroys the soul at last. For sin may have its perfect work. All good may finally be crushed out of the life. Like the oriental disease, which fastened upon the body with its white horror, the leprosy of sin consumes the spiritual nature. In the end the sinner is shut without the pearly gates of the city of God. Eternal death is everlasting separation from God.

So, from forgotten ages, man has faced a dual tragedy of death—death to the body, death to the soul. The eternal stars shine on; even the rays that may fall upon eyes tonight left some distant star long ago, when other men inhabited the earth. But "man goeth to his long home; and the mourners go about the streets." And there is that other dark tragedy of sin, of which death is the emblem. Man soon goes down into the grave, gone forever. And his brief stay on earth is cursed by sin. He believes he is akin to God, but oftentimes he finds himself ground into dust by the hosts of hell.

But in the great antiquity, the hopes of all the years began to take a definite form. Even Jacob, when he was dying, blessed his sons, and foretold the distant Shiloh: "The scepter shall not depart from Judah, nor a lawgiver from between his feet, until Shiloh come; and unto him shall the gathering of the people be." Later the prophets taught that, with Him, would come a golden era in the life of God's people. Happy the Hebrew mother who should bring forth the Savior of the world. And through generations fire flashed in dark eyes, and hearts beat loud at the hope of the coming Messiah.

Yet only a few years, and the Messiah hung cold and dead on a Roman cross, between two thieves. What a tragedy to those who had placed their hopes in him! The hope of the world was buried with him in the new tomb of Joseph of Aramathea.

Easter comes at a fitting time, with the new moon after the Vernal Equinox. Then a million flowers rise from the dark sepulcher of earth, and gladden the earth with the returning springtime. Perhaps the sun never rose in greater splendor than on that first Easter morn. The lilies our Savior loved never bloomed in greater purity; the sparrows he loved never sang more sweetly; all nature was in transcendent mood and beauty. But amid all the beauty, there was Mary, standing without at the sepulcher, weeping. But hark! weeping Mary, to the voice which comes from the silence of a deserted tomb. And Paul's reasoning is good, if Christ is risen, we shall rise. Here is the answer, then, to the ageless quest of men for life—an empty tomb. From the ashes of affliction, poor old Job cried, "If a man die shall he live again?" And at last the deserted sepulcher of the Aramathean replies. And, in the eloquent language of one recently fallen on the high places of Israel, "The tomb of man's lost hope has become the birth chamber of his immortality."

It is said that a German countess, who believed the legend written over the cemeteries in France during the terrible days of the Revolution—"Death is an eternal sleep"—ordered that, after her own death, her tomb be most firmly sealed, and that a request be carved deep in its heavy marble, that it be not opened throughout all the ages of eternity. And so it was done after the vain woman was dead. Her tomb was thought to be secure against the ravages of time. It was made of heavy marble, and fastened with great iron bands. But a small seed was left in the earth inside the tomb. And in nature's mysterious way, it sprang up toward the light. Ere long it pushed its way through the small crevice of a joint, and cracked asunder the marble walls of a tomb that was never to be opened throughout all the ages of eternity! If the life God has placed in a seed, in size like a grain of sand, be so potent as that, what must we think of the soul, the vain Countess thought would be eternally imprisoned there? Christ is risen—we shall rise.

But this is not all the message Easter brings to us. The resurrection means vastly more than the assurance of eternal existence. If this assurance were all, eternal life would be a greater tragedy than eternal death. In his extensive travels, Gulliver saw some wrinkled old immortals, fighting on the ground for a penny, the most miserable men in the world. But the resurrection of Christ means infinitely more than life to the body—it means also resurrection from death in sin.

An old Russian wrote a story of a youth of noble blood who loved a beautiful servant girl. Between them was a great social gulf fixed. But love can bridge any chasm, as divine love once bridged all the space that lies between heaven and earth. He was young and pure then, and would not have dipped so much as his little finger tip in her heart's blood. But afterward, in the army, he fell in with the wild life of his kind and became a shameless sinner. At last he returned to the old home, and added another to his crimes—betrayed the love of his youth. More years passed. He sat as juror in a justice court. All at once he recognized the broken woman before him. It was Maslova. Then he knew that he had brought her there, and that he was the guiltier of the two. And it may be that ten thousand ministers of conscience hurried him to a higher bar; ten thousand accusing voices whispered in his heart, "Thou art the man!" For it was the turning point of a terrible life. And Tolstoy called the book "Resurrection."

To make a black heart white is a miracle. To make a sinful life right is resurrection. There was a drunkard and a vagabond. But he was saved from a life of sin, and established a mission for the fallen in a great metropolis. There was another, an Indian fighter, a wild, profane, dangerous man of the plains. But afterward, a redeemed man, he preached the Gospel for many years in Louisiana. That was resurrection that made "The Scarlet Letter" shine at last on a field of saffron, no longer as the sign of shame, but of honor and love. Between yonder lecherous sinner and the Christian gentleman he may become, there is the separation that lies between heaven and hell. So with thousands of men. They were bound in a tomb, body and soul, but the angels of Christ call them to life. Thus Paul wrote, "You hath he quickened who were dead in trespasses and sins."

And the quickening of the sinful soul is as great a miracle as the resurrection of a dead body. Only the power of God can cleanse a human heart. There is as much hope for a dead body to rise in a Godless universe as for a stainless soul to live in a Christless world. There are many stately temples in India, on the walls of which are some of the most wonderful carvings in the world, the work of a lifetime. But they are only ponderous monuments to human error and despair. Many Mohammedans bow every day with the face toward Mecca, but they dream, as a reward of that faith, of a sensual paradise that would be a disgrace even to earth. The Pharisees were likened unto whitened sepulchers. Only the power of God can cleanse the human heart. And this is the true joy of Easter—that it means more than the mere resurrection of the body; that here on earth, there is a resurrection from sin. Christ can quicken every man, though he be dead in trespasses and sins. And what would the resurrection of the body be worth if it were doomed to be the tabernacle of a guilty soul throughout all the ages of eternity?

What a thrilling spectacle of prophecy when the long reverberating sound of the last trump wakes the silence of multi-million tombs! The granite walls of many a splendid mausoleum are rent asunder, and a glorified being comes forth, while the meek and lowly of earth stand beside their empty graves. The quiver of life runs along the shriveled form of a mummy that has lain several thousand ages in an Egyptian pyramid, and the gloomy catacombs echo all at once with the swelling sounds of life. The lonely soldier rises from his forgotten grave in some mountain fastness, or beside some rushing stream, and in many a valley of dry bones the multitude of the slain stir at the breath of the four winds, and come together bone to his bone, and they live, and stand upon their feet, an exceeding great army. And from among the red coral, and the drifting seaweed many fathoms deep, and from the islands of the sea, and from where the Esquimaux lived in his hut of ice, they come trooping before the great white throne; and death, the last enemy, is destroyed. And there is no more curse, neither sorrow, nor crying, for God wipes away all tears from the eyes.

But behold a still more thrilling spectacle! Somewhere Satan is bound in a great pit. And the blest, redeemed by the blood of the Lamb, sing the praises of the Savior, led by the four and twenty elders, "casting down their golden crowns around the glassy sea."

This, then, is the glory of Easter, that there is the hope of a resurrection in every life, because we have a living Christ. As a rule, sound only is eloquent. But sometimes the sacred spots, around which cling a thousand memories of the past, speak much to men by their silence. So the angels went away, perhaps, after they had comforted Mary, and left only the silence of an empty tomb. And this is the eloquence of that silence—that we may rise with him, who once lay cold and dead within, and stand with him "among the glories of ten thousand worlds." Natchitoches, La.

THE LIVING CHRIST THE CHURCH'S SUPREME NEED.

By Rev. L. P. Wasson.

"I am the Resurrection and the Life."—John xi, 25.

The most vital need of Christianity to-day is the living Christ. The present-day condition of the Church is in a large measure analogous to that of the weeping sisters of Bethany, whose despairing grief at the grave of their brother wrung sympathetic sobs from the heart of the Son of God.

The Church weeps out her helpless grief over the bier of a dead membership, whose questionable and immoral lives pollute the moral atmosphere, until even the world must say, "By this time he stinketh;" and the bowed heart of devotion joins in the pathetic wail, "Lord, if thou hadst been here my brother had not died." And still they perish—many in the very pews of the church—while she hastens to elaborate her ornamentations of an artificial Christianity.

Enchanting music, sweeping eloquence, and gorgeous art may occupy the attention, and, like an opiate, soothe the pain of the perishing for a time; but these things can no more feed the hunger-bitten multitudes than a painted feast hung up in a desert. And ever and anon there breaks forth the cry, "Lord if thou hadst been here my brother had not died." Christianity without the living presence of the Christ incarnate in the lives of its adherents is but mockery to the sublime despair of a race sinking to hopeless ruin and death. Such a Christianity, if conceivable, would be a system without a soul, a religion without a God, and would drop into a class with Buddhism and Jewish Pharisaism.

The disciples of such a faith invariably believe in the power of their religion to preserve life, but have little or no place for redemption. The fact is, such a system can no more preserve than it can restore. The systematic training of such a religion simply ameliorates the mere external aspects of human nature, while the vital powers decay within. Our Lord characterized these as "whited" sepulchers, "beautiful to look upon, but full of rottenness and dead men's bones." Of these we have not a few in the Church—men attempting the Christian life apart from the living Christ. This is largely the result of a purely cultural Christianity. Their brilliant teachers lacked the power of the indwelling Christ. Such teachers can only produce painted character. Those who were sent to teach Israel of the coming Messiah were the ones to turn him out of the temple and hurry him on to Calvary. The young man who said of the commandments, "All these have I kept from my youth up," was a product of their teaching. His moral character was good to look upon, yet sorrow and death filled the cup of his portion. The brilliant teachings of Gamaliel only made Saul of Tarsus a persecutor of the Christ. When shall we learn that a conscious experience of our Lord's saving grace is the indispensable equipment for the great training service of our Church, which begins to assume absorbing, and in some instances overwhelming, proportions in our church activity? Yet how many who teach, know not the Christ? Let us pause here. What shall the harvest be? Shall we who teach ever hear from our class-room or pew the cry, "Lord if thou hadst been here my brother had not died?" Let us not fail to call to our side Him who is the Life and who is able to keep our boys and girls; for the same power is required to sustain and preserve life as to raise the dead to life.

"He is the Good Shepherd and giveth his life for the sheep." "But all we like sheep have gone astray." It is a glorious thing that our Savior is able to preserve our lives, both physical and spiritual. "Whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die." But who of this fallen, sin-cursed race has not felt that the crowning glory of our Christ is his power to restore life to the dead, both of body and soul. "He that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live."

The Jews that stood by the cross were wide of the mark in their demands: the supreme test of His divinity was not in His power to come down from the cross, but in His power to come forth from the grave. The cry of the sisters was true, but that was not the truth they needed most to learn at that time. But how slow were they to grasp this new truth! It only blinds them and they earnestly rebuke its application. So it is to this good day. Love still weeps over the cess-pools of vice, reeking with the mangled characters of fallen brothers and sisters; but doubt rebukes any effort to rescue: "By this time he stinketh." How often have we rolled the stone upon the door of hope to the fallen and wept while we said it is impossible to redeem. Oh! that we might catch the meaning of that supreme, triumphant declaration that must thrill the heart of faith and turn the night of death and doubt into the morning of life and song, and the chill winter of sorrow and despair into the springtime of rejoicing! Let every doubtful and fainting heart hear Him indeed at this Easter-tide as He shouts in the ear of death, "I am the Resurrection and the Life." Let the Church heed the command, "Take ye away the stone," and hasten to remove every obstacle of inconsistency, prejudice, and doubtful hesitance, that the living Christ may get at the dead and dying and bring to them the light and glory of a resurrection morn, as they shall then hear him say, "Because I live ye shall live also," and "Behold I am alive forevermore."

THE DECISION IN THE VANDERBILT CASE.

By Dr. J. W. Lee.

(From the St. John's Church (St. Louis, Mo.) Calendar of Sunday, March 2, 1913; Dr. Lee is the pastor of this congregation.)

The decision in the Vanderbilt University case, which has just been rendered by Chancellor Allison, is next in importance to the decision rendered in favor of an M. E. Church, South, by the Supreme Court in the great Church Property Case after the division of the Northern and Southern Methodists in 1844. The only difference is that there was, perhaps, more property involved in the first decision than in the last. The decision in the Vanderbilt University case is far-reaching in its consequences. It means that the trustees appointed to administer institutions belonging to Christian denominations, can never deprive such denominations of their own property. In the case of the Vanderbilt University, it appears that the trustees, who were created by our Church, by some strange process of reasoning reached the conclusion that they and not the Church were to control and direct the property. Vanderbilt University belongs to the Southern Methodist Church as completely as does Central College, or Emory College, or the Barnes Hospital, or any other piece of property in our possession. The decision in the Vanderbilt case shows that the trustees were appointed to control the property under the direction of our General Conference and of our Bishops, and that such Board of Trustees were never, and are not now, members of the corporation to which the property belongs, and therefore, do not possess, and never did possess, the right and power to elect persons to fill vacancies on the Board of Trustees. This decision will be accepted with well-nigh universal favor by every minister and member of our Church.

If, when Bishop Collins Denny appointed Gov. Lon V. Stevens a trustee of the Barnes Hospital to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Samuel Cupples, Brother S. M. Kennard and Murray Carleton, the living trustees, had refused to accept his appointment as a member of the Board, then you would have had just such a situation as was brought about in the Vanderbilt University case, when the active trustees refused to accept the appointment of the trustees made by the last General Conference of the M. E. Church, South. Barnes Hospital belongs to the corporation known as the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. By the will of Mr. Barnes, to the Bishops, as representing that corporation, was given the authority to fill vacancies in the Board of Trustees. The duty of the Trustees, when appointed by the Bishops representing the Church to which the hospital belongs, is to administer the fortunes of the institution for the good of humanity, under the auspices of the corporation. Trustees, living on the ground, are necessary to direct the affairs of the hospital because such a Board of Trustees afford the Church a more convenient method of administering its affairs. Considered as Trustees of Barnes Hospital, simply and solely, they do not belong to the corporation that owns the property. They are created by the corporation as represented by the Bishops for a specific purpose. And what is true of Barnes Hospital, the greatest institution of like character in the United States, is true of Vanderbilt University, the greatest institution of learning in Southern Methodism.

OUR MOTHERS.

The strength of a nation lies in its mothers. The Spartans recognized this, and trained their girls to be brave, to endure hardships, to be self-sacrificing and pure, and their sons were sent out into life, strong, vigorous, chivalrous and fearless.

Behind every invention, heroic deed, poem or story stands a great soul, and back of this greatness is the mother who formed the character and was the inspiration and power.

The greatest place in the world is not in kings' palaces nor in beautiful temples, or where the laws of the nation are made out, but, as N. McGee Waters beautifully says, "It is the homes of the people, where, by night and day, women tend little children and train them."

"Unconsciously we uncover our heads when we meet a mother with her little child. She may be young, like Mary; she may be poor, like Nancy Hanks; she may be inexperienced, like Mary Ball; but she has the power to work mysteries and perform miracles.

"In sickness and health, in toil and in ease, at home and abroad, she lives for the life that is grafted upon her own, scornful of pity, conceiving of no higher honor than by and by to lean upon the arm which she has made strong by her strength, and to trust to the heart which has been made pure and true by her own purity and fidelity.

"So she lives her life. 'Drudgery,' silly people call it; but unto her who is wise it is holy mystery.

"So she lives her life. 'In a prison house,' unknowing ones may say; but unto her whose eyes have been opened to see mysteries, and far into the future, it is a queen's domain.

"And then, one day, when the world may have forgotten her work, because it was so commonplace, she stands up and puts judges and statesmen, and inventors, and poets to shame, for she has done what they cannot do. She has given a man unto the world, to rule it, or a woman unto the world. Her ministry is above ordination."—To-day's Magazine.

Church News

The Commencement Sermon of the North Texas Female College, at Sherman, Texas, will be preached by Rev. P. R. Knickerbocker, of Tulsa, Oklahoma.

Bishop A. W. Wilson has lately been preaching frequently for the brethren in and about Baltimore. We are pleased to note that his health has sufficiently improved for him to make such engagements.

Rev. John M. Lowrey, of Little Rock, the well-known Arkansas evangelist, who has been in had health for several months, continues to improve steadily, and it is now thought that he will be able to resume his 'loved employ' before long.

Bishop Killen has scant patience with fads and faddists, and has lately been striking them some vigorous blows in the church press. In standing out against these innovators, the Bishop is rendering the Church a needed and most valuable service.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has four educational institutions at work in Cuba: Candler College, Pinson College, the Irene Toland School, and the Elizabeth Bowman School. The last two are under the direction of the Woman's Department of the Board of Missions.

Bishop W. A. Candler will hold the Mobile District Conference, which will meet on March 31, and the Troy (Ala.) District Conference, which will be held at Petrey, Ala., April 22-25. There will be no dull moments in the proceedings of these conferences, with our great Georgia Chief Pastor in the chair.

A revival is reported to be sweeping over the Holston Conference. It is said that there have been single meetings with from 300 to 600 conversions. This is, indeed, good news. May this spiritual wave widen until it shall reach every part of the Church and quicken the religious life of the whole nation!

There have been rumors afloat that Dr. L. G. Broughton, the noted Baptist minister, who is pastor of Christ Church, London, would return to the United States and again take charge of the Baptist Tabernacle in Atlanta, Ga.; but Dr. Broughton announced a few days ago that he has no thought of leaving his present charge in the English metropolis.

The Scarlett Bible and Training School, at Kansas City, which recently celebrated its twenty-first birthday, has enrolled since its establishment 1035 students. The alumnae number 308. The workers which it has sent out may be classified as follows: 130 missionaries, 67 deaconesses, 58 graduate nurses, 27 home missionaries, and 12 engaged in other kinds of Christian work.

The congregation of the University Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of St. Louis, has decided to change the name of its proposed new house of worship, which will cost $150,000, to "Cupples Memorial" in honor of the late Samuel Cupples. It is expected that work on the first part of this structure will begin early in April. The pastor of this progressive flock is the Rev. Elmer Clark.

The Western Methodist states that it is generally understood that Mr. D. H. Linebaugh, of Oklahoma, will be appointed United States District Attorney for the Eastern Oklahoma District. Mr. Linebaugh was a member of our last General Conference, where he rendered helpful service as a member of the Committee on Education. He is a man of high character and unusual gifts, and would fill with distinction the position for which he is said to be slated.

Rev. H. M. Ellis' enthusiasm in behalf of the Tri-State Methodist Hospital is exerting an influence beyond the bounds of the Conferences co-operating in that enterprise. A recent issue of the Southern Christian Advocate contained an article mentioning Brother Ellis' work, and advocating the establishment of a hospital in South Carolina. Let the good work go on until Southern Methodism has a sufficiency of such institutions to meet the needs of her people.

As was stated in the Advocate of last week, the amount our Church paid for the support of Bishops and the widows of Bishops last year was $72,800; that of the Northern Methodist Church was $243,810. The membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States is 3,293,526; ours is approximately 2,000,000. Their foreign mission work, however, is considerably more extended than ours. This explains in part why the cost of their episcopal supervision is proportionately so much greater than ours, though it also is a fact that their Bishops are paid larger salaries than those of the Church, South.

A writer in The Christian Intelligencer discusses "The Homeopathic Church." Such churches are by no means scarce. Their two chief characteristics are that they believe in physicing every surface symptom of the sin-sick world, and that they want the Gospel administered in a diluted form. They are sticklers for the sermonette and every kind of a 'circle' except a truly religious one. They often report 'graduates' from their various schools; but rarely, if ever, do they report converts at their altars. They have outgrown the old-fashioned business of bringing sinners to Christ, preferring to teach the unsaved how to fiddle, and sew, and cook. Great is this new evangel of the up-to-date 'homeopathic church!'

The Wabash Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church of Chicago has this winter turned its basement into a sleeping place for destitute wanderers without any other shelter. In referring to this action, the pastor said: "I used to have an arrangement with a little cheap hotel by which I could send worthy poor men there. It cost me 15 cents a bed, and I paid the bill at the end of each month; but the bill became so great—oh! there are so many worthy poor—that I was forced to open the church basement and let them spend the nights there. You could not ask for a better behaved group of men than those who come to our church for a lodging place." We cannot refrain from applauding such work as this. The massive brick and stone churches in our great cities would honor the Master far more if made to minister to his needy and hungry sheep, instead of being kept as places of parade for religious formality and pride.

CALLED TO HER REWARD.

Dear Dr. Meek: My precious wife passed to the heavenly home on March 4, at 8 a.m. She had suffered long, and her release was triumphant. She was converted and joined the Church when a girl. For 46 years, 4 months, and 23 days we had gone side by side; 35 of these years we spent in the work of the Methodist itinerancy. God blessed us with loving and devoted children, who remain to comfort me in these days of sorrow and loneliness. Pray for me and my son and four daughters, that we may meet her over there in the mansion which our Savior has prepared for us.

Your brother,

B. T. CREWS.

CHILDREN'S DAY.

Dear Brother Meek: As treasurer of the Louisiana Conference Sunday School Board, I have just sent out the first of a series of letters to our pastors and superintendents, calling attention to the necessity of observing Children's Day this year. The Board with the assistance of the

Eight months	1.00 net

The commission heretofore allowed has been discontinued, because only a very few of the preachers accept commission, and the great majority we have talked with expressed it as their opinion that a commission has proven a hindrance to them in working up the subscription list on their charges.

Mission Board has kept a Field Secretary in the field for two years. It came up to Conference last December with a deficit of about $900. The members felt that, while they might hope to pay the deficit out of the Children's Day offerings for this year, they could not undertake to support a Field Secretary any longer. At the same time, it was felt that our work would suffer if this course was pursued. On mature consideration the Board decided to continue the work if additional support could be secured. A number of Methodist Sunday schools and laymen were communicated with by wire and telephone, and pledges of more than seven months of this year's salary were secured at that time and a few small pledges have been received since.

Now this work cannot be continued next year unless our Sunday schools, as a unit, rally to its support. Our ability to maintain it is being tested, and we must demonstrate this year that we can do it.

The splendid work done last year by our Field Secretary, Brother P. O. Lowrey, has been editorially mentioned in the Sunday School Magazine and in the Adult Student for March. Through the assistance of the chairman of our Board, Brother H. L. Baker, he attended the meeting of the General Sunday School Board and Conference workers at Washington in February, and is equipped to do greater things this year.

We have more than 300 schools in the State and the offerings should easily average $10 each, and more. If the Board gets the financial assistance it needs and deserves, there are many other things it can and will do. If we are to fill our place in the evangelization of Louisiana, we must be more progressive and more aggressive in our Sunday school work. I hope that not one pastor or superintendent will fail this year to do his part in this work.

MISSISSIPPI STATE SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

The Thirty-fourth Annual Convention of the Mississippi State Sunday School Workers will be held at Gulfport on April 8-10. In addition to about fifty State workers who will take part in the exercises, Dr. A. L. Phillips, D.D., Editor and Author, of Richmond, Va.; Dr. H. M. Hamill, of Nashville, Tenn.; Mr. W. C. Pearce, Associate General Secretary of the National Sunday School Association, of Chicago; Prof. E. O. Excell, of Chicago; Rev. J. Randle Ferris, of Atlanta, Ga., and Dr. J. Benjamin Lawrence, of Columbus, will be present and take part in the program. Dr. Lawrence will have charge of the devotional exercises. We are praying that the Holy Spirit may so guide us that great good will come to all who attend.

Alabama is the third State in the Union to appoint a supervisor of education for negro schools, Kentucky and Virginia being the other two.

Forty women have been granted the right to practice law before the United States Supreme Court, but only two have ever had a client before that tribunal.

The first ship is scheduled to pass through the Panama Canal on October 5, which will be the four hundredth anniversary of the discovery of the Pacific Ocean by Balboa.

President Willson is 56 years of age—the same age of Washington and Jackson when they were inaugurated. William Henry Harrison was the oldest man to be elected to the Presidency, being 68 years old, and Theodore Roosevelt was the youngest, being 43.

"Fads in Modern Education" was the subject of a lecture recently delivered in Toronto, Canada, by Prof. MacNaughton, of McGill University. One of the fads that the speaker condemned was the "utilitarian fallacy that all education should be at once convertible into dollars and cents."

The Webb Bill, prohibiting interstate shipments of liquors, has been attacked in the courts. The first case, which will be made a test case, was filed in Richmond, Va., on March 3, by certain wholesale liquor dealers against the Southern Railroad Company for refusing to receive shipments addressed to dealers in South Carolina.

There were 1866 convictions for violating the prohibition laws of Alabama last year—nearly double the number of the preceding year. It is stated that, with a more rigid enforcement of the prohibition laws, there was a marked decrease in convictions for other crimes. There was a decrease of 11 per cent in the number of murders committed.

There are but four States in the Union that have no "dry" territory in them—Pennsylvania, Montana, Nevada, and Arizona—while there are 8 that have no "wet" territory in them. The latter are: Maine, North Dakota, Kansas, Oklahoma, Tennessee, North Carolina, Georgia, and Mississippi. West Virginia will be added to the "dry" list in 1914.

In answer to the question, "Why am I a tramp?" addressed by a settlement worker of Chicago to a large number of unemployed men, a man gave the following reasons: "Unrestricted immigration—there are not enough jobs to go around; incompetence from birth and bad habits; employers want the best men, and we are not the best; the drink habit, which is a form of moral insanity."

The census bulletin of Mississippi for 1912 gives some very interesting information. Particularly so is the fact that besides South Carolina, Mississippi is the only State in the Union where the negro population outnumbers the white, the figures for that commonwealth being 1,009,487 negroes and 786,111 whites. Another item of interest is, that of the people of that State 1,489,803 live on farms, while but 207,311 live in cities.

Some Southern newspapers are agitating the question of the United States Government building residences for the Vice President and all the members of the Cabinet. The argument advanced in favor of this additional expense is that these officials cannot now "attempt anything in a social way" on their small salaries and pay rent. We are old-fashioned enough to believe that the Vice President and members of the Cabinet have something else to do besides set the pace in Washington's society circles.

President Poincaré of France has approved Senator Dupont's objection to the French Republic taking any great part in the Panama-Pacific Exposition to be held in San Francisco in 1915. Senator Dupont claims that there are no laws in the United States to protect French manufacturers from American manufacturers who may desire to copy trademarks, designs, and models of French origin. If the French Government's objection should likewise influence other European nations, the Panama-Pacific World's Fair would suffer a severe setback.

Miss Virginia Brooks, who is called the "Joan of Arc" of West Hammond, Ill., because of her having led in a vice crusade in that city which resulted in virtually ending a reign of lawlessness, declared before the Hammond Club of Chicago last week that the greatest dangers to girls in this age are as follows: "The public dance halls; the loneliness of small-town girls in large cities; the congestion of boarding houses which do not provide pariors; the discharge of girl employees without advance notice; low wages, and suggestive songs." Every mother would do well to notice particularly Miss Brooks' warning against dance halls and suggestive songs.

The Farmer's Union News is the authority for the statement that the State of Georgia purchased for home consumption last year, in addition to what she raised, the following items: Corn, $58,930,000; oats, $39,360,000; hay, $23,680; meats, dairy and poultry products, $38,680,000; mules and horses, $10,000,000—total, $170,373,000. While accurate figures are not at hand concerning Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana, it is said that these States are also heavy purchasers in other markets. The one-crop idea has about run its course. Diversified farming must be resorted to in the South if she is to maintain the lead in the agricultural world that she now holds.

MEETING OF THE GENERAL BOARD OF EDUCATION.

The Annual Meeting of the Board of Education will be held April 29th to May 1st at Dallas, Tex. The members of the Board will be entertained at the Oriental Hotel. All applications to the Board for financial aid must be in the hands of the Secretary at least thirty days before the meeting of the Board, according to the following resolution passed at the last annual meeting:

"We recommend that all applications for appropriations be placed, in the future, in the hands of the Committee on white and colored schools at least thirty days before the meeting of the Board; otherwise the applications will not be considered."

"HOME MISSION DAY."—MARCH 30.

To the Pastors of the Mississippi Conference.

Dear Brethren: Inasmuch as our Sunday School Board has wisely made provision for a lesson in Home Missions in the Sunday schools of Southern Methodism at the end of the present quarter, your Conference Board of Missions has deemed it expedient to recommend the observance of the fifth Sunday in this month in every pastoral charge as "Home Mission Day". We therefore earnestly request every pastor who can conveniently do so to preach a sermon on home missions the 30th day of this month, and also, if practicable, to take a missionary offering. Much more can be accomplished by concert of action than by haphazard work. The brethren of the South Georgia Conference have for a number of years raised their assessment for Domestic Missions in full by April 1st, and their assessment for Foreign Missions by June 1st. May we profit by their excellent example.

Our assessment for Domestic Missions for 1913 is $13,200, the same as last year. Of this amount $3,500 is due the General Board for connectional home missions, the whole assessment on our great Church for the work carried on by the Home Department at Nashville being only $125,000. Dr. John M. Moore calls attention to the fact that the Southern Presbyterian Church, with about 300,000 members, sets as its goal $300,000 for home missions, while the Southern Baptist Mission Board has annually at its disposal $330,000 or more for general home mission work, and $465,000 or more for State home mission work.

Let us not be so provincial and selfish as to think only of our own local needs. Our country is face to face with new and rapidly changing conditions. One of our missionary leaders has well said that "the territory occupied by the M. E. Church, South, is one of the greatest home missions fields of the world, judged by the three-fold standard of need, difficulty, and opportunity." If our fair land is to be kept Christian, Southern Methodism must have a worthy share in the redemption of our cities, in the upbuilding of the rural districts with their perplexing problems, in evangelizing the needy and neglected West, and also the hosts of immigrants who are pouring in through our Southern ports. Let us one and all co-operate in making "Home Mission Day" a signal success.

Yours fraternally,
GEO. H. THOMPSON, Pres.,
M. M. BLACK, Sec'y.,
Miss. Conf. Board of Missions.

REV. C. McDONALD CRITICALLY ILL.

Dear Dr. Meek: Brother C. McDonald is very ill in his home at Pelahatchie; the doctors fear that he will not live many days longer. It was my pleasure to be at his bedside this morning. He expressed himself as being ready to go on or to stay, as God may will. I ask that united prayer be made for him and his family in this hour of great trial.

Brother McDonald dictated the following message of love to the brethren of the Mississippi Conference:

"Dear Brethren: I have been sick most of the time since Conference, and am now quite feeble. I send a message of love to my brethren, both clerical and lay. My lot has fallen among good people in my last days. I have been kindly cared for by my family and friends. The doctors and my pastor have been constant in their kindness. I could not have asked for better attention. It is perfect peace with me now." J. T. ABNEY.

THE RESURRECTION.

By Miss Bessie C. Cooper.

A study of the Resurrection is a study of the Christ. For, although the doctrine of the Resurrection was prevalent among the Jews before his time, it was his life and death which ultimately clinched the matter, making of a mere wavering belief, a living, vital faith. There are many truths to be discerned by a careful student of our Lord's death and resurrection—many helpful guide-posts to perfection. For example, the etymology of the word tells us that the prefix means again. Were it not for the all-gracious mercy of our God in allowing us to repent of our sins, to re-vive our latent faith, there would be no joy in the resurrection, in the re-birth. Christ, the man, became the Divine, when he threw aside the bonds of death and walked once more among men. Even we poor, struggling mortals have just enough of the divine spark within us to enjoy to some extent the privileges of the resurrection, our joy being directly proportional to our love for the Master.

Without faith in the immortality of the soul, I can conceive of no true happiness. What care we for finely developed instincts, for acute intellects, and delicate sympathies, if our Lord says the physical shall one day supersede the mental, moral, and spiritual? It is this belief in the future life, inherent in the heart of all right-thinking folk, which makes for persistent effort to attain the one standard—Jesus Christ. Ethical theories all strive to solve the problem of the ideal. What ultimate end have we in view if we, day by day, endeavor to accomplish some good? Is it the hollow bubble called pleasure; is it the deeper joy, sincere happiness, or is it, after all, perfection? The thinking mind will at once say that perfection is the goal—and, if so, why? That our bodies may sometimes decay and return to dust; that our matterly brains may sometimes disintegrate; or that we may live again in the only perfect one, Christ the Lord, thus preparing ourselves for finally communing with him in the future world? So, to my mind, whether or not this thought has been crowded by the press of material duties from the conscious to the subconscious mind, back of all lesser motives is the desire to prepare, not for death, which is but a sleep, but for the re-birth.

Another helpful thought may be derived from consideration of the season in which Easter comes, the time when the re-birth of all nature is symbolic of the resurrection of Jesus. One has only to delve a little way into scientific study to realize that there is absolute conformity in all of nature's laws. So it is not surprising to find that, just as the flowers lift their heads from the hard winter's ground, and the little birds deck themselves afresh; just as "in the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love;" so we find a new birth, a new hope, and a new faith when we lift our heads from the mire of earthly sins, our hearts from earthly burdens, and deck ourselves anew in Christ's love, which is crystallized for us in the resurrection.

This great fact, by which Christ was declared "the Son of God with power," stands out prominently everywhere on the pages of the New Testament, as the foundation of Christian faith. The disciples were assured by the Savior that it was in his crucified body, not in glorified form, that he was re-born. To prove it beyond a shadow of a doubt, "He called for food, and he took and did eat before them," and continued on the earth forty days after his resurrection, until his ascension, when he resumed his glorified body. This miraculous occurrence has always left a question mark in the minds of some "doubting Thomases," and many arguments have been advanced to tincture the credibility of believers with suspicion. These theories are manifold, absurd, and without any proof. For example, some attempt to show that Christ was not really dead, but that, being stunned and palsied, he wore for a time the semblance of death, and was afterwards restored to consciousness by the cool grave and the spices. Again, some suggest that his body must have been stolen away. But this is incredible. Who took it? Would the enemies of Christ contribute to his glory by countenancing a report of his resurrection? Would even Peter, the courageous, who trembled at the voice of a serving-maid, and who denied his Lord thrice, find daring enough to so resist the governor? If Jesus were not risen, he had deceived his disciples with vain hopes. In fact, the testimony of the apostles furnishes us with undebatable arguments, coming as they do from mean and poor men who have nothing to gain in such a report, save suffering and misery. They give us real concrete facts, no suppositions, having as their motive in publishing the story sincere conviction of its importance and certainty. Surely, it is all important to humanity, and furnishes an incentive to all to fit themselves, to so live on this earth, that the life to come may be a peaceful continuation of the "now."

IMMORTALITY.

By Joseph Jefferson.

(These quaint lines were first published in The New York Tribune. Mr. E. C. Benedict has given the following interesting bit of history concerning them: One day when Mr. Jefferson and Grover Cleveland were taking luncheon on board the Oneida, in Buzzard's Bay, the conversation drifted to the subject of a future life. Mr. Jefferson expressed himself as very grateful for having had more than his share of the joys of this life, and as being prepared to meet any moment the common fate of all. He said that he had lately been scribbling some doggerel on the subject, and he recited his lines to us. I asked him for a copy of them, which he said he did not possess, but that he would send me one. This, upon being again reminded of his promise, he finally did, with his signature attached.)

Two caterpillars crawling on a leaf,

By some strange accident in contact came;

Their conversation, passing all belief,

Was the same argument, the very same,

That has been "proed and conned" from man to man,

Yea, ever since this wondrous world began:

The ugly creatures,

Deaf, dumb and blind,

Devoid of features

That adorn mankind,

Were vain enough, in dull and wordy strife

To speculate upon a future life.

The first was optimistic, full of hope,

The second, quite dyspeptic, seemed to mope.

Said number one, "I'm sure of our salvation."

Said number two, "I'm sure of our damnation;

Our ugly forms alone would seal our fates

And bar out entrance through the golden gates;

Suppose that death should take us unawares,

How could we climb the golden stairs?

If maidens shun us as they pass us by,

Would angels bid us welcome in the sky?

I wonder what great crimes we have committed,

That leave us so forlorn and so unpitied?

Perhaps we've been ungrateful, unforgiving;

'Tis plain to me that life's not worth the living."

"Come, come, cheer up," the jovial worm replied,

"Let's take a look upon the other side;

Suppose we cannot fly like moths or millers,

Are we to blame for being caterpillars?

Will that same God that doomed us to crawl the earth,

A prey to every bird that's given birth,

Forgive our captor as he eats and sings,

And damn poor us because we have not wings?

If we can't skim the air like owl or bat,

A worm can turn 'for a' that."

They argued through the summer; autumn nigh,

The ugly things composed themselves to die;

And so to make their funerals quite complete,

Each wrapped him in his little winding-sheet;

The tangled web encompassed them full soon,

Each for his coffin made him a cocoon.

All through the winter's chilling blast they lay

Dead to the world, aye, dead as human clay.

Lo, spring comes forth with all her warmth and love;

She brings sweet justice from the realms above;

She breaks the chrysalis, she resurrects the dead;

Two butterflies ascend, encircling her head,

And so this emblem shall forever be

A sign of immortality.

THE DOMESTIC LIFE OF MINISTERS.

Ministers are so little burdened with business affairs of their own that it is generally assumed that they are largely incompetent to manage interests of that sort. Yet, when we consider the small salaries they receive, and the methods which they employ—successfully—to feed and clothe their families, educate their children and raise them in decency and refinement, and at the same time keep out of debt and keep the "wolf from the door," we must give them credit for an ability in the management of finances that can hardly be accorded to any other class of citizens. Most of them owe much of this successful financiering and comfortable domestic situation to the prudence, economy and foresight of their wives. The wives of our preachers, as a rule, are simply remarkable for the management of their domestic affairs. They serve good meals, and are generally cheerful when company comes (and it comes often); they dress with taste and modesty; their children are clean, polite and refined, and their homes usually are models of comfort and cleanliness. This is as it should be. The preacher is not only to be an example of piety, consecration, and industry, but his household ought to be an illustration of taste, refinement and comfort, even though the salary be small, and the articles of furniture few and antiquated. If there is but one room in the house, there is no justification for having it unswept, undusted and disordered. A man may have but one coat, but there is no reason why he should whiten it with dandruff, or load it down with real estate to advertise its age. He can at least brush it and make it more presentable.

We have no intention to be personal—we have no one mind in what we now intend to say, but occasionally we hear of a minister whose home is neither orderly nor clean. The furniture is broken, the floors unswept, the beds untidy, the children unkempt, and everything wears an air of slovenliness that makes the place uninteresting, if not actually repugnant. When a preacher has a slovenly wife he is to be pitied, because he has a millstone around his neck that may not sink him, but it will certainly constantly embarrass him and be in his way. Women are the severest critics a slovenly woman can have. They are trained to look for dirt, and dust, and disorder, and when they find it in the house of a minister, with no attempt to remove or correct it, they are very sharp in their criticisms.

We have heard ministers say, when going into a new charge, "that they never saw such a dirty place as the parsonage in all their lives." If this was true, then their predecessor was guilty to a degree that should make the cheeks burn with shame. If it was not true, then its utterance was a slander too vile to come from the lips of an ambassador of Jesus Christ. A parsonage is built for people who intend to be decent in their habits of living, and when people get into it who are not, the quarterly conference would be justified in demanding its immediate vacation. Bad house-keeping not only makes an untidy home, but it also destroys property. It makes the place unfit for better people until there is renovation and repairing done, and that costs money—a result of the waste of slovenliness. Cleanliness is not godliness, but it is one of the virtues that belongs to it; and when it is not found in a minister's home it is a reproach to him, and the example it offers is harmful, if not culpable.

SWIMMING TO CHURCH IN AFRICA.

A girl named Ugangandi, who lived near the Ogowe River, West Africa, one Saturday came in her canoe with two bunches of plantains to sell to the missionary. When she was going away, Mrs. Batchelor, the missionary's wife, said to her: "Now, you must not forget that tomorrow will be the Sabbath day, and you have already promised to come to church every time."

"Yes," said the girl, "I will come if I am alive."

And so she did; but no one knew how she got there until, at the close of the service, she told the girls that in the night her canoe had been stolen, and none of her friends would lend her one; but she had promised to come to church, and so she felt she must. She swam all the way!

If this heathen girl, who knew only a little about the gospel, could take so much pains to keep her word and come to the house of prayer, then certainly more favored people should not forsake the assembling of themselves together because it is cloudy and damp or rainy.—The Young Christian Worker.

A HERO, NOT A COWARD.

The little boys in class-room No. 4 thought the noon recess would never come. Their copper-toed shoes scraped the bare floor, until Miss Edith felt like jumping out of the third-story window to get rid of the sound.

But at last the big gong struck twelve, and at the signal twenty-five children tumbled down the steep steps into the paved court behind the school building. The school was so big and the playground so small that the rooms took their recess by turns. It was No. 4's turn at twelve.

And now you will see why they have been so eager to get out: there is a new scholar to-day and they want to "size him up," as boys say.

"Where are you in arithmetic?" asks one.

"Partial payments," replies the new-comer, promptly.

He has been using his ears in the class-room, and he knows his arithmetic will give him rank among these new comrades.

"How many blades has your knife got?"

"Four." The new boy's head is still up as he produces a beauty of a knife.

"Whew!" whistles round the crowd. This beats partial payments out of sight.

"Let's have a fight now," says the stoutest little rascal of the party; and this is the supreme test in No. 4. A boy who can do partial payments, has a four-bladed knife, and will fight, can take any place he wants among them.

There is a dead silence for an instant. The stranger's face gets red, his eyes flash; but he stuffs his hands in his pockets and says with an effort: "I don't fight."

Did you ever see a gay-colored little balloon floating in the sunshine above your head, so light, so buoyant, you think it could touch the clouds? But a tiny little rift appears, and the balloon is a piece of shriveled rubber at your feet. That was just the way with the new boy of No. 4 when he refused to fight. Partial payments went for nothing; a four-blader didn't count. He was a scorn and a by-word.

A week has passed by, and it is noon recess again. Miss Edith sits at the window, pretending to eat her luncheon; but she has forgotten her sandwich and jelly cake.

"What am I going to do about Charley Graves?" she says to herself. I can't let him fight, and yet—

Suddenly the noise of battle comes up from the paved court. The teacher looks out of the window; but, seeing only a confused mass of tossing arms and legs, and hearing only a sound as of Kilkenny cats on the warpath, she rings her bell sharply and recess comes to a sudden end.

Up comes the panting, dusty crowd.

"But what is this?" she cries, for the new boy's lip is bleeding, and his forehead is swelling visibly. "I thought you wouldn't fight."

"I promised my mother," said the hero, proudly, "that I would never fight unless I was obliged to; but when Micky twists little Tom Poaque's arm, and won't stop, I am obliged to!"

Miss Edith bound his head with a wet handkerchief, and stuck his lips up with pink court-plaster, and tried to look sorry, but it was easy to see that she was pleased with her new boy's idea of when he was obliged to fight—not when twenty-four boys were looking black at him, but when a boy twice his size was teasing a little one!—Elizabeth P. Allan, in Presbyterian.

WHEN GRIZZLY MET MULE.

In a trip over the Sierra Nevadas a Californian took with him not only his favorite horse, but a mule named Billy, a large iron-gray mule of the pack variety. On the second day in the mountains the owner tethered Billy to a tree, allowing him about twenty feet range where there was good feed, and then took a seat on a fallen tree not far away to eat lunch. He had finished his meal and was half-dozing, when suddenly the mule reared and snorted loudly. His owner sprang to his feet and looked about.

Not ten feet off stood a huge grizzly bear, evidently with designs on the owner of the mule. That individual rushed for the nearest tree, and made good time in climbing it. He was safe for the time; but how about Billy?

To his owner's surprise, Billy dropped his head after a moment and resumed feeding, as if oblivious of the grizzly's proximity. As for the bear, he stood still for several minutes, his eyes wandering from the man in the tree to Billy. The mule's composure puzzled him.

By and by the grizzly started to make a circuit of the tree to which the mule was tethered. The bear emitted a series of deep growls; then opened his great mouth, and disclosed two rows of ugly teeth. Slowly the great creature advanced upon the mule. Billy still continued to graze. Nearer came the grizzly, and still nearer. The mule stopped feeding. From his perch the Californian watched the scene with breathless interest.

Finally the bear stopped, rose on his hind quarters, and prepared to strike. At that moment the mule, at whose stupidity his owner had wondered, sprang forward and the grizzly's paws struck empty air.

Then the man in the tree saw a gray form double itself into a ball and bound upward. It was the mule's turn. Out of the ball flew two iron-shod hoofs, which shot back and forth with a thump against the body of the grizzly, which was completely off its guard.

He was hit all over—on his head, on his shoulder, on his side, on his back—by those pile-driving hind feet. He fell in one direction, then in another, seeming utterly incapable of getting away; and when Billy stopped kicking life was gone from the bear's body.

The mule, after resting a bit, returned quietly to his feeding.—New York Tribune.

THE RESURRECTION NOT UNREASONABLE.

By Hon. W. J. Bryan.

Christ gave us proof of immortality, and yet it would hardly seem necessary that one should rise from the dead to convince us that the grave is not the end. To every created thing, God has given a tongue that proclaims a resurrection. If the Father deigns to touch with divine power the cold and pulseless heart of the buried acorn, and to make it burst forth from its prison walls, will he leave neglected in the earth the soul of man made in the image of his Creator? If he stoops to give to the rosebush whose withered blossoms float upon the autumn breeze the sweet assurance of another spring-time, will he refuse the words of hope to the sons of men when the frosts of winter come? If matter mute and inanimate though changed by the forces of nature into a multitude of forms can never die, will the spirit of man suffer annihilation when it has paid a brief visit like a royal guest to its tenement of clay? No, I am as sure that there is another life as I am that I live to-day.

In Cairo, I secured a few grains of wheat that had slumbered for more than three thousand years in an Egyptian tomb. As I looked at them, this thought came into my mind, if one of those grains had been planted upon the banks of the Nile, the year after it grew, and all its lineal descendants planted and re-planted from that time until now, its progeny would to-day be sufficiently numerous to feed the teeming millions of the world.

There is in the grain of wheat an invisible something which has power to destroy the body that we see, and from earth and air fashion a new body so much like the old one, that we cannot tell the one from the other. And if this invisible germ of life in the grain of wheat can thus pass unimpaired through three thousand resurrections, I shall not doubt that my soul has power to clothe itself with a new body suited to its new existence when this earthly frame has crumbled into dust.

THE CADDO PARISH SCHOOL QUESTION.

At the meeting of the Caddo Parish School Board in Shreveport on March 12, the McKennon Resolution providing for the daily opening of the public schools of that parish with a brief non-sectarian Scripture reading and devotional exercise was adopted by a vote of seven to three. A petition favoring this action, signed by about 5000 persons, was presented, and one containing about 1300 signatures was filed against it. Immediately after the passage of this resolution an injunction restraining the execution of its provisions was applied for by Mr. S. L. Herold, Mr. J. G. Marston and Mr. H. L. Heilperin, and it is stated that the matter will now be fought out in the courts. These gentlemen contend that this action of the School Board is violative of the Statutes and Constitution of the State and also of Section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Federal Constitution. This policy of the school authorities is said to have incurred the violent opposition of both the Roman Catholics and Jews residing in Caddo Parish, who are behind the movement to resist its enforcement.

We shall not, for the present at least, undertake to discuss the legal bearings of this issue. Persons desiring light on the relations of non-sectarian Christianity to our Federal and State Governments would do well to read Bishop Galloway's admirable volume, entitled "Christianity and the Nation." We are not sufficiently informed as to the laws of Louisiana to express an opinion concerning them and their application to this case; but that this action of the Caddo Parish School Board is in conflict with any provision of the National Constitution, we do not believe. The decisions of the most eminent jurists that our country has produced, so far as we have read them, all point in the other direction.

The public in considering this question should keep clearly in mind the fact that the school authorities of Caddo Parish do not propose to have these devotional exercises conducted in the interest of any sect, or to have any particular interpretation placed upon the passages read from the Bible. It is merely their purpose to have these exercises in the interest of sound ideals and wholesome morals, without undertaking to influence any one's church affiliation. This is a matter which profoundly concerns the safety and welfare of the State. Is it wrong for her to take such steps as she deems necessary for her own self-preservation? It is because she regards it essential to her life and prosperity that she institutes and maintains a public school system. With the private interests involved, she has nothing to do. Whatever methods of instruction she thinks will contribute the most to her up-building, she has a perfect right to adopt, so long as she does not seek to coerce the personal religious beliefs of her citizens.

And why should so much consideration be shown the Roman Catholic Church in this matter?

She has never been a friend to public instruction, and is not now. If she had her way, we would have no public schools. She competes with them to the full extent of her ability, and tolerates them only because she must. Shall we allow the character of our public instruction to be determined by those who are implacable enemies of the whole system and who would destroy it if they could? If they should be permitted to exclude the Bible from these schools, the very first shaft of criticism that they would then hurl at them would be that they are lacking in wholesome moral and religious influences.

But the most remarkable utterance that has appeared in connection with this controversy has, strange to say, emanated from a Protestant source. We refer to an editorial contained in last week's issue of the Baptist Chronicle, which we quote, in part, as follows:

"There has been something of a stir created in school circles in the Parish of Caddo over the question of putting the Bible into the public schools. To our way of thinking, the putting of the Bible into our public schools smacks of the union of Church and State. Our Israelite, Catholic, Adventist, Mormon and Mohammedan citizens pay taxes as do the Agnostic and Infidel. They have the same right to be heard on the question as any member of any of the evangelical denominations. Their consciences in the matter should be as truly respected as the consciences of any other class or classes of citizens. It is not the province of the State to teach religion. The policy of maintaining chaplains in the army and navy, for the upper and lower houses of our Congress, and for the legislatures of our States, as well as for State and National penitentiaries, is of doubtful propriety, if not absolutely wrong in principle. 'Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's and unto God the things that are God's,' would seem to indicate that there should be discriminate thinking concerning the spiritual and temporal realms."

The position taken by our contemporary clearly is that all other religions, no matter how absurd and grotesque, should be permitted to stand upon an equal footing with Christianity in the American Republic! This position, carried to its logical conclusions, would, as The Chronicle suggests, take the chaplains from our Army and Navy and all the legislatures and prisons of the land. It would require every reference to the name of God or Christ to be stricken from the coins and currency of the nation and from every public document and building. It would necessitate the abandonment of the use of the Bible in the administering of oaths and in the installation of public officials, and would stop the issuance of Thanksgiving proclamations by our Presidents and Governors. It would require the abrogation of every law protecting the Christian Sabbath and forbidding profanity. It would give to the Hindoo mother the same right to stand upon the bank of the Mississippi River and throw her babe into the mouth of an alligator in the name of her religion, and the Mormon to marry as many wives as he pleases, as it would to a Christian to enter a Church and sing hymns of praise to almighty God.

The unwisdom and preposterousness of such a position are so manifest that we do not need to waste time and space in combating it. It is a miserable perversion of our Lord's words, "Render unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's, and unto God the things which are God's," to give them any such interpretation. Obviously what the Master meant was that there are duties which a Christian owes to the State, and that there are duties which he owes to his Maker. Nothing was further from his mind than to teach that a government should accord equal privileges to all the faiths and superstitions of earth, regardless of whether they are true or false, or the character of the influence that they might exert. The only governments that God ever directly established had the true religion woven into their every warp and woof. And so far as the position of our own Nation on this question is concerned, we commend to our contemporary as worthy of careful study the following wise words of the late Bishop Charles B. Galloway, uttered when discussing the meaning of that clause in the Federal Constitution which declares that "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof: The purpose of this Article was not to renounce Christianity or to give countenance to infidelity or any pagan religion, but to exclude all rivalry among Christian denominations and 'prevent any national ecclesiastical establishment which should give to a hierarchy the exclusive patronage of the national government.' It was not anti-Christian, but anti-sectarian."

A DANGEROUS PRESCRIPTION.

Dr. Charles E. Jefferson, the distinguished New York preacher, in a recent article in The Christian World, expresses the view that English preachers far surpass those of America in the richness and extent of their vocabularies. And he recommends to the ministers on this side of the water "a more consistent use of the dictionary." We would emphasize the word, "consistent," and add to it the words, "discriminating and sensible." We have known more than one preacher whose efficiency in the pulpit was impaired by too much dictionary. It is quite as important now as it was in Paul's time to address the people in a language that they can understand.

MRS. B. T. CREWS DEAD.

Elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate appears a notice of the death of this 'elect woman,' who was the wife of Rev. B. T. Crews, an honored superannuate of the Louisiana Conference. She knew and loved the Master and cherished and sought the realization of high aims in life; and doubtless the Reaper found her a ripe sheaf for the heavenly garner. We deeply sympathize with the sorrowing husband and the other stricken loved ones in their sore bereavement, and pray that they may have to solace their bleeding hearts the abiding presence of the Divine Comforter. We have noticed in our exchanges the following references to the translation of this faithful servant of the Master:

Rev. B. T. Crews, of Shreveport, La., had the misfortune to lose his good wife by sickness and death on the 4th of March. She was a good woman, full of faith and of the Holy Ghost, and her end was peace. Her Texas friends will be sad when they read of her departure.—Texas Christian Advocate.

Many old friends in Arkansas will be pained to learn of the death of Mrs. B. T. Crews, the wife of a former and much beloved member of the Arkansas Conference, but for several years a superannuate member of the Louisiana Conference, living in Shreveport. A good and faithful woman, sharing joyfully the lot of her preacher-husband and faithful in all the duties of a wife and mother and church member, she passed away on March 4. She had been a sufferer for two years, and she died in great peace.—Western Methodist.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. C. A. Battle, the pastor, is holding a revival meeting at Felicity Church of this city. Dr. J. T. Sawyer preached for him last Tuesday night, and reports that the meeting gives promise of good results.

Bishop W. B. Murrah will preside over the Wilona District Conference, which will be held at Belzoni, Miss., May 15-18. The resourceful presiding elder, Rev. B. P. Jacob, will leave nothing undone to make this occasion a memorable one.

Rev. J. A. Alford, who is finishing a quadrennium of effective service on the Seima (La.) charge, was in New Orleans last week as a delegate to the Grand Lodge of the Odd Fellows. While in the city he paid the Advocate office an appreciated call.

Mr. H. W. Hair, of Gueydan, La., was a welcome visitor to the Advocate office last week. He reported that Rev. J. D. Nesom, the pastor at Gueydan, is doing a good work in his present field, and that the indications are that he will maintain his past record of staying four years.

Rev. C. M. Morris, the pastor, is holding a revival meeting at Mooringsport, La., in which he is being ably assisted by Rev. R. M. Brown, of Algiers. While Brother Brown has been absent, his pulpit has been acceptably filled by Rev. E. N. Evans.

Rev. J. H. Mitchell, presiding elder of the Corinth District, requests us to state that the Corinth District Conference will be held at Sherman, Miss., June 12-15, embracing the Sunday. A fuller announcement will appear later.

In renewing his subscription to the Advocate, Mr. Whitman Davis, the accomplished librarian of the Mississippi A. and M. College, at Starkville, takes time to express his appreciation of our paper. We are grateful to him for his kindly and encouraging words.

The following brethren, to whom acknowledgment has not been made elsewhere, have sent in two or more subscribers since the last issue of the Advocate: Rev. A. H. Steele, Oloh, Miss., 4; Rev. V. C. Curtis, Kosciusko, Miss., 5; Rev. J. T. Lewis, Clarksdale, Miss., 10.

We acknowledge the reception of an invitation from Bishop and Mrs. Collins Denny to the marriage of their daughter, Miss Edith Allen, to Rev. Roscoe Marvin White, which will take place at the Monument Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of Richmond, Va., at 6 p.m. on April 2, 1913. We extend in advance congratulations and best wishes.

Rev. Jasper L. Smith, of Gallman, Miss., says: "We have been given a most cordial reception by our new parishioners. We were delightfully 'pounded' by the good people of Gallman a few nights ago, and it is needless to say that we greatly appreciate their thoughtfulness and kindness. We feel that already we are making some progress in our new field of labor."

Rev. G. A. Morgan sends from Opelousas, La., the following cheering message: "I am delighted with the Opelousas-Washington charge. I am preaching to large congregations, and the Lord's cause is advancing." We are indebted to Brother Morgan for two renewal subscriptions and five new subscribers to the Advocate, which were forwarded on March 10.

On last Friday Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Wilder, of Beaumont, Texas, were made happy by the arrival in their home of a little daughter, Miss Virginia Elizabeth. Mrs. Wilder is the daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. H. H. Ahrens of this city, and Brother Ahrens is being congratulated by his many friends upon having attained to the distinction of being a grandfather.

Rev. M. L. Ward, our pastor on the Mantachie (Miss.) charge, reports encouragingly of the progress of his work and of the outlook for the coming months. He has been pressing the claims of the Advocate in his rounds, and has recently favored us with 6 renewals and 4 new subscriptions. He states that he finds the Advocate a helpful assistant in his labors for the Master.

Rev. R. I. Collins reports things as moving on smoothly in the Cockrum (Miss.) Circuit, but he longs to see a sweeping revival at every church, and he is working and praying to that end. We do not know a more energetic toiler in the Master's cause than this zealous young pastor. We are grateful to Brother Collins for a club of ten subscriptions, received a few days since.

We regret to be apprised of the death of Mrs. Lucy Wilkinson, of Hernando, Miss., which occurred in that city on Feb. 22. She was a woman of noble character, of culture, and of great usefulness. She loved the Church, and was never happier than when working to promote its prosperity. We well remember this 'elect lady,' and are made sad by the thought that we shall see her on earth no more.

Rev. E. S. Lewis, our efficient pastor at West Point, Miss., sends us the following items from his charge: "I have engaged Rev. J. O. Hanes, of the North Alabama Conference, to assist me in a meeting, beginning on May 25. Our work here is making fairly good headway. We have had 14 accessions to the Church this year. One of our Sunday school classes has recently purchased a beautiful piano."

Just as we are about to close our forms, we are in receipt of the following telegram from Dr. H. W. Featherstun, presiding elder of the Newton (Miss.) District: "The date of the Newton District Conference has been changed from the time previously announced to April 15-18—one week later. The opening hour will be 3 p.m. on Tuesday, April 15, and Thursday, the 17th, will be devoted to a Missionary Institute."

After preaching eloquently at the Rayne Memorial Church of New Orleans last Sunday morning at 11 o'clock and in the afternoon at 5 o'clock, Bishop Mouzon went to the Louisiana Avenue Church and preached at 7:30 o'clock to a large and appreciative audience. Three sermons the day of his arrival in the Crescent City was a good beginning for the week's revival meeting that the Bishop is now conducting in New Orleans.

A dispatch to the Times-Democrat from Crowley, La., last Saturday, stated that the revival being conducted in that city by Rev. C. D. Atkinson, the pastor, and Rev. D. B. Strouse, the well-known evangelist, of Salem, Va., was being largely attended, and that a number of persons had applied for membership in the Church. We are pleased to know that this enterprising flock is being blessed with a season of spiritual refreshing.

Our church at Clarksdale, Miss., continues to enjoy a large measure of prosperity under the efficient ministry of Rev. J. T. Lewis, who has entered upon the fourth year of his pastorate there. Brother Lewis will begin a revival meeting in this growing Delta City on the first Sunday in April, and will have with him Rev. J. B. Culpepper, and his son, Rev. O. B. Culpepper. We hope that the efforts of these brethren may result in the accomplishment of much good.

In a business letter to our office, Rev. J. Lloyd Decell, of Mt. Olive, Miss., thus refers to matters in his excellent charge: "Our work is moving on nicely. We are most pleasantly situated, and are hopeful of a good year. Rev. J. V. Bennett will hold a revival for us at Ora the last of this month, and Rev. J. T. Leggett, the presiding elder of the Meridian District, will be with us in a meeting at Mt. Olive the second week in April. We are expecting much to be accomplished in these services."

Dr. Felix R. Hill, Sr., has tendered his resignation as President of Centenary College, Shreveport, La., to take effect at the close of the present term. Dr. Hill gives the condition of his wife's health as his reason for resigning. Centenary College has never had at its head a man who was more capable or more universally loved than is Dr. Hill; and the Louisiana Conference will lose the services of an able educator and a judicious executive when he retires from his present position next June.

Rev. R. W. Lovett, our energetic pastor on the Mathiston charge (North Mississippi Conference), continues to bring us under obligations to him for effective work in behalf of the Advocate. Among other things, he says: "I have set my figures at 25 subscribers by the 1st of June, and then I want 50 by December." We do not think we are inmodest in saying that we believe Brother Lovett will help the cause of Methodism appreciably in the communities that he serves by extending in them the circulation of the Conference organ.

From Kosciusko, Miss., on the 15th inst., Rev. V. C. Curtis, our pastor in that city, wrote as follows: "Sister E. C. Sullivan underwent a very serious operation yesterday afternoon. At this writing she is resting well. Brother Sullivan requests the brethren to remember both his beloved wife and him in their prayers during these days of anxiety." We regret to hear of this affliction, and we trust that the loving Father will have these worthy itinerants in his gracious keeping and bring them safely through this trying ordeal.

Writing from Newton, Miss., under date of the 13th inst., Dr. H. Walter Featherstun says: "A great and wide-reaching revival, led by Rev. Dan E. Kelley, is now in progress here. The congregations are immense, and conversions and reclamations are occurring every day. The work done is thorough, and the results are most gratifying." We congratulate Brother H. F. Tolle, the pastor, upon such a report from his charge. Brother Kelley is one of the growing evangelists of the Church, and is doing a great work for the Master.

Rev. T. J. Durrett, our hustling pastor at Buena Vista, Miss., delighted the heart of the Publisher a few days since by sending in 16 renewals and two new subscriptions to the Advocate. We assure him that we highly appreciate this good work in behalf of the Conference organ. He serves an excellent people, and will tell our readers something of their kindness and of his work among them next week. We are pleased to state that Brother Durrett's health continues to improve and that he is now able to meet his appointments.

Last Monday afternoon we were highly honored by having as visitors to our sanctum Dr. John M. Moore, of Nashville, Tenn., and Dr. J. W. Moore, of this city. Dr. Moore, of Nashville, is assisting our Dr. Moore in a meeting at the First Methodist Church this week, where he has been delivering some unusually strong and helpful sermons. He is one of the most versatile and energetic of our Southern Methodist leaders, and a most affable and agreeable Christian gentleman. One is always made to feel better by coming into contact with sunny optimism.

In a business note to the Advocate office, Rev. L. E. Wicht, of Leakesville, Miss., adds: "We had a great time at our first quarterly conference. Our presiding elder, Rev. G. H. Thompson, gave us two very able and helpful sermons, preaching at both the morning and evening hour to a crowded house. Our people are seemingly interested in the Master's work, and we are expecting a great year. We have in prospect the construction of two new churches, and also hope soon to finish and have dedicated another, which was started by my predecessor, Brother Alsworth."

Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Parker, of Mansfield, La., will leave soon to visit relatives and friends in Montgomery and several other points in Alabama, and will probably be absent from Louisiana until June or July. This will be Sister Parker's second visit to the home folks within forty years. Dr. Parker's many friends will be delighted to know that since his recovery from la grippe, his health is as good as usual, though he is still troubled with an impaired eyesight. We wish these noble veterans of the itinerancy a delightful stay among their kindred, and pray that a kind Providence may watch over them and, in due time, bring them safely back home.

A telegram sent from Kosciusko, Miss., on last Monday, the 17th inst., by Mr. Meek Hillerman stated that his mother, Mrs. Cornelia Meek Hillerman, had died suddenly on the day preceding. Mrs. Hillerman was the youngest child of Mr. Abner and Mrs. Eliza Meek, who were among Kosciusko's earliest settlers. She was a staunch member of the Presbyterian Church, a model wife and mother, and a Christian without reproach. To those who lived as she did, death is but a home-going and a coronation. May the Heavenly Father be with the stricken loved ones in their loneliness and grief, and gently lay his healing hand upon every bleeding heart.

From Central Academy, Miss., Rev. J. R. Wilson sends us the following interesting item concerning his work: "I have taken into the Church on profession of faith since Conference two men, one of whom will be 89 years old at his next birthday, and the other of whom is about 55 years of age. The latter is the father of Rev. A. N. Goforth, late of the North Mississippi Conference." It always speaks well for a pastor and church when persons are thus influenced to profess their acceptance of the Savior at the regular services of the sanctuary. We extend Brother Wilson our thanks for a club of five subscribers to the Advocate, which he sent in last week.

From a recent issue of the Grenada Sentinel, we clip the following: "The contract to build a new Methodist parsonage in this city has been let to Mr. S. J. Simmons. The contract price of the new house is $3835, which is for a turn-key job. The building is to be a two-story structure, with four rooms and a kitchen below, and four rooms above, each story having a nice hall and porch. It will be constructed on the northeast corner of the lot. When this home is completed it will be about the handsomest parsonage in the North Mississippi Conference." We congratulate the pastor, Rev. J. A. Hall, and his worthy flock upon this substantial forward movement.

Mrs. C. W. Harper, of Napoleonville, La., who has been a constant reader of the Advocate for forty years, instructs us to discontinue her paper, as she can no longer see to read. Her letter, however, brought us $2, to be used in sending the paper to some other person in her stead. We greatly regret to know that Sister Harper is thus afflicted, but from the tone of her communication we feel assured that she has a spiritual vision that will never grow dim, and that she is journeying to the happy land where there will be no annoying disabilities of any kind. We thank her for her contribution to our "Helping Fund," and also for her encouraging words and good wishes.

Rev. R. A. Clark writes as follows from his new field of labor at Jackson, Tenn.: "The First Church here, to which I have recently been assigned, has 800 members, and they represent some of the cream of the citizenship of Jackson. We hope to see our new church building completed before Conference. I preached my first sermon here last Sunday (March 2), and met a very enthusiastic reception. All our services are now held in the chapel of the Memphis Conference Female Institute, and our congregation is very much handicapped for the want of room. There is no visitor that is more welcome in my home than the New Orleans Advocate. I look forward to its coming every week with great pleasure."

Rev. W. J. Porter, of Bienville, La., is pleased with the progress of the work in his good charge. He has recently been making his churches more comfortable by replacing broken window-panes, and in three of them he has set up new heaters. The ladies of Bienville a few days since installed in the parsonage an excellent "cooking range," and the members at Burk Place, Bear Creek, and elsewhere have also been claiming the privilege of aiding in improving the home of their pastor and his family. But what is most pleasing to Brother Porter is the fact that the Lord is graciously manifesting himself in the preaching services, some of them being occasions of unusual spiritual power and rejoicing. We are indebted to this faithful pastor for six additional subscriptions to the Advocate, five of which are new.

GEORGE MARVIN GALLOWAY, A.B., D.D.S.

George Marvin Galloway, son of George W. Galloway and Fannie Holiday Galloway, was born at Madisonville, Madison County, Mississippi, June 25, 1881, and died at the home of his sister, Mrs. N. M. Reid, Canton, Miss., March 1, 1913. The funeral service was held in the Methodist Church at Canton, and his remains were interred in the family cemetery at Madisonville.

Thus, thirty-one years marked the term of this short but remarkably good life upon the earth. But this short term was enough to enable him to make an impress for good upon all of his relatives and upon a wide circle of friends in several States. One relative, a Christian minister who had known him from childhood, remarked: "I doubt if a purer, nobler young man ever lived in the world." A lady of the home community at the grave said: "I would willingly see either of my sons die if I could know he was as surely prepared as Marvin." A cousin and college-mate wrote: "His life work will not be ended, but will stand out as a beacon light to all who knew him." His own and only brother the day after the funeral said, when the character of the deceased was mentioned, "I have never known another like him." A lady from an adjoining community remarked: "Not only one, but everybody who knew him loved him." Two or three days before he died, he inquired of the nurse: "Who are my friends?" The nurse answered: "Dr. Galloway, from what I can hear, everybody who knows you is your friend." His mother wrote to him during his illness in the sanatorium, "I have reviewed your life from babyhood up, and you have always been good and a pleasure to your parents."

He became a student of Millsaps College when sixteen years old, and graduated, at the age of twenty, with the class of 1902. In the meantime he had decided upon dentistry as his profession; after graduation, he taught in the public schools for two sessions; then attended the dental department of Vanderbilt University two sessions, taking the junior and senior work in one year, excepting the practical part of the senior work. For the third year of professional study he went to the Baltimore College of Dental Surgery, receiving his professional diploma from that institution in May, 1907, and passing the Mississippi State Board of Examiners a few weeks thereafter.

But before deciding upon a location in Mississippi, a dentist of Spencer, West Virginia, knowing of his ability, offered him a position with him, and he accepted, following the profession there until he moved to Jackson, Miss., and opened his office there in November, 1911, making his home with Mrs. Charles B. Galloway.

Just a year after beginning practice in Jackson, he learned that he had somehow, somewhere, developed lung trouble. It became necessary for him to close his office at once and seek health. He first went home to his parents; but, upon the urgent recommendation of physicians, the last of November he went to Asheville, N. C., for treatment in a sanatorium, by specialists. He gained some weight during the first few weeks at the sanatorium, and his lung condition was pronounced improved; but about February 10, 1913, a meningeal or brain complication made his case alarming; his two sisters and the writer hurried to his side, and managed to get him to his sister's home at Canton, Miss., where he lingered a week, at most times rational, but with both body and mind wearied and weakened by disease.

Probably no young dentist in Mississippi was so well equipped morally, intellectually and technically for a career of professional success and useful citizenship. During his literary course he made a specialty of chemistry, with his profession in mind, and in his dental course took more chemistry than was required.

While at Vanderbilt he was awarded the $20 prize for best gold fillings among all the students out of the dental department. He was fast fitting up his office with every needed equipment. Being careful and conscientious in every work, he was gradually moving into a lucrative practice. He was a member of the State and National Dental Associations, and of the National Mouth Hygiene Association; and corresponded with several dentist friends in different States, exchanging notes with them concerning advanced ideas of the profession.

From the standpoint of general and Christian culture, he was unusually equipped for life, having read and traveled and listened much. He had visited Niagara Falls, Mammoth Cave and most of the large cities and places of interest East of the Mississippi River; he had listened much to great lectures and preachers; in his diary are notes made by him of many sermons and lectures he had heard.

While at Vanderbilt University he represented his department at the Y. M. C. A. Convention held at Asheville; and after the great Students' Volunteer Convention which he attended at Nashville in 1906, he distinctly stated that if he had studied medicine instead of dentistry, he would offer himself as a medical missionary. His interest in the people of other lands is evident from the fact that with his parents' permission he entertained in the home during one vacation Mr. Zung, a Chinese student of Millsaps College.

He had made it the rule of his life to memorize daily some passage from the Bible or other good book; his ability to quote beautiful sentiments appears in one of his letters, written on the occasion of his brother's birthday and dated from the sanatorium, February 3rd:

"I hope you will enjoy many healthy and happy birthdays; some one says: 'One is as old as his arteries'—some men seem young at sixty. A poet wrote:

'We live in deeds, not words; in thoughts, not breaths;
In feelings, not in figures on a dial;
We should count time by heart throbs
(when they beat for God, for man, for duty);
He lives most who thinks most, feels noblest and acts the best.'

"I hope I'll get home in time to help papa with the garden; I will have to work gradually back to the strength of former times."

He belonged to the Modern Woodmen of America, but he loved the Church and put it before all orders, having joined it in boyhood. He sat regularly either as teacher or pupil in the Sunday school wherever he lived; and at the time of his death he was a member of the program committee of the State Sunday School Association. A week before he died he asked for singing, especially for "One more day's work for Jesus, one less of life for me." The day before he died his most hearty sentence spoken was one approving the suggestion that a Christian hymn be sung. Among his books we find such as these: "Men and Missions," "Altar Fire," "In Tune With God," "Beside Still Waters."

He loved and stood for the good. One of his college teachers, Professor Ricketts, remarked: "I had hoped that he could live a long time in Jackson, for the moral influence that he would exert upon the city." Rev. E. J. Coker, a schoolmate, in his funeral remarks, said: "At college all the boys knew that if anything was wrong or if the rightness of a proposition was doubtful, they need not approach Galloway with it." His record during his career as a dental student and as a citizen at Spencer, West Virginia, was the same in moral influence, as is evident from the correspondence and incidents of these periods.

He is missed by many. His friends at Spencer wrote many letters urging his return; he is missed by loved ones far and near, by his brother and sisters dear, and most of all by the mother and father. But the purity and pleasantness and nobleness of their son's life is a great consolation. His thoughtfulness of others was always evident in health or in sickness; he was brotherly, dutiful, good—yet unassuming with his goodness. Truly, as Rev. C. N. Guice, another schoolmate, who also officiated at the funeral, said: "In him is the Scripture fulfilled again, first written of the young man Abel, 'he being dead yet speaketh.'" H. G. HAWKINS.

No. 2, Greenville, Miss.

Tidings From the Field

Hermanville (Miss.) Charge.

We had with us on March 1 and 2 our beloved presiding elder, who gave us two very fine sermons. While with us at Sarepta, he attended to the business of the quarterly conference, looking well after the interests of the Church. We feel greatly encouraged, in that the work is well on its way to success. This is our fourth year with these good people. Any preacher may count himself happy to serve the Hermanville Circuit. We are endeavoring to make this the best of our four years. And with the co-operation of the people generally, we think we shall accomplish the end in view. I feel safe in saying that our presiding elder will surely do his part toward the accomplishment of this result if we, as undershepherds, can only carry out what is in our minds. Our next quarterly conference is to be at Pattison (Martin), Miss., May 21. We are hoping for a good time at that point.—W. L. Blackwell, P. C.

Black Hawk, Miss.

The indications to this date of 1913 are all good at Black Hawk and Acona. Every fence post is new at the parsonage, and the same is true of the wiring and picket work from the front gate to the barn lot. Money, too, is in hand to pay for new roofing, and also something for added furnishings and for paint. The congregations are good, and the Sunday school is doing well. The church officials met without a call from the pastor and placed the salary above the previous record, and the payments were in full at the first quarterly conference. Presiding Elder Shipman had some fine things to say of this people and charge and, moreover, it is understood generally hereabout that this particular district incumbent is a sensible gentleman and competent for much useful service. He is in demand for a second visit. Dr. R. A. Meek of the New Orleans Advocate is well known in this important section; his paper is "circulated and read," and they do say that he was brought up in the "good old-fashioned way." Call again, Doctor. Your friends hereabout are plentiful and true.—A. H. Williams.

Foxworth, Miss.

Up to the present writing the Buford Charge, consisting of six appointments, is moving along smoothly. Not a more loyal membership can be found in the Conference. Since our cordial reception on arrival, substantial evidences of appreciation have been given at intervals. An enthusiastic effort is being made to erect a new church at Foxworth. We hope to begin work in April. The association and sermons of our presiding elder, Rev. Rob't Selby, at our first quarterly conference in February, were an inspiration of a lasting nature. From March 2 to 5 our Sunday School Field Secretary, Bro. R. A. Maddox, was engaged to stimulate new life in our Sunday schools. His method is practical and convincing. Successful results will come from his labors wherever he goes. Five schools were re-organized as a result of his work. Sunday, March 21, at 3 p.m., at Foxworth, Miss Daisy Magee, of Columbia, the Superintendent of the Elementary Department, was present and gave a very interesting talk relative to her work, including the cradle roll. The prospects for the year's work are very encouraging, and I hope to be a live instrument in God's hands in this my first year.—Chas. E. Downer, Pastor.

Poplar Creek, Miss.

Dear Brother Meek: After being domiciled in the parsonage at Poplar Creek for the past three months, I think that it is not out of place to write and give a short notice of the work within the bounds of this pastoral charge. The people as a rule are thrifty and industrious, and some of them are wide awake along industrial lines. No bigger hearted people can be found anywhere. They respond readily to all propositions for advancement; the sum of $300 was spent for building and improvement within the bounds of this charge last year. Brother W. S. Shipman, our presiding elder, was with us on the 1st and 2nd of March to hold our first quarterly conference. He preached for us three stirring sermons to the delight and profit of all that heard him. Brother Shipman has taken well with our people, and is held in high esteem by all who have met him. We feel that our greatest need is a revival of religion, and to that end we are directing all our forces. We hold that all the problems of the Church hinge on its spiritual power. Oh! we want to see the people deeply concerned about the salvation of their children. We want to see an old-time revival of religion in every believer's heart.—T. L. Oakes.

Florence, La., Charge (Sicily Isl. P.O.)

I think that a few lines from this charge would not be amiss, since other brethren are telling what they are doing. We have made repairs in the Ferriday Church to the amount of $125. Brother J. E. Ormsby, of that place, presented the church with a $10 pulpit Bible. We have ordered 3 dozen Methodist Hymnals and a nice new Epworth organ to cost $75, and we sent the money with the order. We are now raising funds to paint and repair the Clayton Church. We have ordered 3 dozen Methodist Hymnals for the Florence Church. We have the church here well lighted, having added four more lights, and a lot of improvements have been made on the parsonage, with more to follow. To date all has been paid for that has been done. We have had 5 additions to the Church. I have met with a very cordial reception at all my churches. Clayton Church bids fair to be one of our best appointments. There are some fine people there. I am well pleased with my charge. There is a great deal to be done here, and I feel hopeful of doing some of it. These are a very cordial and kind people. Our Rev. John F. Marshall lives here—a man who has served the people here as district judge, school teacher, preacher and, before the Civil War, or immediately after, as presiding elder. He is loved and honored by all for his work's sake. Many will rise up in the last day and call him blessed.—Your brother, W. T. Woodward, P. E.

The best things are nearest—breath in your nostrils, light in your eyes, flowers at your feet, duties at your hand, the path of God just before you. Then do not grasp at the stars, but do life's plain, common work as it comes, certain that daily duties and daily bread are the sweetest things of life.—Impressions Calendar.

If thou neglectest thy love to thy neighbors, in vain thou professest thy love to God; for by thy love to God thy love to thy neighbor is gotten, and by thy love to thy neighbor thy love to God is nourished.—Quarles.

BOB TAYLOR LIVES

In the two bright and beautiful books just issued, "Lectures and Best Literary Productions," and "Life and Career" of Senator Robert Love Taylor, handsomely illustrated.

You cannot hear again his voice, or see the humorous curl of his lips, that convulsed a continent with laughter, but within the covers of these volumes, are the pictures woven of his wondrous words, and, laughing through their sunny pages, are all of the inimitable stories which he told to the multitudes. In "Life and Career," pens of genius have traced his romantic life from its morning in "Happy Valley," through his young and roseate dreams—through stress and storm—through cheering throngs, and on into the waiting shadows, loved and laurel crowned.

We expect to sell millions of these books. First edition going fast.

The Sunday School.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

A speaker is reported to have shown his knowledge of the rise and development of the modern Sunday school movements, when, in a speech, he eulogized McKinley, Grady, and Lee, and then went back to praise the Cradle Roll superintendents who gathered "Bobby," "Willie," and "Henry" into the Cradle Roll Department. Doubtless there are those of us in Louisiana who have been too busy to investigate the history of the rise and progress of the Sunday school movement, and who might make some such break if we were called on to speak from our present knowledge. It is really stated that a preacher was called on to speak on a certain Sunday school subject, but that, instead of doing so, he took some old prepared discourse that would have been as appropriate for a Lincoln memorial service or a Washington's birthday program as for the subject assigned. The effort to dodge the issue betrayed his utter ignorance of the subject given him. We here and now give all this class of preachers and Sunday school workers an invitation to attend our coming Sunday school institutes in their respective districts, that they may at least get some of the latest information concerning Sunday school methods and growth.

As illustrating how people let the lesser things outweigh the more important, Dr. Chappell tells of a company of men who bought a fine horse to improve the grade of live stock in a certain community, and because the animal was valuable they decided that they had better have a first-class man to attend to him, and so they hired a man for $75 per month. It so happened that these same men were trustees of the neighborhood school, and to be economical they employed a girl to teach their children for $30 per month, and so the higher value in that community was placed on the proper breeding of live stock rather than on the training of the children. This reminds us of some of the Sunday school and church equipments we find, to say nothing of the salaries of the preachers. A cheap Sunday school is like cheap cloth—about all you can say for it is that it is better than nothing. No wonder that some schools fail to hold the respect and allegiance of so many of our more progressive young men and young women. We should at least try to approach the standard set for us by the State in equipping the public schools, by making our Sunday school buildings comfortable and attractive. The molding of a life is a delicate task, and the little money needed to equip good Sunday school buildings, and the time and effort necessary to prepare a good program or to teach a lesson effectively are too insignificant to be considered in comparison with the finished product of a trained human soul.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

By Rev. R. A. Maddox.

Sunday school superintendents and teachers, do not forget to attend the Sunday school convention at Gulfport, under the auspices of the State Sunday School Association. It is interdenominational, but will help you wonderfully.

Listen, pastors: You who are in the country should begin now to arrange for the Field Secretary in May or June. My time is taken up to May 15. It is my desire to reach the country places during the spring and summer, and I cannot do it unless you begin to write me how and when to come to your charge.

The Field Secretary has just closed a week's work on the Buford Circuit with Brother Charles E. Downer. We organized Sunday schools at four places, as follows: Sumner's Chapel, Foxworth, Jamestown, and Cheraw. At the first quarterly conference, Brother Downer could not report a single Sunday school. He is rejoicing that such will not be true at the second coming of the presiding elder, but that he will report a school for each church.

What is the Sunday school? It is the "training school of the Church." Then remember, just as we train our boys and girls in the Sunday school, so will we receive them into the Church. Hence, let us train them in the doctrines and polity of our Church, and for the service of the Master. The boys and girls now in the Sunday school will be the rulers in our Church twenty years from to-day, and what our Church stands for at that time will depend on the training we give them while under our watchful care. Think! Think!!

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

There are two things which cast gloom and failure on the business meeting for the Sunday school, presided over by the superintendent (such a council of love and war is, however, absolutely necessary): One, too little business; the other, consuming too much time. Busy people object to giving up an entire evening to hear it stated that there is "nothing special to be done." Always have a pre-digested and prepared program. Knowledge is the inspiration of leadership. Eliminate long-winded discussions, but discuss vital questions and ways and means for immediate necessities.

The three months' old Bible Class (the Moore Class) at Stewart, Miss., has doubled its membership, and recently gave a most creditable banquet. The pastor, superintendent, teacher and officers had helpful words to say, as did some of the members of the Young Ladies' Class, who were specially invited. Delicious refreshments and inspiring fellowship marked the occasion. Miss Elie Wingham, of Eupora, organized this class. She is planning to have all the available adult classes near her "federate" with the Morris Class on March 30, and the program and the results will be awaited with interest.

TO DRIVE OUT MALARIA AND BUILD UP THE SYSTEM.

Take the Old Standard GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC. YOU know what you are taking. The formula is plainly printed on every bottle, showing it is simply Quinine and Iron in a tasteless form, and the most effectual form. For grown people and children, 50c.

A MENTALLY CRIPPLED CHILD.

You would not think of requiring a crippled child to keep pace with healthy, vigorous children on a long journey. And yet there are parents, teachers and even some physicians who utterly fail to realize that a child crippled in mind cannot keep pace with normal children in the difficult journeys of the school room. The public schools are graded for the healthy child of normal mental development, and the pace set is a hundred times too fast for the feeble minded child. In the public schools, or under a private tutor, there is only one fate for the child of backward mental development, namely—failure! Why? Because the methods and even the principles which apply in the teaching of natural children are totally inadequate and ineffective in the teaching of the mentally crippled.

There is only one hope for the feeble-minded child—and that hope is no brighter than one might wish—namely: special, physical and mental training at the hands of expert physicians, and teachers who have made a life study of the subject and understand the nature of the infirmity, and have special facilities for developing the mind to the limit of its possibilities. The South is fortunate in possessing one high-class private institution of this character. Parents interested in the subject may obtain additional light from the annual catalogue of the Stewart Home and School, Dr. John P. Stewart, Supt., Box 19, Farmdale, Ky.—Advertisement.

Annual Missionary Meeting of the Louisiana Conference.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Louisiana Conference held its third Annual Meeting in Baton Rouge, March 11-13. It was a well-attended Conference, nearly ninety delegates from all parts of the State being present. Our president, Mrs. Abel Bliss, of Shreveport, presided over the sessions, and won all hearts by her charm and graciousness of manner. The opening devotional service was conducted by our beloved Mrs. E. R. Kennedy, Honorary Life President, and, of course, the very first thing was the Council hymn, "Faith of our fathers, living still." All hearts were thrilled as the grand, inspiring melody ascended heavenward. To add to the sacredness and solemnity of that opening hour, holy communion was administered by Rev. W. W. Drake and Rev. A. I. Townsley.

The first day's business sessions were devoted to the hearing of the reports of the Conference officers, appointing of committees, and meeting of said committees. The Corresponding Secretaries reported an increase in auxiliaries and in membership, the greatest increase being among the young people. This was the occasion for much rejoicing, for when we have gained our children for this great cause we feel we are building on a sure foundation. Our treasurer reported the total cash receipts for the year 1912 as being $7762.75, an increase of nearly $2500 over the preceding year. This does not include the money raised for local work; should this be added, it would swell our figures to more than $19,000.

In the afternoon of the first day, a delightful informal reception was tendered the visiting ladies from 4 to 6 o'clock in the parlors of the Istrouma Hotel. Exquisite strains of music were wafted through the room during the hours of the reception. The pleasure of meeting so many charming women combined with listening to this excellently rendered program, made it an occasion long to be remembered by those present. We must not forget the dainty refreshments provided for the inner man (or rather, woman).

The night sessions were devoted to addresses on the work enterprised by the women. Rev. C. V. Breithaupt, of Houma, spoke interestingly of his work in the French Mission field. Rev. W. E. Thomas, of New Orleans, presented the work at St. Mark's Hall. The annual sermon was preached by Rev. W. W. Drake, of Baton Rouge. We wish we had the space to dwell at length upon it. Knowing the man and the text chosen—"All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth; go ye, therefore, and teach all nations; and lo! I am with you alway, even unto the end"—the sermon could not be other than a powerful and deeply spiritual address.

We had with us Miss Eliza Iles, our deaconess, who spoke of her work in the Teco country; and Miss Nell Drake, of China, who presented that field. Miss Drake, on her return to China, will go to Sung Kiang to take the place of our Miss Sophia Manns, who was called to her heavenly home last fall. Miss Ada Parker, who for a number of years was one of our representatives in Brazil, was gladly welcomed in our midst.

During the Conference a message of love and greeting was received from Mrs. F. A. Lyons. This faithful woman, who for so many years guided the affairs of the Home Mission work before it was united, never fails to send this message of love when her co-laborers are in session. It is one of those rare, sweet acts which mark a noble Christian spirit, and it is one which has come to mean so much to the Conference gathering.

We were extremely fortunate in having as our Council guest Mrs. A. L. Marshall, Editorial-Secretary. Her words of wisdom and counsel were an inspiration. The devotional half hour conducted by her each day was a season long to be remembered. Each woman saw a vision never before granted unto her, and the Christ was brought very near to every heart.

Officers were elected on the second morning, after the Nominating Committee presented its report. Few changes were made, and those only because the retiring officers were forced by ill-health to abandon their post of duty.

The officers are: President, Mrs. Abel Bliss, Shreveport; First Vice President, Mrs. R. H. Harper, Natchitoches; Second Vice President, Mrs. R. E. Bobbitt, Mansfield; Third Vice President, Mrs. D. C. Worrell, New Orleans; Fourth Vice President, Mrs. E. R. Kennedy, Lafayette; Corresponding Secretary, Home Dep't, Mrs. W. D. Cunningham, Natchitoches; Corresponding Secretary, Foreign Dep't, Mrs. A. P. Holt, Crowley; Recording Secretary, Mrs. R. W. Winstead, Natchitoches; Treasurer, Mrs. J. J. Holmes, Minden; Sup't Press Work, Mrs. A. C. McKinney, Ruston.

Do You Know?

That nine physicians and three trained nurses comprise our entire medical force in our six great mission fields? This is one medical missionary to each 3,300,000 people. In the same ratio, Texas would have only one physician or nurse, and the entire United States less than thirty.

That in per capita gifts to missions we stand next to the bottom among the great denominations of the United States?

That the annual assessment of Southern Methodism for the mission cause averages only 21 cents per member—less than 2 cents a month—for the salvation of a world?

Mrs. MARTHA TURNER, a noble specimen of fine womanhood, passed into the heavens on February 5, 1913, from her home near Black Hawk, Miss., and was buried on the evening of February 7 in the Black Hawk cemetery. The funeral service at the church was attended by a large number of relatives and friends. All of her children were present except one. Mrs. Turner was always a member of the Black Hawk Methodist Church, having begun her Christian life while very young. She was greatly loved because of her fine influence and splendid usefulness. Heaven is captivating and the scene of locations beautiful, but will be more inviting to many as a consequence of her going.
A. H. WILLIAMS.

Dr. JAMES THADDEUS BUCK was buried at Acona, Miss., on February 14, 1913. He was prosperous in business and was long a prominent figure of that community. He began his membership in the Methodist Church while yet a youth. The evening of his life was spent in much Bible reading; also he gave counsel to his household to conform to the Bible precepts, and expressed regret at not having been faithful always to his best ideals of a true and noble life. An immense audience attended the funeral service at the Acona Methodist Church, after which he was buried with imposing Masonic ceremonies. His family are all Christians. They weep because of his going, but are brave and determined to heed his wise counsel, and to be valiant in the things of life that make for success and for the largest usefulness.
A. H. WILLIAMS.

Miss ANNIE DAVIS, a niece of our own Dr. H. M. DuBose, passed to her reward on February 8, 1913. Miss Annie's sphere of service was not so extensive as that of her Uncle Horace, but in purity of life, sincerity of purpose, and loyalty to God and her Church, she had no superior. She was always in her place at the church services, and at the League and prayer meetings. The last night she attended the League and church services, several had gone to hear the Bishop preach for Dr. Weems at the Main Street Church. She was not feeling well. Some one at home suggested that she had better stay at home. She replied, "I must go. The congregation will be small tonight." She was there. She was one of the charter members of the Sixth Street Church. Her life will be felt after her name is forgotten. A short while before she died she said to her mother, "Three angels passed through the room." The funeral service was conducted in the church by the writer. We felt that God was with us, and that more than three angels were there, and that Miss Annie was one among them.
J. F. McCLELLAN.

On January 8, 1912, one of the old landmarks in the Church passed to his reward, when Mr. J. J. GOLDEN, Sr., answered the final summons of our Father in Heaven. At an early age Brother Golden gave his life to God, and served him as a true and loyal follower for a number of years in the Presbyterian Church. But several years ago he joined the Methodist Church. Shortly after joining the Methodist Church he helped to build and organize a church in the county where he spent most of his life while in Mississippi. This church was named Goldwood in commemoration of the service rendered by him and another man who had helped in the work. Brother Golden left to mourn his death a wife and several children. Among the children are one of our Conference preachers and one of the best stewards of our church. His life was an inspiration to all, and it is sad to think that we shall see him no more in this world. He had passed four score years. We feel sure our loss is his gain. We miss him, but say, "Thy will be done." We expect to meet him in heaven.
J. F. McCLELLAN.

MEMORIAL RESOLUTIONS.

(Adopted by the Bay St. Louis (Miss.) M. E. Church, South.)

Whereas, it has pleased Almighty God to remove from his earthly vineyard his faithful servant and our beloved sister, therefore be it resolved:

1. That we have learned with sincere sorrow of the death of Mrs. LAURA B. TURNER, so long a member of our church and community.

2. That we shall always cherish the memory of her devoted Christian life, expressed in constant deeds of kindness and of love, endearing her to so many in our midst, of every creed and class.

3. That we honor the tender sympathy she felt for the unfortunate, in that she "stretched forth her hand to the poor; yea, she reached forth her hands to the needy."

4. That we shall strive to emulate her virtues and to have a share in the great reward which she now enjoys. "Come, ye blessed of my Father; inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world; for I was an hungered and ye gave me meat; I was thirsty and ye gave me drink; I was a stranger and ye took me in; naked, and ye clothed me; I was sick and ye visited me; I was in prison and ye came unto me."

5. That we deeply sympathize with the husband and children in their great bereavement.

KINDNESS APPRECIATED.

Among the many courtesies which the Daleville people have shown us was the beautiful reception given upon our arrival from our wedding trip. On Thursday afternoon, Feb. 27, at the handsome home of Mr. and Mrs. J. U. Toles, the people of the town greeted us with a hearty welcome. The home was beautifully decorated with plants and cut flowers which the ladies had so thoughtfully arranged. Another pleasant feature of the occasion was the delicious luncheon served by Mrs. Toles, in which she was assisted by lady friends. It is needless to say that this thoughtfulness and kindness was most heartily appreciated. We will say, however, that this occasion shall always be remembered with a great deal of pleasure.

Save Farm Labor Make it Produce More

With practically the same labor, horses, mules, wagons and implements, you can produce bigger crops from the same, or less acreage. It takes no more work to raise 60 to 90 bushels of corn, or one and a half to two bales of cotton, to the acre than it takes to make ordinary yields. It is not necessary to plant a larger acreage to get a bigger yield. Simply work and cultivate the same amount of land more thoroughly. You can produce bigger crops of

A NOTE FROM THE WEST.

Dear Advocate and Brethren: Some of you will feel surprised at this after my self-imposed silence for eight years. My, how time flies! But you have not long been out of my mind. The dear old North Mississippi Conference brethren are in my heart for aye, and shall doubtless remain a sweet smelling savor in the beyond.

We are here for the second year in one of the Lord's favored spots in what was old Greer County, Texas, before the boundary was adjusted between Texas and the Oklahoma Territory—now Jackson County, Oklahoma. Martha is in a sub-irrigated valley of very fertile country. Droughts are so prolonged here at times as to destroy the trees and some of the growing crops, but cotton and maize and kafir corn are true standbys. They are banking products. Our people are still gathering their cotton crop. Gins are still running regularly. Prices have been favorable; so the farmers are quite prosperous. Some live stock reach the market from these parts also.

No finer class of people can be found—almost unmixed southerners and Democrats from Texas. The climate is great. We have not buried an adult from this church in more than a year, and but one child—an unhealthy babe. The altitude is about 1,800 feet, the air is dry and pure, and malaria almost unknown. Chills we never have, and Salt Fork is only two miles away, so that I have about forgot how to spell "muskeeter." I caught a fish two feet long out of a stream ten feet wide last spring. And if the Mistress of the Manse will let me off, I will try it again this spring—and pretty soon. Come out, Mr. Editor, and let's take a fall at it. We have all the year round living water and the finest automobile roads on earth.

Church work in the West is no drag. My assessments for the Conference Collections are all collected by our Laymen's Committee, presided over by the Lay Leader. They meet and divide the membership among them, assessing each according to the Disciplinary plan, and proceed to collect as the stewards do theirs. Our missionary claims at Martha were all paid some time ago.

We Oklahomians handle all our benevolent moneys through a Conference teller, who receives all connectional money and accounts to the different Boards for the same, under the surveillance of the Joint Board of Finance. The teller gives bond in sufficient amount to render the plan entirely safe. This arrangement is commendable for several reasons. One good one is that every one always knows where to send funds during the year. Another is that presiding elders may ascertain at any time through the teller the state of the collections in their districts. In the end imaginary reports are obviated in the statistical tables.

We have some problems here such as every new Conference has. Among them is that of developing an educational system. The church building problem held the center of the stage with us for a while. That is solving nicely, with the aid of the General Church Extension Secretary. We are now going to the people for the funds to build colleges, and it will be done. Pray for us and watch us grow.

Your fellow-worker in the vineyard,
W. L. ANDERSON.
Martha, Okla., March 1.

WINONA DISTRICT NOTES.

When we record the statement that this district has preachers and members of rare usefulness we could refer with pride to a successful past, but we prefer to speak of the present. As the old negro preacher said, "The question is, Which way is your rifle p'intin' to-day?" so we shall call attention to facts of to-day.

At the first of the year O. W. Bradley, at Winona, started in for a revival by putting new effort into the prayer meeting and canvassing the whole membership by committees for recruits to the Sunday school and other services. The official board has also put in operation a new financial system.

Although J. E. Cunningham had much delay in getting to Greenwood, his affable manners, burning zeal and able preaching have increased the congregations and inspired all with a spirit of co-operation. He is ready for telephone communication any day or at any hour.

S. L. Pope, who is never idle, is outdoing himself at Itta Bena, and his people say that there is no such man elsewhere, and that he suits them exactly. The new church, well heated, makes the well-organized Sunday school and the large prayer meetings most pleasant and profitable. I have a hint that the pastor will wear some fine new clothes soon. All ye other stewards, "Go and do likewise."

Then comes that strange phenomenon, O. L. Savage, whose zeal is as hot in winter as in summer, and which cannot be dampened even by an overflow. He has completed the new Church at Swiftown, has a movement on foot for another at Sky Lake, and the people are talking new parsonage, as well as filling up the church at Sunday school and preaching services.

The Moorhead charge starts off with a new financial system, a fine Sunday school, and the pastor, Rev. J. R. Bright, is doing great preaching and much pastoral work, and is getting fat. His cultured wife is making full proof of her ability to lead in church work.

When the new preacher, T. M. Brownlee, reached Indianola he was received with such cordiality and given such liberal co-operation that he at once became "puffed up" (had the mumps); but has now settled down to normal conditions and is doing extra work.

Ruleville, the town noted for its whole-hearted hospitality and liberality, has shown appreciation and interest by making Rev. W. D. McCullough an assessment of $1,400; and now he is doing his "level best."

Rev. J. W. Raper had to hurry up his moving because the Drew people bought a fine parsonage instant. When Brother Beck and the other workers there start at anything "something happens right away."

Tutwiler and Mattson are going ahead with the task of church building, and Dr. Price says he has to "get busy."

The people say that E. B. Sharp is a great preacher—hence all the Webb charge is interested. His sermons make people think. One man had to think so hard that he had the headache.

Things are "moving up" on the Lambert charge and Brother Rook expects to have a new church at Marks at an early date. No wonder there is progress when you know what a power behind the throne his good wife is.

But just think of it! That red-headed preacher, W. M. Campbell, has painted the parsonage white, has built a fence and hung a gate, and is about to build a church at Phillipp. Besides he is preaching to the largest audiences that ever attended Church at Minter City.

J. H. Ingram has people coming six miles to church and Sunday school, and that in the delta in winter time. G. W. McLain has repaired his parsonage at North Carrollton, and is doing much preaching and pastoral work. W. W. Jones, at Carrollton, has had a hearty reception and has gone right into the work. His officials assessed $900 for his salary, and now propose to put a new roof on the church and add some Sunday school rooms.

The people of the Winona Circuit say they have the best preacher in the Conference, and out of deference to their good judgment, I consent and congratulate Brother John Ritchey. The Mars Hill charge is delighted with W. J. Woods and he has made a fine start. T. J. Halfacre has a subscription that practically assures a parsonage at Kilmichael, and has already held a good revival.

Great interest is being shown at Eupora and Maben. They got the very preacher they wanted and J. T. McCafferty is happy. His tactful earnestness and spiritual concern will work great good anywhere. Many expressions of good will and appreciation of Bro. J. A. Stone on the Bellefontaine charge, were heard at the quarterly conference.

Brother J. C. McElroy is in his fourth year at Slate Springs, and his work this year promises great success. Brother W. C. Lester and the Isola charge are doing things systematically. They hold church conferences, and have the missionary committees, etc.; hence all interests are being conserved.

Our discipline wisely says: "These things we believe the Holy Spirit writes upon all truly awakened hearts." Where human hearts are under the guidance of God's Spirit there will be occurring in the progress of the Church things clearly spiritual, and whatever of temporal things may develop, they also doubtless are of God.

A Reasonable Plea For the Stomach

If Your Stomach Is Lacking In Digestive Power, Why Not Help the Stomach Do Its Work?

Not with drugs, but with a reinforcement of digestive agents, such as are naturally at work in the stomach. Scientific analysis shows that digestion requires pepsin, nitrogenous ferments, and the secretion of hydrochloric acid. When your food fails to digest, it is proof positive that some of these agents are lacking in your digestive apparatus.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets contain nothing but these natural elements necessary to digestion and when placed at work in the weak stomach and small intestines, supply what these organs need. They stimulate the gastric glands and gradually bring the digestive organs back to their normal condition.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have been subjected to critical chemical tests at home and abroad and are found to contain nothing but natural digestives.

Chemical Laboratory, Telegraphic address, "Diffindo," London. Telephone No. 11029 Central. 20 Cullum St., Fenchurch St., E. C.

I have analyzed most carefully a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets (which I bought myself at a city chemist's shop for the purpose), manufactured by the F. A. Stuart Co., 86 Clerkenwell Road, London, E. C., and have to report that I cannot find any trace of vegetable or mineral poisons. Knowing the ingredients of the tablets, I am of opinion that they are admirably adaptable for the purpose for which they are intended. (Signed)

John R. Brooke, F.I.C., F.C.S.

There is no secret in the preparation of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. Their composition is commonly known among physicians. They are the most popular of all remedies for indigestion, dyspepsia, water brash, insomnia, loss of appetite, melancholia, constipation, dysentery and kindred diseases originating from improper dissolution and assimilation of foods, because they are thoroughly reliable and harmless to man or child.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are at once a safe and powerful remedy. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest your food for you when your stomach can't.

THE SNARE OF FICTITIOUS SUCCESS.

There are some preachers who appear to think that success is to be measured by the numbers that wait upon their ministry and the attention that they command from the public. They seem scarcely to dread sin and Satan more than they do obscurity and the lack of applause in their work. They have never learned to stand alone for God when the multitudes have gone off after other things, as they did on that memorable occasion, when the Master turned to the twelve and said, "Will ye also go away?"

The Western Christian Advocate, in a recent issue, quotes an English Wesleyan writer as follows: "Wesley never could be brought to see that there was anything necessary in great congregations. He gave as much attention to a congregation of half a dozen as he gave to one of ten thousand. Nay, he had some of his happiest hours and most secure victories when only two or three were gathered together."

Another eminent minister who had something to say on this subject, was the Rev. F. W. Robertson, of Brighton. In his memorable sermon on "Religious Despondency" occurs the following searching passage: "What is ministerial success? Crowded churches—full aisles—attentive congregations—the approval of the religious world—much impression produced? Elijah thought so; and when he found out his mistake, and discovered that the applause on Carmel had subsided into hideous stillness, his heart well-nigh broke with disappointment. Ministerial success lies in altered lives and obedient, humble hearts: unseen work recognized in the judgment day. * * * Get below appearances, below glitter and show. Plant your foot upon reality. Not in the jubilee of the myriads on Carmel, but in the humble silence of the hearts of the seven thousand, lay the proof that Elijah had not lived in vain."

Oh! brethren, let us not deceive ourselves: many of the things by which we set great store, and over which we make much ado, will in eternity be discovered to be but withered leaves or worthless tinsel. We should not in our work count as valuable anything except that which we know will stand the test when scrutinized by the eye of Omniscience. The genuine only is worth while.

WHERE MEN AND WOMEN ARE MADE.

Dr. Gunsaulus, who easily takes rank as one of the foremost ministers in the United States, in a recent address stated that in Chicago the twelve greatest preachers, eighty-six of the one hundred greatest physicians, eighty-one of the one hundred greatest lawyers, and seventy-three of the one hundred best engineers, came from the farm. This is a striking, but not surprising disclosure of facts. The country, with its pure air, its wholesome exercise, and its uncontaminated moral atmosphere, makes men; while the city with its cramped-up conditions, its temptations, and corrupting influences, tends to unmake them. And we dare say that the rural churches had much to do with the production of these worthy leaders in their vocations, of whom Dr. Gunsaulus tells us.

The truth is, the hope of both the State and Church is in the country people. If they were no sounder in their habits and moral and religious views than the dwellers in our large municipalities, dark, indeed, would be our future outlook. It is when they stay close to nature in her pristine beauties and glories that men and women seem to thrive most and to attain to that which is really highest and best. Toward the close of his career, some one asked the venerable Senator Pettus, of Alabama, what he would do if he had his life to go over again. He promptly replied that he would get him a big farm and stay in the middle of it. Of course, our duty to God and our fellow-men may call us forth into the world's broad field of action where we must mix and mingle with the multitudes; but we confess that the picture presented by Senator Pettus is to us a wonderfully appealing one. Happy the man who can stay close to nature and who has the privilege of 'communing with her visible forms and hearing her speak her various language'!

PRAYING AT A LEGISLATURE.

We are in receipt of a copy of the Patriot Phalanx, of Indianapolis, Ind., in which an account is given of how the Rev. John R. Henry, while opening the Indiana State Senate with prayer, was interrupted and rebuked by Lieutenant Governor O'Neil. The statement is made that it was because the minister was praying for the cause of prohibition that he was called down, though the Lieutenant Governor says that this is not true; that he thoroughly agreed with all the sentiments expressed by Mr. Henry on that subject.

We suppose that the party mailing us the copy of the Patriot Phalanx expected us to approve and echo that paper's justification of Mr. Henry's course and its unqualified criticism of the action of the Lieutenant Governor of Indiana. But this we cannot do. We think that Mr. O'Neil was rude and impolite and that it would have been much more becoming in him if he had allowed the preacher to have finished his prayer. A proper regard for that gentleman's calling and for the proprieties of the occasion should, we think, have kept him silent until the performance was over.

But, while this is true, it is our opinion that Mr. Henry's so-called prayer was in bad taste and ought never to have been "delivered." His own statement as to what he said in his invocation in the lower House of the Legislature, which immediately preceded that attempted in the Senate (the two are said to have been much alike), places him wholly beyond the pale of legitimate defense. Here is his utterance: "What I said was stronger in the House, for there the prayer charged the State of Indiana with receiving hush money, a bribe, and palliating her guilt by boasting that the license revenue was put in the school fund which we use to educate our boys and girls."

From this, it would seem that Mr. Henry, under the guise of offering a prayer, abused the courtesy extended him and sought to deliver a moral lecture to the legislators—a performance that was highly reprehensible. Assuming that all he said was true, it was not the time nor the place to arraign the lawmakers of the State. If he felt it necessary to do that, he should have done it from the pulpit, or platform, or by means of the public press.

This brings us to the point which it is our chief purpose to emphasize in noticing this incident. It is that lecturing an audience on bended knee, or while standing up professedly to supplicate the throne of grace, is not prayer in any true sense, but a mockery and a travesty upon it. If a minister wishes to talk to the people let him do so in a straightforward manner, so that they will clearly understand that the message is for them. When we pray we are supposed to be talking to God, and to him our petitions should be addressed. Most preachers pay far too little attention to the framing of their public prayers. Such intercessions ought to be preceded, whenever possible, by careful antecedent meditation and reflection upon the needs of the congregation. And especially does a minister need to be careful in the invocations that he is asked to make for secular organizations and on secular public occasions. Otherwise, he is liable to discredit his high calling and to dishonor his Lord by reflecting too much the worldly passions, prejudices, and sentiments of the hour. The priest before the altar should never be a partisan, or forget that the functions of his holy office are spiritual.

EXPRESSING CONFIDENCE IN PRESIDENT WILSON.

Rev. Dr. William I. Haven, as chairman of the Administrative Committee of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ, has sent a communication to President Wilson tendering him the "serious and earnest co-operation of the forces represented by the Churches" as he takes up his task as Chief Executive. These words are notable: "Your warm and sympathetic sense of our democracy, your conviction expressed in so many ways, both by utterance and execution, that our social order must be fashioned after the kingdom of God as taught by Jesus Christ, together with your public faithfulness and your personal faith, lead the Churches of the nation to look with confidence to the performance of the serious and solemn duties of the coming years." The document is also signed by the secretary of the Administrative Committee and the secretary of the Council.

Let men account for this wonderful change since Christ! What did it? How came it, if Jesus Christ be not what he claimed to be—the Son of God, the Savior of the world?—Frances Cable.

THE STUDY OF THE ENGLISH BIBLE.

Intensive and Cumulative Bible Study.

The first step in the process of unifying life is to organize it on general lines so as to escape the tyranny of specific tasks. The meaning of this possibly somewhat obscure statement is this: Many preachers and teachers of undoubted power are hopelessly desultory and aimless in their work because they are always absorbed in unrelated specific tasks. They never study in the organized and continuous way which produces results, because they are helpless captives of the passing moment. They are always preparing for next Sunday's sermon or next Wednesday's address. There is no time in such a system for orderly and progressive mastery of any great subjects, simply because life is lived, intellectually, from hand to mouth in a constant and unsuccessful attempt to get beyond the pressure of stated or occasional duties. Progressive impoverishment and ultimate mental bankruptcy are the Nemesis of this method.

When a man, who, by every implication of his professional position, is pledged to a life of study, does no continuous study, masters no department of knowledge, has nothing in possession except unrelated items of superficial information, he is a contradiction, and his defeat and downfall are certain. Such a career is inevitable to the man who spends his study time in the fragmentary studies which are directed toward preparation for immediate and pressing public obligations.

The first step in his emancipation is to fence off and keep sacred to constructive general work, irrespective of immediate obligations, a portion of time. On the basis of personal experience I am prepared to say that, in the long run, any man will preach better and teach better who will give three-fourths of his study time to this general, continuous, cumulative work which has absolutely no foreseen bearing upon his next public appearance.

It will take courage to cut loose from the old method—but the outcome is not in doubt. Out of a full mind, enriched by increasingly wide cultural studies, one will speak with undreamed-of freedom and power. Great sermons and addresses are always dipped from the full current of a mind fed to the overflow by contributory streams flowing out of many hours of continuous study life. The preparation of the man is the best preparation for the occasion.

A second element in this organization of student life for the Christian worker is to establish the Bible securely at the center. To urge this necessity upon professional Bible students would seem to be superfluous, not to say insulting. It may be in the nature of a reflection and, so far, insulting, but superfluous it certainly is not. Theoretically the Bible is at the center of every Christian teacher's student life; actually it is only too often in the periphery. The proof of this assertion is twofold. In the first place, most religious teachers spend far more time in reading books about the Bible than in the study of the Bible itself. This fact, which is adequate and convincing evidence of a wrong method, is too patent to need discussion. One glance at the time-honored theological curriculum, in which studies related to the Bible and more or less grouped about it have so largely usurped the place which belongs to the specific and systematic study of the Bible itself in its literary unities and in the balance of its parts, is an indication of disturbance at the very center of the Christian worker's life.

And much so-called Bible study proceeds at a tangent from the Bible. A great deal of it is merely textual and therefore fragmentary. A great deal of it is concerned with general discussions in which the Biblical material plays a minor or merely illustrative part. The look of the Biblical page, the content of the larger units of literary construction, the movements of thought, the meaning of books as a whole, are strange to many who think themselves students of the Bible. There are many who read discussions of Biblical topics, bristling with Scriptural quotations, without the open Bible and without looking up the references. The conditions among us call for wholesale and thoroughgoing readjustment.

Another indication of the same condition is the aimless and fruitless inquiries which are constantly made about books. Any man who studies the Bible for himself will discover that which no book contains; he will also discover, by an inevitable process of natural selection, the books which he needs.

When, therefore, men are chasing wildly about for books which deal with this or that aspect of the Bible there is evidence enough that they have not yet escaped from the bondage of random reading to the freedom of true, progressive, and intensive study. The centralizing of the Bible in the study life will involve a twofold change in the intellectual habits of most men. It will involve a restriction in the number of books read. No busy man can study the Bible as it ought to be studied and keep abreast of the current of religious and near-religious literature as it flows from the press. The comforting fact here is that he ought not to attempt this in any case.

I should like at this point to demolish a bugbear which is the curse of many a man's life. It is often said: "The minister should be a man of one book, the Bible." To this it is said, by way of reply, that he ought to be a man of all books worth while. In the very thought of all these books terror lurks. These apparently counter statements are really two sides of one truth. To be a man of the one great book is to be a man of all books. This is meant, not in the narrow and fanatical sense of the Caliph Omar, but in the spirit of most genial appreciation of all good literature. The point is this, a man is not made broad by wide reading but by thorough reading. True culture involves a rigid selective process in the line of one's own personal aptitudes and the necessities of his life work.
